Jacob Rahn, the great-grandfather of Merkel M., was born in Maiden Creek (now Ontelaunee) township, July 16, 1757, and died in 1823. His wife was Elizabeth Schneider, who was born Aug. 26, 1765, and both are buried at Gernant's Church. They had four sons and four daughters, among whom were: Philip; Adam, of Leesport; Jacob; Jonathan, of Maxatawny; and Mrs. Conrad Herbst.

Jacob Rahn, the grandfather of Merkel M., was born in 1790, and died in 1874, being buried at Gernant's Church in Ontelaunee township. He owned a wooded farm, now the property of Christian H. Luppold of Reading, which Mr. Rahn cleared, and on which he erected a house and barn in 1840, both of which are still standing. Mr. Rahn was successful in his farming operations, and was ranked among the substantial men of his community. He married Magdalena Bernhart, and to them there were born two children, namely: William; and Fannie, who married George Merkel, a pioneer iron-master of Upper Berks county.

William Rahn, father of Merkel M., was born in Ontelaunee township in 1821, and died in July, 1898. He was a life-long farmer, and owned a tract of 600 acres in Ontelaunee township and 200 acres in Upper Tulpehocken township. One of the leading Democrats of his section, Mr. Rahn was long identified with public interests, and served as county commissioner. He was buried at Gernant's Church, of which he was a Reformed member, and was trustee thereof in 1860, when the present edifice was erected.

William Rahn was married to Susan Merkel, daughter of Jacob and granddaughter of Casper Merkel, one of the most prominent men in Berks county in his day. Mr. and Mrs. Rahn had the following children: Fannie, m. Joseph Seyfert; Jacob, who is unmarried; James of Ontelaunee; Sallie, m. Solomon Sailer; Merkel M.; Catherine, m. Rufus Dunkel; Mrs. Albert H. Dunkel; William, of West Leesport; and Milton, who died aged three years.

Merkel M. Rahn was reared on his great-grandfather Rahn's homestead, which had remained in the Rahn family for more than 100 years, and here he resided exactly fifty years, locating in 1898 at West Leesport, where he has since engaged in the hotel business as proprietor of the Washington House. This hostelry, which contains fourteen rooms, is very popular with the traveling public and commands a large share of the trade of this section. Mr. Rahn is a Democrat in politics and for nine years was a school director of Ontelaunee township, the last three years of his term serving as treasurer of the board. He and his family belong to the Reformed denomination of Gernant's Union Church, of which he was a trustee for nine years.

In 1872 Mr. Rahn was married to Sarah A. Rothermel, daughter of Peter and Sallie (Weist) Rothermel of Maiden-creek township, and they have had three children: Ida S., who has the telephone exchange at West Leesport and was a schoolteacher for seven terms in Ontelaunee township, is the widow af John R. Shearer, who died March 29, 1902, aged twenty-six years, leaving a daughter,—Ruth N.; Wert R., a graduate of the class of 1902 at the Keystone State Normal school, who taught school for seven terms in Berks county, married Sallie Stoudt, and they have one son,—Reid R.; and Curvin C. died, aged three years.

ARCHIBALD MESSNER, a substantial farmer of Berks county, Pa., whose valuable 150 acre tract is situated in Brecknock township, was born May 9, 1857, in the Allegheny valley, son of Archibald and Sally (Gehman) Messner.

Christian Messner, the grandfather of Archibald, Jr., was a farmer near the "Druck Hotel" in Lancaster county, where he died, and was buried at the Center Church, of which he had been a Reformed member. He married Magdalena Steffy, and to them were born four children: Betsey m. Samuel Gehman, of Adamstown; Harry died young; Jesse, who lived in Lancaster county, had three children, Matilda, Christian, and Joshua; and Archibald was the father of Archibald, Jr.

Archibald Messner was born Aug. 20, 1822, and died March 12, 1889. In early life he engaged in farming in Brecknock township, but in later years came to Cumru township, where he cultivated a fine farm of 140 acres. He was a highly esteemed citizen, was a member of the Mennonite Church, and was buried at the Allegheny Meeting House. His wife, whose maiden name was Sally Gehman, was born Oct. 3, 1819. They had children as follows: Fannie, m. to Aaron White, deceased; Christian, who lives at Denver, Lancaster county; Samuel, who lives at White Bear; John, who lives near Geiger's Mill; Elias, who lives in Brecknock township; Archibald; Lizzie Ann, m. to William Mertz, a farmer at Allegheny Church; Daniel G., of Oakbrook; and Henry, a farmer of Cumru township.

Archibald Messner received his education in the schools of his native locality, and in 1879 began farming on his own account on his father-in-law's farm, which he tenanted for twenty-one years. In 1903 he purchased the old Gebhart farm of 150 acres, one of the best in the township, and there he still continues. Mr. Messner has a stand at the Bingaman Street market house in Reading, and makes a specialty of truck farming. In politics he is a Democrat, while his religious connections are with Allegheny Lutheran Church, of which he was a deacon for six years. In 1879 Mr. Messner was married to Sarah Elizabeth Kachel, born Nov. 23, 1860, daughter of Benjamin and Louisa (Kramer) Kachel. Eight children were born to this union: Daniel C., a farmer of Brecknock township, m. Louisa Kramer; Emma L., m. Isaac Wert; Sallie E.; Wayne E.; Katie V.; Charles B. died in childhood; and a son and a daughter died in infancy.

DANIEL UNTERKOFLER (deceased), a lifelong resident of Centre township, Berks county, was born there in 1830, son of Daniel Unterkofler. His grandfather was a resident of Windsor township, this county.

Daniel Unterkofler was well-known as a stone-mason, and many foundations of the old barns and houses in the vicinity were built by him. He died in Centre township, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Levi Rentschler, and is buried at Belleman's Church. He married Hannah Heffner, and they had children as follows: Daniel; Hannah, who m. Samuel Schlappich; Sallie, who m. Levi Rentschler; Susanna, who m. Levi Phillips.

Daniel Unterkofler, son of Daniel, was a farmer and carpenter by occupation. He owned his father's homestead in Centre township, this farm consisting of sixty acres of fine land near Mohrsville, which he cultivated profitably, and here he resided until his death, which occurred May 1, 1907; he is buried at Belleman's Church. Though advanced in years at the time of his decease he was noted for his excellent memory, and he was well-known and respected throughout his community. He was a Democrat in politics.

Mr. Unterkofler married Mary A. Gundy, daughter of George Gundy, of Clearfield county, Pa., and eight children were born to this union, namely: Ellen married Adam Zweitzer and is living in Ontelaunee township, Berks county; Nora married John Fox, also of Ontelaunee township; Lizzie is the wife of Christian Graybill and lives in Maiden-creek township; Henry, repair foreman in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railway Company, is living at Douglassville, this county; Daniel G., born Dec. 22, 1871, farms the old homestead, in winter engages in butchering among the local farmers, and also follows the carpenter's trade; Valeria married Jacob Christ and lives in Ontelaunee township; Jennie is the wife of Wilson Serig and resides in Temple, Berks county; Kate is the wife of Mahlon C. Shappell and they live on the Unterkofler homestead.

CYRUS A. MILLER, farmer and dairyman of Centre township, Berks county, was born in this county, in Tilden township, in the year 1848, son of Elias and grandson of Philip Miller.

Philip Miller, the grandfather, was born May 22, 1784, son of Philip, and died Nov. 19, 1855. He was a farmer in Upper Bern township, where he died, and is buried at Miller's Church, in the old cemetery, near Bern; his wife is also interred there. She was Elizabeth Deckler, of Upper Tulpehocken township, born Nov. 18, 1792, died Jan. 10, 1874. They had five children: John, Elias, Mary, Kate and Eliza.

Elias Miller, son of Philip, born Jan. 30, 1825, died June 22, 1885. He is buried at St. Michael's Lutheran Church. He was a farmer of Upper Bern township, owning land there, and was a well-known man in his day. He served as school director in Centre township.

He married Catharine Althouse, born Dec. 18, 1821, daughter of John Althouse, died June 17, 1897. A family of eight children was born to them, namely: Cyrus A.; Monroe, who lives in Hamburg, this county; and six who are deceased, John, Charles, Mary A., Catharine, Elvina and Sarah.

Cyrus A. Miller remained with his father until twenty-four years old, after which he farmed for his father for twenty years in Tilden township, thence moving to the Bushong farm, in Bern township, where he was located for three years. He then resided in Spring township for a year. In 1902 settling on a farm of 240 acres in Centre township, a valuable tract at Shoemakersville, in addition to general farming he engages in dairying, keeping from twenty-five to thirty cows and shipping his milk to Sheridan and Mahanoy City. He has fine stock, having twelve horses, and his place is well equipped with up-to-date farming appliances.

In 1873 Mr. Miller married Lucy Seaman, daughter of George and Catherine (Mertz) Seaman, and granddaughter of George and Catharine (Kauffman) Seaman. Four children have been born to this union: Kate, who married Henry Shollenberger and lives at West Hamburg, Berks county; Irwin, at home; Elmer, who died when six years old; and Mattie, who died when six years old. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have adopted Wilhelmina Ashenbach, who is now (1908) nine years old.

Mr. Miller is a member of St. Michael's Lutheran Church, and socially he unites with Veteran Castle, No. 481, of Reading. He is a Democrat in politics, and while in Tilden township served as school director.

ADAM M. HECKMAN, a farmer in Douglass township, Berks county, was born in Alsace township, this county, Jan. 11, 1861, son of Joseph and Louisa (Masser) Heckman, and a descendant from a Hessian soldier of King George's army.

(I) Johan George Heckman, the pionéer ancestor of the Heckman family, was born Jan. 6, 1748, in Hessen Cassel, Germany, and came to America during the Revolution as a soldier in King George's army. After the war with many of his countrymen he settled in the Alsatian hills in Alsace township, Berks county. He engaged in farming three miles from Temple in Alsace township, and there owned the farm later the property of his grandson Abraham. Here he married a woman of foreign birth, Maria Magdalena Hamm, born Aug. 16, 1755, died July 6, 1832, who had accompanied her parents to America when quite young, and for many years she lived in a Quaker family. When she had grown to womanhood she adopted the Quaker style of dress. Johan George Heckman was assessed in 1780 with 100 acres of land. In 1790 the Federal census reports him the head of a family of thirteen children: Samuel (born Oct. 6, 1783, died Aug. 19, 1851), Peter (1777-1857, is buried at Zion's Church in Perry township), George, Adam, John, Daniel, Jacob, William, Magdalena (m. Henry Schmeck), Susanna (m. John Schmeck), Catharine (m. John Shade), Elizabeth (m. Peter Betz) and Mrs. Nicholas Wagner.

(II) Daniel Heckman, son of Johan George, was born on his father's farm in Alsace township Jan. 23, 1790, and died March 25, 1848. He was a farmer and his son Abraham succeeded him in the ownership of the home farm. Daniel Heckman and his wife were both Lutherans, and are buried at Alsace church. She was, in her maidenhood, Esther Noll, and was born in 1803, and died in 1890. They were the parents of twelve children: Kate, m. to George Wessner; Abraham, deceased; Joseph; Adam, 1830-1846; Charles; Sophia, m. to Levi Reber; Sarah, m. to Solomon Dunkel; Mary, m. to Paris Althouse; Lucetta and Rebecca, who died young; and two who died in infancy.

(III) Joseph Heckman, son of Daniel H., was born Nov. 8, 1827, in Alsace township, and was reared to farming, an occupation he followed until his retirement in 1907. He lived in Ontelaunee township a number of years, and there in 1870, his wife, Louisa Masser, died, and was buried at Alsace church. She was born in 1830. Their children were: Charles, who lives upon the homestead in Earl; Adam M.; John; Daniel and Thomas, deceased; Emma, m. to Daniel Ritter; Kate, m. to Jacob Mauger; Sarah, m. to Jacob Rahn; Louisa, m. to Birt Gift; Ellen, m. to Nicholas Flicker; and Angelina, who died small. In 1883 Joseph Heckman came to Earl township, and bought a farm of 126 acres which he still owns, but which is tenanted by his son Charles. He, himself, is well preserved and active, and is found daily at work about his home.

(IV) Adam M. Heckman, son of Joseph, received his education in the local schools at Blandon, Oley Line, Quaker Meeting and Berkley. He worked for his father on the farm until he was twenty, when he was employed at regular wages by his father, remaining three years. He then worked at farm labor in Exeter for two years, after which he drove a milk route in Reading for one year. In 1887 he located in Douglass township, where his first work was driving a team at the stone quarry where he continued for nearly two years. The next five years found him employed at the Glasgow rolling mills, and one year more in a steel mill. During 1894 he again drove a milk route in Reading, and in 1895 he began farming in Douglass township, a vocation in which he has since continued. He owns the J. Sands farm at the Montgomery county line consisting of seventy-nine acres. The Colebrookdale railroad runs through his place. The stone house was built about the time of the American Revolution. He is industrious, and every thing about his place betokens the careful and progressive farmer. In religious faith he is a Lutheran and he and his family belong to Alsace Church in Muhlenberg township.

In 1887, Mr. Heckman married (first) Clara Ruppert, daughter of John Ruppert, and she died in the twenty-second year of her age, leaving no children. He married (second) Clara Egolf, daughter of Mahlon Egolf, a farmer of Douglass, and three children have been born of this union: Sarah M., Killian A. and Mary.

WILLIAM C. SHANE, a substantial farmer and sawmill operator in Earl township, was born in Oley township on the farm long the home of the Shane family, Nov. 24, 1854.

The Shane family is an old one in Berks county, and had its seat in Colebrookdale township, where two brothers, Thomas and Peter Shane, located prior to 1759. The name of the family is said to have been originally Shen, or Shene. William Shane, a son of one of the two brothers, died in Colebrookdale township, in 1811. His wife Maria bore him nine children, but the will mentions but eight, namely: Catharine, Mary, Sarah (m. John Trout), Henry, Elizabeth, Esther, Susan and Hannah. In 1849 Thomas and Samuel Shane were farmers in Colebrookdale township, and both are supposed to have been descendants of the brothers who first settled there.

John Shane (or Schon), great-grandfather of William C., of Earl township, was a resident of Earl township for a number of years, and moved from there to Douglass township, whence after some years engaged in farming he removed to Oley township, and bought the farm now owned by his great-grandson, Irwin Shane. John (Johannes) Schon was born Dec. 16, 1790, and died March 18, 1843. His wife Catharine Moser, born June 15, 1796, died April 27, 1869. Their daughter, Sarah, born 1828, died 1848.

Wellington Shane, son of John, born Dec. 16, 1826, was a farmer and died in Earl township, Aug. 13, 1882. To him and his wife Anna were born: Morris; Amos; Sarah Ellen, m. to Henry Romich; Mrs.

Joseph Stauffer. In his will Mr. Shane bequeathed seventy-five dollars to Sallie Ann Sneider, a grandchild.

John Shane, son of John and grandfather of William C., was a farmer in Oley township, and then for several years he lived in Douglass township. He owned considerable property in Earl township, where he suddenly died of heart failure. Both he and his wife, whose maiden name was Catharine Moser, are buried at the Oley Churches. The only village and business center in Oley township is named after John Shane, who owned the land on which Shanesville was built in 1833, by Peter Clauser. John Shane's children were: Harriet m. Abraham Biehl; William M.; Wellington; and Tobias.

William M. Shane, son of John, was born in Douglass township in 1827, and died in November, 1896. He was a farmer in Oley township, where he had a fine farm. He also owned a farm in Earl township, now the property of his son William C. In politics he was a Democrat, and he served as supervisor and school director in Oley. He and his family belonged to Oley Churches, and of this church he was deacon and elder, being in each office eight years. The family burial plot is located here. He married Harriet Christman, who died in 1899, aged seventy-three years. Their children were: Sarah died unmarried; William C.; Hannah m. John Haas, of Oley; Mandilla m. Frank Hartman, of Exeter; Irwin m. a Miss Deysher, and lives in Oley; and Mary m. Bower Griesemer, of Oley.

William C. Shane attended the common schools of Oley township, and also the select school taught by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner, at Reading. He was reared to farming, and this he has followed ever since. At the age of twenty-four he was married and began farming near Shanesville in Earl township, and he has been located at his present place since the spring of 1903. His tract consists of ten acres. He owns three tracts in the township, and is looked upon as one of the prosperous men of the township. In politics he is a Democrat, and he was a delegate to several county conventions, and for eighteen consecutive years was tax collector of Earl township. Since 1905 he has not been in office. He has always been interested in the school question, and served as president of the school board for one term. He and his family are Reformed members of Oley Churches, and he served four years each as deacon and as elder.

In 1878 Mr. Shane married Rebecca Moyer, daughter of Joseph Moyer, of Oley, and they have three children: Calvin m. Mary Minninger; Harriet m. John Prutzman; and Miss Annie.

LYMAN G. ENGEL, for over thirty years a cigar maker at Boyertown, was born in Morysville, Feb. 10, 1867. It is traditional that the Engels came originally from Switzerland, and that they were of Jewish extraction; also that seven brothers came to the United States, of whom two located at Engelsville, one at Pottstown, one in Amity township, one in Oley township, one in Windsor (now Perry) township and one in Reading. It is an historical fact that Engelsville, a small hamlet in the southwestern part of Colebrookdale township, in Berks county, near the Montgomery line, was named for Peter and John Engel, farmers and coopers. At this place a public house was opened by William Engel. In 1759 one William Engel was a taxable in Amity township, and in the same years Andrew Engel resided in Reading. The record of Jacob Engel and his progeny, who located in Windsor township, is found elsewhere. The Pennsylvania archives record the names of thirty-two Engels who between 1754 and 1800 took up land by warrant from the state and paid federal tax.

Peter Engel, great-grandfather of Lyman G., lived at Engelsville, and was the founder of that town. In his early life he farmed in Montgomery county, owning two farms there, one of which was entirely paid for, and the other half unpaid. Owing to Continental money and his indebtedness on the one farm, he lost all he had. He then came to Engelsville, where he acquired some property. He died about 1859, at the age of seventy-four, and is buried at Boyertown. He married Elizabeth Keiser, and they had children as follows: William K.; Solomon, who lives at Pottstown, Pa.; Daniel, who in earlier life lived at Pottstown, and later moved to the homestead at Engelsville, where he died; Mary Ann, who married Jonas Feather; and Hannah, who married Godlieb Strenger.

William K. Engel, son of Peter, was born in Engelsville in 1804, and his death occurred May 25, 1863, and he was buried in Union cemetery, Boyertown. As a young man he engaged in brick making at Engelsville and elsewhere, but later he became a baker, cigar manufacturer and hotel keeper in his native town. He was very successful in whatever he undertook, and became the owner of the hotel which he operated. He served as supervisor of Colebrookdale township. His second wife, Elizabeth Riegner, bore him children: William, who died Oct. 26, 1863, aged twenty-three; Reuben R.; Joseph, born 1843; Peter, born 1844; Sophia, born 1837, who married (first) a Mr. Wein, and (second) Samuel Billard: Rachel, born 1841, living in Philadelphia; and Susanna, born 1850, who died young. Previous to his marriage to Miss Riegner, Mr. Engel had been married to a Miss Sands, who died leaving a son, Aaron, who died in Reading.

Reuben R. Engel, son of William K., was born in Engelsville, April 1, 1835. He never attended school, and his success in life was due entirely to his own unaided efforts. His father became proprietor of the hotel when young Reuben was but twelve years old, and two years later he began peddling cigars for his father. He began for himself in 1857, and in all was engaged in the cigar business, as salesman, or as manufacturer for fifty-seven years. For fifty years he manufactured cigars in Morysville, employing as many as forty hands. He was his own salesman. His home has been in Morysville since 1853. At present he has a small chop house, and sells soft drinks. Until the office was abandoned in 1865 he was government inspector of cigars. For twenty years he had a mercantile business at Morysville, beginning in a small way in 1869, and for one year he conducted a coal yard there. His cigar factory was erected in 1885. In politics he was a Republican. He and his family belong to the Reformed Church, and he has been deacon of the Reformed Church of the Good Shepherd for twenty years. On Oct. 13, 1853, Mr. Engel was married to Rebecca Gresh, daughter of Nicholas Gresh, of Montgomery county, and they have had five children: Ottemer, of Pottstown; Lyman G., of Boyertown; Alam, a merchant at Morysville, succeeding his father; Ida, who married Andrew Wren, of Boyertown; and Mary, who married Clinton Grim, of Boyertown.

Lyman G. Engel, son of Reuben R., received his education in the common schools of Colebrookdale township, and in Mt. Pleasant Seminary. He passed his boyhood days in the villages of Morysville and Boyertown, and when old enough to work began clerking in his father's general store. When thirteen years old he learned the cigar maker's trade at Morysville, and this he has followed for over thirty years. He was foreman of T. J. Dun & Co.'s cigar factory about one year, and then accepted a like position with the Gabel, Jones and Gabel Company, Boyertown, in whose employ he was for four years. He had from fifteen to twenty men under him, and proved a very efficient employe of the concern. He built a charming home on West Reading avenue, Boyertown, in the summer of 1907, and there he and his family reside. In politics Mr. Engel is a stanch Republican, and has serevd Colebrookdale township as committeeman for some years, and was delegate to the county convention for twenty-one consecutive times, being a most familiar

In 1887 Mr. Engel was married to Hannah Heller, daughter of Abner R. and Mary (Pennypacker) Heller, and they have children: Harry, born Oct. 21, 1887, a cigar maker at Boyertown, and deacon in the Church of the Good Shepherd, married Ella Haas, and has one child, Rebecca; Minnie married Harvey Fegley, and lives at Boyertown; Ida married Charles Stauffer, of Boyertown, and has a daughter, Dorothy; Warren is unmarried and at home; William, born Nov. 24, 18—, is a gas manufacturer and stove molder by trade, and is active in Church life; Emma, born Dec. 21, 1891, perished in the Opera House fire Jan. 13, 1908; Edith is attending school.

DR. OSCAR THOMPSON GEHRIS, a prominent medical practitioner of Fleetwood, Pa., was born Aug. 24, 1870, near Lyons, in Richmond township, Berks county, son of N. Henry and Mary (Spang) Gehris, who live retired in Fleetwood.

Peter Gehris, the grandfather of the Doctor, son of Peter and Polly (Imboden) Gehris, of Hereford township, was a resident of that section himself, and lived to be nearly ninety years of age, dying a member of the Huff's Reformed Church. His remains were interred in the burial ground adjoining the church. He married Mary Herb, the widow of William Thompson, and to this marriage were born: N. Henry; Peter H., a dentist of Reading; and Daniel H., who lives on the old homestead near Lyons.

N. Henry Gehris was born Nov. 8, 1832, and was a farmer for many years. He then became a salesman for Schaeffer, Merkel & Company, implement dealers of Fleetwood, and he remained in the employ of this firm until it went out of business, when he retired from active work. Politically Mr. Gehris is a Republican. He was married June 9, 1856, to Mary Spang, and these children were born to them: Lou A.; Peter S., a druggist of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mary m. John Haas, of Lancaster, Pa.; Annie J., who taught school for seven terms and now holds the position of assistant postmaster of Fleetwood; Dr. Oscar T.; and Lewis H., of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. N. Henry Gehris celebrated their Golden Wedding in June, 1906, at which all of their children attended. The family are members of the United Evangelical Church.

When Dr. Oscar T. Gehris was two years old his parents removed to Fleetwood, and there his boyhood days were spent. His last teacher in the schools was Professor William M. Zechman, the well known ex-county superintendent of Berks county. In the spring of 1885 Mr. Gehris began attending the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, and prepared for college, entering Williams College at Williamstown, Mass., in the fall of 1887, taking the full course of study, and graduating "with praise" and with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1892. He located in Brooklyn, L. I., and accepted a position as bookkeeper with Cushman Brothers, New York, who were manufacturers' agents. In the fall of 1893 he entered the medical department of the University of the City of New York, where he studied for one year. During the summer of 1894 he worked for a drug house, afterward doing detail work among physicians and traveling until the fall of 1896. During this time he traveled throughout the New England States, New York and New Jersey. He then entered the second class of the medical department of Tufts University, of Boston, Mass., and graduated from that institution in 1898. Owing to poor health, however, he did not begin practice until 1902, when he chose the town of Fleetwood as his field of practice, and there he has continued to the present time. He is a successful young man, is very popular, and is an exemplary citizen. He is an adherent of the principles of the Republican party. Recently he was appointed by State Commissioner of Health Dixon as registrar of Vital Statistics for the borough of Fleetwood, and Maiden-creek and Ruscombmanor townships.

WILLIAM BERNHART, ESQ., a Justice of the Peace for upwards of twenty-five years, was born in Richmond township, Berks county, in 1830, son of Jacob and Sarah (Rothermel) Bernhart.

Jacob Bernhart emigrated from Germany while still under age and settled in Ruscombmanor township, where he carried on farming. He married Sarah Rothermel, born March 27, 1805, daughter of Peter Rothermel, who was born Sept. 1, 1773, and died Feb. 1, 1856. He was a son of Peter Rothermel, who was born in Wachbach, Germany, in about 1718, and who came to America with his father, Johannes, born about 1688, and mother Sybilla (Zimmerman) who was born about 1690.

William Bernhart was reared to farming, was educated in the local schools, and while a young man served as a teacher in the township for several terms. When he was twenty-nine years old he was elected as one of the Justices of the Peace of the township, and he continued to fill this office by re-election until his death in 1886. When the borough of Fleetwood was established in 1873 he had been a citizen of the place for some time previously. He also carried on huckstering for a number of years. He was an active Democrat from the time he became a voter; he was affiliated with the Evangelical Church at Fleetwood.

Squire Bernhart was married in 1860 to Mary Margaret Martin, daughter of James Martin, who emigrated from England when a young man eighteen years old, and settled in Windsor township, where he carried on farming until his death in 1838. He married Magdalena Shirey, daughter of Henry Shirey of Richmond township, who died in 1887 at the age of ninety-two years. Mrs. Bernhart was the only child of her parents, and since her husband's death has been living retired in Fleetwood. Four children were born to Justice Bernhart and his wife; Henry and Alice, who died young; Ada, who married Henry Boyer; and Elizabeth, who was thoroughly educated for a teacher, and who now makes her home with her mother, caring for her in her declining years.

AUGUSTUS P. MERKEL, of Fleetwood, Pa., was born in Richmond township, Berks county, Feb. 4, 1869.

Isaac Merkel, grandfather of Augustus P., was a farmer of Richmond township, and owned a good tract of land between Fleetwood and Walnuttown. He married Anna Schaeffer, and to them were born these children: William S. father of Augustus P.; Lucy, who m. Peter Kieffer; and Nathaniel, who married Catherine Keim. William S. Merkel was a machinist and draughtsman and resided at Fleetwood, being engaged in the foundry and machinist business at that place for thirty-four years. He was a member of the firm of Schaeffer, Merkel & Co., from its inception in 1868 until his death in 1899, at the age of fifty-four years. He was a prominent and influential citizen and during his life served the town as chief burgess and school director. He was a member of the Evangelical Church. Mr. Merkel was married to Catherine Potteiger, daughter of Daniel and Polly (Babb) Potteiger, and to them were born these children: Annie, married County Superintendent Eli M. Rapp; Augustus P.; Maurice, who died aged about eight years; William P., who married Ida Maurer; Mary and Elmer, died when about six years of age; Elda, who married James Missimer; and Isaac and Reuel, single.

Augustus P. Merkel obtained his education in the public schools of his native town, at the Keystone State Normal school and at Albright College. After leaving the latter institution he worked at the Carpenter Steel Works, Reading, for two years as a machinist, but at the end of that time returned to Fleetwood, becoming employed by Schaeffer, Merkel & Co. He continued with this firm until its dissolution in 1899, when he commenced business on his own account in Fleetwood and after six months' successful operations formed a partnership with A. K. Seaman of Fleetwood, under the firm name of Seaman & Merkel. The firm built a large machine shop and warehouse along the railroad at Fleetwood, doing a thriving business, and employing about a dozen skilled workmen. They had the largest trade in farming implements in this section of the county, also carrying a large line of gasoline engines, pumps and plumbing and heating appliances, and did business all over the county. Since the dissolution of the firm Mr. Merkel has been engaged in the same business in his own name.

Mr. Merkel is a consistent member of Emanuel United Evangelical Church and served as assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school for several years, being also one of the stewards of the church for a number of terms. Politically he is a Republican, and for some terms served the borough faithfully as auditor, and as a school director served for two terms, three successive years of which he was president of the board.

On Dec. 3, 1903, Mr. Merkel was united in marriage with Deborah Rothermel, daughter of Daniel and Deborah (De Turk) Rothermel, of Fleetwood.

BENNETCH (Bennage). In northwestern Berks county is located the Bennetch family, which bears a name noted in French Huguenot history. Many were scattered by religious persecution through Switzerland, the Palatinate and England, and of those who came to America, Simon Bennetch located in Heidelberg township, Berks Co., Pa., where he died in 1757, leaving a posterity of which Morris Bennetch, one of Heidelberg township's substantial citizens, is a member of one of the youngest generations. The family arrived in 1732, at which time Simon Bennetch was thirteen years of age. Inasmuch as the father's name does not appear on the list with the family upon its arrival, it is probable that he died on the voyage to America.

John Bennetch, the grandfather of Morris, was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., and lived at the Swamp, where he owned a tract of land. His wife was Anna Hain, and both are buried at the Schaefferstown cemetery. They were the parents of these children: John, who lived near Myerstown, m. Valeria Becker, and had three children—Henry, Mary Ann and Jacob; Benneville, a farmer, who died near Myerstown in 1899, aged eighty-four years, had five children—Benneville, George, Frank, Kate and Laura; Polly, who was born in 1818, m. Joseph Kindig, who lived on the Bennetch homestead; Annie m. Christian Wiest; Catherine m. William Stoner and lives at Avon, Pa.; Henry; Frederick, who died at the Swamp, July 3, 1906, m. Priscilla Brubaker, and had seven children—Katie, Benjamin, Priscilla, Polly, Susan, Henry and John; and Eliza is unmarried.

Henry Bennetch, father of Morris, was born in Cocalico township, Lancaster county, in August, 1830, and died Dec. 13, 1901, being buried at Schaefferstown, where for many years he had been a member of the Lutheran Church. He was the owner of 171 acres of land in Heidelberg township, now the property of Henry Schappell, and was a man of influence in his community. Mr. Bennetch was married to Kate Laccer, who was born in 1840 and now resides in her own home at West Reading. She was a daughter of Joseph Laccer, of Schaefferstown. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bennetch had these children: John died in infancy; Jacob, born in August, 1864, now lives with his brother Morris, was married and has a daughter,—Bertha; Catherine, born Dec. 26, 1866, m. Henry Reedy; Lizzie, who died in May, 1901, m. Matthias Speicher, whom she bore these children,—Willie, Beulah, Paul, Mabel, Ella and Erma; Morris; Rosa m. Milert Staudt, a moulder at Sinking Spring; and Amelia m. James Eyrich, of Wyomissing.

Morris Bennetch obtained only a limited schooling in his native district, having given up his studies early in order to engage in work on his father's farm. For four years he farmed as a tenant on his father's property, and in 1903 he purchased the Benjamin Blatt farm of thirty-three acres, a fertile tract of land located about three miles north of Robesonia, near the Sowers School house, on which Mr. Bennetch carries on truck farming, giving special attention to potato growing. He is a Democrat in politics, as was his father, and he and his wife are prominent members of Hain's Reformed Church.

Mr. Bennetch was married to Carrie Hassler, daughter of William and Catherine (Fisher) Hassler, the former a farmer and painter of Wernersville, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Bennetch have no children. Mrs. Bennetch was one of a family of five children, namely: Lewis, Sallie, Harry, Emma and Carrie.

AARON R. BROWN, a general farmer and substantial citizen of Heidelberg township, was born Sept. 18, 1859, on the old Fisher farm in Heidelberg township, a son of John L. and Lovina R. (Fisher) Brown.

The grandparents of Mr. Brown were Martin and Mary (Lebo) Brown and they were born in Marion township, Berks county. Their children were: Catherine m. Michael Keiser; Percival; John L.; Rebecca m. Edward Sheets; George; Caroline m. John Leininger; Samuel L.; and Mary m. Augustus Gassert. Martin Brown was buried at Host.

John L. Brown was born July 11, 1821, and died at Robesonia, March 22, 1889, aged sixty-seven years, eight months and eleven days. During all his active years he engaged in farming in Heidelberg township, as had his father before him, retiring to Robesonia before his death. His burial was at St. Daniel's Lutheran Church. He married Lovina R. Fisher, born June 24, 1821, a daughter of John L. and Elizabeth (Rehrer) Fisher. This marriage was celebrated Nov. 7, 1846, and they had the following children: Frank J., residing at Newark, N. J., m. Rosa A. Bingaman; Mary E., unmarried, residing with her brother Aaron R.; Ellen F., unmarried; Erasmus; Emma m. Thomas Filbert, a well-known merchant of Robesonia; Aaron R.; and William H., the driver on Rural Free Delivery Route No. 1, Robesonia.

In his boyhood Mr. Brown attended the township schools for a time, but he was a small boy when he started to work in the mines. Later he worked for his uncle, Samuel L. Brown and remained on his farm for several years. In 1881 he purchased a part of the old John L. Fisher farm in Heidelberg township, near Robesonia, and now owns forty acres of as good land as there is in the township. He has put it under a fine state of cultivation and has made a success of farming. In politics he is a Democrat. He is a man of high standing in the community. For many years he has been a member of St. Daniel's Corner Church Mr. Brown has never married.

HENRY MOUNTZ, now a retired citizen of Robesonia, has passed all his life in Heidelberg township, having been born there June 21, 1844, above Womelsdorf. The family is an old one in Berks county. Joseph Mountz, great-grandfather of Henry, was a taxable in Heidelberg township as early as 1759, being assessed as a single man. He had a brother George, who died in 1800, the year his will was entered on record in the court-house, a son, John G., being the executor of the estate.

George Mountz, son of Joseph, was born about 1787, and died in 1882, in the ninety-sixth year of his age. He was a laborer, and lived in Heidelberg township, in the vicinity of Womelsdorf. He is buried at the Corner Church in that township. His wife was a Wenrich, and their family consisted of six children, namely: Isaac, who lived and died at Womelsdorf; William; John, who settled in Luzerne county; Daniel, who lived in Lower Berks county; George; and Catharine, who died young.

George Mountz, son of George and father of Henry, was born in Heidelberg, May 4, 1824, and was there reared to farming, which occupation he followed throughout his active years. His educational opportunities were limited, as he was allowed to attend the subscription school at Womelsdorf, the only available place of learning, for but a month or two during the winters of his early boyhood. The text-books were the German reader and the New Testament, and study was confined to the three R's. He engaged in farming on his own account and still owns a farm in North Heidelberg township, though he is now living retired. In spite of many years of hard work he is a well-preserved man. He makes his home with his grandson, George P. Schell. Mr. Mountz married Mary Moyer, who was born in 1831, daughter of William Moyer, and died in December, 1899, at the age of sixty-eight years. Three children were born to this union: Henry, who is mentioned below; Sarah, who m. Isaac Schell, a farmer in North Heidelberg township, and had a large family; and Emma, who m. James Wilhelm, a farmer in Perry, Iowa.

Henry Mountz was reared upon his father's farm and attended the free schools in his locality. The year he became of age, 1865, he began farming on his own account in Heidelberg township, following that work until he retired, in the year 1903. He did well, and is living in comfort in what was formerly the Jefferson Werner residence in Robesonia, at the corner of Main and Robeson streets, which he bought in 1898 and moved into in the spring of 1903.

In 1865 Mr. Mountz married Susan Greth, daughter of Emanuel and Susan (Reifsnyder) Greth, and six sons have been born to them, namely: Lewis m. Mary Fromm, and they have two children, Mabel and Ralph; William m. Ida Snyder and they have two children, Roy and Ella; Calvin died at the age of eighteen years; Harvey m. Lizzie Heck and they have two children, Lloyd and Lewis; Harry m. Lizzie Zechman and they have three children, Beulah, John and Edna; Arch graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1905, and is now engaged in teaching at Quakertown, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Mountz is a Reformed member of St. Paul's Church of Robesonia, and has served both as deacon and as elder.

JOHN KNETZ, in his lifetime a farmer of Hereford township, Berks county, whose widow lived at Huff's Church, until her recent death, was born April 4, 1815, and died Nov. 4, 1879. He was a grandson of Conrad Knetz, who lived near the Berks county line in Montgomery county. He built up the property now known as Lesher's Mill, but which was long known as Knetz's Mill and was in the family name for many years. Conrad Knetz was born Jan. 6, 1742, and died Oct. 13, 1822, aged eighty years, nine months, seven days. His wife Catharine, daughter of Moses and Anna Binder, was born May 22, 1751, and died Feb. 5, 1828, aged seventy-six years, eight months, thirteen days; both are buried at New Goshenhoppen Church.

Henry Knetz, father of John, was born May 9, 1778, in Hereford township, on the old homestead at Clayton, and followed farming, owning a tract of about 150 acres. The Swiss barn on this place, built during the early fifties, is 110 feet long, and is the longest barn in the township. He married Maria Boyer, born Aug. 19, 1780, who died June 7, 1864, aged eighty-three years, nine months, eighteen days, surviving her husband a number of years. He died May 10, 1847, aged sixty-nine years, one day. They are buried at Huff's Church, of which they were Lutheran members. Their children were: John is mentioned in full below. David, deceased, lived in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, on the property now known as "Lesher's Mill." George, born Dec. 20, 1806, died May 20, 1842, was a farmer in Hereford township, his land being bounded by the lands of Daniel Schell, John Rush and Henry Knetz; he made his last will and testament, recorded in Will Book 8, page 422, on the day of his death, and it contains the following item: "I do nominate and appoint my father Henry Knetz to be guardian of my daughter Matilda"; to this daughter he gave a 170-acre farm, his brother John received the sum of $300, and he left a bequest to his faithful servant, Sophia Trexler. Sally, deceased, married Samuel Treichler, who was a merchant at Treichlersville, which place was named for him.

John Knetz was born in Hereford township, where he followed farming and droving all his life, dying upon his farm at Chapel Nov. 4, 1879, when sixty-four years, seven months old. He owned the farm which is now the property of his daughter Mrs. Maria Landis. In 1860 he erected a set of buildings on the tract of land now occupied by Reuben Beidler, on the Clayton and Treichlersville turnpike, and it was there that he died.

Mr. Knetz married Abigail Moll, who was born Dec. 17, 1817, daughter of George and Eve (Miller) Moll, from near Huff's Church, their family consisting of eight children, four sons and four daughters: Jonas, Thomas, Jacob, George, Judith, Abigail, Betzy and Sally. To Mr. and Mrs. Knetz were born four children, namely: Maria is the widow of Martin M. Landis and lives at Clayton on the old homestead; Jacob lives at East Greenville, Pa.; Betsy married Andrew Stauffer, and is deceased; Sarah married Reuben Beidler, and they live at Clayton.

From 1895 Mrs. Abigail Knetz, widow of John Knetz, made her home at Huff's Church. Though past eighty years old she could see well, using no glasses, was able to sew, and attended church faithfully. She was particularly fond of reading the Scriptures, and had read the Bible through forty-one times, by actual count. Mrs. Knetz had a number of valuable relics which she prized highly, including old dishes and an old grandfather's clock, which later belonged to the Sharp family of Hereford and is more than 150 years old. She died Sept. 25, 1909.

JOHN A. REITNAUER, of Huff's Church, Berks county, dealer in hardware, etc., was born Nov. 12, 1875, in Pike township, son of Daniel M. and Sarah (Adolph) Reitnauer.

The original spelling of this name, Reidenauer, is still used by many of the descendants in Berks county of the early ancestors. John A. Reitnauer is a descendant in the sixth generation from the first of the family to come to this country, Johannes Reidenauer, the line being traced through Johannes, Jr., Frederick, John and Daniel M. Detailed accounts of the earliest generations appear elsewhere in this work.

Johannes Reidenauer, Jr., was born in Germany Dec. 26, 1723, and died June 14, 1805. He married Elizabeth Herb, born 1732, died Jan. 20, 1808.

Frederick Reidenauer, son of Johannes, born Jan. 30, 1762, died Aug. 22, 1837. He married Aug. 28, 1787, Elizabeth Mayer, and to them were born seven children: Joseph (1789-1844), John, Jeremiah, Elam, Frank, and two others whose names are not recorded.

John Reidenauer, son of Frederick, married Susan Mosser, and they had children as follows: Gideon; Frederick; Charles, born Feb. 27, 1825, who lives at Eshbach, Pa. (he has sons, William, Daniel and George); Daniel M.; Betzy, who died unmarried; Catherine, wife of Joseph Fry; Susan, wife of Philip Grubb; Sarah, wife of George Weidner; Polly, wife of John Fronheiser.

Daniel M. Reitnauer, son of John, was born in February, 1846, on the old Reidenauer homestead near Bechtelsville. He was reared to farming, and continued to follow that occupation until his retirement, in 1902, since when he has been enjoying in leisure the rewards of his early labors. He lives near Landis Store, in District township, where he owns a 103-acre farm. Mr. Reitnauer is a member of the Hill Church and a Democrat in politics. He married Sarah Adolph, born in January, 1846, daughter of George and Sarah (Fenstermacher) Adolph, who lived near Hill Church, and a family of six children were born to them: Mary, who married (first) Albert Jacob and after his death (second) William Hess; Alfred, a farmer on the old homestead; John A.; Susan, unmarried; Katie, who married Howard Arndt; and William, unmarried.

John A. Reitnauer received his education in the public schools, attending in Pike, Washington and District townships. In 1896 he commenced to learn the tinsmith and stove business from J. H. Marsteller, at Huff's Church, remaining with him over a year, after which he went to Philadelphia, where he followed his trade for a short time. Returning to Huff's Church, he worked for Henry Wetzel one year, on the farm, and in 1900 he engaged in the stove business on his own account, at Huff's Church, buying the good-will, stock and fixtures of his old employer, Mr. Martsteller, who is now located in Reading. After two years in this business Mr. Reitnauer sold out to Charles Gruber and became a farmer on the Henry Wetzel place, where he remained five years, resuming business in the spring of 1907. He carries a large stock of stoves, heaters and ranges, deals in hardware, paints and oils, all kinds of cast-iron water-troughs and hog-troughs, roofing, spouting and tinware, and has an excellent trade, giving conscientious value to all his patrons. He is an active young man and deservedly prosperous.

Mr. Reitnauer has taken considerable interest in the welfare of his community and its public administration, and he has been serving since 1906 as treasurer of Hereford township. In the spring of 1903 he was elected school director and served one term, refusing a renomination. He is a Democrat and a worker in his party; is also well known as a member of Castle No. 461, K. G. E., of Pleasantville, Pa.; and of Landisville Council No. 1007, Order of Independent Americans; and is a zealous member of the Lutheran congregation at the Hill Church. Since 1906 he has served as secretary of the Sunday school. His wife is a Reformed member of the Hill Church.

On May 31, 1898, Mr. Reitnauer married Miss Clara Snyder, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Wetzel) Snyder, of Lehigh county, Pa., and two children have been born to them, Elsie and Bertha.

FRANCIS H. ECKENROAD, whose death occurred Dec. 11, 1906, at the age of eighty years, at his residence, No. 631 Laurel street, Reading, was an old resident of the city, having spent practically his whole active business life within its limits. He was born Dec. 11, 1826, when his parents, John and Mary (Hartman) Eckenroad, were living near "Hartman's Hotel," in the vicinity of Wernersville.

Mr. Eckenroad was unable to avail himself of even the limited educational advantages which were to be had in that early day, and his school days lasted but two weeks. So good, however, were his natural abilities, that even hampered thus by lack of training he became known as one of the best business men in the city. He came to Reading about fifty-two years ago, and having learned the shoemaker's trade early in life followed that occupation steadily till he retired, about eight years before his death, being located in the same shop for forty-five consecutive years. He invested his earnings, and was so uniformly successful in his undertakings that he accumulated a good property.

In 1852 Mr. Eckenroad married Miss Elvina Hain, daughter of George and Eva (Fisher) Hain. Ten children were born to this union, of whom the following six are living: G. Wallace is a wheelwright and wagon-maker at Gouglersville, Pa.; H. Edward, who was superintendent for L. H. Focht, builder, opened a millinery business in March, 1909, at No. 39 North Ninth street, Reading, and also has a store at No. 5153 Haverford avenue, Philadelphia; Charles is a blacksmith; Ida m. Charles Smith; Irvin is a wheelwright; and Harry E., a well-known musician and teacher of instrumental music in the Academy of Music at Reading, has given a number of amateur productions. One daughter, Emma, m. G. Smith Geiger, and died May 13, 1909. Mr. Eckenroad was also survived by two sisters, Mrs. Mary Hill and Mrs. Elizabeth Hill; two half-sisters, Mrs. Susan Seidel and Mrs. Levina Kemp; and three half-brothers, Thomas, Michael and Wilson Eckenroad.

Mr. Eckenroad was formerly a member of Salome Lodge, I. O. O. F., continuing in its ranks until it disbanded. In religious connection he was a member of Faith Reformed Church, and was treasurer of its Sabbath-school for twenty-seven years. In the many years he was identified with the city of Reading he earned the respect of the community, and he is mourned by many friends.

JAMES E. FOX, school director and farmer in Hereford township, Berks county, was born in Rockland township, this county, May 30, 1864, and comes of substantial German stock.

Engel Fox (or Fuchs) was born in Germany, and came to America, locating in Rockland township, Berks Co., Pa., about 1800. In 1810 he was a large land owner, and in 1815 he and his son Ernst both owned property and paid tax. He was a farmer by occupation. He is buried at Mertz' church.

Ernst Fox was born in Germany, and accompanied his parents to the New World, locating in Berks county, He became the owner of two large farms in Rockland township, one now the property of Horatio and the other of James Hertzog, brothers. These farms he sold during the fifties to David Hertzog, father of the present owners. He then moved to the northeastern end of District township, where he owned a small farm, and where he died. He is buried at New Jerusalem Church, of which he was a Lutheran member, and was a member of the building committee when the present church was built in 1844. He was always liberal in his contributions to religious causes. At his death he left an estate of $25,000, the result of his own accumulation. For a number of years he manufactured wool hats in District township, and these he took by team to Philadelphia, where he sold them. He was successful in all his undertakings. He married a Miss Mertz, and their children were: Charles, Matilda (m. Daniel Rohrbach), Henry, Eliza (m. Reuben Drumheller), Reuben R. and Carolina (m. Joel Rohrbach).

Reuben R. Fox, son of Ernst, was born in 1818 on the farm now owned by Horatio Hertzog, in Rockland township. He attended the pay schools of his district, and when eighteen went to Norristown and there learned the cabinet maker's trade, after which he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he worked at his trade three years. In 1842 he returned to Berks county by team, and sold his horse at Barto, his first location. His buggy is still owned by his son. In 1850 he m. Caroline Bush, daughter of William Bush, whose wife was a Miss Rohrbach, of Longswamp township. She died aged sixty-three years, and both are buried at New Jerusalem Church, of which they were Lutheran members. Their children were: Samuel; William; Hettie (m. John Schofer); Benjamin; Emma (m. John Heffner); James E.; Aaron; Sarah (died unmarried); and Andora.

James E. Fox attended the common schools in the vicinity of his home, and worked for his parents until he was of age. Immediately after his marriage he began farming as a tenant on the John Rush farm in Hereford township, and after two years there came to Washington township, and farmed there three years. He then moved to Maxatawny township, where he lived five years. His father-in-law then decided to retire, and Mr. Fox took his farm in Hereford, near Huff's church, and this has been his home since 1897. In 1901 he bought the farm, which consists of 140 acres. The present barn was built in 186-, and the house in 1878. Mr. Fox also owns a tract of twenty-eight acres in District township, which is improved with a good set of buildings, and this Mr. Fox has rented.

On Feb. 18, 1886, Mr. Fox married Amanda Siesholtz, daughter of Samuel and Adelaide (Gery) Siesholtz, and granddaughter of Samuel and Eliza (Ginginger) Siesholtz. Their children are: Samuel, who graduated from the Kutztown Normal School in 1907, and is now teaching in Hereford township; Ida; Edwin; Aaron; and Elsie. Mr. Fox is a Democrat, and was township auditor, and has been a delegate to a number of county conventions. In the spring of 1901 he was elected a school director, and has since held that office. He and his family belong to Huff's Church (Lutheran), of which he was deacon for seven years.

JOHN H. STEFFY, a truck farmer and butcher of Lower Heidelberg township, is a native of Cumru township, Berks county, born Feb. 9, 1845.

(I) Abraham Steffy, grandfather of John H., passed all his life in Cumru township, where he worked as a laborer and carried on farming in a small way. He married a Miss Remp, and they had four children, Benjamin, Samuel, Joseph and Abraham.

(II) Abraham Steffy, son of Abraham, owned a small farm in Cumru township. He married Sarah Harding, daughter of Christil Harding, and their eleven children were: Christil, Samuel, Henry, Benjamin, John H., William, Moses, Reuben, Elizabeth (m. Jonathan Epler), Sarah (m. Levi Kohl), and Rachel (who died unmarried at the age of twenty-six). Five sons of this family fought in the Union army during the Rebellion, Christil, Samuel, Henry, Benjamin and John H.

(III) John H. Steffy was reared on the parental farm, and worked at home until his enlistment for service in the Union army. He was mustered in Feb. 23, 1864, at Reading, becoming a member of Co. B, 55th P. V. I., which was attached to the 4th Brigade, 1st Division, 24th Army Corps. Mr. Steffy saw active service at the battles of Cold Harbor and Petersburg and throughout the Richmond campaign, and was honorably discharged at Petersburg, Va., August 31, 1865.

After his return from the army, Mr. Steffy worked at stone quarrying as well as farming, and in 1873 purchased the tract of land upon which he has since lived, eleven acres at the foot of Cushion Hill (upon which Wenrich's observatory is located), in Lower Heidelberg township. The place is especially suited to truck farming, and Mr. Steffy raises all kinds of garden stuff, which he disposes of at the Bingaman Street Market House in Reading, having stand No. 195. He has attended this market for the past thirty-five years, in winter selling meat which he butchers himself. He has prospered in his work and has all the most modern appliances for carrying it on, including a gasoline engine of approved make. In 1889 he built the house he now occupies, and the barn upon his property was put up in 1898.

Mr. Steffy has been twice married. His first wife, Lavina Fisher, born Jan. 21, 1842, daughter of William Fisher, of Lower Heidelberg township, died May 17, 1898, in her fifty-seventh year. There were no children by that union. Mr. Steffy married for his second wife Emma Ulrich, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (White) Ulrich, of Spring township, and they have had five children, namely: Sarah S., John William, Franklin Pierce, Harry Edwin and Maggie M. Mr. Steffy is a Lutheran and attends the Hain's Church. He is a Republican in political sentiment.

BENJAMIN S. FOCHT, one of the substantial and representative farmers of Berks county, resides on his well cultivated estate of eighty-five acres, located near the Tulpehocken, at State Hill, in Lower Heidelberg township. Mr. Focht was born Sept. 6, 1847, in Windsor township, Berks county, son of Daniel and Hannah (Stepp) Focht, and grandson of George Focht of Windsor township.

Daniel Focht was born on his father's farm in Windsor township in 1818, and early in life learned the stone mason's trade, which he followed for a number of years. Later he purchased a twenty-four acre farm near Windsor Castle, but this he subsequently sold and removed to a farm of 156 acres in Centre township, where his death occurred in 1901. He was a radical Democrat in his political views, and for five years served as supervisor in Centre township. His religious belief was that of the Lutheran faith, and he was a member and regular attendant of St. Michael's Union Church. Mr. Focht was married to Hannah Stepp, daughter of Samuel Stepp, of Centre townhsip, and they had these thirteen children: Frederick, David, Mary, Catherine, William, Benjamin, Reuben, Ellen, Lenora, James, Frank, Samuel and Isabella.

Benjamin S. Focht spent his boyhood days on his father's small tract in Windsor township, and there and in Centre township his education was secured. When twenty-five years of age, Mr. Focht commenced farming for himself on his father's tract in Centre township, which is now in possession of his son James. This farm Mr. Focht conducted twenty-one years, at the end of which time he purchased his present farm, a finely-located tract of eighty-five acres in Lower Heidelberg township. Mr. Focht has always made a specialty of potatoes and he is known as the champion potato raiser of the district. He keeps eight head of cattle and four horses. For fourteen years Mr. Focht had a steam threshing apparatus, and went out threshing among the neighboring farmers, and in addition for many years engaged extensively in butchering, but as he has advanced in years he has gradually given up these occupations, which his sons have relieved him of. He is now surrounded by all that makes life dear,—affectionate friends, devoted descendants, ample means and a wide circle of estimable fellow citizens who hold him in the highest regard. He is a Democrat in politics, and he and his family are members of Bern Union Church, belonging to the Lutheran denomination.

In 1869 Mr. Focht was married to Esther Shearer, daughter of Daniel and Eliza (Miller) Shearer, the former a farmer and carpenter of Windsor township. Mr. and Mrs. Focht have eight children: Andora m. William Reber, of Lower Heidelberg township; Thomas, a farmer, m. Tillie Werner of Blue Marsh; Alvin, also a farmer, m. Lovie Werner, sister of Tillie; Richard is single and lives at home; Milton, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township, m. Laura Reber; Ellen m. Charles Brossman, a music teacher of Lower Heidelberg township; and Mamie E. and Robert reside at home.

WILLIAM H. ALBRIGHT, one of the most popular business men of Mount Penn, Pa., where he is engaged in carriage building, was born Feb. 13, 1865, in Pottsville, Schuylkill county, son of Joseph and Margaret (Herman) Albright.

Joseph Albright was born in 1830, in Würtemberg, Germany, and there grew to manhood, learning the trade of wheelwright. When nineteen years of age he emigrated to America, and first located in New York City, whence he went to Reading, then to Kutztown, and after a short time to Pottsville, where he operated a shop for a while. Mr. Albright then returned to Berks county, locating at Black Bear, and in about 1868 located at Dengler's, now Mount Penn, where he opened the first business of the place, a carriage building shop. This became one of the most successful enterprises of this section of Berks county, as Mr. Albright built up a large and lucrative trade and employed a number of skilled mechanics. He retired a short time prior to his death, which occurred in 1892. In political matters he was a Democrat, and he and his wife were connected with St. Paul's Catholic Church, of Reading.

Mr. Albright was married in Reading to Margaret Herman, daughter of a well-known butcher of that name, in Reading, who died in his ninety-third year. Mrs. Albright still survives and makes her home with her son, being upwards of seventy years of age. She and her husband had these children: Josephine, m. to Charles Tyson, of Mount Penn; Daniel M., of Mount Penn; Carrie, deceased; William H.; Mary, m. to Thomas Lantz, of Manayunk; J. J., a carriage builder of Conshohocken, Montgomery county; Francis, a carriage builder of Norristown; Catherine, m. to Edward Jones, a butcher of Flourtown, Pa.; Annie, unmarried, of Chicago; Henry, a painting contractor of Norristown; Charles, deceased; and Margaret, unmarried, of Norristown.

William H. Albright was reared at Mount Penn, and was educated in the public and St. Paul's Parochial schools of Reading. He then began learning the trade with his father, with whom he worked until sixteen years of age, after which he went to Philadelphia, where seven years were spent in carriage painting. He then returned to Mount Penn and formed a partnership with his brother, Daniel M., under the firm name of Albright and Brother, which partnership continued about two years, at the end of which time William H. resigned from the firm and spent four years at different points as journeyman painter. In 1892 he returned to Dengler's and succeeded his father in business, in which he has continued to the present time with much success, making a specialty of light work, as buggies, milk wagons, bread wagons, etc. Mr. Albright built the present plant of the company, one of the best in this section of the county, and he also owns a comfortable residence in the borough of Mount Penn. In political matters Mr. Albright is a Democrat. He and his wife are members of St. Paul's Catholic Church.

Mr. Albright was married in 1889 to Miss Martha Elmira Schaeffer, daughter of Emanuel and Marie (Trumbo) Schaeffer, and to them there was born one son, William H., who died in infancy.

Mr. Albright is a great lover of good horse flesh, and has owned a large number of fast racing horses, among them: "Patsie," 2:09 1-4; "Diamond A.," 2:16 1-4, which he kept in stud three years: "Black Jim," with a record pace of a half mile in 1. flat; "Rixie," 2:13 1-2; and a bay pacer with a record of 2:18. He is now the owner of a four year old, "Kid," a sorrel trotter, with a three year old trial of one-quarter mile in .33, for which animal he has a standing offer of $1,000. Mr. Albright is a great lover of all kinds of sport, and is ready to engage in a friendly bout at any time. He is a genial, whole-souled gentleman and his friends are legion.

JACOB K. LEVAN lived on the old Levan homestead in Oley township, where he was born Aug. 23, 1849, and he died Dec. 24, 1905.

Daniel H. Levan, his father, was born Aug. 9, 1815, and he obtained the old family homestead from his father. He was a lifelong farmer, and his death occurred in March, 1874. He married Hannah Kauffman, born Feb. 13, 1818, and they had three children: Ezra, of Friedensburg; Susan, who married Mahlon De Turck; and Jacob K.

Jacob K. Levan was reared on the farm of which he later became the owner, and he devoted his life to agricultural pursuits. This farm contains 180 acres of good land; the barn was built by Mr. Levan's father, Daniel H., and the house was erected one hundred years ago by an earlier Levan. At his death Mr. Levan was laid to rest in Union cemetery. He was a member of Friedens Church (Reformed). In his political affiliations he was a Democrat; he was a school director in his district, being president of the board at the time of his death. In 1905 Mr. Levan commenced the erection of a comfortable modern home at Friedensburg, but this was not completed and had not been occupied when he died. The next spring his widow and family moved in, and they still reside there.

On May 16, 1874, Mr. Levan married Elizabeth H. Moyer, daughter of Nathan and Emeline (Hilbert) Moyer, and granddaughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Muthart) Moyer, both the father and grandfather being of Rockland township. Twelve children were born of this union: Charles, Daniel, Sallie, Kate (who married Hayman Bertolet, of Philadelphia, and has a daughter, Lena), Annie (who married Benneville Eberhart, foreman in the hosiery mills at Friedensburg), Lott, Minnie, Ada, Paul, Lizzie, Howard and Hester. Of these, four—Lizzie, Charles, Lott and Ada—died within twenty-four hours of diphtheria, and three more—Daniel, Sallie and Paul—about a week later of the same dread disease, and all seven are buried in a row in Union cemetery.

Mrs. Levan's home is charming, and it contains a number of heirlooms that are priceless. She has a set of china and an old corner closet that belonged to Mrs. Daniel H. Levan, to whom they descended through the Kauffmans. see page 830

FREDERIC H. KEHR. Among the highly esteemed citizens and practical farmers of Berks county, may be mentioned Frederic H. Kehr, who is engaged in cultivating the old Kehr homestead in Ontelaunee township. Mr. Kehr was born Dec. 21, 1851, in Ontelaunee township, son of Samuel and Mary H. (Hoover) Kehr.

Frederic Kehr, grandfather of Frederic H., was born near Pottstown, Montgomery Co., Pa., and was there married to Rebecca Keating, a native of England. They had these children: John m. Rebecca Althouse, removed to Illinois, and there reared a family; Frederic m. Catherine Hottenstein, by whom he had two children, Frederick and Emma, and died in Muhlenberg township; Samuel; Sallie m. Jacob Eppler and had three children—Samuel, Frederic and Mary; Mary m. John Hill and had six children—Henry, James, Samuel, Lizzie, Mary and Emma; and Ellen m. Reuben Luthensen.

Samuel Kehr, father of Frederic H., was born Sept. 18, 1817, near Reading, in Bern township, was educated in the schools of Reading, and early in life engaged in milling. Later he embarked in agricultural pursuits, carrying on operations on Frederic H. Kehr's present farm for many years. He was married to Mary H. Hoover, daughter of John and Catherine (Hottenstein) Hoover, and two children were born to this union: Frederic H.; and Charles C., a prominent attorney of the Berks county Bar, who died July 20, 1892. He married Laura Hoover, and they had three children, one of whom has since died, Florence, Mary and Charles, deceased.

Frederic H. Kehr was two years old when the family came to his present farm, and here he has always made his home. He has a finely cultivated piece of property and is known throughout his community as an enterprising and ambitious farmer and good citizen. Nov. 22, 1879, he was married to Sarah Adams, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Dunkel) Adams, and two children have been born to this union: Edmund A., who married Eva Rickenbach, daughter of Edward and Ellen (Roth) Rickenbach, and has one child—Emily; and Maggie, who is unmarried and at home.

Mr. Kehr is a Democrat in politics, and he has held various township offices, never aspiring to high public position. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church.

SIMON S. CLOUSER, who has been connected with the iron industry of Berks county, Pa., for a number of years, is now acting in the capacity of superintendent of the forges of the Gibraltar Iron Company. Mr. Clouser was born Nov. 1, 1852, at Gibraltar, Robeson township, son of Daniel and Susan (Seifert) Clouser.

Daniel Clouser, who was born in Oley township, Berks county, was a millwright by trade, and followed that occupation practically all of his life. His death occurred in 1880, and that of his wife in 1904, he being sixty-eight years of age, while she attained the remarkable age of ninety-one years. They were the parents of eight children: Clement S. m. Mary Wengerd; Catherine A. is unmarried; Lucy m. Samuel Zacharias; Daniel S. m. Mary Lord; Annie m. John Thompson; Amos m. Amanda Reed; Edgar is deceased; and Simon S. In religious belief he was Reformed, while Mrs. Clouser was a Lutheran. He was a Democrat in politics.

Simon S. Clouser was educated in the schools of Robeson township, and remained on the home farm until eighteen years of age, when he learned the boat building trade with Marcus Dick, at Six Mile Level. At this trade he worked for a number of years, subsequently accepting a position with the Gibraltar Iron Company, with which firm he remained several years. He then engaged in farming for fifteen years, at the end of which time he returned to the employ of the Seyferts, where steady application to business earned him promotion to the position of superintendent of the forge department in 1899.

Mr. Clouser was married to Mary H. Bitler, daughter of Henry Bitler, and two children have been born to this union: Harvey O., who married Emma Moore and has two children, the elder named Carrie; and one who died in infancy. Mr. Clouser is a Democrat in politics, and has served for several years as school director. He and Mrs. Clouser are members of St. John's Union Church.

JOSEPH G. DETEMPLE, a retired forgeman and truck farmer of Robeson township, who now makes his home in Gibraltar, was born in 1847, in Alsace-Lorraine, France, son of Nicholas and Catherine (Grill) Detemple.

Nicholas Detemple was reared and educated in Alsace-Lorraine, and in 1848 came to America, settling in the vicinity of the Blue Mountains, whence he subsequently removed to near Oley Church in Berks county, following his trade of forgeman in the old Spang furnaces. Later Mr. Detemple moved to Rockland township, where he also followed his trade, but after his retirement, he went to live with his son in Robeson township, with whom he died in 1885, at the age of seventy-four years. His wife passed away in 1879, when sixty-five years old. Eleven children were born to Nicholas and Catherine (Grill) Detemple, as follows: Elizabeth m. Edward Deisher; Peter m. Elizabeth Bucher; Catherine m. Amos Witman; Jacob m. Lena Reeser; Sarah m. Edwin Melcher; Nicholas m. Rebecca Hess; Annie m. William Gross; Joseph G.; and three died in infancy. In religious belief the family are Catholics. In political matters Mr. Detemple was a Democrat.

Joseph G. Detemple obtained a good education in the schools of Berks county, which he left at the age of fourteen years to work at forges in different parts of the county where his father was employed. In 1864 Mr. Detemple enlisted in Co. G, 198th Regt., P. V. I., serving until June 31, 1865, when he received his honorable discharge at a camp near Washington, D. C. Mr. Detemple was in every fight and skirmish in which his company participated, and had the record of a brave and faithful soldier. After the war he returned to Berks county, and in 1888 purchased a property of seven acres, which he improved, and on which he set out 400 assorted apple and peach trees. He continued here until 1904, and since that time has been living retired.

In 1869 Mr. Detemple was united in marriage with Mary Moyer, and five children have been born to this union: Jacob m. Mary Van Pelt; Edward m. Emma Haws; Joseph m. Catherine Eichner; Laura m. Charles Eshelman; and Herman is at home. In religious belief the family are Roman Catholics. Mr. Detemple is a Democrat in politics, and his war record connects him with Keim Post No. 76, G. A. R., of Reading.

LUTHER MOYER, a well known resident and property owner of Gibraltar, who is engaged as a heater at the Gibraltar Iron Works, was born in Robeson township, Jan. 24, 1876, son of Evan and Elfreda (Richard) Moyer.

Michael Moyer, the grandfather of Luther, was a forgeman by trade, and also owned and operated a farm in Robeson township, where he spent his life. He was twice married, and to the first marriage these children were born: Daniel; Evan, the father of Luther; and Mary, who married Joseph G. Detemple. The second wife was Margaret Wicklein. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Moyer was a Democrat in politics.

Evan Moyer was born in 1850, and early in life entered the employ of the Gibraltar Iron Works, where he was employed for many years. At present he is with the E. and G. Brooke Iron Company, of Birdsboro, Pa. He married Elfreda Richard and the following children were born to this union: Frederick m. Mary Moyer and has one child, Henry; Mary m. Harry Brown and has one child, Edna; and Luther. Mr. and Mrs. Moyer are members of the Lutheran Church. Fraternally he is connected with the P. O. S. of A., and politically he is a Democrat, having held the office of township clerk for many years.

Luther Moyer was educated in the schools of Robeson township, and at the age of twelve years he entered the mill department of the Gibraltar Iron Works, where for a number of years he has been employed as heater. He is considered a good mechanic, and his services are highly valued by his employers, who have found him a steady, faithful workman.

In 1896 Mr. Moyer was married to Lizzie Murray, born in Robeson township, daughter of Jacob Murray. One child, Annie, has been born to this union. Mr. and Mrs. Moyer attend the Lutheran Church. He is a Democrat in politics, and fraternally is connected with the P. O. S. of A., and the K. G. E., the latter of Birdsboro. Mr. Moyer's present home, a two-story frame house, which he built in 1896, is one of the finest residence properties in Gibraltar.

JOSEPH DETEMPLE, JR., a well known and popular resident of Gibraltar, Pa., where he has spent all of his life, and where he is a forgeman in the pipe mill of the Reading Iron Company, was born April 23, 1876, in Gibraltar, Robeson township, Berks Co., Pa., son of Joseph G. and Mary Detemple.

Joseph Detemple, Jr., received his educational advantages in the public schools of Robeson township, and after leaving school he entered the Gibraltar Iron Works, where he worked at forging for seventeen years. He started at forty-two cents per day, was later advanced to sixty-five cents per day and then to eighty cents, and when work at this forge was discontinued he was earning wages of $2.50 per day. In 1907 Mr. Detemple accepted a position with the Reading Iron Co.'s pipe mill, where he has since continued, giving his employers the best of satisfaction. He is well and favorably known in his community, where he has many warm personal friends.

In 1902, Mr. Detemple was married to Catherine Eichner, daughter of Charles and Frederica (Bauer) Eichner. Mr. and Mrs. Detemple are Roman Catholics in religious belief, and attend St. Paul's Church of that denomination. In political matters Mr. Detemple is a Republican.

THOMAS C. SHERMAN, of Tulpehocken township, who is operating a fertile tract situated near Mount Aetna, Pa., was born Sept. 19, 1877, in Tulpehocken township, son of Simon and Alwildia (Unger) Sherman.

Jacob Sherman, the great-grandfather of Thomas C., resided in Schuylkill county, about where Pinedale is now located, and was the father of three sons: George, Jacob and Daniel, the latter the grandfather of Thomas C. Daniel Sherman was a farmer by occupation and for many years resided near Millersburg, Bethel township, Berks county, but later removed to Tulpehocken township, near Mount Aetna, where he died aged eighty-five years, one month and seventeen days. He was married to Miss Maria Morgan, who bore him the following children: (1) Daniel m. Matilda Kirst, resided on a farm in Bethel township, and later removed to Newmanstown, Lebanon county, where they still reside. (2) William m. Emma Dress and resided in Schuylkill county, where he died aged thirty-two years, having had five children. (3) John lost his life as a member of the Union army during the Civil war. (4) Charles is married with three children, and resides on a farm near Mount Aetna. (5) Israel, who was a farmer near Mount Aetna, died at the age of forty-nine years, one month and eleven days, leaving a widow, Susan (Wagner) Sherman, and one child. (6) Joseph m. Abbe Borrel, resided near Wintersville and had three children. About ten years before his death, he lost his left hand while operating a threshing machine, and thereafter he engaged in light occupations, and served in the offices of supervisor and tax collector. His death was caused by typhoid fever in 1889, at the age of forty-three years. (7) Susanna m. William Reinhart, a farmer of near Mount Aetna, and has two children. (8) Simon was the father of Thomas C. (9) Priscilla died unmarried aged forty years. The mother of these children died at the advanced age of eighty-eight years, three months, seventeen days, and she and her husband were both buried in the cemetery adjoining the Mount Aetna Church.

Simon Sherman, father of Thomas C., was born Sept. 15, 1855, in Bethel township, where he was reared and educated. He married Alwildia Unger, daughter of John and Hannah (Blatt) Unger, and granddaughter of Benjamin Blatt, a farmer of near St. Michael's Church. Her mother died when thirty-nine years old, leaving a large family, of which Mrs. Sherman was the oldest daughter. She was married to Mr. Sherman Sept. 9, 1876, and together they worked on the farm until fifteen years ago, when they purchased the first of the three farms they now own. To this happy union there were born the following children: Thomas Calvin; Jacob Henry m. Mabel Clay, daughter of Levi and Sarah (Hunsicker) Clay, resides in his own home at Mount Aetna, and has four children,—Beatrice Pearl, Edgar and Wistar, twins, and Wimer Jerome; Bertha Valeria m. Hiram Haas and they reside with her parents; Simon Samuel, Jerome Daniel, Broxton Manoah and Reuben are all at home.

Thomas Calvin Sherman spent his early life on his father's farm, where he worked during the summer months, while attending the district schools in the winter terms. He subsequently attended the Mount Aetna high school for some time, since leaving which he has been cultivating one of his father's farms. July 29, 1899, he was married to Martha Schmoke, daughter of George and Rosa (Huoncker) Schmoke, and three children have been born to this union: Paul and Verna, deceased; and Leon Adam.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman are members of Salem Reformed Church of Millersburg. Fraternally he is actively connected with Camp No. 69, P. O. S. of A., and in politics he is a Democrat and has held minor township offices.

IRWIN B. KEHS, tinsmith at Bechtelsville, was born March 31, 1877, in Hereford township, Berks county.

Tradition says that three Kehs (Kase or Case) brothers emigrated to America, one settling in Somerset county (Leander Case the millionaire being one of his descendants), one in Northampton county, and the third in Berks county.

Matthias Kehs (Case or Kase) was born in Albany township, Berks county, about 1776, and it is said that his father also bore the name of Matthias. He passed many years in Washington and Hereford townships engaged in farming, and he died at Clayton, in Washington township, in October, 1861, and was laid to rest at Bally. In 1802 he married Mary Kuhns, daughter of John Kuhns, of Washington township, whither Mr. Kehs had a short time before removed from Albany. The children of this marriage were: Maria, who died unmarried; Elizabeth; Polly; Charles, whose son James is of Reading; Margaret; Matthias; David, who died unmarried; and Henry. Two daughters were married to John and Simon Adam, another wedded Xavarius Stengel; and a fourth married John Zimmerman.

Matthias Kehs, son of Matthias, was born in July, 1802, and he died in Hereford township in April, 1866, and was buried at Bally. He was a carpenter, and also owned a small tract of land. He came to Hereford from Lehigh Gap. In 1826 he married at Bally, Rebecca Stahler, who was born in Longswamp township, April 22, 1805, and died in Hereford township April 30, 1895, daughter of Jonathan Stahler, of New Jerusalem, in Rockland township, and his wife, Margaretha Spring. The children born to this marriage were: John, born April 13, 1828, died 1852; William, born Aug. 23, 1829; Samuel, born April 5, 1831, died 1902; Peter, born Sept. 11, 1832, died 1904; Daniel, born Feb. 13, 1834, died 1907; Henry, twin to Daniel, died 1898; George, born Sept. 16, 1835; Joseph, born July 10, 1837; Jonas, 1839; Solomon, born 1840, died 1841; Jeremiah, born 1842; Mary, born 1843; Aaron, born 1845, died 1850; and Nicholas, born 1847.

George S. Kehs, son of Matthias and Rebecca, was born in Hereford township, Sept. 16, 1835. He was reared in the country, and he acquired his education in the old time pay school. He learned the shoemaker's trade when he was twenty-one. For a number of years he worked on the farm, and from 1860 to 1863, he ran an engine in an ore mine. On Dec. 2, 1863, he enlisted in Company K, 47th Pa. V. I., for the Civil war, and was discharged at Charleston, S. C., Sept. 25, 1865. After the war he lived in Lehigh county a short time, and then returned to Hereford township, where he lived near Treichlersville, on his own farm, for thirty-six years. In April, 1904, he and his family came to Bechtelsville, where they have since made their home with their son, Irwin B. Mr. Kehs is now living retired. On April 23, 1871, he married Mary Borcky, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth (Kuhns) Borcky, and grandfather of Philip and Kate (Renninger) Kuhns, of Washington township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kehs are members of the Most Blessed Sacrament Roman Catholic Church, at Bally, and have reared their family in the Catholic faith. They have had two children: Annie R., who married George R. Bartholomew, proprietor of the "Union House" of Bechtelsville; and Irwin B.

Irwin B. Kehs was reared upon his father's farm, and until he was sixteen years old he attended the public schools. He then learned the tinsmith's trade from J. D. Shiffert, at Chapel, and worked at this at different places about three years. At the end of that time he engaged in business for himself (1898) at Harlem, in Hereford, where he remained two years. In 1900 he came to Bechtelsville, where he has since made his home. He has a hardware and tinware store, carries a full line of goods including stoves, and enjoys a fine local trade. He is very successful, and his place of business is most conveniently located on the main street near the "Union House."

In his political views Mr. Kehs is a Democrat, and he has been very active in his party's interests. For two years he was judge of election, one year inspector, and since 1905 has been tax collector. He is in the strictest sense of the word a self made man, and he deserves to the utmost the high estimation in which he is held.

On Sept. 16, 1899, Mr. Kehs was married to Mary Fichter, daughter of John and Matilda (Schott) Fichter, of Washington township. They have had children: Helen, Annie, Viola, Hulda and Martin, the last named dying in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Kehs are members of the Most Blessed Sacrament Roman Catholic Church at Bally.

WILLIAM R. HERTZOG, now living retired at Eshbach, Pa., was born in Hereford township, Berks county, Pa., July 4, 1839.

Philip Hertzog, grandfather of William R., was a farmer of Perryville, where he owned about 100 acres of excellent land. He was born July 4, 1777, and died

April 4, 1855, and is buried at Huff's Church. He married a Miss Biddenbender, born May 6, 1782, died Dec. 16, 1869. Their children were: John, a farmer in Greenwich township, Berks county; David, a farmer in Rockland township; Jacob, also a farmer in Rockland township; Solomon, a miller in Hereford township; Philip; and Catharine, wife of Samuel Landis.

Philip Hertzog, son of Philip and father of William R., was born Nov. 27, 1805, and died Sept. 7, 1844, and is buried at Huff's Church. He was a farmer and blacksmith, owning a good farm of about 100 acres near Perryville. He was also engaged in burning rye whiskey, and was very successful in his work. He married Mary Rauch, born Feb. 22, 1807, died Jan. 29, 1849, daughter of David Rauch, of Hereford. Five children blessed this union: Mary died unmarried; Catharine m. Thomas Bierman, of Philadelphia; Susan m. John Hoover, of Pottstown, Pa.; Betzy m. Charles Long, of Pottstown; and William R.

William R. Hertzog received his education in the old pay schools in Hereford township, the school term in those days lasting three or four months each winter. He grew up familiar with farm work, and in 1853 he learned the tailor's trade from Jacob Mensch, in Hereford township. At Landis Store he started in business for himself, carrying on a merchant tailoring establishment for four years. On Oct. 27, 1862, he enlisted in Company H, 167th Pa. V. I., and was mustered out Aug. 12, 1863. After the war he became proprietor of Huff's Church Hotel, conducting it four years. In 1868 he bought the "Washington Hotel," at Eshbach, and in the eighteen years he conducted that hostelry became well known to and popular with the traveling public. When he retired and moved to his present residence, he was succeeded by his son Alfred. Mr. Hertzog owns a farm in Washington township, containing ninety-two acres, which were originally in the Isaac Oberholtzer homestead. He has made a number of improvements, and added greatly to the value of the place. Excellent water is to be had there, and is connected with both house and barn. He also owns twenty-five acres at Eshbach, on which the greater part of the town stands. He has been the leading spirit in the development of the town. He built twelve dwellings, and still owns all but two of them. He is a man of enterprise and of business capacity. For twenty-two years he carried on cigar manufacturing in addition to the hotel business, employing from eight to twelve persons. He and David B. Rauch established a three-acre cemetery at Huff's Church in 1891, many lots in which have since been sold.

On Dec. 21, 1861, Mr. Hertzog married (first) Amelia Drumheller, daughter of Reuben and Eliza (Fox) Drumheller, of Pike township. She died Feb. 28, 1886. The children born of this union were: Fienna, 1863-1884; Ida S., 1864-1865; Alfred, born Jan. 1, 1866; Henry, Sept. 17, 1867; William, Dec. 13, 1869; and Agnes, April 1, 1872. Mr. Hertzog m. (second) in 1893, Sarah Seltzer, daughter of Charles Seltzer, of Pike township. To this union has been born a daughter, Iva, now a student in the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown. Mr. Hertzog and his family are members of Huff's Church, of which he has twice been deacon, and is now elder. He was liberal in his donations, and was one of the committee that purchased the present organ and big heater. In politics he is a Jeffersonian Democrat, and was delegate to a number of county conventions, and has a number of times served as juryman.

GEORGE W. MILLER (deceased), for many years a prominent dry goods merchant in Reading, was a man whose inflexible honesty and strict adherence to his word made his name a synonym for business integrity all over Berks county, and his career proved conclusively that success need not be attained by dishonest or ignoble methods. Mr. Miller was a native of the city and passed his whole life there.

Samuel Miller, father of George W., was of Welsh ancestry. His wife was Harriet Pearson, and they had a family of three children, George, Hiram and Morris P. In religious belief the family were Presbyterians, and in politics Mr. Miller was a Republican.

George W. Miller was reared practically by his uncle, John Pearson, who was in his day a leading merchant of Reading. The boy was sent to the public schools and he continued to attend until he was well along in his teens, thus acquiring a solid foundation for his future career. On leaving school he entered his uncle's store as a clerk and worked for him for quite a number of years, until he had accumulated sufficient capital to buy out Mr. Pearson. His sole management of the store lasted up to the time of his death, an event which occurred June 24, 1882.

Mr. Miller is survived by his widow, Mrs. Matilda W. (Otto) Miller. She was a daughter of Dr. John B. Otto, of whom mention is made elsewhere. Their marriage took place Nov. 26, 1850, and they were granted nearly thirty-six years of wedded happiness before Mr. Miller's decease. Six children blessed this union, namely: Mary P., who married Walter S. Davis, and has two daughters, Esther and Helen; a child that died in infancy; Henry O., who married Miss Emma Hipple, and is assistant treasurer of the Colonial Trust Company, Reading; John, deceased; Anna P.; and George W., who married Mary, daughter of George F. Boyer, and has one child, Fred. Mr. Miller adhered to the faith of his father, both in religion and politics. He was a good Mason, and had taken a number of degrees, belonging not only to Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., but also to the De-Molay Commandery, No. 9, Knights Templar.

NELSON HOFFERT, who is carrying on agricultural pursuits in the Allegheny valley, near Allegheny Church, in Brecknock township, Berks county, was born near the Plow Church, June 21, 1851, son of John and Sarah (Brendel) Hoffert.

John Hoffert, father of Nelson, was born March 15, 1806, son of David Hoffert, and was a lifelong farmer in Brecknock township, on a farm of one hundred and four acres, now owned by his son, Nelson. Throughout life he was a member of the Allegheny Church, where he was buried. Mr. Hoffert's death occurred Sept. 5, 1879. He married Sarah Brendel, born in Brecknock township. She was a daughter of Abraham Brendel, who was born Dec. 21, 1776, and died April 1, 1851. To the union of John and Sarah Hoffert were born nine children: Elizabeth m. Isaac Griffith; Julia m. John Trostle; Catherine m. Benjamin Bealer; Mary m. John Krick; Susan m. Jeremiah Hoschour; John, residing near Mohnton, m. Sarah Steffy; Nelson; Jestina m. John Zerby, of Adamstown; and Sarah died young.

Nelson Hoffert was reared on the farm on which he has lived all of his life, with the exception of two years spent at the carpenter's trade. He began farming for himself in 1875 on the property occupied by his father, to which he has added till he now owns one hundred and forty-five acres of good, fertile soil, producing fine crops. Mr. Hoffert attends the Reading markets, having stands Nos. 223 and 224 at the Bingaman street market, where he disposes of all of his produce and truck. In politics Mr. Hoffert is a Democrat, and he has served as delegate to county conventions. He and his family attend the Allegheny Union Church.

In 1872 Mr. Hoffert was married to Elizabeth Zerbe, born March 3, 1854, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Remp) Zerbe, of Cumru township, and to this union there were born nine children: three who died young; Alice C., m. to Rhine Messner, of Bowmansville; Louisa, m. to Isaac Kramer, of Brecknock; Elizabeth, m. to Howard Remp, of Brecknock; Debbie A., m. to Henry Gring, of Lancaster; John J., who assists his father on the farm; and Susie, who assists her mother at home.

John A. Gramling, born Aug. 19, 1757, died April 30, 1841. His children were: Barbara, born April 9, 1786; Johannes, Jan. 25, 1788, (died Jan. 15, 1797); Jacob, May 17, 1789; Catharine, Nov. 30, 1790; David,

July 15, 1792; Samuel, Oct. 11, 1793; and Joseph, Jan. 18, 1796.

FRANK M. GRILL, one of the well-known young men of Cumru township, who holds a responsible position at the Berks county almshouse, was born July 14, 1873, in Cumru township, near the "Five-Mile House," son of Daniel M. and Mary (Matz) Grill.

Philip Grill, great-grandfather of Frank M., was the owner of a large farm in Spring township, where he died. He was buried at Sinking Spring. To him and his wife, whose maiden name was Lesher, were born children as follows: Christina, m. to Philip Kappes; Samuel, who obtained the homestead, and later removed to Ohio; John, who first went to Centre county, Pa., and later to Ohio; Katie, m. to Jacob Hatt; Eliza, m. to Jacob Brossman, and later a resident of Naperville, Ill.; Adam; Philip, m. to Sarah Mohn; and Joseph.

Adam Grill, son of Philip, was born in Spring township Aug. 22, 1793, and died May 21, 1858. He was a lifelong farmer. He married Catherine Mohn, born Jan. 11, 1800, died March 31, 1888, daughter of Daniel and Barbara (Albright) Mohn. They became the parents of ten children, namely: Samuel, of Bowmansville, Lancaster county; Catherine, m. to Christian Kress; Elizabeth, m. to Henry Von Neida; Mary, m. to Richard Hornberger; Levi, m. to Mary Eshelman; Sallie, m. to Nicholas Mossier; Adam, on the old home farm, and m. to Sarah Dewees; Lydia, m. to James Leininger; Daniel M.; and Henry, of Oakbrook, Cumru township.

Daniel M. Grill, son of Adam and father of Frank M., was born in Cumru township in 1844, and for many years was a prominent farmer in that township. He now lives at No. 212 South Third street, Reading, in which city he was for a number of years tax collector of the Seventh ward. He married Mary Matz, daughter of William and Sallie (Straub) Matz, and to this union there were born: Charles, a farmer, m. Katie Lewis; Howard, also a farmer, m. Alice Hoetry; Frank M.; and Clara m. Edward Geisweit, of Reading.

Frank M. Grill received a fair education, attending the schools of Cumru township until the age of eighteen years, when he became engaged in agricultural pursuits with his father. On April 1, 1894, he accepted his present position, in which he has served faithfully to the present time, giving universal satisfaction. He owns a fine residence in Shillington, on Lancaster avenue, and he and his wife have a large social circle. Mr. Grill was married to Lizzie Schonnont, daughter of Joseph Schonnont, and to this union there has been born one daughter, Maria. Mr. Grill is a Democrat in politics, but beyond the casting of his vote takes but little interest in political matters. He and Mrs. Grill are members of the Reformed Church, which they attend at Gouglersville.

JOHN DANIEL FENSTERMACHER, late a well-known business man of Fleetwood borough, Berks county, carrying on a flourishing mercantile business, was born in Lynn township, Lehigh Co., Pa., Jan. 14, 1861, son of Daniel S. and Maria (Dietrich) Fenstermacher, residents of that locality.

The great-grandfather of John D. Fenstermacher was Michael Fenstermacher of Longswamp township, who was born in 1717, son of Philip Fenstermacher, who came from the Fatherland. When twenty years of age the latter crossed the ocean on the ship "Samuel," landing at Philadelphia, Aug. 30, 1737, and in 1759 he was a resident of Longswamp township, paying there ten pounds tax. One year after Philip Fenstermacher's arrival, one Matthias Fenstermacher came to this country, landing at Philadelphia Sept. 9, 1738, and also settled in Longswamp township, he being then sixty years of age. On the ship on which he came was one Jacob and one William Fenstermacher, the former twenty-nine years old, and the latter twenty-five. It is traditional and also substantiated by record that an elderly Fenstermacher with three sons came to this country from Germany, and this Philip was probably the third son.

Daniel Fenstermacher, son of Michael, was born in Longswamp township, Berks county, but at an early age settled in Lynn township, Lehigh county, on the farm now owned by his son Daniel S. He was an extensive land owner and a prominent man of his day. Daniel Fenstermacher married Polly Snyder, and they became the parents of these children: Lydia, Polly, Mary, Daniel S. and Peter.

Daniel S. Fenstermacher, father of John D., was born sometime during the second decade of the last century, and has spent all his life in Lynnville, Lehigh county. For the past fifteen years he has lived retired. He owns considerable land, having an excellent 100 acre farm, on which he lives, it also being tenanted by his son, Daniel, who is an extensive potato farmer. He has another farm of 100 acres in the same county, near Stein's Corner, and a large farm at Greenawalt, in Albany township, Berks county, consisting of 218 acres, also belongs to him, besides tracts of woodland in both Berks and Lehigh counties. He and his family are active members of the Reformed denomination of the Lynnville Church, and he donated the land on which the church is built, as well as several acres for a burial ground. Mr. Fenstermacher married Maria Dietrich, who died May 30, 1905, aged seventy-nine years, two months, twenty-nine days. She was the daughter of Johannes and Catherine (Kunkel) Dietrich, and granddaughter of the John Adam Dietrich whose father Adam, emigrated from Southern Germany to Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Fenstermacher had these children: Mary; Sarah died aged about ten years; Polly m. Joseph Tyson; Daniel D. lives on the old homestead; William D. is unmarried and is a carriagemaker by trade; Eliza m. James Knerr; Louisa; Ella m. Richard Bond; and John D.

John D. Fenstermacher worked on his father's farm until he became of age, when he was given a license and conducted a hotel at Greenawalt Station, Greenwich township, Berks county, for a period of six years. He then engaged in the mercantile business at Albany, Berks county, but sold out after two years to begin farming in Hamburg. He also conducted a daily milk route in Hamburg for five years, when he sold out and removed to the borough in order to work in a factory there of which he was a heavy stockholder. After several years he re-purchased his milk route and farmed for two years longer, at the end of which time he again entered the hotel field. For three years he conducted the "Windsor Castle Hotel," later the "Union House," at Fleetwood, for two years, and from the latter place came to Liscum, three miles northwest of Kutztown, where he conducted the "Three Mile House" up to the time of his death. In this he was very successful. In 1906 he built a large new store on Washington street, Fleetwood, which he equipped with all modern appliances for the carrying on of up-to-date mercantile business. He was popular in his community, and considered a good and reliable citizen. Like all of the Fenstermachers, he was a staunch Democrat, and took a great interest in his party's welfare, although he never found time to engage actively in politics. He was a pillar of the Reformed Church, which his wife also attends.

In 1882 John D. Fenstermacher was married to Ella M. Hardinger, daughter of Isaac and Anna (Schappell) Hardinger, farming people of Albany township. No children were born to them. Mr. Fenstermacher died Oct. 28, 1908, after an illness of many months, and his remains were interred in St. John's cemetery.

HENRY E. BARTH, a well known resident of Twenty-third street, Mount Penn borough, where he has made his home since 1900, has for the past several years been employed by the American Amusement Company, at Car-sonia Park. Mr. Barth was born Dec. 4, 1855, in Reading, Pa., son of Everhart F. and Caroline (Epple) Barth.

Everhart F. Barth, who was born Feb. 4, 1823, in Wittenburg, Germany, came as a young man to America and landed after a sixty-two days' voyage at Philadelphia. After a few months in that city he came to Reading, and followed stone-cutting and, in the winter months, butchering. In 1873 he located upon John Fair's vineyard property along Mount Penn, which he purchased the year following, and upon which he died Nov. 19, 1896. In 1878 the vineyard produced 3,700 pounds of grapes, and Mr. Barth made as much as 3,000 gallons of wine annually, which found a ready market in the stores of the vicinity. Mrs. Barth, who bore the maiden name of Caroline Epple, was a native of the same place as her husband and came to this country in the same ship. To them were born eight children: Frederick, deceased, who was a carpenter of Reading, m. Barbara Sparely; Caroline m. John Fair, a wine merchant of Reading; Mary died in childhood; Henry E.; Catherine died in childhood; John D. is a retired citizen of Mount Penn, whose sketch will be found elsewhere in this publication; Mary m. Calvin Canfield, the owner and operator of the old Barth vineyard; and Ellen, who is single, makes her home with Joseph D. Hornberger, of Cumru township.

Henry E. Barth attended the Reading schools until fifteen years of age, his last teacher being the Hon. James N. Ermentrout, President Judge of Berks county courts. After leaving school Mr. Barth began working in the Scott foundry, a branch of the Reading Iron Works, and there continued one and one-half years. In 1873 his parents removed to the John Fair vineyard, then in Alsace and later in Lower Alsace township, now Mount Penn borough, and here young Barth assisted his father until 1876, when he became employed by August L. Wentzel, on whose truck farm he worked for three years. In 1880 Mr. Barth began working for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, as blacksmith helper, a position he held until 1895. The following year was spent in Robeson township, where he farmed during the summer months and butchered in the winter. From 1896 to 1899 he was butcher and gardener at the Berks County alms house. Since 1900 Mr. Barth has made his home in Mount Penn, and owns a residence on Twenty-third street. In 1902 he became employed by the American Amusement Company, at Carsonia Park, where his sons are also employed. They are deputized by the court and have police authority.

In political matters Mr. Barth is a Democrat, and has been active in the ranks of his party, being chosen to positions of honor and trust by his fellow citizens. He was auditor of Lower Alsace township for six years and constable for three years, serving in both offices at the same time. He was also first constable of Mount Penn and efficiently filled the office for three years. Mr. Barth was active in the organization of the borough and has ever been ready to assist in any movement calculated to advance its interests. He and his family are members of St. Mark's Church, of Reading, and he helped to organize Faith Lutheran Church, of which he was a deacon. He has been a trustee of Aulenbach cemetery since 1902.

On Sept. 2, 1876, Mr. Barth was united in marriage with Emma K. Hilbert, born July 31, 1858, daughter of John and Rebecca (Keehn) Hilbert and granddaughter of George and Nancy (Wessner) Hilbert. To them were born children as follows: Caroline R. m. John Phillips, a farmer of Bern township; John W. m. Katie Noll, of Mount Penn; Charles F. and Monroe G., single, are at home; H. Edwin died in 1902 at the age of sixteen years; Winfield I., Emma L. and Howard E. all died in infancy; Robert C. died Feb. 7, 1907, aged fourteen years, one month and twenty days; and Elsie M. died in infancy.

THOMAS LUCKENBILL, a retired farmer of Perry township, who for many years carried on operations here, is a native of Berks county, born in Greenwich township, March 7, 1836, son of Thomas and Anna (Wink) Luckenbill.

Johan Ekel Luckenbill, the ancestor of this family in America, emigrated from Germany, near the Swiss boundary, on the ship "Thistle," which landed at Philadelphia Aug. 29, 1730. On the same ship was one Hendrick Luckenbill, and it is traditional that these two pioneers were brothers. Johan E. Luckenbill had eight children: (1) Maria m. Michael Deibert, or Divert, and settled in Schuylkill county. (2) Heinrich m. Catherine Weber, who tradition says was of Swiss extraction. In 1759 he was a taxable resident of Maxatawny township, Berks county, owning land in the vicinity of Bowers. He removed later to Wayne township, Schuylkill county, and shortly before his death became totally blind. His children were: Adam, Henry, Solomon, George, Susanna, Sophia, Rebecca and Beckie. (3) Abraham m. Eva Lengel, and had these children: John, Abraham, Jonas, Emanuel, Kate, Rebecca, Sallie and Eva. (4) John m. Polly West and had two children: Isaac and Mary. (5) Andraes m. Miss Lengel and their children were: George, Joel, Sallie, Judith, Diana and Maria. (6) Christian. (7) George, of whose history no records are in evidence. (8) Another son whose name is unknown.

Christian Luckenbill, son of Johan Ekel, lived in Berks county for some years, but in 1790 he and a brother, George, were taxable residents of Manheim township, Schuylkill county. His date of birth, number of children and date and place of death are not known, but it is traditional that after 1800 he returned to Berks county, and was buried at Bowers Church in Maxatawny township, where he had a farm.

Christian Luckenbill, grandfather of Thomas W., was an extensive farmer, owning 407 acres of land, and built the house and barn on the homestead, in the vicinity of which he was well and favorably known. He was married to Catherine Kline, of Maxatawny township, (born Nov. 13, 1780, died April 20, 1854), and they had five children: Thomas, Leah, Elizabeth, Benjamin and David.

Thomas Luckenbill, son of Christian, was born in 1800, and died at the age of sixty-three years. He lived in Greenwich township above Lenhartsville for four years before locating, in 1835, on the old homestead which consisted of 254 acres. He was an upright and honest citizen and an elder of Zion's Union Church, of the Reformed denomination. Mr. Luckenbill was married in 1830 to Anna Wink, daughter of Jacob Wink, and to this union there were born children as follows: Augustus, died aged ten years; Edwin m. Sophia Becker; James m. Eliza Heinly; Thomas; Sarah Ann m. Simon Adam; Louisiana died in infancy; Jacob m. Mary Heller; Simon m. Elizabeth Lesher; Alfred m. Mary Maury; and Cyrus m. Susanna De Turk.

Thomas Luckenbill obtained a good education, first attending pay and later public schools for several winters, and then worked on his father's farm until thirty years of age. In 1868 he bought the homestead and began farming on his own account, at which he successfully continued until 1882, when he retired and rented his farm. It consists of 140 acres of good fertile soil. Politically Mr. Luckenbill is a Democrat, and a strong party man, attending county conventions of his party, serving as delegate from his district and in many ways proving his public spirit. Among other trusts given to the care of Mr. Luckenbill was the guardianship of the four children of Simon Adam, namely: Thomas F., whose son, Wilson J., lives on Mr. Luckenbill's farm and who married a Miss Mengel, by whom he has had a daughter, Mabel Louise; Cyrus; Simon and Annie

Mr. Luckenbill was married Feb. 1, 1868, to Angeline Heinly, daughter of Jacob D. and Polly (Folk) Heinly, and granddaughter of Johannes Heinly. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Luckenbill.

ALBERT O. MINKHOUSE, who is now living at No. 932 Muhlenberg street, Reading, was for thirteen years engaged in the barbering business at Fifth and Laurel streets. His birth occurred Nov. 5, 1864, in this city, son of Francis F. and Marie E. (Moyer) Minkhouse.

Francis F. Minkhouse, born in Osnabruck, Hanover, Germany, in 1820, there learned his trade of cabinetmaker. He came to America in 1844, landing in Philadelphia, where he worked in the sugar refining works for fifteen years. He took out his naturalization papers in Philadelphia. In 1859 he came to Reading and worked for Mr. Wells in the planing mill at Oak and Cherry streets, and was the first to introduce in the city of Reading fancy brackets for houses. He then worked at Kantner's organ factory, making Reading his home. He bought property at No. 317 Spruce street, and there died May 31, 1882. He was buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He was married three times. His third wife was Marie E. (Moyer) Keehn, born July 15, 1822, died Feb. 9, 1905. He was a Lutheran, while her faith was that of the Methodist Church. The only child of the third marriage was Albert O.

Albert O. Minkhouse received his education in the schools of Reading, and when a boy of fourteen years apprenticed himself to the barber's trade with his stepbrother, William H. Keehn, at Pearl and Bingaman streets, whom he worked with for seven years. At the end of this time Mr. Minkhouse opened tonsorial parlors at the northwest corner of Fifth and Laurel streets, and there he continued very successfully for thirteen years, when owing to failing health he sold out. In his political belief Mr. Minkhouse is independent, although he is public-spirited and a stanch supporter of all movements calculated to benefit the community.

B. FRANK KURTZ, of Caernarvon township, Berks county, where he is engaged in milling, was born Feb. 4, 1851, at the Kurtz Mills, son of John and Harriet (Gabriel) Kurtz.

John Kurtz, the great-great-grandfather of B. Frank Kurtz, emigrated from Germany to Scotland, where he married a Scotch lady, and later came to America, settling in Big Valley, Chester Co., Pa. He was a miller by trade, as were his five sons, who manufactured flour for the American army during the Revolutionary war, concealing this flour in the large mill chimney where the British soldiers were unable to find it. One of John Kurtz's sons, named Christian, the great-grandfather of B. Frank, was born in Chester county, and died there. Both he and his wife were buried at Fair View Church.

Jacob Kurtz, the grandfather of B. Frank, was born in Joanna, Berks county, and he and his wife, Ann (Shingle) Kurtz, were buried near there at Harmony Church.

John Kurtz, the father of B. Frank, was born at Kurtz Mills, Feb. 3, 1818, and died Aug. 17, 1882. He was a miller by trade, and when a young man removed to Warwick, Chester county, where he became manager of the Warwick mills. In 1859 he purchased the Kurtz mills from the Bull Estate, and continued to operate them until his death in 1882. Mr. John Kurtz and Mr. Jacobs were the prime movers in the establishment of the New Caernarvon Cemetery at Morgantown, and Mr. Kurtz was the first man to be interred in the burial ground he labored so hard to establish. He was a prominent man of his community, and was a county commissioner from 1864 to 1867.

John Kurtz married Harriet Gabriel, who was born near Joanna, Sept. 25, 1820, and died at Kurtz Mills, Feb. 17, 1866. To them were born these children: Thomas; Sara, born Sept. 15, 1844, who died Jan. 8, 1847; William B., who lives in Portland, Ore.; Jacob; B. Franklin; Mary m. F. Sheler; Tamsen m. (first) to a Mr. Plank, and (second) to J. H. Wells; Maggie, m. to Mr. Albright and living at York, Pa.; Clara E., m. to William E. Grim and living at Honeybrook, Chester county; and J. Edward, who lives at The Dalles, Oregon.

B. Frank Kurtz attended the public schools of his native township and a select school of Morgantown, Pa., taught by Professor Hyke, and after completing his education learned milling with his father, who at that time operated the Kurtz mills. In the spring of 1883 he purchased these mills, his father having died the previous fall, and the operation of this enterprise has been his occupation to the present time. In 1892 he remodeled the mills, introducing the roller process, and the output now exceeds 200 barrels of flour monthly, in addition to a very large exchange trade, as well as over twenty tons of feed and a large custom trade. Besides the mills, Mr. Kurtz owns a fine farm of some seventy-five acres, and his well known integrity and honesty, as well as his business capacity, have caused him to be chosen as administrator of numerous estates, including the Unangst estate, which necessitated a trip to St. Louis.

On May 1, 1879, Mr. Kurtz was married to Miss Laura A. Good, born Feb. 21, 1858, daughter of Owen B. and Sara A. (Mast) Good. The former was born Nov. 22, 1813, and died Feb. 7, 1885, and the latter was born in 1823, and died May 10, 1858. Both are buried in the Byler Cemetery, near Elverson, Pa. Mrs. Kurtz's grandparents were John and Barbara (Brunner) Good. To Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Kurtz have been born eight children: (1) Sara Adella, born April 10, 1881, m. to Harry Plank, lives at Kurtz mills, and has two children,—David K., born June 30, 1901, and Luther, born July 20, 1906. (2) Fannie Verge, born Jan. 27, 1884, who is an accomplished vocalist, was an expert stenographer with Shattach & Michmer in the Land Title Building, Philadelphia. She married Dr. George Maxwell, a skilled dentist and optician of Bristow, Nebr. (3) Laura Ellena, born Oct. 19, 1887, affectionately called Lena, is an accomplished musician. (4) Marie Mast, born July 2, 1890, graduated from the Morgantown high school when sixteen years of age, and is now a teacher in the Caernarvon public schools. (5) Charles Franklin was born July 16, 1892. (6) John Winfield was born April 2, 1894. (7) Harold Ethelbert was born Sept. 27, 1897. (8) Verna Heintz was born Jan. 26, 1902.

Mr. Kurtz is a stanch Democrat, and that he is very popular in Caernarvon township is evinced by the fact that although the district in which he resides is strongly Republican, his neighbors have on numerous occasions chosen him to fill township offices. He has been a delegate from Caernarvon to more than twenty county conventions, a member of the county standing committee for over twenty years, delegate to the State convention that nominated Robert E. Pattison for his second term as governor of Pennsylvania, and a delegate to the National convention at Kansas City, in 1900, when for the second time William J. Bryan was nominated for the presidency. In the campaign of 1907 he was one of the leading candidates for the nomination for clerk of quarter sessions.

Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz have traveled extensively, having visited the Pacific coast and traveled through much of the West. Mr. Kurtz's religious affiliations are with the St. Thomas Episcopal Church at Morgantown, while Mrs. Kurtz is an adherent of the Methodist faith. They have a beautiful home at Kurtz Mills, and are highly esteemed by their neighbors and many friends.

J. L. PLANK, who for a number of years has held the office of justice of the peace in Caernarvon township, is a substantial agriculturist of Morgantown, where he owns a valuable property. Mr. Plank was born Sept. 21, 1848, son of David K. and Susan H. (Evans) Plank, and grandson of Jacob Plank. David K. Plank, who was born Oct. 21, 1821, was for many years connected with the Keystone State Bank of Reading, Pa., and was a well-known and highly esteemed citizen. Two sons were born to David K. Plank and his wife: J. L.; and Charles M., who is yardmaster of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, at Mahanoy City.

J. L. Plank received his education in the common schools of Lancaster county, and early in life engaged in agricultural pursuits, which he has followed successfully to the present time. He has been prominent in Republican politics, having for some years been a school director and justice of the peace. He and his family are members of the Morgantown Methodist Episcopal Church, where he is serving as trustee.

Mr. J. L. Plank was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Foreman, born April 1, 1850 and to them there have been born five children. (1) Wanita Florence; (2) Harry F. m. Sara Adella Kurtz, by whom he has two children: David K., born June 30, 1901; and Luther, born July 20, 1906. (3) Edward H. m. Eva Duchman, by whom he has four children—Grace Mildred, Ethel D., Frederick and Donald. (4) D. Ralph. (5) A. Earl.

HENRY ALBERT HALBEISEN, a well-known resident of Mt. Penn borough, Berks county, who is engaged in the painting and decorating business, was born June 18, 1861, in Louisville, Ky., son of George and Criszentia (Brutsky) Halbeisen.

George Halbeisen was a native of Germany, and there married Criszentia Brutsky, by whom he had two children: Henry Albert and Catherine, a Sister of St. Francis. Mrs. Halbeisen died after they came to Kentucky and Mr. Halbeisen was married (second) to Sophia Brutsky, his first wife's sister, and there were four children born to this union: Annie, deceased, who was organist for St. Paul's Church, Camden, N. J.; Charles, an artist of Camden; William P., a physician and surgeon of that city; and one child, Albert, who died in infancy. George Halbeisen was a tailor by trade, and on coming to America followed that occupation for some time at Louisville, Ky., later removing to Philadelphia, where for thirty-five years he was in the employ of John Wanamaker as head cutter. He died after living in retirement for some time at Camden, N. J., his death occurring in 1903, in his eighty-fourth year.

Henry Albert Halbeisen was reared in Louisville, Ky., and at Philadelphia, at which latter city he was educated in the parochial schools until twelve years of age, when he went to the La Salle Institute. After leaving the latter institution, Mr. Halbeisen learned the trade of decorator with Keiser & Hertzog of Philadelphia, soon thereafter locating in Reading in the employ of George Seigling, a church decorator, with whom he remained two years and six months. Mr. Halbeisen then began operating on his own account, decorating two churches in Minersville, but later entered the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, doing decorating on the ceilings of coaches for six months. He then engaged in general decorating in Reading, in which city he continued until the spring of 1904, when he removed to Mt. Penn. In April, 1907, Mr. Halbeisen took his sons into partnership and the firm became known as Halbeisen & Sons. This concern does a large business not only in Mt. Penn, but in the surrounding country as well and they have had a number of large contracts in Philadelphia. On locating in Mt. Penn, Mr. Halbeisen purchased a property and erected a fine residence, later putting up a building adjacent, which he uses as a paper store. He is a member of the Holy Cross and Boniface's orders, of the Union Fire Company and the Mt. Penn Fire Company. The family are members of St. Paul's Catholic Church.

On Sept. 19, 1882, Mr. Halbeisen was married to Miss Susie Heckman, daughter of George and Mary (O'Boyle) Heckman, natives of Chester and Berks counties respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Halbeisen have four children, all of whom reside at home: Crescentia, George H., Charles E. and Annie.

F. B. DE HART, proprietor of De Hart's Riding School and of a first-class livery, sale and exchange stable, Reading, was born in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., son of George W. and Leah (Bortner) De Hart.

George W. De Hart, who was well known as a cattle drover and veterinarian, was toll-gate keeper at the Oley Line, where he died in 1905, aged sixty-eight years. He married Leah Bortner, a native of Berks county, and to them were born eight children: Libbie; Mary; Catherine m. Eli Dick; Anna M., deceased; George W., of Baltimore, Md.; F. B.; Jacob, of Washington, D. C.; and Charles, a clerk. In religious belief the father was a Lutheran, while the mother belonged to the Reformed denomination.

F. B. De Hart was educated in the schools of Exeter township, and after completing his literary training was employed by Samuel Rhoads, at Eighth and Court streets until 1886, when he engaged in butchering for Frederick Brothers, remaining with this firm for some time, and then was employed by E. B. Lutz, with whom he continued three and one-half years. Mr. De Hart then engaged in a drover business, renting a stable at Eighth and Buttonwood streets, later being located at Poplar and Court streets, and later at the old Weitzel stable, where the high school now stands. From that location, in 1904, he came to his present place No. 417 Paul street, where he does a large business, having twenty-two livery horses and first-class carriages. Mr. De Hart resides at No. 935 Washington street, Reading, and has a large acquaintance. He is a member of the Reading Driving Association, the Turner's Club, and the P. O. S. of A.

Mr. De Hart was united in marriage with Miss Hattie Dubson.

J. EDWARD DETAMPLE, who has for a number of years been connected with the Gibraltar Iron Works in the capacity of forgeman, was born May 30, 1873, in Robeson township, Berks county, son of Joseph and Mary Detample.

J. Edward Detample received his education in the common schools of his native locality, after leaving which he entered the forge as a helper, after two years arising to the position of foreman, which he has held with the Gibraltar Iron Works for the past seventeen years, with the exception of two years spent at Seifert's rolling mill. He is considered an expert in his line, and is respected by his fellow workmen and valued by his employers.

On Sept. 2, 1893, Mr. Detample was united in marriage with Miss Emma Haws, daughter of John Haws, and three children have been born to this union: Irene, Esther and Elsie. The family are members of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church. In politics Mr. Detample is a Democrat.

PETER S. SCHWOYER. Among the well-known and prosperous young farmers of the northeastern end of Richmond township, Berks county, may be mentioned Peter S. Schwoyer, who was born Dec. 12, 1868, on the farm on which he now resides, son of Solomon M. Schwoyer, and grandson of John Schwoyer.

Christian Sweyer, the great-grandfather of Peter S., came to this country about the middle of the eighteenth century with his brothers Heinrich, Samuel and Esau. Cosmus Schwoyer, who is now nearly eighty-one years of age, says that he distinctly remembers that his father and mother often said that the family came from France. Christian Sweyer married a Miss Keyser, and had the following children: Peter, Christian, Jonathan, Malinda and John. John Schwoyer was one of the leading agriculturists of his day, owning 100 acres of land all situated in Richmond township with the exception of 110 acres, which lay in Maxatawny township, the latter now being owned by his grandson Jacob Schwoyer. John Schwoyer married Polly Merkel, daughter of Casper Merkel of Richmond, and to this union there were born children as follows: Elizabeth, the wife of Abraham Hoch, of Bernville; Anna who married Jacob Deysher; Kate; Maria; Florenda; John, who settled at Hamburg; Jacob of Richmond township; Stanley of Kutztown; Solomon and Daniel, twins; Daniel, who died in infancy; and Cosmus, who lives on Main street, Fleetwood.

Solomon M. Schwoyer was a most highly respected citizen and prosperous farmer, owning 300 acres of highly cultivated land in Richmond township. He was a member of Moselem Church, serving that body as trustee for eight years and as treasurer for a period of twelve years. In 1855 he was married to Lovina Seisholtz, daughter of Samuel Seisholtz, and to them were born these children: Eliza, the wife of Charles Kutz, a former miller of Greenwich township, now living retired at Kutztown, Pa.; John A., the well-known coal and lumber dealer of Kutztown; Jacob S., a farmer of Richmond township; and Peter S.

Peter S. Schwoyer received his intellectual training in the public schools of his native township. On April 8, 1893, he married Miss Anna M. Bieber, daughter of John and Brigetta (Schwoyer) Bieber, who resided in Maxatawny township about two miles east of Kutztown, Pa. To this union one son has been born: John D., Feb. 18, 1894, who is attending the Kutztown Normal School. Peter S. Schwoyer has resided on his present farm all of his life. He is a good type of the Pennsylvania farmer, sturdy, energetic and enterprising. He is a good farmer, a kind neighbor, a public-spirited citizen and a Christian gentleman. The buildings on his farm are large and substantially built, and he has water connection in the house, yard and barn. Mr. Schwoyer is the possessor of an interesting collection of old dishes, and also owns one of the few "grandfather" clocks made by Daniel Oyster, which was owned by his grandfather, John Schwoyer, and which has been standing in the same house for over 110 years. Mr. Schwoyer is a consistent member of Moselem Lutheran Church, with which he is officially connected. He earnestly supports the Democratic party.

John Bieber, father of Mrs. Peter S. Schwoyer, married Brigetta Schwoyer, daughter of Samuel Schwoyer, whose wife was a Kutz. To this union were born: Clara, wife of Allen Butz, deceased; Rev. Milton J., a missionary of the Lutheran faith, stationed in New York; Dr. U. S. G., a veterinarian at Kutztown; Anna M., Mrs. Schwoyer; Robert S., an electrician in New York; and Jonathan E., of Columbus, Ohio.

TOBIAS FAMILY. The family bearing the name Tobias, as it appears in some of the early records, has found a home in Berks county through a full century and a half. In the present time are found several representatives who are living good and useful lives, and proving themselves of that class of citizens that gives to any community its real strength. Among these may be mentioned Albert H. Tobias, superintendent of the George H. Hendel hat factory at Edison; Charles H. Tobias, brick manufacturer at Hamburg; Herman R. Tobias, connected with the Consumers Gas Company, Reading; and Solomon H. Tobias, grocer at No. 134 West Oley street, Reading.

(I) George Tobias, a native of Germany, emigrated to America and settled in Bern township, Berks county, Pa., where he became the owner of a large plantation. His will, on record in Will Book A, page 185, was made Nov. 14, 1789, and probated March 16, 1790. The witnesses were John Tobias and Henry Gettle, and the executors, John Shartle and John Christian Allbright. In the distribution of his property he says "my seven children shall have share and share alike." His son John, probably the eldest, was to receive the homestead plantation, for which he was to pay £600. Other sons were: George, John Christian (the youngest in the family), Benjamin (who in 1806-07 was a taxable in Bethel township), William (also a taxable in Bethel township in 1806-07).

(II) John Tobias, eldest son of George, was a farmer in Bern township. The maiden name of his wife was Kline. His children were: Abraham, Elizabeth, Samuel, Peter and Jacob, the three last named going to Ohio about 1835.

(III) Abraham Tobias, son of John, was married Feb. 20, 1825, to Hannah Hartman, and they had thirteen children: Rachel, born Dec. 18, 1825; Sarah, Jan. 22, 1827; Hannah, Dec. 15, 1828; Froene, Sept. 18, 1830; Elizabeth, March 7, 1832; Esther, March 3, 1834; Rebecca, Dec. 8, 1835; Catharine, Sept. 30, 1837; Johannes, Dec. 6, 1838; Judith, March 12, 1842; Maria, March 7, 1844; Daniel, Sept. 19, 1845; and Lydia, Sept. 29, 1848.

(II) George Tobias, son of George, the ancestor, became a farmer in Heidelberg township. His will, made Sept. 19, 1820, and probated Jan. 22, 1821, is on record in Book D, page 274. The witnesses to the will were Peter Anspach and Jacob Baker, and the executors, John Royer and Christ Battorf. George Tobias and his wife Anna Elizabeth had three children: Solomon, Anna Maria and Catharine. The two last named were under age when the father died, and Michael Tobias was appointed their guardian.

From the tax lists it is found that in 1781 John Tobias paid taxes in Heidelberg township; in 1785 Ludwig and George Tobias, brothers, and Jacob, Peter and John Tobias paid taxes in Bern township; and in 1807 Benjamin, William and Christian paid taxes in Bethel township.

(Ia) Ludwig Tobias was the ancestor of a large family that had its seat in Bern township, Berks county. He was born June 24, 1739, and came from the Old World with a brother George prior to the Revolution. He was a farmer, owning a large tract of land in Bern township, along the Schuylkill river. He died Sept. 27, 1810, and his wife, Sophia, born Dec. 10, 1734, died Feb. 18, 1821; they are both buried at Epler's' church, of which they were members. Among their children were: (1) Ludwig, born July 12, 1763, died in Bern township Sept. 26, 1826. His wife was Elizabeth Strunck, and they had six sons and seven daughters, among these being Jonathan (1800-1805); and Jacob (1803-1883), whose son Charles was the father of Irwin. (2) Michael remained in Bern township. (3) Jonathan, born May 3, 1773, died April 23, 1855. (4) Christian, born March 5, 1775, died April 10, 1815. (5) Andrew, born April 30, 1778, married Catharine Lerch, had two sons and four daughters, and died Aug. 28, 1823. (6) John Jacob, born about 1781, died 1825, at Reading. (7) Daniel was a clergyman, and resided at Milton, Pennsylvania.

(IIa) Jonathan Tobias, second son of Ludwig, was born in Bern township May 3, 1773. He married Catharine Hain (born July 12, 1778, died April 3, 1845), and among their children were: John H.; Samuel; Maria, who married Henry Fleicher; Rebecca, who married Benjamin Reber; Elizabeth, who married Henry Body; and Eliza, who married Benjamin Haas.

(IIIa) John H. Tobias, son of Jonathan and Catharine, was born in Bern township, on the old Tobias homestead. He followed farming on this property all his life, and was most successful. When the Bushong bank failed he lost his deposits, amounting to $12,000. In 1836 he married Mary Rapp, born in 1814, daughter of Henry Rapp. She died Jan. 5, 1892. They had nine children, namely: (1) Elizabeth, born March 6, 1837, died Feb. 4, 1902. She married (first) Franklin Noecker, by whom she had four children, Elizabeth, Frank, Mary and Sally, and (second) Lewis Schmehl. (2) Henry, born April 21, 1838, married Catharine Yarnell, had children—Mary, Annie, Lewis, Hiram and Harry—and died in August, 1905. (3) Catharine, born Dec. 20, 1839, married Charles Noecker, of Bern township, and had two children, Charles and John. They moved to Reading, where Mr. Noecker died. Mrs. Noecker died Nov. 25, 1900. (4) Ellen, born March 31, 1841, died Dec. 23, 1904, married Romanus Hafer, of Temple, and their children were: Alice, Adam and Mary. (5)

Jonathan, born in September, 1843, married (first) Ellen Maderie, and had children—Sallie, John, Harry, Edward, James, Minnie and Raymond. His second wife was Kate Olinger. (6) John, born March 10, 1845, was killed May 2, 1882, while working in a stone quarry at Leinbachs, in Bern township. He married Isabella Shalter, and had children—Charles, Kate, Lizzie, Rosa and Thomas. (7) Mary, born Oct. 15, 1846, married Amandon Dundore, and had two children, Lilly and Harry. (8) Miss Sarah was born May 18, 1849. (9) Herman R. is mentioned below. In politics Mr. Tobias was a Democrat. The family belonged to the Reformed Church.

(IVa) HERMAN R. TOBIAS, son of John H., was born in Bern township, March 7, 1856, and was educated in the schools of the vicinity. One of his schoolmates, with whom he attended eight terms, was Attorney Shearer, of Reading, and his first teacher was Daniel Benner. Mr. Tobias worked on the farm until he was nineteen years of age. He learned the wheelwright's trade, at which he worked some years, and then engaged in work at a stone quarry until 1881, when he located in Reading and engaged with William R. McIlvain & Sons, continuing with this firm for a period of fifteen years. He then accepted a position with the Pennsylvania Railway Company, as assistant foreman of construction, resigning this to enter the Carpenter Steel Works, where he remained until July 5, 1904, at which time he entered the employ of the Consumers Gas Company, with which concern he has since been connected.

On May 17, 1874, Mr. Tobias was united in marriage with Mary M. Sausley, born Nov. 5, 1856, daughter of David and Matilda (Rothermel) Sausley, and to this union have been born four children: Ella E. born Oct. 9, 1879, who is at home; and three that died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. Tobias are members of the Reformed Church. Fraternally he is connected with Mr. Penn Lodge, K. P., and the Royal Arcanum.

(IIIa) Samuel Tobias, son of Jonathan, was born in Bern township Nov. 7, 1812, and died March 27, 1897, when aged eighty-four years; interment took place at Epler's Church. He owned a small farm near Epler's school. He married Mary Gicker (also called Polly), daughter of Jacob Gicker, and their children were: Jacob, living at Leesport; Daniel, deceased; Kate, who married Cornelius Moyer; William; Samuel, of Schuylkill county; and Mary. The two last named were twins, born March 9, 1855.

(IVa) William Tobias, son of Samuel, was born in Bern township, Nov. 26, 1850, and has always followed farming. In 1901 he bought his present place of six acres at "Leinbach's Hotel." Since 1898 he has been engaged to some extent in fence making. In politics he is a Democrat, and in religious connection a member of Epler's Reformed Church. On Sept. 2, 1871, he married Susanna H. Hoyer, who died June 29, 1882, the mother of five children: Harry, of Bern township; Solomon H.; Peter, who died aged twenty-seven years; Nora, who married Evan Bellman, of Reading; and Mamie, who married Charles Seidel, and lives at Reading. Mr. Tobias married (second) Matilda Umbenhouer, daughter of Franklin and Louisa (Gruber) Umbenhouer, and the children of this union are: Miss Laura; Jennie, who married James Roth, of Reading; and Charles and Howard, at home.

(Va) SOLOMON H. TOBIAS, son of William, was born in Bern township Aug. 24, 1873. His intellectual training was obtained at home and in the public schools of his district. At the age of fifteen he became a clerk in the large store of H. F. Body, at Riverside, where he remained for seventeen years. He then engaged in the grocery business on his own account, at his present location, No. 134 West Oley street, Reading, where he enjoys a large trade, and keeps a fine stock of the best in his line. He has a high reputation and is deserving of the success that has attended his efforts. In politics he supports the Democratic party. He is a member of the Artisans of Mutual Protection. With his family he attends Olivet Reformed Church at Reading, of which for many years he was a deacon. Mr. Tobias married Mary Matz, daughter of Henry Matz, of Cumru township, and they have had four children, namely: Irwin and Mary C., deceased; William E., and Calvin.

(IIa) John Jacob Tobias, son of Ludwig, was born about 1781, and died at Reading in 1825. He was a carpenter. His wife was Polly Geiger, and their children were: John; Mary, who married Israel Morris; Peggy, who married Hiram Yeager; William, who married Mary Bower, and had Clinton, Alwilda (m. to Frank Auman, of Birdsboro) and Kate (of Massachusetts); Catharine, who married Frank Sell, and had a daughter Mary (m. to a Mr. Finger); Jonathan; and Edward, who married Sarah Seider, and had children—Willis, Frank, Mary and Nora.

(IIIa) John Tobias, son of John Jacob, was born at Reading Sept. 20, 1816, and died at Hamburg March 20, 1903. He learned the shoemaker's trade, and followed it during the winters, while his summers were devoted to the making of bricks. On April 7, 1837, he located in Hamburg as a brickmaker, and for several seasons worked for Squire Miller. He then engaged in the business on his own account, following it until his retirement, about twenty years before his death. He was a Republican, and in 1879 served as chief burgess. He was twice married. On April 7, 1840, he married Hannah Albrecht, daughter of Frederick Albrecht, of Hamburg, and they had two sons, Albert F. and William A., of Reading (who had two sons, John and William). After the death of his first wife he married, Nov. 3, 1845, Annetta Schappell, daughter of Daniel and Catharine (Smith) Schappell, of Schuylkill county, Pa. To this union were born: Charles H.; John A., deceased, who married Bella Faust; Mary C., deceased, wife of William G. Sheradin; J. Daniel, deceased, who married Lovina Baer; Sarah E., deceased, who was an invalid for thirty years; and Leonora E., wife of William Baer.

(IVa) CHARLES H. TOBIAS, son of John, and now a prominent resident of Hamburg, where he is engaged as a brick manufacturer, was born in that town, on South Third street, Jan. 22, 1847. He obtained a good education in the public schools of the town, among his instructors being the Rev. B. D. Zweitzig and J. H. Jacobs, then principals of the school. He began working for his father in the brickyard, and continued there until 1882, when he entered into partnership with his brother John A., and brother-in-law, William G. Sheradin, under the firm name of Tobias Bros. & Co., with which he has since been connected. Since 1901 the firm has been known as Tobias & Sheradin. Their large yard is located in West Hamburg, and the daily capacity is 30,000 bricks, about 4,000,000 bricks being turned out annually. Fifty men are employed. They make a specialty of the red clay brick, for which they find a ready market throughout Berks, Schuylkill and Luzerne counties.

In his political views Mr. Tobias is a Republican, and he has on several occasions served as delegate to county conventions; he has been school director and tax collector. He has been a deacon in the Reformed Church of Hamburg, to which church his family all belong. He has ever contributed freely to church work, and gave liberally toward the erection of the present building. He and his sister, Mrs. William G. Sheradin contributed the beautiful figures of Faith, Hope and Charity back of the pulpit.

On Oct. 24, 1868, Mr. Tobias married Mary R. Wagner, daughter of Jesse and Rebecca (Renno) Wagner, the latter a daughter of Jacob and Hannah (Balthaser) Renno. To this union have been born: Frank Irving, who married Cora Yeager, and has two daughters, Mary E. and Anna C.; Clinton Calvin, who died aged two years, four months; and Laura Kate, who married Henry Diener, and has one son, Charles H.

(IIIa) Jonathan Tobias, son of John Jacob and Polly, was born in Bern township July 11, 1823, and died May 11, 1904, in the eighty-first year of his age. He was very successful in his business undertakings, and for fifty-two years was engaged as a wholesale oyster and truck dealer at Reading. He made his home at No. 411 Washington street, that city, from 1855 until 1892, when he retired from business, and moved to Edison. From the time he was twenty-one until he retired he had made his home in Reading. He married Fietta Gilbert, daughter of Henry G. and Rebecca (Gilbert) Gilbert, and granddaughter of Henry Gilbert, whose wife was also a Gilbert. Their children were: Albert H.; and Wilson G., born Feb. 11, 1856, who died July 2, 1900, in Reading (his wife's name was Nettie).

(IVa) Albert H. Tobias, son of Jonathan, is now superintendent of the George H. Hendel & Sons hat factory at Edison (now Shillington) Pa. He was born at Reading May 9, 1852, was educated in the public schools and in Prof. D. B. Brunner's private school, attending the latter two years and at the age of eighteen entered the employ of Schrader & Kline, furniture dealers, with whom he remained three years, having charge of their finishing department. In 1870 he began working for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and in 1874 was honored by that company by being intrusted with the running of the first passenger train in its service with an air brake; this was between Philadelphia and Pottsville. He remained in the company's service for seven years, enjoying a most creditable record for the entire time. His next employers were John Hendel Brothers, wool hat manufacturers, of Reading. At the end of one year he associated himself with the firm of George Hendel & Brothers, now George H. Hendel & Sons, manufacturers of fur hats, at Edison, now Shillington. He was first placed in charge of the shipping and packing department, but in 1895 became superintendent of the large industry. When this firm commenced business there were only thirty employes, but there are now 225. In 1874 Mr. Tobias built the first house in the village of Edison (now Shillington), and in 1902 he built his present comfortable modern residence in the same village, on a lot adjoining his first home.

Fraternally Mr. Tobias belongs to St. John's Lodge No. 485, F. & A. M., Reading; to the Sr. O. U. A. M., of Mohnton; Jr. O. U. A. M., of Reading; and Knights of Pythias Lodge, No. 485, of Mohnton. He and his family are charter members of St. Luke's Union Evangelical Church, at Edison, of which he is now trustee and treasurer. He was a member of the building committee when the present edifice was erected, and he has always been a liberal contributor to the support of the church and its work.

On April 15, 1877, Mr. Tobias was married to Mary S. Mohn, daughter of James and Hannah (Spatz) Mohn, and they have three children: (1) Kate M. married Charles Lorah, of Shillington, and has a son, Henry A.; (2) Maggie M. married William P. Fleicher, of Shillington, and has a daughter, Dorothy L.; (3) Jonathan J. is in school.

JOHN LEONARD SWAVELY, of Weaverstown, Amity township, was born in Amity township, Dec. 18, 1846, a son of Frederick Swavely and grandson of Leonard Swavely.

(I) Leonard Swavely lived in Earl township, where he was a farmer. He is buried at the Oley Church. His wife bore the maiden name of Swavely, and was a cousin of her husband. They had these children: Sally, who died unmarried; Susanna, who married Nathan Imbodey; Catherine; Samuel, of Earl township, whose son Hiram died at Reading; Frederick; and John, who was born June 22, 1788, and died Nov. 4, 1874, leaving a son, Nathan, of Amityville.

(II) Frederick Swavely was born in Earl township in 1799, died in 1878, and is buried at Amityville. He was a laborer and for seven years worked in the Jacob Weaver distillery at Earlville. His wife was Anna Steinrock, and she died about 1898, aged eighty-six years. She is buried beside her husband. Their children were: Solomon lived at Birdsboro, died at Philadelphia, but is buried at Birdsboro; Susan never married; Frederick; Henry left Amity about 1858 or 1859 and has never been heard of since; Rachel m. Jacob Matthias (deceased), and lives at Weaverstown; Rebecca m. Capt. Samuel Rhoads, who commanded Durell's Battery in the Civil war; Matilda m. Lewis Goodman, a member of the 5th Ohio Reg., who lost an arm during the Civil war; Annie and Lilia died young.

(III) John Leonard Swavely was reared upon the farm and when fifteen years of age he was taken into the family of Dr. E. C. Kitchen, at Weaverstown, where he was employed for three years. He then enlisted with Dr. Kitchen in the 21st Penn. Cavalry, the physician as a surgeon and Mr. Swavely as a private. The date of Mr. Swavely's enlistment was July 13, 1863, and he was enrolled at Harrisburg for a period of six months. He received his honorable discharge Feb. 20, 1864, at Chambersburg. After the war he was employed by Col. Jeremiah Weaver, of Amity township, and remained there from 1865 to 1902. In the meanwhile Mr. Weaver died, but Mr. Swavely remained with the widow. While working on the Weaver farm he was also engaged in the cattle business as well, and often drove from five to six herds of cattle from the western reserve in Ohio to Reading, a distance of more than 450 miles. He usually had from 130 to 135 head of cattle in each herd, so the managing of them was no small feat. With him he had four or five men, but the responsibility rested on him.

In 1871 Mr. Swavely married Emeline Breidenbach, a daughter of David and Sarah (Lewis) Breidenbach. She was born Aug. 20, 1841, and died May 28, 1908, aged sixty-five years, nine months and eight days. She is buried at the Oley Churches. Mr. and Mrs. Swavely had no issue.

RUDOLPH S. WEBER, who is a prosperous business man at Reading, conducting a first-class barber shop at No. 30 S. Fifth St., was born July 2, 1866, in this city, a son of Frederick and Elizabeth (Springman) Weber.

Wilhelm Weber, grandfather of Rudolph S., started for America in 1852 but did not live to reach land. He died and was buried at sea. His first wife was the mother of Frederick Weber. The second wife came to America and settled at Reading, where she subsequently died and is survived by her four children: Anthony, George, Charles and Mrs. Bachmuhl.

Frederick Weber, father of Rudolph S., was born March 4, 1829, in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, and died at Reading Jan. 18, 1905, having lived retired for fourteen years previously. He came to America in 1850 and settled at Reading, and in the following year became car inspector for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Co., and served nineteen years as a member of the wrecking crew. On July 6, 1851, he was married to Elizabeth Springman, born May 17, 1832, daughter of Valentine and Maria Springman, Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany. To this marriage nine children were born, namely: William; Frederick; George; Albert; Elizabeth married Lincoln L. Ramsey; Annie married Ludwig Webner; Rudolph S.; Harry, of Philadelphia; and Ida, who died young.

Rudolph S. Weber attended the public schools of Reading until he was prepared to learn a trade and he went under the instruction of Conrad Brettman, with whom he served a full three years apprenticeship to the barber's trade. He then embarked in business for himself, first at No. 19 S. Ninth St., in 1891 coming to his present location. He has four chairs and a well equipped shop in every way and enjoys the most exclusive trade in the city. His stand is one of the oldest barber stands in Reading, in 1859 a barber by the name of Grayson S. Nelson starting here in the business and continuing until 1865. Mr. Weber is a member of Reading Lodge No. 549, F. & A. M., Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14°, Harrisburg Consistory, Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading Lodge of Elks No. 115 and Improved Order of Heptasophs No. 67.

On Jan. 4, 1887, Mr. Weber was married to Clara J. Bittner, daughter of Cyrus and Eliza (Loos) Bittner and they have two children: Charlotte and Elsie. Mr. Weber and family belong to the First Reformed Church of Reading. Politically he is a Democrat. He is numbered with the progressive business men of Reading.

ALBERT S. WEBER, of Reading, brother of Rudolph S., is carrying on a successful line of trade as a tobacconist at No. 29 S. Fifth street, Reading. He was born in this city May 11, 1859, a son of Frederick and Elizabeth (Springman) Weber.

Albert S. Weber was educated in the public schools of Reading and when he laid his books aside he learned the wood-working trade in the Reading Railroad Company shops and was in the employ of that company for eight years. Then he went to Philadelphia and for seven years he traveled for different tobacco houses selling cigars, after which he returned to Reading and was a cigar salesman for three and one-half years. In January, 1901, he opened a cigar store of his own at No. 448 Penn street, where he remained until "The Fashion" took that site and he removed to No. 29 S. Fifth street, where he has built up a fine trade, and custom from all over the city seeks his goods. He has made a thorough study of the business and has had a long experience, the quality of his brands, combined with courteous treatment and fair dealing, having brought deserved success. He is a stalwart Democrat and is active in party affairs. He belongs to the Lutheran Church. He provides amply for the support of his widowed mother. After his father's death, he erected a handsome monument to his honor in the Charles Evans cemetery.

ABRAM K. WANNER, M. D., physician and surgeon, whose selected field of practice is the city of Reading, has made such a success of his profession as to make him of great value to the residents of his city. He was born July 24, 1870, near Reading, in Spring township Berks county, son of Daniel R. and Abalonia (Kissinger) Wanner.

Daniel Wanner, grandfather of Dr. Abram K., was reared and educated in the schools of Berks county, and was a brick dealer and farmer, one of his farms being situated at Red Bridge, on Tulpehocken Creek. His residence was in Spring township, near Reading. On retiring from active business life he located in West Reading, where his death occurred in his seventy-third year. Daniel Wanner married, June 10, 1835, Elizabeth Rothermel, born Dec. 2, 1816, by whom he had these children: John; Sarah, m. to Jacob Reeser; Jacob; Daniel R.; Catherine, m. to Frank Reigel; William; Frank R.; Emma, m. to Calvin Gring; Mary, m. to Milton Gring; and George R. Mr. and Mrs. Wanner were members of the Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Wanner was a Democrat.

Daniel R. Wanner, father of Abram K., was a farmer by occupation and lives at Riverside. He married Abalonia Kissinger, and to them there were born four children: Abram K., m. to Caroline Hartman; Elizabeth Alice, m. to Daniel I. Dunkleberger; Anna L., m. to David A. Lamm; and Daniel L., who died in infancy.

Abram K. Wanner was educated in the public schools of Bern township, and graduated from the Reading Business College in 1890. He later attended the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, Pa., after leaving which he taught school for four years. In 1894, after having read medicine for some time, he entered the Jefferson Medical College, being graduated therefrom in 1898, when he immediately began the practice of his chosen profession at the place where he is still located. His practice, which is large and lucrative, evidences the confidence of his many patients and the success he has attained in his profession.

Dr. Wanner was married in 1896 to Miss Caroline Hartman, and to them there have come one child, Arthur B., who was born March 28, 1895. Dr. and Mrs. Wanner are members of the Reformed Church. The Doctor is connected with the city, county, State and national medical associations, and is a member of the surgical staff of the Reading Hospital. He was made a Mason, Aug. 5, 1901, in Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., and belongs to the Royal Arch Chapter; Reading Commandery No. 42, K. T.; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is medical examiner for the Sun Life Insurance Company, of Canada, the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen, the Hartford Life Insurance Company, and others.

WILLIAM SMITH SYMONS, one of the successful young men of Reading, was born in New Holland, Lancaster county, Pa., June 29, 1883, son of Daniel U. and Ida K. (Handwork) Symons, and was named for William D. Smith, of Reading.

Nicholas Symons, his grandfather, was born in Cornwall, England, and by occupation was a boss miner. After reaching New York, on his emigration to America, he came direct to Reading, Pa., from which place he went to work in the mines of Joanna. He then went to Pottsville, where he had charge of sinking the shafts, and there he died in 1853. He married Jane Ubil, who was born in Chester county.

Daniel U. Symons was born July 21, 1847, at Bull Tavern, in the Conestoga Valley. He took charge of the old Ubil farm which comprised 180 acres, and this he farmed up to the time he moved to the Custer farm. He died June 1, 1899, aged fifty-one years, ten months, ten days. He married Ida K. Handwork, daughter of Samuel P. Handwork, of Conestoga Valley, Chester county, and their children were: Samuel Ludwig; Harry C., unmarried; Jennie M., m. to Harry L. Hoffman, of the firm of Hoffman & McKinney, furniture dealers, Reading; William S., at home; and Charles W.

William S. Symons was born on the Custer farm, and received his early training in the schools in that locality. After he finished his schooling he drifted to Reading, and in 1899 he began to learn the commission business with E. B. Slichter, who at that time was one of the leading merchants in the business. He started out as an errand boy, and finally became head clerk, and buyer and manager for the house between New York and Baltimore. After serving several years in the business failing health compelled him to change, and for three years he served as a conductor for the United Traction Company. At the end of that time he decided to take up the commission business for himself, locating at No. 812 Buttonwood street. After doing business in this location for several months he was obliged by the increase of his trade, to take larger quarters, and he moved to the place known as the Little Print Shop around the corner at No. 806 Walnut street, where he has leased enough ground space and erected an additional building to supply his rapidly increasing needs.

Mr. Symons is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church and Sunday-school, and a member of the Luther League, serving as its vice-president for one term. For three years he was an usher at the church, and in many ways has taken a prominent part in religious work. He is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M., and Reading Consistory; Progressive Lodge, No. 470, I. O. O. F., of which he is past grand. Mr. Symons is unmarried.

DANIEL F. BROWN was born in Reading Nov. 29, 1879, and is a son of Edwin and Esther (Yoder) Brown.

Daniel Brown, grandfather of Daniel F., was an early resident and well-known tailor at Pricetown, and was a member of the Brown family of Rockland township. He died in 1884, aged eighty-two years. Of his eight children, two are living, Edwin, and Mrs. Jacob Rauenzahn, of No. 632 North Tenth street, Reading.

Edwin Brown was employed by the Kaier Company, serving as their representative in Reading, selling liquors. He is now serving as an inspector, to which office he was appointed by the water board of Reading.

Daniel F. Brown received his earlier education in the public schools of his native city, and completed the high school course, graduating with the class of 1898. He then entered the University of Pennsylvania, taking up architectural work, and was graduated from that institution in 1903, standing at the head of his class. Mr. Brown has marked natural aptitude for his profession, and with his fine preparation is admirably equipped for the career he has chosen. On leaving the university he returned to Reading and opened an office, where he has been very successful from the start. He has done a considerable amount of work for the well-known firm of Rehr & Fricker, as well as for several other large contractors. He built the high school at Myerstown, and the Fairview Chapel at Boyertown, and he designed the Doerrheim apartment building at Fifth and Chestnut streets, Reading. His office is located at No. 50 North Eleventh street. Mr. Brown has considerable artistic talent, and has won quite a reputation by his skill in pen and ink work.

In 1902, Mr. Brown married Miss Mae B. Hocker, and one child has been born to them, Clarence Walter. Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown are members of St. Luke's Lutheran Church. They have many warm friends and are popular socially.

JACOB SCHAEFFER, who died Aug. 16, 1871, aged thirty years, eight months, twenty-eight days, was for some time a prominent agriculturist of Exeter township, Berks county. He was born on the old Schaeffer homestead Nov. 18, 1840, son of Brig.-Gen. Henry and Anna (Levan) Schaeffer.

The founder of this family in America was Christian Schaeffer, grandfather of Jacob, who came to America at the age of fifteen with the Hessian troops during the Revolution. He located in Exeter township, and by enterprise and economy became the owner of three farms—one in Exeter (still known as the "Capt. Schaeffer farm"), one in Oley, and one at Boyertown, the last named being now largely cut up into building lots. To Christian Schaeffer and his wife, Anna, were born many children, among whom were: John, born at Philadelphia Feb. 28, 1788, had a son Jeremiah (born Nov. 12, 1818, died April 27, 1880, leaving an only son); Christian (born Dec. 6, 1799, died Jan. 31, 1863) m. Mary Focht (born Jan. 18, 1809, died July 31, 1884) and both are buried at Schwartzwald Church; Henry; Hannah, Mrs. Knapp; and Mrs. Hartman.

Henry Schaeffer, father of Jacob, was born April 12, 1802, near Boyertown, Pa., and was educated in the common schools of his native township. In early life he engaged in agricultural pursuits, and was also an extensive dealer in cattle, becoming one of the substantial men of his day. Although a stanch Democrat, and a leader in the ranks of his party, he was a very strong Union man, and helped to organize troops in the State Militia, being a captain of Berks and Lehigh county troops, and was promoted to the rank of brigadier general. He was an able military officer, strict disciplinarian and of commanding appearance. He had a loud, authoritative voice which could be heard a half a mile away. He died Dec. 15, 1860, and was buried in Schwartzwald cemetery. Henry Schaeffer married Anna Levan, born April 15, 1814, died Feb. 10, 1870, and of the children born to them, five grew to maturity: Catherine, m. to Samuel Saylor; Mary (1838-1864), m. to Levi Hartman; Elizabeth, m. to Franklin Saylor; Henry L. (1846-1861); and Jacob. In religious belief the family were members of the Reformed Church.

Jacob Schaeffer was educated in the schools of Exeter township, and until within two years of his death was engaged in farming. He married Emeline W. Knabb, and to this union were born three children: Anna, Sarah and Elizabeth. Misses Anna and Sarah Schaeffer reside at No. 225 South Sixteenth street, Reading. They are prominent members of St. Andrew's Reformed Church, and are leaders in the work of that denomination.

Christian Schaeffer, son of Christian the emigrant, born 1799, died 1863. To him and his wife, Mary Focht (1809-1884) were born: Samuel (1828-1890) m. Sarah E. Levan (1834-1893), and among their children were John, Mary, Hannah, Malinda, Jacob, Henry, George, Nathan and Samuel; George C. F. (1831-1868) m. Maria Moyer (daughter of Gottlieb and Maria Moyer), and had two children, William and Emma.

FRANK S. SWAVELY, proprietor of the "Shanesville Hotel," is a native or Earl township, Berks county, born Oct. 7, 1863, son of Jonathan K. and Emeline (Shollenberger) Swavely.

Adam Swavely, the founder of this family, was a native of Hessen, Germany, and came to this country at the time of the American Revolution, serving as one of the soldiers in King George's army. In 1782 he located in Earl township, and his name appears that year among the taxables. He was a laborer and woodchopper, and acquired a small tract of land in what is known as Woodchoppertown, in Earl township. He is buried there in a private cemetery, located in the timber southeast of William C. Shane's place—now a forlorn and neglected spot. On the tax list of 1782 his name is spelled Swable, and in the census of 1790 it appears Adam Swebely. On the latter list also appear: Adam Swebely, Jr., Leonard Swebely and Michael Swebely. Among the children of Adam Swavely were: Adam, Jr.; Leonard, who had a son John; Jacob, who had a son Peter; Michael; and Peter.

Michael Swavely, son of Adam, lived in Woodchoppertown, in Earl township, and there owned a tract of sixty acres which he cultivated. In religious principle he was a Lutheran. He married Bevvy Fritterich, who died when past eighty years of age. Their children were: Abraham, who lived and died in Earl township; John; Matthew, who lived first in Earl township, and then in Upper Berks county where he died; Michael, who lived and died in Earl township; Jacob, who died in Earl; and Susanna, m. to Jacob Koch, of Earl.

John Swavely, son of Michael, was born in Earl township, in November, 1794, and died in May, 1879. He always lived in that township, where he owned a farm that he bequeathed to his sons, Adam, Jonathan and Mahlon for $3,500. By trade he was a stone mason. In his last will and testament he directed that he be buried in the Oley graveyard. He and his wife were Lutheran members of Oley Churches. He married Catharine Kemmerer, who died in February, 1891, aged seventy-seven years. They had ten children: Lovina, Amos, Jonathan K., Simon, Adam, Anna, Harriett, Amelia, Mahlon and Levi.

Jonathan K. Swavely, son of John, is one of the old residents of Earl township. He was born there June 16, 1827, and for some years followed the stone mason's trade. In politics he is a Democrat, and for six years served as supervisor, and for two years as assessor. He is a Lutheran member of Oley Churches. On Aug. 20, 1854, he married Emeline Shollenberger, daughter of Benjamin Shollenberger, of Oley township. She was born in November, 1832. They had twelve children, as follows: Nathaniel, of Earl township; Lizzie, m. to Henry Shirer; Enoch, of Allentown; Benjamin, deceased; Frank S., of Shanesville; Mahlon, of Oley township; Rosa, m. to William S. Hoffman; Kate, m. to Nicholas Hartline; Sallie, deceased; Emma, m. to William Gift; Daniel, of Seattle, Wash.; and Annie, m. to David Weidner.

Frank S. Swavely attended the public schools until he was eighteen years old when he learned the carpenter's trade from William Weiser, of Boyertown, working for him for about five years. He then came to Oley township with his family, and followed painting and carpentering two years, but the paint caused his health to fail, and he gave up the work. For three years then he followed carpentering, after which he entered the hotel business, conducting for three years the "Pleasantville Hotel." Coming to Earl township, he once more worked at his trade, and at the same time conducted a small farm. On March 21, 1895, he became proprietor of the "Shanesville Hotel," and this place he has since conducted with ever increasing popularity. Mr. Swavely is a member of the Knights of the Mystic Chain, Boyertown; the Knights of the Golden Eagle, Pleasantville; and the Red Men, of Oley. He was also a member for some twenty years of the Boyertown Hook and Ladder Company. He and his family are Lutheran members of Oley Churches, and he served as deacon for three years. In 1908 when the present Lutheran Church was erected, Mr. Swavely was liberal in his contributions, and he also donated one of the stained glass windows.

On Aug. 19, 1884, he married Emma L. Mensch, daughter of Even Mensch, late of Hereford township. They have three children: Stella, wife of Edwin Wolfgang, of Earl township; Clarence and Elda. The family is very highly esteemed and they have many warm friends.

A number of the Swavelys are buried in the cemeteries at Oley Churches and at Amityville. Among those in the former are: Isaac Swavely, born July 15, 1817, died Sept. 9, 1906; and wife Matilda, nee Flicker, 1820-1877; Michael Swavely, born June 14, 1807, died Aug. 20, 1887; Susan, his wife, born Oct. 20, 1814, died April 28, 1892. Sarah B. Swavely, nee Hafer, Oct. 13, 1841. John S. Swavely, March 28, 1846. Elizabeth Schwebele, wife of Jacob Schwebele, born Dec. 12, 1798, died Dec. 12, 1863. Johan Peter Schwable, born Jan. 6, 1787, died Nov. 15, 1865; wife Catharine, nee Hartman, 1798-1873. In the Amityville cemetery are: Ephraim D. Swavely (son of John and Elnora), born Jan. 23, 1823, died Sept. 26, 1889; wife, Mary Ann, nee Hoffman, born May 8, 1831, died Dec. 25, 1897. Horace G. Swavely, 1840-1905. Sarah Ann, wife Nathan Swavely, 1840-1902.

LEVI FRANKLIN WAGNER, M. D., came to Reading in 1902, moving from Pikesville, this county, where he had been located in practice for ten years. Since settling in the city he has become thoroughly identified with the local medical fraternity, in which he holds a foremost place by virtue of both his professional attainments and his high personal character. Dr. Wagner is one of those who have made their own way, and the position he has reached is the best measure of his ability and the efforts he has put forth.

The Wagner family have been settled in Berks county for several generations, and are of German descent. It is thought that the first of this branch who came to America made a home in Schuylkill county, but as far back as the Doctor's great-grandfather they have been resident in this county. He lived in Maiden-creek township.

John Wagner, the Doctor's grandfather, settled in Bern townsnip, and was a blacksmith by trade, following that calling and also keeping hotel. He married Susanna Fink, and to them were born six children, namely: Augustus, a carpenter; Levi, a farmer; Cyrus; Frelinghuevsen, now a pension official at Washington, D. C., who was army postmaster at Philadelphia during the Civil war; Mary, m. to Harrison Kiesling, and now deceased; and Harrison F., father of Dr. Wagner. The father of this family and three of the sons served in the Pennsylvania troops during the Civil war. John Wagner lived to be over eighty, and he passed his last years with his son Harrison, at whose home he died. Charles, son of Frelinghueysen Wagner, is a stenographer under President Taft; his daughter is Ella, married to a Mr. Henderson.

Harrison F. Wagner, son of John, was born in Bloomsburg, Berks county, and has been a farmer during the greater part of his active life, living in the vicinity of Leesport. He was for a number of years engaged in cigar manufacturing, before he settled down to agricultural pursuits. He married Sarah Minker, daughter of George Minker, a farmer of this county, now deceased, and a large family blessed this union, namely: Levi Franklin; John, a contractor and builder, who was a member of the firm of White & Wagner, of Reading; Milton, of Philadelphia; James, an optician, married to Clara Kramer; William, who is engaged in cigarmaking in Philadelphia; Irvin, who died in infancy; Howard, who died in his thirty-fourth year from an accident, falling on the ice going to work; Sallie, m. to William Himmelberger, son of Adam Himmelberger; and Edward, m. to Annie Seidel. The father of this family is a member of the Reformed Church, in whose work he is active, as he is in his support of all worthy objects.

Levi Franklin Wagner was born Jan. 6, 1863, in Bern township, and there passed his boyhood and youth and received his early education. After attending the common schools and Bernville high school he entered the Keystone State Normal School, in order to prepare himself for the profession which has been the stepping-stone for many an ambitious student willing to combine work and study. All the expenses of his higher education were paid out of his own earnings, but the necessity for work never dampened his ardor for study, which he often pursued under great difficulties. His regular attendance at school ceased when he was sixteen, but he nevertheless managed to prepare himself for teaching, which he followed for ten years, first in the common schools of his native county, and subsequently, as he advanced, in the grammar school at Pottstown, Pa., and the Williamson Free School of Mechanical Trades, at Media, Pa. Meantime, in 1884, he had commenced the study of medicine, with Dr. H. Y. Neiman, of Pottstown, in 1885 matriculating in the medical department of the University of Vermont, from which institution he was graduated in 1888, with honors. During this period, in 1887, he also completed a special course in chemistry. He put his acquisitions in medical science to practical use without delay, being engaged as professor of physiology and hygiene, as well as of physical science, at the Williamson Free School, previously mentioned. After his graduation from medical school he was resident physician of the institution at Media, with which he had so many pleasant associations, and where he gained high popularity among his pupils by his strong personality as well as his efficiency as an instructor.

Before entering upon the regular practice of his profession Dr. Wagner supplemented his Vermont college training by work in various hospitals in Vermont and Pennsylvania, and also by a course at the Medico-Chirurgical College, Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1890, taking high honors. He stood 100 in surgery. He settled first at Molltown, Berks county, but remained there less than two years, in 1892 making a new location, at Pikesville, where he continued in practice for ten years. His patronage increased steadily, his calls coming from distant parts of the county as well as from that immediate vicinity, and his patients were scattered over such a wide territory that in 1901 he thought it best to have a more central location. He established himself at No. 852 North Eighth street, Reading, on Oct. 1st of that year, and in March, 1902, he moved to No. 959 North Ninth street and thence, on Dec. 24, 1904, moved to his present place, at No. 610 North Tenth street. He has found the city a much more convenient center for his professional labors, for while in the country he was obliged to keep three horses for his extensive drives, and was kept constantly busy attending to his patients. He has been equally successful since coming to the city, and answers to the demands of his large patronage with all the zeal and skill of an up-to-date physician. He is active in professional circles, being a member of the Berks County Medical Society, the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

Since taking up his residence in Reading Dr. Wagner has interested himself in a number of important real-estate operations. This line has always claimed more or less of his attention, and he was formerly vice-president of the Washington Building & Loan Association, which had a branch office at Oley. Dr. Wagner has proved himself a good business man as well as an earnest professional worker. Indeed, his successful battle against the adverse conditions which confronted him in his struggles for an education would entitle him to some reputation for financial ability and executive capacity.

On June 19, 1897, Dr. Wagner married Emma Cleaver, daughter of Frank Cleaver, formerly a merchant of Pleasantville, this county, and five children have been born to them, namely: Elsie May, L. Franklin, Russell H. (died July 30, 1907, aged four years, nine months, twenty-seven days), Ruth E., and one that died in infancy. The home at Pikesville which Dr. Wagner and his family occupied was considered by many the most attractive in that locality, and they are pleasantly situated at Reading. Dr. Levi F. Wagner has been nominated on the Democratic ticket for coroner of Berks county.

Socially the Doctor affiliates with the Knights of the Maccabees and the Knights of the Golden Eagle, having joined the latter order at Pleasantville, in Maxatawny Castle, No. 461.

SEBASTIAN BLIMLINE, deceased, who was for a number of years engaged in the carriage and automobile business at Sinking Spring, was born June 28, 1858, in Brecknock townhsip, Berks county, son of Frederick D. and grandson of John and Margaret Blimline.

Frederick D. Blimline, born in Batavia, Germany, in 1829, died in Brecknock township, Berks county, in 1899, aged seventy years. In his native land he had been brought up to farming, and that occupation he followed in the New World. He came over in 1853, landing at Castle Garden, N. Y., and after he had traveled somewhat, and lived at the Swamp for a short time, he settled in Brecknock township, near Adamstown, in Berks county. Here he acquired a tract of about sixty acres of land, which he cultivated, and on which he passed the remainder of his days and died. This farm is now owned by his son John. Mr. Blimline was a Republican in politics. He and his family belonged to the United Evangelical Church at Mohn's Hill, and there he and his wife sleep their last sleep. On June 12, 1853, he married Barbara Deane, who was born in Germany in 1822, and who accompanied her husband to seek a new home in the new land. She died in 1884. Their children were: (1) Lydia (deceased) m. Thomas Shellenhammer, and had two children, Maria (unmarried) and George. (2) George m. Savilla Lutz, and had children—Homer, Maggie, Harry, Callia, Ella, Dorphey and Anna. (3) Maggie m. Henry D. Young, of Mohnton, and died in 1899, aged forty-three years. They had children as follows: Mamie, Benjamin, Adam, Fred, Daniel, Bertha, Stephen, Norma and Henry. (4) Sebastian. (5) John lives on the homestead. He m. Sarah Matz, and they have had children—Laura, Walter, Mary, Estella, Bessie, Bunding, Clarence, Edna, Elmer, Charles, Luella May, Alvertia, Norman and Florence Keith. (6) Frederick D., born Aug. 13, 1863, learned the hatting trade when sixteen years old, and this he has followed ever since. During the winters for about ten years he manufactured brooms at Mohnton. In 1905 he went to Bowmansville, where for two years he manufactured shirts, and in 1907 he moved to Reading, where he worked at his trade. He m. Emma Hartman, and has children—Carrie, Esther, Edwin and Stanley. (7) Annie m. Charles Clark, of Reading, and has three children, Stella, Jennie and William.

George Blimline, brother of Frederick D., and uncle of Sebastian, came to America in 1858, and also settled in Brecknock township, Berks county, where he owns several farms. He has reared a large family, and is one of the substantial men of his locality.

Sebastian Blimline attended the public schools of his native township and worked upon his father's farm until he was fourteen years old, when he learned the blacksmith's trade with Daniel Peifer, working at same as a journeyman for several years. He then engaged in business for himself near Adamstown, Berks county, and later at Slate Hill, subsequently removing to Brownsville, where he continued for thirteen years. In 1890 Mr. Blimline came to Sinking Spring, erecting the building now owned and occupied by Mr. Steffie, the well-known cigar manufacturer, but later built a large factory which he occupied for seven years, 45x90 feet in dimensions, with an annex, at the corner of Main and Railroad streets. In 1908 Mr. Blimline purchased from Isaac S. Spatz the oldest blacksmith stand in the vicinity of Sinking Spring. This includes one-half of the "Spring," which is famous throughout the county, the other half being owned by Mr. Joel Heinly. Together with Mr. Heinly he beautified the surroundings of the spring, and Mr. Blimline erected a two-story frame factory with cement floor, 24x106 feet in dimensions, on his property. There he also erected a fine residence complete with all the latest improvements which tend to make a home comfortable. Mr. Blimline employed from eight to ten workmen, all skilled mechanics, and he did a large business, not only in the manufacture of carriages and wagons, but in all kinds of automobile repairing, trimming and painting, and also dealt in gasoline engines and automobile tires, automobile supplies and harness. His establishment was equipped with the most modern and up-to-date machinery, power and electric lights. Mr. Blimline built the first automobile in the county, which he drove through the roads of the county and the streets of Sinking Spring, and it was the object of much admiration. He was one of the first automobile men in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Blimline married Mary Kershner, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Gabel) Kershner, and to them these children were born: John (m. Cora Clay), Nora (m. Andrew Reed), Albert (m. Sadie Hornberger), Lillian (m. Thomas Wenner), Frederick and Star, living, and six others who died young. In politics Mr. Blimline was a Republican. With his family he attended the United Brethren Church of Sinking Spring, of which he was steward and trustee, and for eight years he was tenor in the choir, in which he always took an active interest. He died at his home in Sinking Spring in May, 1909.

GRING. One of the old and honorable families of Berks county, Pa., members of which have distinguished themselves in business and political life and in military circles, is that of Gring, who has as representatives in Spring township many men of prominence. This sketch has to do with two brothers, Franklin H. and Charles H. Gring, and their nephew, Lewis W. Gring, well known citizens and substantial business men of Sinking Spring.

Johannes Gring, the founder of this family in America, crossed the ocean in the ship "Lydia" from Rotterdam, which landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 20, 1743.

Samuel Gring, son of Johannes, was born in Holland, and was but a lad when his parents emigrated. He settled in Cumru, about 1760, and there acquired land and prospered, dying a wealthy man, and he occupies an unknown grave in the vicinity of Sinking Spring.

David Gring, grandfather of Charles H. and Franklin H. and the great-grandfather of Lewis W., was born Feb. 9, 1760, in Cumru township, Berks county. In early life he located at the Tulpehocken creek, where he took up a tract of land, built several grist mills, and like his father, became prosperous. He died Feb. 1, 1848, aged eighty-eight years, less eight days. David Gring was married (first) Dec. 7, 1790, to Anna Maria Waldschmidt, of the Fatherland, whose parents came to America with Samuel Gring. Tradition has it that the Grings and Waldschmidts were neighbors before coming to this country. Anna Maria Waldschmidt was born Aug. 3, 1767, and died April 20, 1818. She bore her husband these children: John, a minister of the Reformed Church; William, a miller of the Tulpehocken Creek; David; Daniel, born July 9, 1798, a minister of the Reformed Church, who died Sept. 5, 1862 (his wife, Esther, born March 8, 1799, died Dec. 3, 1861); Susan, who died unmarried; a daughter, who married a Mr. Lichty; and one who married a Mr. Troxel. Mr. Gring's second wife was Gertrude Stamm, born July 12, 1772, who died March 31, 1857, aged eighty-four years, eight months and nineteen days.

David Gring, son of David and father of Charles H. and Franklin H., was born March 9, 1806 and died Jan. 26, 1890, aged eighty-three years, ten months, seventeen days. He was married June 25, 1826, to Maria Hill, who was born Oct. 6, 1803, and died May 18, 1885, aged eighty-one years, seven months and twelve days. Their union was blessed with these children: David H., born Jan. 11, 1829, a miller; Daniel, born July 27, 1830, a farmer; Samuel, born Oct. 7, 1832, who is still living, is a prominent lumber dealer of Reading; Ann, born Feb. 22, 1834, is the widow of George Zerr; Mary, born Nov. 22, 1836, married Joshua Grill; John, born March 27, 1838, a miller and tanner; Charles H., born Feb. 18, 1840; Lewis, who died at the age of fifteen years, one day; Franklin H., born July 14, 1844; and Levi, born Nov. 30, 1847, died Dec. 1, 1862. The father of the above children followed in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, and at the time of his death he was the owner of several farms and a good grist mill. He was first a Whig and later a Republican in politics, and was prominent in public matters of his day and generation. Mr. Gring served as captain, and later as major in the State Militia, occupying the latter rank for eleven years.

David H. Gring, father of Lewis W., and brother of Charles H. and Franklin H., was born Jan. 11, 1829, in Lower Heidelberg township, and died March 10, 1904. He was a farmer and miller and owned and conducted the well known Gring mill for more than half a century. Mr. Gring married Catherine Weachter, born April 30, 1836, who still survives and retains the old homestead. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. David H. Gring, namely: George, of Sinking Spring; Thomas of Wernersville, Pa.; Lewis W., who is mentioned below; and two who died in infancy.

Franklin H. Gring was born on the old stand across the line in Spring township, July 15, 1844, and was reared upon the farm. Until twenty-six years of age he worked for his parents, at which time he set out for himself, and in 1871 began farming the home property, where he lived for three years. The next location of Mr. Gring was Denver, Lancaster county, but subsequently, in 1876, he purchased the old Alex Fisher farm, at Fritztown, a tract of thirty-two acres of fertile land, and here he has since lived. He has a fine little place which he has greatly improved. It is located along the Lancaster road, and the road running from Fritztown to Wernersville, at the foot of Cushion Hill, and is supplied with some of the finest water in the world. The property includes many fruit trees, and is in an excellent state of cultivation. Mr. Gring is a Republican in politics, and he and his family are members of St. John's Reformed Church of Sinking Spring.

On Jan. 14, 1871, Franklin H. Gring was married to Mary Fisher, born Sept. 14, 1851, daughter of Alexander and Kate (Walters) Fisher, and granddaughter of John Fisher, who owned many acres of land around the Keener's mill. Mr. and Mrs. Gring have had eight children: Harry R., who resides near his father at Fritztown, and maufactures cigars, married Mary Steffey, and they have one son, Stephen; Katie V. died in infancy; Alva G. married Charles Gaul, of Wernersville, and has two sons, Robert and Harvey; Edwin F., of Lancaster, Pa., married Alice Gensemer, and has a son, Elwood; Millie E., who married H. C. Oberly, of Lancaster county; David A., who was killed Nov. 12, 1902, by the accidental discharge of a gun while hunting in Lebanon county; Mary A., who married Oscar Fleischer, born Oct. 7, 1885, an employe of the State Asylum at Wernersville; and William F., born July 10, 1890.

Charles H. Gring was born in Spring township, March 18, 1840, and was reared at Gring's Mill and on the farm belonging to the mill property. He attended the township schools, and worked with his father until he was of age, when he embarked in farming for himself. This he continued until his enlistment, Oct. 27, 1863, in Company E, 167th Pa. V. I., with which he served nine months, and later was drafted for three years in Company B, 11th U. S. Cavalry, serving until the close of the war. Mr. Gring had two miraculous escapes during the service. At Blackwater a bullet struck a tree, and glancing off, entered the back of his neck, this bullet, or a part of it, still being in his head, back of his right ear. On another occasion a bursting shell injured the third finger on his right hand. Mr. Gring has as many thrilling experiences during his army career as any soldier in the war. He became corporal of his company, and for meritorious service was promoted to skirmish bugler. He showed extraordinary courage on every occasion, and it was often remarked that he knew no fear. The hard and trying experiences of a soldier disabled Mr. Gring, and after his return home he was stricken with rheumatism, contracted during his service, and the year of sickness which followed wasted his body to such a degree that he weighed but ninety-two pounds.

After partial recovery Mr. Gring engaged in farming on his father's property, where he continued for twelve years, at the end of which time this was sold, and he located in Heidelberg township, where he operated the property of Henry and Charles Miller, when this farm was also sold. Mr. Gring then spent one year at Wernersville, and in 1880 he purchased the "Centennial Hotel," at Sinking Spring, which he successfully conducted for three years. In 1884 he again engaged in farming on the 200-acre tract of William Harder, in Heidelberg township, which he cultivated for two years, and at the end of this time took charge of the well known H. H. Muhlenberg farm of 542 acres, now embraced in the city limits of Reading. Here he had ninety-two milk cows and twenty-two head of horses. In addition to his nine children, he hired six regular men and several maids, forty people going to one table. Besides farming, he conducted a stone quarry, where he employed eleven men.

Mr. Gring has always been noted for his generosity and hospitality, and on Labor day, for four successive years, he gave a great dinner to the letter carriers and clerks of Reading, this being one of the jolliest occasions of the whole year. His home was a great gathering place for the Reading firemen, and any one was welcome to share his bed and board. On this farm Mr. Gring continued to reside until the death of his good wife, when he sold out his vast farm stock at the public sale in the spring of 1899, at which time he took out a license for his hotel at Sinking Spring, which he has conducted very successfully to the present time. He has a first rate hostelry, which is patronized by the best people of the community. Throughout his life Mr. Gring has been an industrious, hard-working man, and as a consequence, although he has lost over $10,000 through loaning to dishonest persons, he is in very comfortable circumstances. In politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M.; the Knights of the Golden Eagle; Post No. 76, G. A. R.; and the Marion Fire Company, of Reading, since 1887. He is a member of St. John's Reformed Church, where his children have all been confirmed, and where he has been a deacon. Mr. Gring has a fine family lot in the new cemetery.

Mr. Gring is an enthusiastic sportsman, and every year takes a trip to some distant point, his outing in the fall of 1906, being to the spot where he was wounded. He has also quite a collection of relics, souvenirs, etc., principal among which are the sword, epaulettes and hat of Gen. George Washington, concerning which we are allowed to quote from a local paper:

"Very few people are aware of the fact that the original hat worn by Gen. Washington and his sabre and epaulettes are in the possession of a Berks county man. Charles H. Gring, proprietor of the upper hotel at Sinking Spring, claims to be the fortunate owner of these articles, and they have been in his possession for many years. He prizes them very highly and takes great pleasure in showing them to visitors. Mr. Gring has had frequent offers to sell them to historical societies and relic hunters, but refused them all. Mr. Gring's father, the late Major David Gring, who was in the civil war, received the articles from his grandfather. The latter was a lieutenant on Gen. Washington's staff, and a short time before the close of the Revolution Gen. Washington, it is declared, presented Lieut. Gring with his sabre and belt, hat and epaulettes. The articles were in Major David Gring's possession for many years, and a short time before his demise he presented them to his son, the present owner. Mr. Gring saw three years service in the Civil war, and besides his father was the only one of the family to go to the front. For this reason the articles were given to him. The hat once worn by Gen. Washington is kept in a large box. It is in a fair state of preservation. It is shaped like a half moon and is made of some stiff black cloth material. Both sides are trimmed with black braid about a quarter of an inch wide and well worn. In the center of the hat on the outside is a large American eagle of silver. Silver cords encircles the brim and the hat almost comes to a point. When Mr. Gring first secured the old hat there was a red and a blue feather on top of it. Both have long since crumbled away. There was a small piece of paper on the band containing the name and date of the presentation of the hat to Lieut. Gring. It is a foot high and twenty-two inches long. The sabre and belt are in excellent condition. The sword is of the finest kind of steel and is handsomely engraved. The hilt is formed from a solid gold plate. The grip is formed by a coiled snake, the tail of which is fastened in an eagle's beak. At several places on both sides of the blade are thirteen stars, one for each of the original colonies. The scabbard is of steel and the belt of genuine horsehide. The epaulettes are of solid silver, with a red white and blue field on the top piece. The fringe is of silver cord of heavy weight."

In 1860 Mr. Gring was married to Mary A. Miller, born Sept. 25, 1838, who died Jan. 6, 1901, daughter of Isaac and Mary (Strunk) Miller, of Spring township, and to this union there were born children as follows: William, m. to Katie Fisher; Lillie, m. to John Potteiger; Charles H., of Alsace Church; Katie, m. to John Spohn; Edwin, m. to Edith Lorah; Annie, m. to Frank Lengel; Harvey; Irwin, who is unmarried; and Edith, m. to William Sands.

Lewis W. Gring, son of David H., was born July 19, 1867, in Spring township, and was educated in the district schools and also spent two years at a graded school. He was reared on his father's farm, and at the mill conducted by him, and when but eighteen years of age engaged in the manufacture of hosiery on his father's farm, erecting a small mill, the machinery of which was run by water power. Here he continued for about seven years, when he came to Sinking Spring, and for one year engaged in manufacturing alone, when he took into partnership James Ruth, which connection continued for about one year. At the end of this time Mr. Gring became the employe of Nolde & Horst, extensive hosiery manufacturers of Reading, with which firm he remained about two years, subsequently becoming employed at the Textile Works. After two years in this company's employ, Mr. Gring erected a small house and factory at Sinking Spring, and on Jan. 25, 1904, he began manufacturing again. He now has a one story factory, 40 x 70 feet, and employes about forty people, the daily output, which finds a ready market, being 200 dozen machine grade and 144 needle goods. Mr. Gring is a thorough business man, and has the respect and esteem of the community in which he resides.

On April 14, 1895, Mr. Gring was married to Ellen Meade, daughter of Patrick Meade (born Aug. 7, 1826, who died Jan. 16, 1882), and his wife Mary A. (born April 5, 1833, who died in Aug. 1907). Mr. Gring and his wife reside in a nice residence on the Lancaster road, in Sinking Spring, adjoining his factory, and they attend St. John's Reformed Church.

HORATIO K. REBER (deceased), who for many years was a prominent business man of Reading, being a pioneer in the electrical supply and construction business, was born July 22, 1849, in Leesport, Berks county, where he received a good common-school education.

Mr. Reber's first employment was in the painting business which he followed until 1883, in which year he engaged in the electrical supply business on Sixth street, near Buttonwood. Later he removed to near Penn street, on Sixth, and in 1888 located at No. 651 Penn street, where the business was conducted by him until his death, in 1901, since which time his widow has managed the business, under the name of Reading Electrical Supply & Construction Company. Mrs. Reber, who resides at No. 322 Windsor street, also owns three other properties on Hudson street and one on Pear street, is an able business woman, and under her supervision the enterprise has grown to such proportions that six mechanics are required to carry on its business.

July 1, 1873, Mr. Reber was married to Mary A. Stout, daughter of Abraham and Hannah (Masser) Stout. Mr. and Mrs. Stout were members of the Reformed Reber, who resides at No. 322 Windsor street, also owns three other properties on Hudson street and Church. They had children as follows: Milton; Mary A., m. Mr. Reber; James, and Elizabeth, and four who died in infancy. Mrs. Reber is a member of the Christian Church, to which her husband also belonged, and of the Y. W. C. A. Mr. Reber's fraternal connections were with the I. O. O. F., the Knights of Pythias, the P. O. S. of A., and Mt. Penn Council, Royal Arcanum; and in all of these organizations he was very popular. He was an able business man, and was public-spirited to a high degree, giving his support and hearty co-operation to any movement that would be of benefit to the city or its citizens.

JAMES TEMPLIN, a cabinet maker of Reading, who for some years prior to his death lived retired at No. 351 South Fifth street, was born in Robeson township, Berks county, Jan. 5, 1834, son of Isaac and Mary (Yoder) Templin. He learned the cabinet making trade in 1871, and was employed at the Philadelphia & Reading railroad shops as carpenter and cabinet-maker until 1898, when he retired. He made his home with his sister and brother William. Mr. Templin was loyal to the principles of the Republican party. His religious faith was that of the Baptist Church, and he was fraternally connected with Birdsboro Lodge, No. 479, F. & A. M.

Levi Templin, grandfather of James, was an early settler of Caernarvon township, where he operated a farm and where he died in 1813, in the prime of life, from the effects of an injury received in a runaway. His wife died in 1840, aged seventy-two years. They were the parents of two children, namely: Isaac; and Charlotte, who died in young womanhood. Politically Levi Templin was a Whig.

Isaac Templin was born in Caernarvon township, where he received his literary education and learned the shoemaker's trade. He later turned his attention to farming, carrying on that occupation in Robeson township until within four years of his death, when he removed to Reading, and died in 1871. Isaac Templin married Mary Yoder, daughter of Daniel Yoder, and seven children were born to this union, as follows: Caroline, who died in 1900; Julia, m. to Joseph Rogers; Eveline, m. to Robert A. Gilmer; James; Anna, deceased; William; and Mary E., m. to William H. Sendерling. Mr. Templin was a consistent member of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, in the faith of which Mrs. Templin died in 1869, aged about sixty-eight years.

William Templin, son of Isaac and Mary, was employed as a conductor in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad from 1863 until 1885, since which latter date he has been engaged very successfully in contracting and building. Mr. William Templin is very highly esteemed in his community, as a good, useful citizen. He is a member of Reading Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., Reading; Royal Arch Chapter, No. 152, Reading; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He belongs to Christ Episcopal Church, and in politics is a stanch Republican.

RICHARD B. RAUDENBUSH, who owns and operates a valuable farm in Cumru township, Berks county, is one of the leading citizens of his community, where the greater portion of his life has been spent. Mr. Raudenbush was born in Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa., son of Joseph and Sarah (Baum) Raudenbush.

John Raudenbush, the great-grandfather of Richard B., was a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, where he followed the milling business. He and his two brothers came to America, one settling where St. Louis now stands, one in Schuylkill county, and John in Goshenhoppen, below Boyertown. He was one of the earliest millers of this portion of the State, an occupation which he followed until his death. His son, also named John, learned the milling trade under his father, and this business he followed in Lancaster county for many years, coming thence to Berks county. His death occurred in Cumru township, and he was buried at Yocom's Church, of which he was a Reformed member. Mr. Raudenbush married a Miss Hemmig, also buried at Yocom's, and to them were born: Adam, John, Daniel, Joseph, Henry; Eva m. Levi Hemmig; Elizabeth m. Henry Eckenrode; and Sarah m. George Esterly.

Joseph Raudenbush, the father of Richard B., was born in 1821, in Lancaster county, and for thirty years followed the trade of his father. He then purchased a farm of 147 acres in the Poplar Neck district, the one now owned by his son, Richard B. Here he made many improvements and erected all of the present buildings with the exception of the house. Mr. Raudenbush died in his sixty-sixth year, while his wife, Sarah, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Zacharias) Baum, lived to be seventy-seven years of age. These children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Raudenbush: Mary A. died at the age of thirteen years; Elizabeth m. Augustus Schuster; Richard B.; John, deceased; and Sarah A. m. Ezra Wentzel.

Richard B. Raudenbush attended the schools of Berks county, and as a boy worked on his father's farm, which he has operated since his parents' death. This farm, which is one of the finest in Cumru township, is situated on the Pennsylvania railroad, which company purchased three and seven-tenths acres of his land, on which to lay tracks to enter Reading. He has a fine herd of cows, and his milk finds a ready market in the city of Reading. Mr. Raudenbush's farm commands an excellent view of the Schuylkill river and the mountains.

Mr. Raudenbush married Elizabeth A., daughter of Isaac Schlichter, of Reading, and to this union have been born five children: Sarah A. m. Levi Ettinger, of Cumru township; Joseph S. and Franklin S. are at home; Annie E. m. Samuel Merkel; Matilda I. is at home. Mr. Raudenbush is a member of Yocom's Reformed Church. In 1893 he was made a Mason in Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M., and he also belongs to Reading Chapter, No. 237.

HARRY C. SHAABER, manager of the Chantrell Hardware & Tool Co., was born at Reading, July 24, 1870, educated in the local schools and was graduated from the high-school with the class of 1887. Two days after his graduation, he secured employment as a clerk in the hardware establishment of Bright & Lerch, and he continued in their employment until 1896, gradually advancing from clerk to chief bookkeeper and then treasurer, which last responsible position he filled for four years. He then became the chief book-keeper of the Penn Hardware Company, and remained with this company until 1902, when he took charge of the sales department of the Chantrell Hardware & Tool Company. After filling this position for one year, the company appointed him manager of its large and growing establishment, which position he has since filled in a most satisfactory manner.

In 1896, Mr. Shaaber was married to Emma F. Moyer, daughter of Matthias Moyer, a prominent dealer in leather and shoe findings and manufacturer of building brick at Reading for many years; and they have two sons: Matthias and Harry.

Mr. Shaaber's father is Adam Johnson Shaaber, who was born at Reading and learned the trade of blacksmith which he followed for thirty years, having been connected with the Reading Industrial Works from 1872 to 1902. Since 1903, he has had supervision of one of the departments of the Chantrell Hardware & Tool Company. He was married to Sallie E. Maicks, daughter of Christopher and Lavina (Wunder) Maicks of Reading; and they had three children: Harry; May (married to Percy G. Horine, who died in 1906); and Charles (married to Anna Moyer). His wife died in 1896, aged 47 years.

Mr. Shaaber's grandfather was John C. Shaaber, a blacksmith, employed for many years in the foundry of Adam Johnson & Son. He was married to Elizabeth Shissler, who died in 1905, aged seventy-six years (daughter of Andrew Shissler, of Heidelberg township, in Lehigh county), and they had five children: Mahlon (married to Mary Hooker); Adam; Maria (single); Ellen (married to L. Frank Knerr); John (married to Ida M. Brown). He died in 1891, aged seventy-one years. He identified himself with the Republican party from its rise in the country and supported it earnestly until his death.

His great-grandfather was John Shaaber, also of Reading, who died in 1839, aged 50 years. He was married to Mary Caldwell, daughter of Newland Caldwell, a prominent family of Lancaster county, by whom he had twelve children. He was a son of Andrew Schaber (who was married to Elizabeth Sauerbier of Reading); and a grandson of Andrew Schaber, who emigrated from Germany in 1754 and settled in Reading shortly afterward, by which it appears that this family has been identified with Reading for 150 years.

DANIEL R. WANNER, a highly esteemed resident of Reading, Pa., who for the past fifteen years has been a caretaker at the Charles Evans cemetery, belongs to one of the best known families of the city. Mr. Wanner was born Oct. 21, 1843, at Temple, Maiden-creek township, Berks county, son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Rothermel) Wanner.

Daniel Wanner, a respected citizen of Spring township, followed agricultural pursuits in that locality all of his life. He died in 1888, at the age of seventy-two years, and his burial took place at Sinking Spring. His wife died in 1894, at the age of seventy-five years, and she was laid to rest beside her husband. They had these children: John, Sarah, Jacob, Daniel R., Catherine (deceased), William R., Frank R., Emma, Mary and George R. The family all belong to the Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Wanner was a Democrat.

Daniel R. Wanner was educated in the schools of Maiden-creek township, and was reared on the home farm where he continued for several years after his majority. For the past fifteen years he has been caretaker at the Charles Evans cemetery. He is a highly respected citizen, and one whose duties in life have always been performed according to the best of his ability.

Mr. Wanner married Abalonia Kissinger, daughter of Abraham and Abalonia (Hill) Kissinger, a history of whom appears elsewhere. Mr. and Mrs. Wanner have four children: Abram K. m. Caroline Hartman, daughter of Absalom and Caroline Hartman, and has one child, Arthur; Elizabeth Alice m. Daniel Irvin Dunkleberger (of Riverside, an employe at the Philadelphia & Reading shops, and member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.), and has four children—Ralph, Irene, William and Paul; Anna L. m. David A. Lamm (of Riverside, an employe of Swift & Co., at Reading, and member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.); and one child died young. Mr. and Mrs. Wanner are members of the Reformed Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

ELIAS ROTHERMEL KEMMERER—engaged in the real estate and insurance business at Reading since 1896—was born September 7, 1859, in Maiden-creek township, Berks county, on the Kemmerer homestead near South-Evansville. He was educated in the local schools, Keystone State Normal School, and Reading Business College, during this time assisting his father on the farm and teaching public school in the township for eight years until 1888. In that year he engaged in the general mercantile business in the township and carried it on until 1894, when he removed to Reading.

In 1896, Mr. Kemmerer formed a co-partnership with Prof. William M. Zechman (who had been the county superintendent of the public schools of Berks county from 1890 to 1896) for the purpose of engaging in the business of buying and selling real estate and of placing fire insurance, and since then they have traded very successfully under the name of Kemmerer & Zechman at No. 27 North Sixth street.

In 1906, the firm associated with William C. Burkey and Edward D. Trexler under the name of Burkey & Kemmerer and as such they erected and sold a number of dwelling-houses at Reading; and in 1909 they associated with William E. Fisher and William R. Kemmerer, under the name of Kemmerer & Company, and are erecting and disposing of dwelling houses and lots in North Reading, their enterprise contributing much towards the improvement of that section of the city.

Mr. Kemmerer officiated as the mercantile appraiser of Berks county for the year 1892 by appointment of the county commissioners. He is a member of Isaac Hiester Lodge, F. & A. M., No. 660.

In 1888, Mr. Kemmerer was married to Rebecca Shoemaker Reber, daughter of Thomas Reber, farmer of Perry township, near Shoemakersville.

His father was Elias Kemmerer, who was born in Tulpehocken (now Marion) township, near Stouchsburg, in 1827, and when a small boy his parents removed to Maiden-creek township, locating on a farm near South Evansville which they had bought; where he was brought up to farming and which he followed until 1887, afterward living retired until his decease in 1902. He was married to Sarah Rothermel, daughter of Lorenzo Rothermel of Hamburg, and they had six children: Elias R.; William R. (married Ida A. Zellers); and Abbie (married D. Sassaman Keim now operating the homestead farm owned by Elias R.); and three children who died in infancy.

Mr. Kemmerer's grandfather was John Kemmerer, farmer of Maiden-creek township. He was married to Magdalena Reedy of Tulpehocken township and they had nine children: Elias; Daniel; Elvina (married Charles Hinkel), Maria (married John Saul and after his decease George Hess), and Caroline (married James Stoudt), four having died in infancy. He died in 1882, aged 80 years, and his wife in 1886, aged 90 years.

His great-grand-father was Ludwig Kämmerer, a farmer of Alsace township, where he was born in 1765. He died in 1824, and his remains were buried in the old cemetery of Spies's Church, near the south entrance. He was married to Anna Maria Adam, and they had eight children: Peter; Samuel; John; Henry; William; Solomon; Catharine (married Abraham Schwavely), and Mollie (married William Schwavely, brother of Abraham). It is supposed that Ludwig was a son of John Ludwig Kämmerer, who emigrated from Germany in 1736, when twenty-one years of age, and landed at Philadelphia where he was qualified by taking the oath of allegiance September 1, and then proceeded up the Schuylkill Valley, settling in Alsace township.

JOHN R. MAST, the Court-crier and Custodian of the Law Library of Berks county, and member of Select Council from the Third ward, Reading, is a native of Reading, and was born Sept. 21, 1853, son of George and Elizabeth (Reifsnyder) Mast.

Mr. Mast was educated in the public schools of the city of Reading, and is a graduate of the Reading High School; later he attended the Reading Academy and Business College. At the age of eighteen years he became a clerk in the hardware store of McGowan & Miltimore, who conducted business at Sixth and Penn streets, where the store of Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart is now located. When the hardware firm of J. L. Stichter & Son were burned out, and the business of McGowan & Miltimore and J. L. Stichter & Son were merged into one large concern, Mr. Mast continued in their employment for a number of years. On Dec. 2, 1879, Mr. Mast was married to Minnie H. Hillegass, a daughter of Jacob S. Hillegass, of Reading. Mr. Mast then engaged in the wholesale manufacture of tobacco, at No. 728 Penn street—later he was successful in the cigar manufacturing business at Nos. 746-748 Cherry street, employing from 60 to 75 people, and having a trade covering the greater part of the United States. On account of impaired health Mr. Mast disposed of the business and on July 1, 1902, was appointed Court Crier and Custodian of the Law Library by the judges of the court of common pleas of Berks county— which post he fills with marked ability at this time. Mr. Mast is a most affable gentleman and is widely known in the city of Reading and throughout Berks county. "Mr. Mast," said a visiting attorney recently, "is the Ward McAllister of officialdom." His uniform courtesy has made him friends among all classes of people.

Mr. Mast has always taken an active part in public affairs, and he has served the Third ward in select council three successive terms of four years each. During his term as select councilman he was regarded as one of the most capable members of that body. His reputation is beyond reproach. In politics he is a Democrat. Party fealty, however, has never biased him. As an active member of the party, he has been chosen to numerous conventions and has been called into the highest councils of his party. Prior to his appointment to his present position he never held an office of emolument. In conjunction with his civic duties Mr. Mast has always displayed a keen interest in the P. O. S. of A.; that body in appreciation of his services has elected him to the high office of state president of the State Organization. Mr. Mast is a member of the Masonic Order, and belongs to St. John Lodge, No. 435, Reading.

He has been a member of Trinity Lutheran Church since boyhood.

George Mast, father of John R., passed most of his life in Reading, where he died at the age of eighty-four years. He is buried in the family lot in the Charles Evans cemetery. He was a carpenter by occupation. His wife, Elizabeth (Reifsnyder), of Chester county, Pa., preceded him in death about ten years. They had a family of four children, two of whom died in infancy, the other two being John R. and Sallie, the latter the widow of H. E. Reifsnyder and residing at Reading.

John Mast, grandfather of John R., was born in August, 1786, in Wurtemberg, Germany, and when a boy was apprenticed to learn the carpenter's trade, which he mastered thoroughly, in accordance with the strict ideas of his native land. Like many other young men of the day, he emigrated to America in order to escape being drafted for service in the Napoleonic wars, and he arrived in Berks county in 1812. Here he first hired out to help on the farm of William Bieber, in Oley township. However, he became well and favorably known in the pursuit of his trade, and many of the older large barns in Oley township to-day bear good evidence of his honest work. He was often employed by Gen. Daniel Udree at the Oley furnace, and by Daniel Young at the Rockland forges, doing such carpenter work as was needed at those places. Strong, honest and industrious, he was a good citizen and prospered well. He bought a small farm from Daniel Young, and cultivated it thoroughly and with true German thrift. He lived to his ninety-ninth year, making his home at Dryville, and is buried at Mertz' Church, in Rockland township. His wife, whose maiden name was Smith, died about ten years previously. They were the parents of nine children, three of the sons being Daniel, George and John.

HENRY P. KEISER. Among the members of the bar of Berks county there is none who has forged to the front more rapidly or more successfully than Henry P. Keiser. Largely the architect of his own fortune, having been dependent in a great measure upon his own efforts, he had the advantage of being associated early in his career with one of the ablest attorneys of Reading—the late J. Howard Jacobs.

Born in the borough of Womelsdorf, Berks county, January 5, 1860, the son of John G. and Rebecca M. Keiser, his early life was spent in the vicinity of his birthplace. He was educated in the public schools of the borough, and later in the Womelsdorf Academy, an institution which in its day ranked high in advanced educational methods.

After the death of Prof. John S. Krumbine, the principal of the school, Mr. Keiser taught in the public schools of Womelsdorf from 1877 to 1881. Being but seventeen years of age when he entered the schoolroom as a teacher he had pupils in the higher classes who were of his own age and he fully met the requirements of the School Board and the patrons of the school.

While teaching he prepared himself for his future career as a lawyer, and in 1879 he was registered as a student-at-law with J. Howard Jacobs. The latter had been for a number of years a leading practitioner in the courts of Berks county, and as a criminal lawyer had but few equals. It was among Mr. Keiser's duties, before his admission to the bar, to attend to all the matters usually looked after by a lawyer's clerk, and the training that he thus received developed those methodical habits, and thorough mastering of detail, that have stood him so well in his career at the bar. Mr. Keiser was admitted to practice in the several Berks county courts in November, 1883, and after his admission, Mr. Jacobs invited him to remain in his office. Some years afterwards the firm of Jacobs & Keiser was established, and resulted in a very active and profitable business, which continued until the decease of Mr. Jacobs in 1902. Since that year Mr. Keiser has been practicing alone.

In May, 1908, Mr. Keiser was elected by councils to the very important office of city solicitor for the term of three years. From the very beginning he grasped the intricate details of that office, as one well-versed in municipal affairs, and has been called to render opinions in some very important matters of city legislation, affecting vitally the interests of the tax payers. He has also successfully defended some heavy suits against the city, one of which, for the collection of retained percentages brought by a company which had a street-paving contract, resulted in a saving to the municipality of many thousands of dollars.

In the multiplicity of his professional duties, Mr. Keiser has had time to devote to politics, and being an enthusiastic Republican he has always taken a great interest in county, state and national political affairs. He has been a delegate to different conventions, and invariably took a leading part in each. While thus looking after the welfare of his party, and safely conserving the interests of the city in his official position, he has ever been able to keep in touch with the general practice of his profession.

In 1887, Mr. Keiser was made a Free-Mason in Williamson Lodge, No. 307, Reading; and two years later he became a Knight Templar in Reading Commandery, No. 42. He is also a member of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. of M. S.

On May 6, 1882, Mr. Keiser was married to Valeria A. Kintzer, a daughter of Isaac Y. Kintzer, who served as a justice of the peace in Womelsdorf for many years. From 1895 to 1897, Mr. Kintzer was Warden of the Berks county Prison, an office which he fulfilled with great fidelity. After his retirement from that office he engaged in the grocery business in Reading, in which he continued until his demise.

John G. Keiser, the father of Henry P., was a prominent dealer in horses, having stables at Womelsdorf and in Reading. Peter Keiser, the grandfather of Henry P., was a farmer in Tulpehocken township, where his ancestors were among the first settlers in that section of Berks county. They came from the Palatinate. The maiden name of Henry P. Keiser's mother was Fidler, and her family is also a very old and honorable one in the annals of Berks county.

Henry P. and Valeria A. Keiser have a daughter, Edith R., who was a member of the class of 1906, Wellesley College. The family are members of Trinity Lutheran church. Their home is on Mineral Spring Road.

WILLIAM ROTHERMEL KEMMERER, engaged in the real estate business and register of wills of Berks county from 1903 to 1906, was born Dec. 19, 1864, in Maiden-creek township, on the Kemmerer homestead near South Evansville. He was reared on this farm and received his education in the public and private schools, until he was twenty years of age, when he decided to engage in the mercantile business. He first entered the large general store of H. K. Miller at Shoemakersville as a clerk, and after remaining there for some time went to the general store of H. H. Kline at Molltown and was later employed as salesman in the dry-goods store of Levan & Shade, No. 441 Penn Square, Reading, which adjoined the Farmers' National Bank on the west. He took charge of the departments which included the domestic and colored dress goods, and remained with this firm until 1889 when he embarked in the mercantile business for himself, first at Reading and afterward at Birdsboro. He continued in the business until 1895, when he became the traveling salesman of L. H. Park & Company, importers and jobbers of coffee, tea and spices, at Philadelphia.

Mr. Kemmerer remained with that firm until January, 1900, when he resigned to accept the position of chief clerk in the office of the county commissioners, to which he was appointed for three years. While filling this responsible post his urbanity and ability made him so popular that the leaders of the Democratic party selected him as the organization candidate for the office of Register of Wills, to which he was elected in November, 1902. He filled the position satisfactorily from January, 1903, to January, 1906, having been the first to occupy this office as a salaried official. He then acted as assistant floor-manager of the big department store of Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart until May, 1907, when he was obliged to resign the position on account of ill-health. After that he was engaged in the real estate business for himself until January, 1909, having erected and sold a row of dwelling houses on North Sixth street, opposite the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company shops. He has since become associated with his brother Elias R. Kemmerer, William M. Zechman and William E. Fisher, trading under the name of Kemmerer & Company, an enterprise having for its aim the development of the extreme northwestern section of Reading.

Mr. Kemmerer has been a devoted member of the Democratic party since he became of age. He served as a delegate to numerous county and state conventions, acting frequently as one of the secretaries, and he was a representative on the standing county committee for seven years. He has identified himself prominently with different secret and beneficial societies. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity a number of years, being a past-master of Union Lodge, No. 479, F. and A. M., and upon the institution of Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, was demitted to become one of its charter members. He is also a member of Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M., and of Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; also of the Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14°, of the Philadelphia Consistory, 32°, A. A. S. R., and of the Rajah Temple of the Mystic Shrine.

In the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Mr. Kemmerer took an active part as a member of Neversink Lodge, No. 514, of which he is a past officer, serving as the past-grand on the degree staff for a number of years, and also as a representative to different state conventions. And in the Patriotic Order, Sons of America, he is a member of Washington Camp No. 417, which he has represented at a number of county and state conventions. These positions evidence his activity as a member of the societies mentioned, and witness the appreciation of his devotion and ability by his fellow members.

In 1885, Mr. Kemmerer was married to Ida A. Zellers, daughter of John and Catharine (Kraemer) Zellers, of Maiden-creek township; they have a daughter, Hermie May, who was graduated from the Birdsboro High School and the Reading Classical Academy, and also from the musical department of the Schuylkill Seminary. Mr. Kemmerer and his family are devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the Holy Cross.

For the genealogical antecedents of Mr. Kemmerer, see sketch of his elder brother, Elias R. Kemmerer, in this publication.

DR. FRANK LEWIS DE GOUR, dentist, residing in Reading since 1874, was born Dec. 3, 1837, in Philadelphia, and is the son of Lewis De Gour.

Dr. De Gour's grandfather emigrated from France about 1815.

Lewis De Gour was a carpenter and stair-builder of Philadelphia, and died in 1839 at the age of twenty-seven years. He married Amanda M. Fleming, of Brandywine, Pa., and their children were: George, of Philadelphia (married Amanda Winder), Frank L., and Ambrose, of Philadelphia (married Hannah B. Smith).

Frank Lewis De Gour was educated in the local schools and later attended the Pennsylvania College of Dental Surgery, where he graduated in 1870. He began the practice of his profession in Wilkesbarre, Pa., and remained there for three years, at the end of which time he located at Reading, where he has been practicing in his present office, No. 11 North Fourth street, for twenty-one years.

Dr. De Gour enlisted in the Civil war for three years at Philadelphia Aug. 10, 1861, in Company L, Seventy-second Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, Infantry, commonly known as the Colonel Baxter zouaves. He participated in the numerous engagements and skirmishes of that famous regiment, and with many other soldiers, was taken prisoner at Fair Oaks, Va., in July, 1862. After remaining in prison for twenty days he was paroled on account of an attack of typhoid fever, and later, for physical disability, was honorably discharged. In July, 1863, he enlisted in the Pennsylvania Independent Cavalry Company, which performed military services in Schuylkill county, for three services. Since 1876 he has been a member of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., at Reading. He has a fine collection of G. A. R. medals and of trophies of war, from different battle fields, especially of the great battle of Gettysburg.

In 1872 Dr. De Gour married Emma S. Hahn, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Fies) Hahn, of Reading, and their children are: Harry F. (married Justina Young); William C.; and Amanda (who died young).

Mrs. De Gour's father was a lineal descendant of Henry Hahn, who was one of the first property holders of Reading.

CHRISTOPHER HIGH SHEARER, a landscape painter of national reputation, whose artistic creations are in numerous prominent homes in Pennsylvania and other states of America, was born at Reading, May 18, 1846. After receiving a general education in the local schools he manifested an inclination for the study of art, which resulted in frequent visits to the studios of F. D. Devlan and J. Heyl Raser. Upon one occasion, whilst in the studio of the latter, watching the development of a landscape on the easel, he remarked innocently to Mr. Raser, "I believe I can paint," when the artist looked up and replied pleasantly, "Yes, a man can do anything if he tries." The ambitious boy tried and the result of his first endeavor was so satisfactory that he was encouraged to continue. He persevered in his studies and in ten years, when twenty-seven years of age, produced a picture which attracted great public attention and won the favorable opinion of art critics. It was a large woodland scene which he entitled "Schwartzbach" and it found a place in the art gallery of a prominent manufacturer and banker at Reading, Henry S. Eckert. Shortly afterward Mr. Shearer went to Europe to pursue his studies in the great art schools of Dusseldorf and Munich and remained there several years. He also visited the principal art galleries of Germany. Upon his return he painted a number of foreign subjects, one of which was an admirable picture of the Bavarian Alps and was given a place of honor in the Academy of Fine Arts at Philadelphia. In 1878, he went again to Dusseldorf and spent a year in that city. Later he visited Paris and studied French art for a time.

Of the many remarkable productions from his prolific brush during the past thirty years, which give abundant evidence of his creative genius, the "Smoky Range" (1889) in the Reading Free Library, is admittedly one of his best, as well as one of his largest, paintings.

Mr. Shearer is also a naturalist, and his large and superior collection of butterflies, numbering 35,000, both in their natural state, and as painted by him in the various stages of development from the egg on the leaf to the "full-blown" butterfly, prove him to be a persevering student of nature.

For some years Mr. Shearer has cultivated a farm in Muhlenberg township, along the east bank of the Schuylkill river, near Stoudt's Ferry Bridge, and has manufactured considerable quantities of grape wine as a diversion from his art work. Another pastime is the study of music, and he is a pleasing performer on the violin.

Mr. Shearer's father is Christopher Shearer, now over ninety years of age, and who was a large fruit grower for many years in Muhlenberg township, near Tuckerton. His grandather was Jonathan Shearer, fruit-grower and builder, of Reading, who was a son of John Christopher Schearer, a Revolutionary soldier in the company of Captain John Diehl, and a justice of the peace at Reading from 1813 until his decease in 1830.

BERGER. The Bergers of Berks county, a family which has numerous representatives among the most creditable citizens of this section, have been located here since the arrival of the emigrant ancestor, several generations back.

(I) Herber Berger came to this country from Germany in company with his brother, and settled in the upper end of Berks county, among the Blue Mountains. The brother died unmarried, and both are buried at the Blue Mountain Church.

(II) Jonathan Berger, son of Herber, was born June 24, 1769. He lived in Bern township, now Upper Bern, where he owned about two hundred acres of land, part of this farm being now in the possession of Orlando F. Berger, his great-grandson. He married Catharine Kauffman, and both are buried at St. Michael's Church, in Tilden township. They had children: Solomon, John, William, Benneville, George, Mrs. Marberger and Mrs. William Wagner.

(III) John Berger, son of Jonathan, was born April 16, 1798. He married Magdalina Rentschler. He was a farmer in Bern township, now Upper Bern, owning the old Berger homestead, of about two hundred acres of land, after the death of his father. For a number of years, in addition to agriculture, he owned and conducted a large clover hulling mill, located in the German valley, in Upper Bern township. This is now owned by his grandson, Orlando F. Berger. John Berger, who died April 17, 1878, and his wife are buried at St. Michael's Church. They had children as follows: Samuel, George, Daniel, Benjamin, Jacob, and Sallie (m. Peter Roth).

(IV) Samuel Berger, son of John, born Jan. 17, 1825, died Oct. 1, 1895, and is buried at St. Michael's Church. He was a farmer, having land in Upper Bern township. He married Elizabeth Folk, daughter of John Folk.

(V) Orlando F. Berger, only child of Samuel, is one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of his section of Berks county. As a public school teacher for many terms he became well known and influential among the residents of Upper Bern generally, and in his present position of county surveyor, which he has held since 1903, he has widened his circle of friends and acquaintances until they can be found in all portions of the county. Mr. Berger was born Dec. 7, 1853, in Upper Tulpehocken township. He received his early education in the township schools, and later attended the Keystone State Normal, at Kutztown, after which preparation he engaged in teaching, following that profession for twenty terms in all, one in Richmond township, one in West Leesport, and eighteen in Upper Bern township. His influence as a man of high intelligence and fine moral standards upon his young charges will be felt for many years to come.

When he abandoned teaching Mr. Berger bought the old historic Shartle farm, owned and worked for over a century by the Shartle family (the first being Captain Jacob Shartle, who served as captain during the Revolutionary war), and engaged in farming, and he has shown himself as enterprising and capable in this vocation as in his other undertakings. He has never lost his interest in his old profession or in anything of interest to the general welfare of a community. In 1883 Mr. Berger began surveying, at which he has engaged ever since, and in the year 1903 he was elected county surveyor, being honored with re-election to that office in 1906. He has also served five years as justice of the peace of his township. In politics he is a Democrat.

Mr. Berger is active in fraternal work and identified with several local lodges, being a member of Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M.; of the P. O. S. of A., the K. O. T. M. and the I. O. O. F. He is a member of and prominent worker in St. Michael's Lutheran Church, which he served many years as deacon, and is still superintendent of the Sunday-school, an office he has filled for twenty-five years.

On May 3, 1873, Mr. Berger married Mary Ann Clauser, daughter of Harrison and Rebecca (Snyder) Clauser, and they are the parents of seven children: Austin L. is in the Philippine Islands, where he is superintendent of fourteen schools in the Province of Leyte; Samuel A., born in 1876, who farms the old Shartle homestead owned by his father, married Sallie Stoudt, daughter of Reiley Stoudt, and they have had seven children, Floyd C., Helen L., William H., Herma L., John A., Ralph A., and Orlando, the two last named deceased; Elizabeth M. is a graduate of the Normal School at Kutztown and at present a teacher in New Jersey; John S. lives at home; Robert is a veterinarian; Herbert Cleveland and Mary A. R. are at home.

(III) William Berger, son of Jonathan, was born July 30, 1811, in Bern (now Upper Bern) township, Berks county, and was a farmer by occupation. He died June 13, 1888, aged seventy-six years, ten months, thirteen days. He married Annie Dundore, and their children were: Aaron H., J. Reiley, William, Adam, Ellenora, Emma, Lydia and Annie.

(IV) J. Reiley Berger, son of William, born May 13, 1847, died Dec. 9, 1889, aged forty-two years, eight months, twenty-seven days, and is buried at the Zion's (or Blue Mountain) Church in Upper Tulpehocken township. He was a farmer by vocation, and became one of the well known residents of his district. Mr. Berger married Mrs. Rebecca S. (Wilhelm) Berger, and to this union were born four children, namely: Edward P., now deceased; James C.; George I., a resident of Philadelphia; and Albert F., of Detroit, Mich. By her first union, with Adam Berger, who died two years after their marriage, Mrs. Berger had a daughter, A. Kate, who is now the wife of Jacob W. Albright, of Upper Bern township. After the death of J. Reiley Berger his widow married Jacob H. Weibel, and they reside in Philadelphia.

(V) James C. Berger, son of J. Reiley, a young man of good standing in Upper Bern township, was born May 20, 1873, in Upper Tulpehocken township near Strausstown, Pa. He attended the public schools of Upper Tulpehocken township, and after leaving school was engaged at farm work assisting his parents until he reached the age of twenty-one years, after which he moved to where he now resides and has since been engaged in selling commercial fertilizers and in fruit growing and trucking. He has also taken part in the local civil government, having served three years as township auditor and three years as township assessor, of Upper Bern township. He is intelligent and industrious, and has the respect of all who know him. He is quite prominent in social organizations, particularly in the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M., of Hamburg, Pa.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, fourteenth degree, and Philadelphia Consistory, thirty-second degree, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading, Pa. He is also a member of Shartlesville Camp, No. 133, P. O. S. of A., and was district president of that order for two years; and is a prominent member of Tent No. 351, K. O. T. M., which was instituted Sept. 2, 1902, and whose interests he has promoted in every way (he has been record keeper since its organization). In religion he holds to the faith of the Reformed Church, holding membership in the Friedens Church, and he is active in Sunday-school work.

May 20, 1893, Mr. Berger married Miss Annie F. Wagner, only child of Moses H. Wagner, and their family consists of three children, Mary R., born Sept. 30, 1894; Clara M., b. March 10, 1899; and Helen A., b. Nov. 8, 1902. Mr. and Mrs. Berger make their home with Mrs. Berger's parents in Upper Bern township, near Shartlesville.

Moses H. Wagner, now living retired in Upper Bern township, was born in that township July 30, 1853, son of Elias Wagner and grandson of George Wagner. The latter lived in Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, and was a well-known farmer of his day. He is buried at St. Michael's Church. He and his wife had seven sons and two daughters, the sons being: Elias, George, William, Daniel, Samuel, Benjamin and Solomon.

Elias Wagner was a farmer in what is now Tilden township, and died June 19, 1903, aged eighty-three years, four months, twenty-four days, and is buried at St. Michael's Church. He married Fayetta Renno, and they became the parents of four children, of whom but one survives, Moses H. For his second wife Mr. Wagner married Mary Hagner, who died in 1906. No children were born to this union.

Moses H. Wagner engaged in farming until 1888, since when he has been retired. He still makes his home on his old place near Shartlesville, in Upper Bern township, and is one of the most respected citizens of that neighborhood. He married Mary A. Rentschler, daughter of John and Polly (Klopp) Rentschler, and a granddaughter of John Rentschler. Mr. and Mrs. Wagner had one daughter, Annie F., born Feb. 4, 1873, now the wife of James C. Berger.

(V) Edward P. Berger (deceased), son of J. Reiley Berger, was born Oct. 14, 1871, at Strausstown, Berks county, and died Nov. 9, 1900, aged twenty-nine years. He is buried at the Blue Mountain Church. Mr. Berger was a barber by trade, and followed that vocation at Strausstown, where he was a well known and respected young citizen. He was a member of the Reformed Church, taking an active part in its work, and socially held membership in the I. O. O. F. and P. O. S. of A. Mr. Berger married Sallie J. Spengler, who still lives at Strausstown, and they had one child, Clarence G., born Aug. 11, 1893, who died Nov. 10, 1901, aged seven years, two months, twenty-nine days.

Jacob E. Spengler, father of Mrs. Sallie J. Berger, was a son of George Spengler, who lived near Schaefferstown, Pa. Mr. Spengler followed farming in Upper Tulpehocken township, where he died Dec. 18, 1906, at the age of seventy years, six months, nineteen days. He is buried at the Blue Mountain Church. He married Lucetta Kantner, and to them were born two children, Annie Matilda and Sallie J., the former now deceased.

Mrs. Berger is a member of the Reformed Church and very active in both church and Sunday-school, at present teaching a class of thirteen girls from twelve to fifteen years old. She is also interested in lodge work, being a member of the Daughters of Rebekah and of the P. O. of A.

JOHN H. SNELL, senior member of the well-known firm of Snell & Meharg, of Hamburg, Pa., manufacturers of vertical and horizontal steam engines, was born July 2, 1849, in Earl township, Berks county, son of Jacob and Matilda (Glase) Snell.

The Snell family, which is of German extraction, had its origin in America in John Adam Snell, who emigrated from Germany, on the ship "Robert and Alice" of Dublin, Walter Goodman, commander, and landed at Philadelphia Sept. 11, 1738, there being 103 other male passengers on board.

John Snell, a descendant of John Adam and grandfather of John H., was a resident of Berks county for some years, and was a man of prominence and wealth. In 1787, 1795, 1796, 1807, 1808 and 1812 he purchased properties in Reading, where he then lived, but prior to 1816 he removed to New Haven township, Montgomery county.

Jacob Snell, son of John and father of John H., was born May 3, 1816, in New Hanover township, Montgomery county, and obtained a good education in the public schools of that vicinity. He removed to Friedensburg, Oley township, Berks county, where he engaged in the mercantile business for some time, but later went to Earlville, where he conducted a hotel and general merchandise store. He then engaged in the iron business, operating the Spring forge until 1851, when he was elected register of Berks county on the Democratic ticket. In this office he served very acceptably until 1854. At the beginning of his term of office he removed to Reading, continuing to reside there until his death. In 1851 Mr. Snell formed a partnership with Mr. Snyder, and they built the Keystone forge in Reading, manufacturing car axles and hooks, and continued same successfully for several years, after which Mr. Snell became associated as part owner with John H. Craig in operating the Keystone Rolling Mills, which connection continued until his death in 1893. This latter was an extensive enterprise, employing over two hundred men, and Mr. Snell's rare tact and business acumen made possible the success of the industry. He was identified with various other enterprises, being for a time president of the Schuylkill Valley Building Association.

The Snell family had always been adherents of the principles of the Democratic party, but Mr. Snell's aversion to the institution of slavery led him, during the Civil war, to become a Republican. He was a school controller of the city of Reading for several years, and did much to advance the cause of education. Mr. Snell was a man of high honor and unquestioned integrity. He and his family were consistent members of St. Peter's Methodist Episcopal Church. His fraternal connections were with Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M., and the I. O. O. F., also at Reading.

Jacob Snell married Matilda Glase, daughter of Peter and Mary (Addams) Glase, of Alsace township, who had the following children: Matilda, William, Benneville, Amelia, Levi, James and Rebecca. Several years after the death of Mrs. Mary (Addams) Glase Mr. Glase married (second) Catherine Weisner, by whom he had five children: Caroline, Annie, Jacob, Alfred and Peter. To Jacob Snell and wife were born: Annie M. m. Dr. William Blakeslee, a practising physician of Coatesville, Pa.; Louisa m. Daniel Heffelfinger, a tailor at Reading; Peter m. Lizzie Myers, of Lebanon, Pa.; Caroline m. Lemon Buch, a wholesale liquor merchant at Reading; John H.; Sallie A. m. George F. Meharg, partner of John H. Snell. Mrs. Snell, the mother of these children, was born June 6, 1822, and died Sept. 7, 1892. Jacob Snell died Dec. 7, 1893, aged seventy-seven years.

John H. Snell secured a good education in the public schools of Reading, the last school he attended being the Southwest ward grammar school, which he left at the age of fourteen years to learn the trade of draughtsman and machinist with Clark & Hunter. He remained with this firm for four years and did his first draughting for J. H. Sternbergh, when the latter established his business in Reading. His next employers were Mellert & Co., with whom he remained another period of four years, and then became a draughtsman with the Baldwin Locomotive Works at Philadelphia, but subsequently relinquished his position because of ill health. He was next employed by the Harrisburg Foundry & Machine Company, with whom he remained two years, when he took a Western tour. Upon returning to Reading he handled machines for Rick Brothers, and later for T. A. Willson, manufacturer of spectacles, until 1874, when he went to the Pacific coast by boat. He left New York City, going by way of the Isthmus of Panama, thence up to Tacoma, on Puget Sound, where he had charge of the machinery of a large sawmill until 1877. Upon returning to Reading he became foreman of the Mellert Foundry & Machine Co., for one year, when his fondness for travel prompted him to return to California, this time remaining for one year only. In 1880, in partnership, with his brother-in-law, George F. Meharg, under the firm name of Snell & Meharg, he commenced business in Reading, where they operated a machine shop with success until 1889, when their entire plant was moved to Hamburg, where they had previously erected a substantial brick building 40x200 feet. Here they manufacture a superior grade of vertical and horizontal steam engines that find a ready domestic and foreign market. The firm suffered a severe loss by fire in 1894, but immediately rebuilt, with two wing additions. About fifty men are employed, manufacturing upward of five hundred engines annually. Mr. Snell has charge of the mechanical affairs of the plant, while the business duties fall upon Mr. Meharg. Mr. Snell was one of the promoters of the Hamburg Electric Light Company, and he became president and superintendent. He is a member of the Board of Trade.

In 1878 Mr. Snell married Annie Francisco Siemon, born Nov. 19, 1861, at Reading, Berks county, Pa., daughter of Herman and Mary A. (Francis) Siemon, of Wurtemberg, Germany, whose other children were Sallie Siemon and Josephine Siemon. To Mr. and Mrs. Snell have been born the following children: Edison J., Clarence H., George L., John G., Marie M., Josephine, Madaline, Charles A., and Gertrude L. (born July 4, 1908. died July 27, 1908). Mr. Snell and his wife are members of Bethany Methodist Church at Hamburg. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and of Lodge No. 115, B. P. O. Elks, Reading, Pennsylvania.

EPHRAIM H. STITZEL, who died Sept. 30, 1907, had been from 1879 a valued employe in the machine shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, at Reading. He was born in Moselem, Berks county, March 12, 1851, son of Tysher and Sarah (Hoch) Stitzel, and nephew of the late Judge Stitzel, once one of the most prominent men in the county.

John Stitzel, his great-great-grandfather, came from Wurtemberg, Germany, to Philadelphia, in 1735. In 1753 he married Mary Ludwig.

George Stitzel, son of John, married Elizabeth Hoch, and died in 1844, aged eighty-nine years.

Henry Stitzel, son of George, was born Sept. 12, 1789, and died Oct. 25, 1835. To him and his wife, Elizabeth, were born children as follows: Morgan; Abaline; Tysher; Hannah M.; Mary Ann (born Aug. 3, 1820, married, Oct. 12, 1843, James M. Mathews), and Hon. George D. Henry Stitzel's second wife's name was Esther, and she bore him a son, John.

Tysher Stitzel, son of Henry, was a farmer all his life in Maiden-creek and Lower Heidelberg townships. He died at the age of sixty-nine years, and his wife at the age of sixty-five. In politics he was a Democrat. They were members of the Reformed Church. Their children were: Henry, deceased; Ellen, wife of Henry Ahrens, a retired farmer in Lower Heidelberg township; Mary, deceased, wife of William J. Lamb; Elmira, wife of Henry Oaks, of Wernersville, Pa.; William, living on the old Judge Stitzel farm; Ephraim H.; Annie M., wife of Christian Ludwig, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Emma, of Wernersville, Pennsylvania.

Ephraim H. Stitzel was educated in the public schools of his native township and at D. B. Brunner's Academy. He then taught school in Lower Heidelberg and Spring townships for several terms. After this he learned the baking business with his brother-in-law, Christian Ludwig, of Reading, which he followed two years, and later embarked on his own account on Schuylkill avenue, and Tenth and Elm streets, Reading, and was in business for four years, leaving it in 1879 to accept a position in the shops of the Reading Company, where he remained in the same department until his death. The most cordial relations existed between Mr. Stitzel and his employers, and his services were highly valued.

On Dec. 25, 1874, Mr. Stitzel was married to Sarah Ann Rollman, daughter of Josiah Rollman, of Spring township, Berks county, and they had children as follows: Magie M., who married Irvin K. Snyder, and resides at No. 350 Pear street, Reading; Laura and Bessie, both deceased; Emma R., who married Mr. William Bohn, and resides in Philadelphia, Pa.; and Alice S. A., who married Paul Yocom, a young business man of Reading. The family belong to Zion's Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Stitzel was independent. In fraternal connection he belonged to Camp No. 552, P. O. S. of A.; P. & R. Relief; Fraternity Castle, No. 302, K. G. E.; and Bohemond Commandery, No. 327, A. and I. O. K. of M. The family reside at No. 813 Elm street, Reading.

FREMONT W. FRANKHAUSER, M. D., a leading physician and surgeon of Reading, is a man naturally fitted for a prominent place among his fellow men, and one who has attracted the attention of Reading's citizens in several fields of activity.

The Frankhauser family was established in America before the Revolution, when three brothers, Peter, Christian and Henry, came to this country and settled in Pennsylvania, at first in Chester and later in Lancaster county. According to Rupp's thirty thousand names Michael Frankhauser arrived from Germany in 1751. In 1790 Federal Census reports him a resident of Brecknock township (now Berks county), and having five sons—one above sixteen, four under sixteen years of age—and four daughters. John Frankhauser, paternal grandfather of Dr. Fremont W., was a farmer, and save that he died at fifty-four, little can now be learned of his life. His children were: Harry; Benjamin; Peter; Christian; Richard; George; Isaac; Jacob; John; Fianna, deceased, who married the late Israel Cooper; and Ella, who married a Mr. Hoyt and lives in Philadelphia. The parents were members of the Evangelical Church and in politics John Frankhauser was a Whig.

John Frankhauser (2) was by trade a cooper and stone mason, but he also owned and operated a small farm. He died young, passing away when only thirty-six years old. He married Miss Maria Weaver, like himself a native of Lancaster county, and they had five children; Fremont W. is mentioned below. Anna married Daniel Beavens, and had eight children. Lot W. is a cigar manufacturer; he married Miss Annie Miller, and they have three children; Alger; Florence; and Earl. John, a physician, was graduated from the Medico-Chirurgical College, with the class of 1889, and is now practicing at Mohnton; he married Miss Ella Fritz, and their only child is named Agnew. Sherman W. lives at the old homestead. The family are Evangelical in faith, and the father was a Whig in politics, and a Republican when the Republican party was formed.

Fremont W. Frankhauser was born at Muddy Creek, Lancaster county, Oct. 27, 1856. He began his education in the county public schools but later attended an academy at Terre Hill. After leaving school he taught for five years, meantime reading medicine under Dr. Abraham Kissinger, of Bowmansville, for four years. When he was ready to enter a medical school, he chose the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, and was given his degree of M. D. there in 1880. He first began practicing in Mohnsville, but afterward removed to Springfield, Chester county, and remained there seven years. He next returned to Philadelphia for graduate work at the Medico-Chirurgical College and when he was graduated in 1888 he became resident physician in the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital.

Dr. Frankhauser finally settled in Reading and has ever since been identified with that city. He is a specialist in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat and has done special pathological work. An untiring reader, and keen student, he keeps well abreast of his chosen profession and is a leading spirit in several medical societies. He belongs to the Reading Medical Association, the Berks County Medical Society (of which he was president in 1900) and the State Medical Society, is a representative to the American Medical Association, is a member of the American Medical Association, and a member of its legislative committee.

Dr. Frankhauser has not forgotten his duties as a citizen in the demands of his profession and is at present (1906) serving as a member of the city council. He has the true interests of the city at heart and has done valuable work in the council. The Doctor is also well known in Masonic Circles and is past master of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., of Reading, being also a member of the Mystic Star Commandery, No. 47, K. T. He also belongs to the Knights of Friendship and the Royal Arcanum.

In 1880 Dr. Frankhauser was married to Miss Sarah R. Shirk, daughter of Rudolph Shirk, of Schoeneck, Lancaster county. They have two sons, Aithen and Herbert, and have lost one daughter, Olive May. Dr. Frankhauser and his wife have many warm friends and stand high in the community, where the Doctor's practice is a large one.

DUMN. One of the pioneer families of Berks county is that bearing the name Dumn. About 1754 there landed at Baltimore, one (I) Casper Dum, born about 1720 in the Rhine Valley, Germany. He sailed from Bremen, Germany, for America, and after he was here drifted to Hagerstown, Md., and from there into Richmond township, Berks Co., Pa., where he made his permanent home. He died in Richmond township, and was survived by three sons, Thomas, Valentine and Jacob.

(II) Thomas Dum, born 1752, eldest son of Casper, was but two years of age when the family landed in the New World. He accompanied his father to Berks county, and died in Richmond township, Oct. 23, 1830 (and is buried in the Catholic Cemetery there), survived by three children: Elizabeth, who married her cousin, Michael Dum; Thomas, Jr., born in Richmond township in 1800, who became a shoemaker and died in 1854; and Jacob, Jr. Three children died in infancy. Jacob Dum, a son of Thomas, Jr., left the east about eighty-five years ago, and settled in Ohio. He had thirteen children. The surviving grandchildren and great-grandchildren are at present living at Amanda, Lancaster and Circleville, Ohio.

(III) Jacob Dum, son of Thomas, married and became the father of thirteen children, namely: Annie; Sallie; Polly; Joseph (who had children—Emma, Betsy, William, Robert, Simon, Benjamin, and Joseph); Benjamin; Daniel; Jacob; Israel; Samuel (who had children—Israel, Thomas, Effie, Samuel, William and Homer); Hetty; Katie; Abbie and Betsy.

(II) Valentine Dum, son of Casper, was the baby when the family came to America. For many years he lived in Richmond and Albany townships, Berks county, where he farmed, but finally located near Pittsburg, Pa., where he died and left a family.

(II) Jacob Dum, son of Casper, was born in America, and passed all his life in Berks county. He was the father of two sons: Thomas, who died in infancy; and Michael.

(III) Michael Dum (or Dumn), son of Jacob, and grandson of the emigrant Casper, was born in Richmond township about 1793. By occupation he was a farmer and teamster, and lived with his large family near Moselem Springs. He married his cousin, Elizabeth Dum, mentioned above as daughter of Thomas Dum. Michael Dum died in 1840, the father of Elizabeth, Aaron, Samuel, Mary, Benneville, Willoughby, Annie and Levi.

(IV) Samuel Dum, third child and second son of Michael and Elizabeth Dum, was born in Richmond township in 1825. He was a practical miner, and for many years was engaged in the iron ore mines and in getting out sand, but in his later life he conducted hotels at Moselem Springs, Pricetown and Fleetwood. He served as justice of the peace of Ruscombmanor township and the borough of Fleetwood, and was a stanch worker in the Democratic party. His last years were spent in retirement in Fleetwood, where he died Feb. 17, 1901, in his seventy-seventh year. In 1848 he married Mary Ann Madeira, daughter of John Madeira, and their children were: James F., who died two years before his father, was one of the most prominent men in Berks county, having served many years as justice of the peace, and from 1888 to 1891 as recorder of deeds; Wilson M.; and Amos M.

(V) Wilson M. Dumn, son of Samuel and Mary Ann (Madeira), was born in Ruscombmanor township, March 8, 1861. His school days were few in number, and he began early to gain practical experience in the business world. His first venture was at Yellowhouse, where for six years he successfully conducted a general store. On April 1, 1889, he moved his family to Reading, and shortly afterward engaged in the shoe business, which he has since continued with success, his integrity and good judgment having won him recognition. From 1906 to 1909 he served as Register of Wills for Berks county. He resides with his family at No. 923 Washington street.

(VI) Clarence C. Dumn, son of Wilson M., was born in Richmond township, June 17, 1879, and came to Reading with his parents in 1889. He graduated from the Reading high school in 1898. For a number of years he was employed in the office of John Hendel's Sons' hat manufactory. In politics he is a firm believer in Democratic principles. He was nominated for alderman from the Eighth ward, after a hard five cornered fight, and was elected by a majority of votes. He resides at No. 923 Washington street, Reading.

(VI) J. Frank Dumn, second son of Wilson M., was born in Fleetwood, Pa., Aug. 13, 1881, and after coming to Reading with his parents in 1889 entered the public schools, and was graduated from the high school June 29, 1899. For some time he was employed in the Reading freight office of the Pennsylvania Railroad, but later entered his father's shoe store at No. 814 Penn street, and is still to be found there. He is identified with several secret societies.

(V) Amos M. Dumn, son of Samuel and Mary Ann (Madeira), was born in Fleetwood, Feb. 8, 1865, and there passed his boyhood days. For a number of years he taught school. He served as deputy recorder for a number of years and also as recorder for a short time by appointment. He was appointed to the auditor's office in the Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., a position he is now filling. He is married, and makes his home at No. 1236 Girard street, Washington, D. C.

(IV) Willoughby Dumn, fourth son of Michael and Elizabeth (Dum) Dum, was born in Richmond township in 1828. He lived nearly his entire lifetime in his native township. During his younger days he worked on farms, and later assisted his brother Samuel in mining. During the Civil war he enlisted in Company I, 151st Pa. V. I., under Col. George McFarlan, and took part with his regiment in the bloody conflict at Chancellorsville, May 2-3, 1863. They were then attached to Gen. Reynolds' command, and ordered to follow Lee, whom they overtook at Gettysburg, July 1, 1863, and immediately forced a battle. The regiment was almost wiped out of existence. They went into battle, twenty-one officers and four hundred and sixty-six men strong, and of these, two officers and sixty-six men were killed, twelve officers and one hundred and eighty-seven men were wounded, and one hundred were missing—an aggregate loss of three hundred and sixty-seven. "At Gettysburg," says General Doubleday, "they won, under the brave McFarlan, an imperishable fame." Mr. Dumn was honorably discharged July 27, 1863.

(IV) Benneville Dumn, twin brother of Willoughby, went to California in 1850 in the time of the great gold excitement, and was never again heard from.

(IV) Levi Dumn, youngest son and child of Michael and Elizabeth (Dum), was born in Richmond township, Aug. 31, 1832, and was only a lad of eight years when he was left an orphan. During his younger days he worked at farm labor, but later became manager of Maidencreek Furnace. He was also engaged in a mercantile business at Lenhartsville, and was also with his brothers Samuel and Willoughby in the mining business. He died Aug. 30, 1876. His children were: Sallie, deceased; Clara E., deceased; Frank E., deceased; Charles O.; Harry J.; and several that died in infancy.

(V) HARRY J. DUMN, son of Levi, was born at Lenhartsville March 10, 1865. He received his primary education in the public schools of Greenwich township, and the Fleetwood high school. After taking a course at the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, he taught for a time. Mr. Dumn comes of a family long interested and influential in the Democratic party, and long before he attained his majority he had rendered service to the party, having taken the stump in the fall of 1884—the first Cleveland campaign. He has served many years on the county standing committee, and is at present a member of the Democratic State Central Committee. On April 1, 1889, he entered the Recorder's office at Reading, and served as deputy recorder until Jan. 1, 1894, when he was appointed deputy clerk of Quarter Sessions under Clerk H. H. Holl, but Mr. Holl dying that same year, Mr. Dumn succeeded to the clerkship, first by appointment and afterward by election, serving with ability until Jan. 1, 1899. During this time he registered as a law student, and studied law under the direction of George W. Wagner, Esq., until Jan. 2, 1899, when he was admitted to practise in the several courts of Berks county, subsequently being admitted to practise before the Supreme and Superior courts of the State. Immediately upon his admission to the Bar he formed a partnership with Harry D. Schaeffer, Esq., present district attorney of Berks County, and they opened an office at No. 40 North Sixth street, where they have since practised under the firm name of Dumn & Schaeffer. Mr. Dumn is assistant district attorney under Mr. Schaeffer. He has been active in public affairs wherever the movement tended toward the benefit and progress of the community. He was solicitor for Mohnton borough and obtained the charter of incorporation. He has been active in the Board of Trade, and was the originator of the movement for Greater Reading. He was one of the incorporators and is a director and legal adviser of the Mohnton National Bank.

Fraternally Mr. Dumn is a prominent Mason, and has enjoyed a number of offices. He is a member of the Pennsylvania German Society and of the Berks County Historical Society.

Mr. Dumn married Miss Annie M. daughter of Thomas Moyer, and they have three children: Alma S., a graduate of the high school, class of 1909, and at present a student at Lasell Seminary, in Massachusetts; Miriam M. and Leslie Thomas. The family residence is at No. 136 North Eleventh street, Reading.

JACOB B. SCHOENER, son of William Schoener, who was prominent for a number of years as a justice of the peace, chief burgess and county official, was born at Reading in 1805. After being educated in the local schools, he directed his attention to painting and took special instruction in the Academy of Fine Arts of Philadelphia, directing his efforts in the line of miniature portraits. He went to Florida and Cuba where he won distinction, and afterward proceeded to New York and Boston where his work was highly appreciated. He became proficient in the use of the German, Spanish and Italian languages. He died at Boston in 1847.

WILLIAM MURRAY WEIDMAN, M. D., for almost forty years a practicing physician and surgeon of Reading, was located in that city from the close of his service in the Civil war until his death, Feb. 8, 1902. A man of notable intelligence and devotion to his life work, he achieved success and distinction in the profession of his choice, in which he was actively engaged to the end of his days. Dr. Weidman was born May 8, 1835, at Lebanon, Pa., and came of good old Colonial stock which has been settled in this part of Pennsylvania since 1733. The family is a numerous one, and the members of this branch have resided principally in Lancaster and Lebanon counties. The fact that the post office near the original homestead is called Durlach, which is also the name of a school in the vicinity, seems to show conclusively that the Weidmans came from Durlach, in Baden, Germany. In the "History of Lancaster County" we find that Mathias Weidman secured a warrant for 144½ acres of land May 3, 1733, but he died before obtaining his patent. Martin Weidman, evidently a son of Mathias, received a patent Oct. 6, 1733, from William Penn and his associates, for 385 acres in what is now Clay township, Lancaster county, paying therefor £59, 19s., 6d. In 1745 Martin Weidman apparently the same man had patented 387½ acres which had been surveyed for Faladine Miller in 1733. In 1757 he sold 172½ acres to Abraham Brubaker, and 214½ acres to his son, Jacob. It is not known whether the two tracts purchased by Martin Weidman adjoined, but the 385-acre tract constituted what was afterward called the Weidman homestead.

"There was also a Weidman saw and grist mill on Middle Creek, built in 1755 by Christopher Weidman, who owned it until 1811." Christopher moved to the neighborhood of New Holland, and his younger brother John kept the homestead. Christopher was a farmer, miller, and owner of Antietam Forge near Frederick City, and Antietam Battlefield on the Monocacy.

From Martin Weidman the ancestral line of Dr. W. Murray Weidman is traced through Martin's son Jacob and the latter's son Christopher. Christopher Weidman married a Miss Buchanan, a member of the same family as President James Buchanan, and their son, Lieutenant Adjutant John Weidman, was the Doctor's grandfather.

John Weidman was born in Warwick township, Lancaster county, June 4, 1756. He was in the Continental Army throughout the Revolutionary war, serving from 1776 to 1781, experiencing with his regiment the hardships of the winter of 1778 at Valley Forge and participating in the engagements at Trenton, Princeton, Monmouth, Brandywine, Germantown and various other points. He also took an active part in the expedition against the Indians under General Sullivan, in 1778, and in the Knox campaign on the Hudson in 1780. His regiment disbanding in 1787, because of its reduced numbers, he retired from the army altogether. He was an original member of the Order of the Cincinnati. At the close of the Revolution Lieutenant-Adjutant Weidman settled in Philadelphia, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits, but after his marriage he returned to his native county of Lancaster, where he followed surveying. He then spent ten years at Antietam Forge. The most important years of his active life were, however, spent in the town of Lebanon, whither he removed from Lancaster county, and where he continued to reside until his death. For many years he was one of the most prominent citizens of Lebanon county. In 1791 he purchased from Robert Coleman the Union Forge (Lickdale), at Lebanon, which he carried on for many years. He was also prominent in public life, being one of the associate judges of the county from 1821 until he passed away June 6, 1850. He was buried in Salem Lutheran cemetery. His wife was Catharine Mason, whom he married May 1, 1786.

Jacob Barge Weidman, son of Lieutenant-Adjutant John Weidman, was born May 12, 1789, in Philadelphia. He received an excellent literary education, attending the Latin school of General James Ross, at Lancaster, and later graduating from Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. He then took up the study of law, reading with Samuel Laird, at Harrisburg, and was admitted to the Bar in Dauphin county at the August term, 1813. Locating at Lebanon, he became identified with the best legal talent of the newly organized county, and for over forty years was one of its most eminent legal practitioners. He was contemporaneous with James Hopkins, Thomas Elder, George Fisher and James Buchanan. He was a member of the State Constitutional Convention in 1837-38. Jacob Barge Weidman was married three times, his first wife being Mary Murray, daughter of William Murray. His second union was with Mary Elizabeth Morris, of Philadelphia, and his third with Elizabeth Chambers Murray, a younger step-sister of his first wife. Mr. Weidman died March 5, 1857. Of his children, Rev. Dr. Jacob Weidman is a Presbyterian minister of Clifton Heights, N. J.; Barge Weidman is a resident of Pottsville, Pa.; Elizabeth is the wife of Adolph Dill, of Richmond, Va.; Miss Helen resides at Richmond, Va.; General John; Judge Mason, of Pottsville; Charles; Morris; and Dr. W. Murray Weidman, deceased. All except Gen. John Weidman were his children by his third wife, Elizabeth Chambers Murray.

General John Weidman, son of Jacob Barge Weidman and Mary Murray his first wife, died at a comparatively early age, but he was nevertheless one of the most prominent men in the State in his time. He received his literary education at Lebanon Academy, Dickinson College, Carlisle, and at Princeton University, and took the medical course at the University of Pennsylvania, from which institution he was graduated with the degree of M. D. But he afterward studied law, was admitted to the Bar of Lebanon county in 1842, and made a reputation as a legal practitioner and prominent political worker. He served one term as district attorney, 1859. He was active in the State Militia, in which he was a brigadier General before the Civil war, and upon the breaking out of that conflict he entered the Union army as captain of Company F, Fourth Cavalry, serving until broken health made his resignation necessary. He died shortly afterward April 23, 1863.

William Murray Weidman, son of Jacob Barge and Elizabeth Chambers (Murray) Weidman, was reared at Lebanon, and there obtained his early education in the Lebanon Academy. In 1851 he entered the preparatory department of Pennsylvania College, and the next year began his college course at that institution, from which he and his brother Jacob graduated together in 1856. Immediately thereafter Murray Weidman commenced the study of medicine in the office of Drs. J. W. and Cyrus D. Gloninger, at Lebanon. He took the medical course at the University of Pennsylvania, and received his degree in 1860. He was then appointed one of the resident physicians at the Philadelphia Hospital (Blockley), where he remained for nineteen months, after which he entered the Union army for service in the Civil war, becoming assistant surgeon of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry. Thence he was ordered to the Second Pennsylvania Cavalry, and on Oct. 1, 1862, was promoted to be a surgeon of that regiment with the rank of Major. On Dec. 28, 1863, he was captured near Occoquan, Va. His captor happened to be a connection of his future wife, a Dr. Randolph of Virginia. He was paroled the following day and was left in charge of the wounded. He was mustered out at the expiration of his term, Oct. 31, 1864, and from that time until his death practiced his profession in Reading. The year of his arrival in the city he was appointed surgeon of the Reading Railway Company. He built up an extensive general practice during his long career in Reading, but he was specially noted for his skill in surgery, and at the time of his death he was consulting surgeon of the State Asylum for the Chronic Insane at South Mountain, and of St. Luke's Hospital, South Bethlehem. His interest in the advancement of medical science led him into prominent connection with various organizations of the profession, the Reading Medical Society, the Berks County Medical Association, the Medical Society of Pennsylvania (of all which he served as president), the American Medical Association and the Academy of Medicine. It was largely owing to his efforts that the Reading Hospital became established, and he was called the Father of the Medical Library of Reading. He was a member of the Loyal Legion. Shortly before his death he was made president of the Berks county Alumni of the University of Pennsylvania. For many years he was one of the governors of the Men's Whist Club. During his college days he held membership in the Philomathian Literary Society and the Linnaean Scientific Association.

Dr. Weidman was naturally best known in his professional capacity, but he exhibited traits which convinced his friends and associates that he might have attained as great a measure of success in other lines. As a man he was universally respected and admired. He was one who made the most of the special opportunities a physician meets for benefiting his fellowmen, and his wisdom and intelligence enabled him to do much real good, which he accomplished in an unostentatious way. Dr. Weidman's conspicuous traits were cheerfulness, courage, and generosity. He was interested in the municipal welfare, and gave able service as city auditor from 1868 to 1872, this being the only office he ever held. He was President of the Board of Health many years. In religious matters he was connected with Christ Cathedral, of which he was a vestryman. On Feb. 23, 1865, Dr. Weidman was united in marriage to Mary May Keim, youngest daughter of the Hon. George May Keim, of a family prominent for generations in the social life of Reading. She preceded him to the grave, dying Jan. 18, 1900. Five children were born to this union. Those still living are: Julia Keim (wife of Dr. Grahame Dove Johnson, of Andover, Mass.), Bessie Murray and Marion Douglass; the deceased were Laura Farquhar and Helen Murray. The family residence is at No. 214 South Fifth Street, Reading, where Dr. Weidman died suddenly Feb. 8, 1902.

JAMES A. BENADE, a distinguished artist at Reading from 1840 to 1853, was the son of Dr. Andrew Benade, a Moravian Bishop at Bethlehem. He was born in 1823 and was educated in the schools of Bethlehem, having taken lessons under a noted Moravian artist named Grünewald for a time, and afterward continued his studies in Philadelphia. At the age of seventeen he located at Reading where his active mind and busy brush soon won a high place in the esteem and appreciation of cultured people. He painted many pictures possessing artistic excellence, but unfortunately he was stricken with paralysis in the midst of his encouraging prospects and died Feb. 2, 1853. He married Sarah Nagle Moers, of Reading, by whom he had four children: James, Henry, Esther and Sarah.

GEORGE FILBERT, a citizen of enterprise and public spirit, a man of high repute, successful and active in municipal affairs, plays an important part on life's stage. He makes his home in Womelsdorf, Berks county. Few men attain to a position equal in influence to that occupied by Mr. Filbert, and his retirement from business activities would be felt in many lines. He was born June 18, 1838, and is descended from substantial German ancestry, planted on American soil by Samuel Filbert.

(I) Samuel Filbert, at the age of twenty-seven, came to the New World on the ship "Samuel," Hugh Percy, Master, sailing from Rotterdam. Tradition says he came from either Wittenberg or Wurtemberg, Germany. He took the oath of allegiance Aug. 30, 1737. The original signature was Samuel, but the clerk who copied the rolls wrote it Daniel, thereby causing some confusion. Samuel Filbert's wife's name was Susanna. He died in 1786, and his second son, Philip, filed papers as administrator of the estate Nov. 2, 1786. His grave is in the center of the old North-Kill cemetery, but the inscription on his white marble tombstone (as are those over the graves of his son Thomas and grandson Samuel) is now illegible. To Samuel and Susanna Filbert were born six children, and the names and dates of birth and baptism of the last five are taken from the records of the Rev. John Casper Stover, who spells the name "Philbert" and gives the residence as "North-Kill." The children were: John Thomas (time and place of birth unknown); Maria Catharina, born Oct. 25, 1739, baptized Dec. 30, 1739, sponsors, Andreas Knaft and wife, m. Nov. 10, 1760, John Heinrich Ache; Anna Elizabetha, born Dec. 6, 1741, baptized Dec. 7, 1741, sponsor Anna Elizabeth Knaft, m. May 16, 1763, John Henry Webber, a captain in the Revolutionary war; John Philip, born Dec. 7, 1745, baptized Dec. 27, 1743, sponsors Philip Meeth and wife; John Peter, born Aug. 22, 1746, baptized Aug. 31, 1749, sponsors, Peter Muench (or Minnich) and wife Christina; and Maria Christina, born May 25, 1749, baptized May 28, 1749, sponsors Peter Muench (or Minnich) and wife Christina. The three sons having the first name John in common, dropped it and became known as Thomas, Philip and Peter.

Samuel Filbert and Godfried Fidler each gave an acre of ground to the old North-Kill Lutheran congregation at Bernville. This congregation was formed in 1730, and services were held in the different homes until 1743, when a log church was built on the part donated by Samuel Filbert. Each acre was in the form of a triangle, so that the two acres formed a square. On Dec. 25, 1745, each signed an agreement to deed to the trustees the acre in question, neither having as yet raised their patents from the proprietaries. Samuel Filbert deeded his in 1771. In 1791 the log church was replaced by a brick building, which Philip Filbert, son of Samuel, was instrumental in building, and in 1897 the present handsome brown stone edifice was erected. Back of the chancel in the new building is a beautiful stained glass window to "Samuel Filbert, Founder, 1743."

(II) Thomas Filbert, eldest son of Samuel, became the owner of the home farm. On May 16, 1763, he married Catharine Batteiger. Thomas died in 1784, and his will, probated Dec. 11, 1784, does not mention his children by name, but makes elaborate provision for his wife Catharine. They had a son Samuel, born May 16, 1764, and baptized May 20, 1764, for whom Samuel Filbert and his wife Susanna (grandparents) stood as sponsors. This Samuel is supposed to be the one of that name who died in Oley, and to whose wife, Maria, and son Samuel, administration papers were granted Jan. 14, 1818.

(II) Peter Filbert, youngest son of the emigrant Samuel, was a delegate from the first battalion of Berks county militia to the Convention held in Lancaster July 4, 1776, to elect three brigadier generals for the Pennsylvania and Delaware militia. In 1785 he was elected sheriff of Berks county. His will was probated Jan. 31, 1822, in Reading. His son and namesake, Peter, was an attorney, a member of the State Legislature and first mayor of Reading.

(II) Philip Filbert, second son and fourth child of Samuel and Susanna, born Dec. 7, 1743, was a captain in Weaver's battalion, and was mustered into service Dec. 3, 1777, for thirty days. On June 4, 1777, a commission was forwarded to Col. Jacob Morgan, by Timothy Matlack, secretary of the executive council, for the Sixth Battalion. Philip Filbert was commissioned captain of the Eighth Company. In 1778 he served as captain of the Sixth Battalion, and in 1780 he held a similar rank in the Second Battalion. He died Aug. 20, 1817. He married Anna Maria Myers, and his will, probated Oct. 17, 1817, provides for his wife Anna Maria; devises his farm in Heidelberg to his son John (grandfather of George of Womelsdorf); leaves a bequest to his grandson Peter, son of his deceased son Samuel; and mentions a daughter Catharine. The will also mentions Maria Magdalena, as a daughter of his wife. He is buried in Bernville.

(III) Samuel Filbert, eldest son of Philip and Anna Maria, married Sabilla (Sybella or Sibilla) Umbenhauer, daughter of Francis Umbenhauer, a captain in the Revolution, and died about 1795, his will being dated Dec. 13, 1794, and probated Jan. 7, 1795. This gives one-half of his estate to his wife Sabilla, and one-half to his sons, Joseph and Peter, and names his father, Philip Filbert, and his father-in-law, Francis Umbenhauer, executors and guardians of his sons. Philip Filbert, Jr. (supposedly a son of Thomas Filbert) is a witness to the will. Joseph, son of Samuel, died in 1803 or 1804, tradition says, from the kick of a horse.

(III) John Filbert, son of Philip, was born on the Filbert farm at North-Kill. He was a carpenter by trade, and became a very wealthy man, owning considerable land, and was widely known and prominent in public affairs. His genial disposition gathered to him many friends, young and old, and he heartily enjoyed a good smoke and cheerful company. He married Anna Maria Leiss, daughter of Heinrich Leiss. Their children were: John m. and had children, Amelia, John Franklin and Hiester W.; Samuel is mentioned below; Anna Maria m. John Groff, a farmer of Bernville; Elizabeth m. Daniel Sohn, of Heidelberg, steward of the County Home for twelve years (no issue); Gabriel m. Elizabeth Kinter, and among their children were Adam, John, Michael, Frank, Emma, Isaac, Maria and George; Elias m. Leah Kintzer, and had a daughter Isabella (m. to Dr. L. A. Livingood, and died in 1899); and Matilda m. Augustus Leiss, and had children, Amelia, Emma and Maria.

(IV) Samuel Filbert, son of John and father of George, was born in 1810, in Heidelberg township, now North Heidelberg, but formerly called North-Kill, on the farm owned by county controller, Dr. H. F. Livingood, and farmed for forty years by Nathaniel Blatt. He died in 1872, aged sixty-two years. He devoted himself to farming and was very successful. At the time of his death he was the owner of two farms, both now the property of his son George. His political support was given the Democratic party, and he was frequently the choice of the people for public office, holding at different times all the various township offices. From 1859 to 1862 he was a director of the poor for Berks county. He attended the Union Church at Womelsdorf, in which he was very active, and at one time served as trustee. His remains rest in the family plot in the cemetery there. He had an untarnished reputation for honesty and integrity, and he practised in his daily life the high principles of morality of the faith he professed. He married Catharine Kalbach, daughter of John Kalbach, and wife (whose maiden name was Ruth), of North Heidelberg township. To this marriage were born children as follows: John died aged sixty-seven years, leaving two sons, William and Samuel; William S., of Womelsdorf, had four children, John E., William D., Kate and Harry (deceased); Rebecca m. Edward Killmer, of Stouchsburg, and had two children, Emma and John; George; Sarah died in 1844; Maria m. Jonathan Dundore, and had two children, Charles and Kate; Amelia m. Albert Faust and had a son, William; Adam

M., of Lebanon had one son; Dr. Peter, of Pottsville, has five children.

(V) George Filbert, son of Samuel, and prominent in Marion township, obtained his education in the old log schoolhouse on Franklin street, Womelsdorf, where the teacher was an Englishman, Francil Wissel. After the free schools were established he attended them for a time. Later becoming a student in Stouchsburg Academy under Prof. Searl, he attended there for two sessions. Leaving school at the age of eighteen he assisted his father on the farm until past twenty, when he bought one-half interest in the store of Richard See and W. S. Filbert, in Womelsdorf. The firm name was changed to Filbert & Brother, and business was carried on with unvarying success for nineteen years. During this time they purchased the northeast corner of High and Second Streets, also adjoining property known as the Brown estate and Phillip Nepple's, and thereon they erected a two-story brick building. In 1877 the firm became W. S. Filbert & Son, and under that name was carried on until 1893. Then the two brothers, George and William S., traded properties, George obtaining the grain house and farm, and later the store and building. For business reasons the name of W. S. Filbert & Son was retained, and in 1905 George again began to run the store under his own name. The Filbert store was established in 1855, and has since been in the family name. It has a fine record for fair dealing, and first class stock. Mr. George Filbert did also conduct the Filbert grain house in partnership with his son, Martin S., under the firm name of George & M. S. Filbert. They had a large and profitable trade in grain, coal, lumber, seed, fertilizers, etc., and they also conducted the Laucks mill at Womelsdorf, which they purchased in 1891. To this mill is attached a large cider mill where hundreds of barrels of cider are annually made. Eighteen acres of land also belong to the mill. In addition to their other interests, Mr. Filbert and his son also deal in cattle, selling to the farmers, and they fatten from fifty to eighty head annually for the market.

Mr. Filbert owns 130 acres of good land at Filbert's Crossing, which he has stocked, and farms himself. He also owns two farms in Marion township, one of 165 acres and the other the old homestead of 175 acres, both of which are rented. On the 165-acre farm are three lime kilns where lime is burned for the neighboring farmers. He owns several dwelling houses in Womelsdorf, three at Filbert's Crossing, two double houses at Robesonia, besides other property, and 250 acres of woodland on South Mountain. In connection with their lumber business Mr. Filbert and his son manufacture upwards of 200,000 shingles each year. Mr. Filbert has given personal attention to the management of his various interests, but he has also had time to be active in any thing that tended toward the material growth of his town and county. He assisted in the organizing of the Womelsdorf Union Bank, but refused a directorate. His community is greatly indebted to him, and he has freely given his aid whenever desired. He is a clear headed, sensible business man, upright and just in his dealings, and one who has not only the respect, but also the friendship of his fellowmen.

Mr. George Filbert has been twice married. In 1858 he wedded Emma R. Scharff, daughter of Isaac and Rebecca (Leiss) Scharff. She died in 1872, the mother of four children: Samuel m. Sally Levy, and died leaving his widow with two children, Emma and Levy; Martin S.; Rebecca m. A. P. Warner, of Philadelphia, private secretary and manager of the Continental Brewing Company; and George W., a dentist of Womelsdorf, m. Lizzie Filbert. Mr. Filbert m. (second) Etta M. Brobst, daughter of Dr. Edward Brobst, of West Leesport, Pa., and to this union have come two children, namely: Robert B., who at the age of sixteen is six feet tall, is studying electrical engineering at the State College; and Marguerite L. is also in school. Mr. Filbert and his family are Lutherans, attending Zion Union Church, where he at one time sang in the choir.

(VI) Martin S. Filbert, son of George, and now prominent in the business world of the county, was born Nov. 1, 1865. His education was acquired in the Womelsdorf high school, Albright college at Myerstown, and the Millersville State Normal. For one year after leaving school he clerked for his father, becoming familiar with the customs of the business world. Then at the end of that time the partnership was formed with his father, under the name of George & M. S. Filbert, and together they engaged in the grain, coal, lumber and feed business, and this continued until 1906, when Martin S., bought out his father's interest, and he has since conducted it alone. His warehouse is located along the Lebanon Valley Railway, and he employs ten men. He has already demonstrated that he has inherited the business acumen of his father, and is meeting with the success that attends honest principles and careful methods. He is well-known throughout the county. In addition to the above mentioned business he is treasurer of the Womelsdorf and Rehrersburg Rural Telephone & Telegraph Company; is superintendent of the Miller Pure Rye Distillery; and with William D. Filbert, is the owner of the Womelsdorf Consolidated Water Company.

In politics Mr. Filbert is active as a Democrat, and since 1905 he has been a member of the town council, and before that time he served as borough treasurer for five years. Fraternally he is quite prominent, belonging to Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Camp No. 67, P. O. S. of A.; Rod and Gun Club, of Womelsdorf; Womelsdorf Volunteer Fire Company; Womelsdorf Poultry Association; Wyomissing Club, Reading; and the Mountain Spring Association, of Reading. He is a Lutheran member of Zion Union Church, in which he is a deacon and superintendent of the Sunday-school.

On Sept. 29, 1888, Mr. Martin S. Filbert was married to Mary Schoener, daughter of Major John F. Schoener (whose wife was a Froelich), tax receiver of Mahanoy City. In 1904 Mr. Filbert built a modern frame residence on High street, next to Womelsdorf Union Bank, and there he has since made his home. He and his wife are important factors in the social life of the town, and they have many warm friends.

(VI) Dr. George W. Filbert, son of George and brother of Martin S., was born in Womelsdorf, Pa., Oct. 13, 1870. His early education was received in the borough schools, and he then attended business college at Collegeville, Pa., graduating in 1891, with the degree of B. S. He then spent several summers with his uncle Dr. P. K. Filbert, the popular president of the Pennsylvania Dental Society, located at Pottsville, and during the winters he attended the Philadelphia Dental College, from which he was graduated in 1894. He was president of his class, and very popular both with his fellow students and with the Faculty. He belonged to the Garretsonian Society, connected with the college. After his graduation he located in Philadelphia, where he followed his profession with marked success for a period of three years. In 1897 he settled in Womelsdorf, and also has offices at Bernville, where he is every other Monday; in Strausstown, where he is every other Tuesday. He is a thorough workman, and few dentists can boast of as large a list of patrons. In his fraternal connections Dr. Filbert is a member of Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf; Lodge No. 77, I. O. O. F., Strausstown; and Mrs. Filbert belongs to the Daughters of Rebekah at Strausstown. Both the Doctor and his wife belong to the Reformed Church at Strausstown, and for some years, Mrs. Filbert, who is highly accomplished, sang in the choir. On June 1, 1901, Dr. Filbert married Lizzie M. Filbert, only child of James K. and Selesia (Goodman) Filbert (the former the well known proprietor of the "Filbert House" at Strausstown) and granddaughter of Gabriel and Elizabeth (Kintzer) Filbert (pioneer farming people of Marion township, Berks county). They have many warm friends, and their home is a most hospitable one.

(IV) John Filbert, son of John and Anna Maria (Leiss), was born in North Heidelberg township, Aug. 12, 1807, and he died April 14, 1844, aged thirty-six years, eight months, two days. His life was devoted to agricultural pursuits, with some occasional work at carpentering, and he lived on his father's farm. He married Sarah Potteiger, daughter of John and Catharine (Noll) Potteiger. Their children were: Amelia, who married Adam L. Fisher; John Franklin; and Hiester W.

(V) John Franklin Filbert, son of John, was born in Heidelberg township Jan. 25, 1832. In his boyhood he attended the old pay school conducted in the upper story of the spring house on the old Filbert farm. This building was two and one-half stories high, and was torn down in 1869. In the lower part was a fine spring of good water. On reaching manhood he engaged in farming until 1871, when he bought the store and hotel property at Robesonia, and conducted the hotel until 1891, when he retired. This building still belongs to the estate, and Mr. Filbert's son conducts a mercantile business there. John Franklin Filbert died Oct. 27, 1905, aged seventy-three years, nine months, two days. His wife Maria (Forrer) was born March 19, 1831, daughter of Jacob and Rebecca Forrer. She died Nov. 9, 1860, aged twenty-nine years, seven months, twenty days. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Filbert, namely: Amelia m. Wayne A. Reed, a Civil war veteran residing at Robesonia; Thomas; James, a coal merchant at Robesonia, m. (first) Ellen Helder (deceased), had two daughters, Annie and Lizzie, and (second) Eva Hoover; John, a farmer on the homestead (which he owns), m. Isabella C. H. Stump, and has two children, Loretta and Sophia.

(VI) Thomas Filbert, son of John Franklin, and now a successful and popular merchant, was born in Heidelberg township, Aug. 1, 1856. He received a careful education, attending first the township schools, and then in turn, Palatinate College, Myerstown, and Reading Academy, the latter then under the supervision of Prof. E. E. Post. He was only thirteen years of age when he began clerking in a general store at Robesonia, when he soon showed remarkable ability along mercantile lines, and a business acumen far beyond his years. In 1885 he formed a partnership with W. H. Brown under the firm name of Filbert & Brown, and this continued until 1891, when he sold his interest to Mr. Brown. Mr. Filbert then began clerking in the linen and dress goods department of Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart, in Reading, and there continued for six years. In August, 1898, he bought out his former business of Mr. Brown, and since then he has carried on a general mercantile business. He has a fine trade, and his goods have the highest reputation for quality and prices. His social connections are with the Royal Arcanum. He and his family attend St. Daniel's (Corner) Lutheran Church, in which he held the office of deacon for several years. In 1884, he married Emma Brown, daughter of John L. Brown, a farmer of Heidelberg township. To this union came one daughter, Lavinia F., a graduate of the Westchester State Normal, class of 1907, and an esteemed teacher at Robesonia.

(V) Hiester W. Filbert, son of John, was born on the home farm June 17, 1834, and until he was eighteen he attended the old pay school, where the teacher received three cents a day for each pupil. He had been reared to farm work, and was hired at fifty cents a month for the first year, after which his wages were gradually increased. From this he became a clerk in a store and then engaged in farming and cattle dealing. In 1871 he entered the mercantile business at Robesonia on his own account, and has continued to the present time. In 1885 he erected a large brick residence, and there he also conducts his business. On Jan. 15, 1867, he married Catharine Saylor, daughter of John Saylor, and they have one daughter, Nora Mary, who became the wife of Dr. H. L. Bollman, practising physician at Robesonia, and has had two children, Leroy (a student at college) and Catharine (who died Sept. 12, 1906, aged twelve years).

(VI) James Filbert, son of John Franklin and brother of Thomas, was born on the Filbert farm in Heidelberg township, Oct. 22, 1854. Until he was sixteen years of age he attended the district schools, and then entered the general store of his uncle, H. W. Filbert, at Robesonia, there working for a number of years. From Robesonia he went to Reading, then to Birdsboro, and in 1882 to Burlington, Iowa, where he worked in a dry goods store for Samuel Bentz. Returning to the East, he again found employment in his uncle's store. In 1894 he started in the coal business for himself, taking the business established in Robesonia by his father, who retired. He has continued in this to the present time, and the patronage has steadily increased under his management. In 1907 he moved his place of business to the Lebanon Valley Railroad tracks and White Street. He is a member of St. Daniel's (Corner) Lutheran Church, as were his parents. On April 10, 1875, he married (first) Ellen Helder (deceased), daughter of William and Sarah (Klopp) Helder, and had two children, Annie (m. Harry Dreisbach, of Robesonia) and Sallie E. (m. Clayton W. Kalbach, member of the firm of William A. Kalbach & Sons, cigar box manufacturers of Robesonia). Mr. Filbert m. (second) Eva Hoover, daughter of H. H. Hoover, of Wernersville. They reside in a charming modern frame house on Main street, Robesonia, and Mr. Filbert also owns other real estate in the town. He is interested in all good movements, and is looked upon as one of the most progressive men of his town.

(VI) John Filbert, Jr., son of John Franklin, and now the owner of the old homestead, was born there Dec. 11, 1858. He was educated in the township schools which he attended until he was twelve years old. His parents then moved to Robesonia, and he there attended the graded schools until he was twenty, when he began to assist his father in the hotel business. In the fall of 1878 he moved to his father's farm of 117 acres, assisting the latter in its cultivation until in 1882 when he began for himself. This he continued until 1902, when he moved to Robesonia, and there resided three years. He then (1905) again moved to the old farm, and the following spring purchased it from his father. Fortune has smiled upon his efforts, and abundant crops have been his. He has a fine herd of Holstein cattle. He is a believer in modern methods, and has a complete outfit of the best improved farm machinery. The brick house on the farm was built by Mr. Filbert's grandfather. There is also a substantial Swiss barn 40 x 103 feet. In politics Mr. Filbert is an active Democrat, and in his religious faith he, as well as his family, is a Lutheran, and is a member of St. Daniel's (Corner) Lutheran Church. On July 16, 1878, he married Isabelle C. H. Stump, daughter of John B. and Amelia (Gruber) Stump, farming people of North Heidelberg township. They have two daughters, namely: Loretta F. m. William S. McLean, an employe of the Wernersville Insane Asylum, and has three children, John, Walter and Thomas; Mabel S. m. Walter Huyett, a successful veterinary surgeon of Wernersville, and has two daughters, Edith and Violet. Mr. Filbert is a man of keen intelligence, and has broadened his vision by extensive traveling over this country.

John Filbert (also called Peter) married Polly Ludwig, and had five sons and three daughters, two of the daughters dying comparatively young. The sons were: Peter, who had a large family, one of his daughters becoming Mrs. Craige (whose son Walter resides in Reading); John, mentioned below; Charles, who lived in Macon county, Ill., and left a large family (one of his grandsons is John A. Filbert, No. 4334 Wentworth Ave., Chicago); Samuel, who lived at Amityville, and had four children, Ann, Charles, Ellen and Adah; and Enoch, who married Amelia Wonce, and of their three children Daniel lived in Camden. Of the daughters of John and Polly (Ludwig) practically nothing is known except that a daughter of one of them, Harriet Schrader, married and lived in Ohio.

John Filbert, son of John and Polly (Ludwig), married Esther Spang, and their children were: Amelia m. Willoughby Trexler, and had children, Peter D., Filbert, Esther, Sarah, Mary Minerva and Isaac (who died young); Ludwig Spang is mentioned below; Catharine m. Daniel Murphy, and had three children, Esther, John and Flora C.; Frederick died when about nineteen years of age; John G. m. Frances May, and had three children, Louis L., George H. and Ella; Samuel S. m. Margaret Ann Swartz; Mary m. Jefferson Galbraith, and has three children living: Charles, Emily Gertrude and Annie Filbert; Isaac S. m. Mary Heft; and Ellen died in infancy.

Ludwig Spang Filbert, M. D., son of John and Esther (Spang) Filbert, married Annie Caroline Nagle, daughter of John Filbert and Lydia (Bertolette) Nagle, of Reading. To this marriage were born two children, Laura Corinda, m. to Horatio Nelson Day; and Richard Yates, m. to Margaret Doremus DeRonde, and has two children, Ludwig Spang and DeRonde.

John Filbert Nagle, father of Mrs. Annie C. (Nagle) Filbert, was a son of Peter Nagle, Jr., once mayor of Reading, and his wife, Susan E. Filbert. He m. Lydia Bertolette, daughter of John Shenkle Bertolette, of Spring Forge, near Earlville, on the Manatawny Creek, Berks county, and their children were: Annie Caroline, m. to Ludwig Spang Filbert, M. D.; and Lydia Bertolette.

Thomas Jefferson Filbert, son of Thomas and grandson of John Thomas, was born in Heidelberg township in 1812, and he died July 8, 1878, at the age of sixty-seven years, and is buried in the family plot in Green Hill cemetery, in Waynesboro, Franklin county. By occupation he was a merchant tailor, and carried on that trade at Waynesboro. In his religious faith he was a Lutheran, and a member of Zion church. Prior to the Civil war his ballot was cast in support of the Democratic party, but after that struggle he became a Republican. Mr. Filbert was twice married. He wedded (first) Nancy McFern, of Waynesboro, and they had one son, Thomas J. (now deceased), a prosperous banker, who married Marion Van Hoff (who was raised in Dr. Dale's family), and their children were: Harry, Edward, Annie, living, and Catherine, deceased. Mr. Filbert m. (second) Emma Saylor, daughter of John and Catharine (Schaeffer) Saylor, the former a merchant and farmer in Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county. To this second marriage was born a daughter, Adelaide, m. to Norris D. Geiser, founder of the Geiser Machine Shops at Waynesboro.

John Thomas Filbert, father of Thomas and grandfather of Thomas Jefferson, was a resident of Heidelberg township, where he followed farming. His wife was Maria Seltzer, of Womelsdorf, and they were the parents of six children: Thomas, father of Thomas Jefferson; Joseph, who m. Matilda, daughter of Judge Rahn, of Schuylkill county, and had no children; Michael, who lived in Ohio, where he became very wealthy; William, who lived in Ohio, and whose sons served in the Civil war; Jacob, who lived in Springfield, Ohio, where he was prominent in religious circles; and Jestina, who m. a Mr. Cook.

JOHN W. HAWS, late of Robeson township, Berks county, was born Oct. 12, 1838, on the farm which he owned and lived upon, and where he died Oct. 27, 1908. He was a son of Samuel and Mary A. (Westley) Haws, and grandson of George Haws.

George Haws, the grandfather, was a wheelwright by trade, and followed that occupation all his life, in connection also tilling a small piece of land now owned by L. R. Henry, in Robeson township. He and his wife had these children: Margaret (married John Brown), Samuel (father of John W.), John and Mrs. Huyett (who died when a young woman). In religious belief the family were Lutherans. Mr. Haws was a Democrat in his political opinion.

Samuel Haws was born April 18, 1792, on the old homestead in Robeson township, and learned the wheelwright's trade from his father, engaging in that business and in farming until his death, in 1868, at the age of seventy-six years. His wife died in 1862. Their children were: Maria, John W., Rebecca, George, Mary Ann and Ruth, the two last named dying young.

John W. Haws was educated in the schools of Robeson township, and from his youth engaged in agricultural pursuits. He was enterprising and thrifty, and accumulated considerable property, becoming the owner of two farms in Robeson township, of 169 and 128 acres, respectively, and another one in Chester county, of thirty-four acres.

Mr. Haws married Mary Ann Reiser, daughter of George Reiser, of Cumru township, Berks county, and five children were born to this union: Mary Ellen m. Owen Kenn, and has had one child, John Harold; Margaret R. m. Myers N. Huber, and has had three children, Paul F., Oscar M. and Sarah M.; Emma May m. Edward Detemple, and has had Irene, Esther and Elsie; George R. m. Gertrude May Seifert, and has had two children, George Ellsorth and Mary Ethel; John R. m. Mary F. March, and has a son, John March.

In politics Mr. Haws was a Democrat, and he held a number of township offices. During the war he was drafted, but sent a substitute. He was a Lutheran in religion, and is buried at St. John's Union Church in Robeson township. His death was a marked loss to his county, for he was a good citizen and a kind neighbor.

F. D. DEVLAN, an artist of merit at Reading from 1860 to 1870—was born at Paterson, New Jersey, Dec. 15, 1835. Soon after completing his education he went to Lambertville, where he was employed in the iron works until 1857, when they were closed on account of the general panic throughout the country. From childhood he manifested a talent for painting and when he was forced out of employment he located at Reading and devoted his attention to art. His brush produced a number of superior pictures, some of which are in Reading. He married a daughter of Jacob Sauerbier, of Reading. He died June 6, 1870.

JAMES M. HANTSCH, for a number of years one of the best-known cigar manufacturers of the city of Reading, Pa., was born in Schuylkill county, son of Philip and Catherine (Fox) Hantsch. Philip Hantsch, who was a printer by trade, came to Reading when James M. was a child, and here followed his trade until his death. Three children were born to Philip and Catherine Hantsch, two of whom grew to maturity: George W., who was a cigar manufacturer; and James M.

James M. Hantsch received his education in the schools of Reading and at an early age was employed at tobacco stripping. He was faithful and energetic and gradually arose in the tobacco business, learning to make cigars, and with only $5.00, which was given him by his employer Mr. Roerich, as capital, he engaged in the cigar manufacturing business in a small room on Penn street, between Seventh and Eighth streets. He later built the place now owned by Hunter Henninger on Penn street, where he remained several years, afterward removing to Penn street, below Seventh. His next place of business was J. Mould & Company's store, and there he remained until ill health forced his retirement, about twelve years prior to his death, which occurred in February, 1869. For several years Mr. Hantsch had Daniel W. Crouse as a partner, and they operated under the firm name of Hantsch & Crouse, employing over 400 hands. He was the largest manufacturer in the city in his day, and was considered a representative citizen.

Mr. Hantsch married Miss Rebecca J. Hains, daughter of Dr. Reuben and Sarah (Faber) Hains, and to this union were born: James, who died at the age of three and one-half years; Ellen, who died when three years, thirteen days old; William, who died when one and one-half years of age; Charles, who died aged eleven months; Prof. James, who was for a period of nine years organist of the St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church of Reading, married Minnie Remack, had one son, Harry, and died in 1897, aged twenty-seven years; and Rebecca, the wife of Harvey J. Fuller, secretary of the Abraham Cox Stove Company, Philadelphia, resides in Jenkintown, N. J., and has two children, Carol and Ruth N.

Mrs. Hantsch, who is now deceased, resided at No. 826 Elm street from 1869. In religious belief she was a member of the Reformed Church, while her husband was a Lutheran. His political views were Republican.

WILLIAM E. FISK, of Reading, manager of the Atlantic Refining Co., was born in Dutchess county, N. Y., and was educated in the schools of that State, his first employment being with the Atlantic Refining Co., at New York City, where the main office was situated. Beginning as a clerk, he was promoted to assistant manager, and later to the position of manager, with headquarters at Reading. This plant, which was organized in 1881, was begun in a very humble way, but has now become one of the chief distributing concerns of Berks, Lebanon, Lancaster and Montgomery counties, handling lubricating and lighting oils, petroleum and all products. Mr. Fisk has been located at Reading since 1892.

Mr. Fisk is fraternally connected with Reading Lodge, No. 62, F. & A. M., the Lodge of Perfection, and the Royal Arcanum. In political matters he is independent. He is also connected with the Commercial Travelers Association.

HENRY AUGUSTUS KERST, one of the best known men in his line in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., where he has been conducting a commission business for nearly half a century, was born Dec. 17, 1836, in Alsace (now Muhlenberg) township, Berks county, a short distance beyond the city line of Reading, on his father's farm along the Centre turnpike.

John Kerst (Kirsten), the great-great-grandfather of Henry A., was born in the Palatinate in 1700, emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1720, and settled in Oley, where he married Eva Rosina Ritter in 1727. They had an only child, John Henry. The latter, who made his home in Oley, was married to Albania Gerich, and they had nine children: Susanna, Julianna, John, Henry, Anna, Maria, Eva Rosina, Hannah and Samuel. The last named, the grandfather of Henry A. Kerst, married Elizabeth Levan, by whom he had nine children, as follows: Henry, Jacob, Benjamin, Solomon, Samuel, Maria, and three who died young.

Jacob Kerst, the father of Henry A., was a farmer of Alsace township, where he was married to Elizabeth Klohs, a daughter of Jacob Klohs, also a farmer of Alsace. Mr. and Mrs. Kerst had four children, namely: Amos (m. Catherine Snyder); Magdalena (m. George W. Bushong); Henry Augustus, and a son who died young.

Henry Augustus Kerst was educated in the school in the vicinity of his home, and in Philadelphia. Until twenty years of age assisted his father on the farm. At this time he went to Philadelphia, where he found employment in a "camphor-still," and remained there three years, when he started in business for himself in the sale of produce and poultry, and this he has been conducting to the present time, having been located in the market house at Twelfth and Market streets continuously since 1867.

Mr. Kerst was married in 1861 to Angeline Epler, a daughter of Daniel Epler, of Cumru township, who was brought up near Gouglersville and moved to Philadelphia in 1848. Eight children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Kerst: Daniel; Henry; William; Morris; Laura (m. M. J. Fenton); Elizabeth (m. Walter D. Epler); Ella; and Lillie, who died young.

SAMUEL F. EARL, an artist in Reading from 1840 to 1852, was born May 13, 1819, and after receiving a general education directed his attention to landscape painting and was ultimately recognized as a clever artist, a number of his pictures possessing considerable merit. He died Feb. 8, 1852. He was a brother of E. W. Earl, who was engaged in the banking business at Reading for a time and subsequently filled a position in the United States Mint at Philadelphia for a number of years.

DUNDORE. France was the first home of the Dundore family, and tradition says that (I) John Dondore, a Huguenot, left his native land during the Revocation period, and went to Germany, settling in Alsace.

(II) Jacob Dundore (Dondore, Dundier, Dundon, Dunder, Dunden, Dundare or Dondor), son of John, was born July 25, 1720, and was educated in the German language. In 1741 he came to America in the ship "Friendship," and on April 10, 1760, was naturalized by the "Supream" court, sitting at Philadelphia, thereby becoming an English subject. In 1771 he bought a farm east of Bernville, but continued to reside, it is presumed, for some years on his farm in Tulpehocken township several miles east of Host Church (where in 1749 the birth of one of his children is recorded), as according to the court records he owned that farm until 1785. In this year we find a deed recorded conveying same to Valentine Heberling. It is certain that he resided on the Bern farm at the time of his death. This farm he conveyed by deed to his eldest son, John (signing "Jacob Dunder" in German), from whom it passed to his son John Adam, by deed signed "John Dundore" in bold round English; John Adam divided the farm between his two sons, Samuel E. and Adam E. (signing "Adam Dundor" in German)—Adam E. obtaining the portion on which was the old house—the farms being in their possession in 1908. Jacob is buried in the Bern churchyard, and on a substantial yellow sandstone is the following inscription: "Hier Ruhet dem Leibe nach Jacob Dondoer ist gebohr. D. 25 Jul. 1720 u. Starb D. 12 May 1789 hat Sein Leben Bracht auf. 68 Ja. 10 u. 17 tag mit einander kinder ergeugt 5 Söhne u. 3 töchter in der Ehe gelebt 44 Jahr." His will is dated March 3, 1787, and the original and a translation are recorded in Reading. It was approved June 12, 1789, and it is an outpouring of his soul's thanks to God for health and prosperity, and is an example of equity and justice in the distribution of his estate such as could come forth only from a Christian's heart. About 1745 he was married to Anna Maria Brecht, who died in 1793 or 1794. Their children were: Maria Catharine, born March 19, 1749, who married John Smith, and some of their descendants still live in the Wyoming valley; Susanna, who married Frederick Gerhart, and lived in the vicinity of Host Church, where their descendants still reside; John, born March 20, 1751, who died Oct. 14, 1823; Michael, born Dec. 4, 1754; John Jacob, born March 19, 1756, who died Sept. 22, 1821; David, born July 21, 1758; Catharine Elizabeth, who married Adam Schauer; and a son whose name is not known.

(III) John Dundore, son of Jacob and Anna Maria (Brecht), was born in Tulpehocken township, March 20, 1751, and he died Oct. 14, 1823. He settled in Bern township, near the present site of Bernville, and his descendants are known as the "Bern Branch" of the Dundore family. He married Catherine Geiss, born Dec. 23, 1753, who died Jan. 12, 1827, and they are both buried at Bern churchyard. Their children were: John Jacob, born Aug. 13, 1776, died Oct. 23, 1861; John Adam, born Aug. 2, 1778, died June 17, 1850; John, born June 30, 1780, died April 14, 1858; Catherine, born Nov. 24, 1782, died Jan. 17, 1840; Frederick, born April 30, 1786, died Aug. 30, 1864; John George, born Oct. 6, 1788, died Dec. 24, 1803; Philip, born Feb. 28, 1791, died Oct. 5, 1867; Christian, born June 6, 1793, died Oct. 11, 1872; and Elizabeth, born March 10, 1794, who married Daniel Miesse (1789-1823), and died about 1867. This family is remarkable for the average age attained. With the exception of John George, who died of lockjaw at about the age of fifteen, the remaining eight averaged fully seventy-five years, although two had their deaths hastened by accidents—Catherine being thrown out of a sleigh, and Frederick losing his life by being run over by a railroad train.

(IV) John Adam Dundore, son of John and Catherine (Geiss), was born on the old homestead Aug. 2, 1778, and died June 17, 1850, when he was aged seventy-one years, ten months, fifteen days. He was buried at Bern Church. He was an agriculturist all of his life, and owned the homestead which in later years became the property of his son, Samuel E. He was a substantial and influential citizen of his day, was director of the poor when the present almshouse was erected, and was well known and universally respected. Mr. Dundore was married (first) to Elizabeth Miesse, by whom he had nine children, namely: Susanna, Maria, Elizabeth, Leah, John (born April 17, 1818), Daniel, Sarah, Benneville, and Jacob (born in 1820, died in 1853). He married (second) Elizabeth Ernst, daughter of Johannes Ernst, of Heidelberg township. She was born April 10, 1791, and died April 10, 1870, and was buried in Bern churchyard. Three children were born to this union: Samuel E.; Adam, born Dec. 1, 1829, who married Rebecca Miller, and had three children—Valeria, Sallie and Ella; and William E., who married in Plainfield, Ill., and had one son (William E. was a soldier in an Illinois regiment during the Civil war, and lost his life in battle by the bursting of a shell).

(V) Samuel E. Dundore, son of John Adam and Elizabeth (Ernst), was born in Penn township, Berks county, Feb. 1, 1827, and is now living retired in the borough of Womelsdorf. He attended the old pay schools during the term from January to March, his teachers being Messrs. Brockway and Coe, and he left school at the age of eighteen to engage in agricultural pursuits, which he followed throughout his active career. He first engaged in farming on his own account in 1851, on a part of his father's farm, which he had bought, and which was a part of the old Dundore homestead. There he lived for eighteen years, when he purchased the old Deppen farm in Heidelberg township, a tract of 117 acres, on which he carried on operations very successfully for twenty years. These two farms he still owns. Since 1890 Mr. Dundore has lived retired in Womelsdorf, and has become one of the borough's best known and most highly esteemed citizens. Prior to the Civil war Mr. Dundore was a Democrat, but since that struggle he has been an ardent Republican, was a councilman of Womelsdorf for six years, and also served on the road committee for some years. He and his family are members of Salem United Evangelical Church, which he joined in 1860. He is one of the pillars of the church, was a class-leader and exhorter for many years, and for the past quarter of a century has been a trustee. When the church divided it was Mr. Dundore who purchased the church from the Evangelical Association and presented it to the United Evangelical Church congregation.

Mr. Dundore was married (first) to Rebecca Strause, of Bethel township, Dec. 23, 1854. She was born May 22, 1833, and died Feb. 16, 1858. Three children were born of this union: Amelia, of Maryland; Sarah; and Aaron, who left this section of the country in 1887. Mr. Dundore married (second) Polly (Mary) Schaeffer, born Jan. 17, 1827, who died Nov. 25, 1868. Two children were born of this marriage: Emma and Wilson. Mr. Dundore married (third) Mary or Polly (Stoner) Yost, born Nov. 18, 1829, daughter of Rudolph and Elizabeth (Dengler) Stoner, and widow of Henry Yost. Mrs. Dundore had three children by her first marriage, namely: Henry R., Mary E. and Charles F.

(IV) John Dundore, son of John and Catherine (Geiss), was born June 30, 1780, in Bern township, and died April 14, 1858. He was twice married, his first union being with Elizabeth Kline, born March 30, 1783, who died April 14, 1812, and was buried at Bern Church. The children of this marriage were: Samuel K., born April 27, 1805, died Dec. 18, 1857; Rebecca, born March 19, 1807, died Feb. 16, 1875; Isaac, born March 6, 1808, died Sept. 13, 1878; Polly, born Sept. 29, 1809, married Rev. John Kremer, of Kankakee, Ill., and had a large family; and Mary, born Jan. 17, 1812, married Israel Mellinger, of Wittenberg, S. Dak. Mr. Dundore married (second) his first wife's sister, Christiana Kline, born Feb. 8, 1794, who died April 5, 1861. Their children were: Elizabeth, born Aug. 15, 1814, died in infancy; Aaron, born Oct. 16, 1817, died in infancy; Catherine, born Dec. 3, 1819, died Sept. 30, 1871; Elizabeth, born Jan. 2, 1823; William K., born July 20, 1825; Leah, born June 28, 1828, who married John Stoner; Harrison K., father of David D.; Susanna, born April 26, 1835, who married Christian R. Winter, of Centreport, Pa.; and Lydia, born Dec. 10, 1840, who married Aaron Jacob Christ, of Naperville, Ill. The parents of this family were buried in Zion's churchyard.

(V) Isaac Dundore, son of John and Elizabeth (Kline), was born in Bern township March 6, 1808, and he died Sept. 13, 1878, aged seventy years, six months, seven days. He owned a farm of 102 acres in Penn township, which he farmed until about five years before his death. In politics he was a Democrat, and he served as school director of Penn township. He belonged to the Evangelical Church, and is buried in its churchyard. He married (first) Annie Klopp, and (second) Sallie (Kaucher) Stamm. To the first union were born: Jonathan K., born Dec. 8, 1838; a son, 1840 (died in infancy); Benneville, Feb. 22, 1842; Caroline, Dec. 23, 1843; Jacob K.; Jared, 1847 (died 1847); Nathan K., April 6, 1849 (prison inspector of Berks county); William K., Dec. 31, 1850; Mary Ann, June 5, 1853 (died May 3, 1855); Sarah, July 31, 1855; Lovina, April 13, 1858; and Benjamin, April 11, 1860 (out West).

(VI) Jacob K. Dundore, son of Isaac and Annie (Klopp), was born in Penn township Oct. 28, 1845, and was brought up on his father's farm, working for his parents until he was twenty-one years of age. He then started in life for himself as a farmer, working for Adam E. Dundore, of Mount Pleasant, for two years. He then learned the butcher's trade under James Miller, near Reading, and worked for him nearly two years. In 1878 he engaged in farming at Fritztown, where he still resides, though he retired from farming in the spring of 1909. He cultivated a good farm of forty acres, through which the Cacoosing creek runs, and raised good crops, engaging in trucking; he had stand No. 42 at the Reading market house, at Ninth and Buttonwood streets. He kept six cows and three horses. In 1885 he erected a two and one-half story frame house, 24x28 feet, to which there is a two-story addition, 16x18. Mr. Dundore is a Democrat in politics, and he belongs to the Reformed Church at Sinking Spring. He has been industrious and thrifty, and his success is due to his unaided efforts. On Nov. 19, 1877, he married Mary Emes, born Aug. 3, 1832, daughter of John Emes, of Spring township. No children have been born to this union.

(V) Harrison K. Dundore, son of John and Christiana (Kline), was born in Bern township Sept. 21, 1832, and died Feb. 21, 1872. He was a cabinet-maker and undertaker at Lebanon, where he had a large business, employing fifteen skilled mechanics. He was well known and highly esteemed, and his early death was a severe loss to the community. Mr. Dundore and his wife were consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. On May 18, 1854, Mr. Dundore married Wilhelmina Dengler, daughter of George and Christina (Luther) Dengler, and to them were born children as follows: Emily, born March 27, 1855, married Israel Karch (both are deceased); David D. is mentioned below; Sally, born June 21, 1859, married Philip Waltman, deceased; Ida, deceased, born June 6, 1861, married Frederick Lattaman, of Reading; and Grant and Katie both died in childhood.

(VI) David D. Dundore, son of Harrison K. and Wilhelmina (Dengler), was born Sept. 12, 1857, in Lebanon, Pa. When a young man he learned the hatter's trade at Hendel's, on South Fifth street, Reading, where he worked for upward of twenty-five years. In 1901 he engaged in the paper-hanging and painting business, which he has carried on to the present time with much success. He does a great deal of work in Reading, and also in the surrounding district of Mt. Penn. He is also an excellent carpenter, and for some years contracted for different buildings in his borough, erecting in 1901 the Trinity Reformed Church, and he also put up his own residence on Perkiomen avenue. Mr. Dundore is a master in the art of wood carving, his home containing many beautiful specimens of his skill in this line. In 1888 he made an ornamental cuckoo clock, which contains sixty-two different kinds of Pennsylvania wood. In politics Mr. Dundore is a Democrat, and he has served in numerous offices. He was a school director of Lower Alsace township, and of Mt. Penn, and one of the first councilmen of the borough, being an incumbent of both offices at the time the borough was organized. He takes a great interest in educational matters, and in fact in any movement which has for its object the betterment of the community, giving his hearty support and coöperation to such enterprises. He is one of the borough's public-spirited citizens, and a representative man of Berks county. Mr. Dundore and his family are members of Trinity Reformed Church, which he helped to organize in 1901, having been an elder of the church since its inception. This church is the outgrowth of the Reformed Sunday-school, of which Mr. Dundore was a superintendent, and he has been active in church and charitable work, as has also his wife.

On Sept. 12, 1884, Mr. Dundore was married to Sarah L. Graul, daughter of William C. and Mary E. (McNall) Graul, and granddaughter of Samuel and Mary (Whitman) Graul. To Mr. and Mrs. Dundore have been born four children, namely: Cleveland, a brass finisher in Reading, married to Florence Good; and Katie, Wesley and Myrtle, all at home.

(III) John Jacob Dundore, son of Jacob and Anna Maria (Brecht), was born March 19, 1756, and died Sept. 22, 1821. He settled in Heidelberg township, the Tulpehocken creek, which is the dividing line between Bern and Heidelberg townships, also separating John Jacob's farm from his father's. His descendants are known as the Heidelberg branch of the family. He married Margaretta Brown, 1761-1817, and both are buried in Bern churchyard. Their children were: Jacob (1784-1828), John Adam (1786-1847), Christian (1787-1839, moved to Ohio, where he died), John (1792-1858) and Margaret (married John Kline).

(IV) John Adam Dundore, a son of John Jacob and Margaretta (Brown), was born Jan. 27, 1786, and after a life devoted to farming died March 12, 1847. He was twice married. His first wife, Susanna Miller, became the mother of children as follows: William, born in 1812; Jonathan, born in 1813; Lydia, born in 1815, who married Benneville Bagenstose, of Centreport, Pa.; David, born in 1816; Esther; Annie; Mary, born in 1820; Lovina; Catharine, born in 1824; and Elizabeth, born in 1825. For his second wife he married Mrs. Catharine (Miller) Hiester, sister of his first wife. She was born in 1788, and died in 1859, the mother of one child, Adam M. Mr. Dundore and his two wives are buried in North Heidelberg Church cemetery.

(V) Adam M. Dundore, son of John Adam and his second wife, was born in North Heidelberg township April 25, 1829. He was engaged in farming, and was the owner of considerable land, making his home in Reading. His wife, Rachel Bright, was born Jan. 21, 1829. Both are deceased. They had children: Amandon B., born Sept. 15, 1850, who died Aug. 16, 1853; Adam J. B., born June 14, 1854; and Dr. Darius W.

(VI) Dr. Darius W. Dundore, son of Adam M. and Rachel (Bright), was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, Oct. 16, 1856, and died Feb. 22, 1905, aged forty-eight years, four months, four days. He was educated in the township schools, the Bernville high school, and Muhlenberg College, from which he was graduated. He then attended the University of Pennsylvania, and graduated from the medical department of that institution in September, 1879. He entered upon the practice of his profession at Tremont, Pa., where he built up a good practice, and thence moved to the Flat Top coal fields in West Virginia, where he remained for ten years. At the end of that time he returned to his native county, and located at Womelsdorf, where he remained until his death. Dr. Dundore was a most influential and highly respected citizen of the towns in which he resided. He was a member of Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf; the Knights of the Golden Eagle, and the Royal Arcanum. He was a Reformed member of the Zion Union Church, of Womelsdorf, and is buried at this church; his grave is marked by a handsome monument.

On May 21, 1879, Dr. Dundore was married to Miss Amanda Kurr, daughter of Isaac and Catharine (Artz) Kurr (the former a farmer of Rehrersburg, Pa.), and granddaughter of John and Marie (Rehrer) Kurr (the town of Rehrersburg was named after the latter's parents). Three children were born to Dr. Dundore and his wife: May Mable, who died in childhood; Lillie Kathryn, who attended the Lebanon Valley College, at Annville, Pa., and is now at home; and Beulah Anna, now also at home, who graduated from the Womelsdorf high school and afterward attended the Conservatory of Music at Frederick, Md. Both daughters have done splendid work in art and music. Mrs. Dundore and her daughters reside in a handsome residence on High street, Womelsdorf, and hold an important position in the social world.

GEORGE SEILING, fresco painter in Reading from 1850 to 1890, was born Aug. 22, 1818, in Bavaria, and was there educated. He studied art at Bremen intending to become an artist, but soon inclined to frescoing. He emigrated to America when nineteen, and located at Carlisle, Pa. After remaining there, and at Hamburg, until 1846, he removed to Reading and there carried on the business of church interior decorating until he died, June 27, 1893. He produced many master-pieces of a religious character in various churches in Pennsylvania, several of which are in Reading and others in Philadelphia.

SHARMAN or SHERMAN. The Sharmans or Shermans of Berks county, where they are numerously represented, descend from one Peter Shearman or Sharman, who, according to tradition, was of Welsh extraction and came to America before the middle of the eighteenth century. In 1756 he was a farmer and land owner of Cumru township, Berks county, and it is a matter of record that in that year he paid a federal tax in that district. Among his children was a son John.

John Sharman, son of Peter and great-grandfather of David Sharman, a representative and influential citizen of Fritztown, Spring township, was born Dec. 12, 1753, and died March 23, 1837. He was a lifelong farmer, owning much land, his farm at Fritztown, which consisted of 120 acres, being the original Sharman homestead at the foot of Cushion Hill. Here the Indians used to congregate, and the old stone house, with walls two feet thick and windows so small that a person could barely crawl in and out, was used as a protection against the savages and was one of the first buildings in this section. John Sharman and his wife were buried at Hain's Church, of which he was a member. He married Margaretha Ruth, born Dec. 8, 1763, who died July 15, 1815, and to them were born these children: John; Henry; Peter; William, born April 21, 1791, who died May 10, 1831; Molly, m. to Elijah Weitzel; Mrs. Johannes Ruth; Mrs. David Marshall; and Mrs. Peter Fisher.

Heinrich (Henry) Sharman, son of John, was born Nov. 5, 1788, and died Sept. 28, 1828, aged thirty-nine years, ten months, twenty-three days. Like his father, he was a lifelong farmer, his property being the present home of Ammon Moyer. Mr. Sharman married Esther Feather, and to them were born these children: Magdalena, m. to Joseph Eberly, of Spring township; Emanuel, who lived in Reading and had children—Joanna, Henry, Victoria, Hannah and Isaac; David; Mary, m. to Henry Miller, of Lancaster county; and Charles, m. to Mary Fleisher, mother of Wilson and Elbina.

David Sharman, son of Henry, was born on the old Sharman homestead in 1815, and his death occurred at his home, No. 422 South Seventh street, Reading, in 1854; he was buried at Sinking Spring. He was a highly esteemed and respected citizen, was a carpenter by trade, and for many years was employed at that occupation in the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company. David Sharman married Margaret Zwier, daughter of Mathias and Elizabeth (Wolf) Zwier, and to them were born the following children: Helena, m. to Silas Stoudt, of Leesport, Pa.; Henry, who died young; David; and Layton O., superintendent of No. 2 Works for the Standard Oil Company, Cleveland, Ohio, and m. to Mamie Feather.

David Sharman, son of David, was born in Reading Dec. 12, 1851, and obtained a liberal education there and in the public schools of Spring township, which he left when about seventeen years of age. At that time he went to learn the blacksmith's trade at Fritztown under M. K. Mosser. In 1871 he made his first trip West, remaining four years. Returning East for one year, he subsequently went to Jacksonville, Ill., whence he returned in 1877, settling at Fritztown, where he began working at his trade. This he followed with much success for thirteen years, during this time building up a large and lucrative business, which in 1890 he sold to George Eckenroth, who had learned the trade from Mr. Sharman. Since 1890 Mr. Sharman has been engaged in looking after his farm and other interests, which are quite extensive. Since 1880 he has resided in his own residence at Fritztown, with the exception of two years, from 1901 to 1903, when he lived near Montello, on the old John Haas farm of fifty acres, which he purchased from Isaac Sharman in 1901, and sold in 1903 to Robert Peifer. Mr. Sharman's home is known as the old Daniel Huebner homestead and consists of about thirty-seven acres. Since its organization he has been a director of the Berks County Trust Company, in which he is a heavy stockholder, and he is regarded as an able financier and a man of much influence in his community. In political opinion he is a stanch Democrat. He has given valuable public service in his neighborhood, having for six years been a school director of Spring township, of which he was also secretary for three years. Since 1890 he has served in the capacity of justice of the peace, a busy office for a busy man. Since assuming the duties of this position Mr. Sharman has settled many estates, clerked at numerous sales and proved himself an able adjunct of the Berks county court. He has served as juror in the county and State Circuit courts, and also helped to settle many land cases in Chester county, assessing damages against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Mr. Sharman is a man of sound judgment and intelligence, and a good, upright citizen. He and his family are members of St. John's Reformed Church, of which he is at present serving as trustee, and he has been a deacon and elder. His ancestors are buried at this church.

On Dec. 26, 1878, Mr. Sharman was united in marriage with Sarah Emes, born Oct. 2, 1857, daughter of Augustus and Rebecca (Wenrich) Emes, of Spring township, and to this union have come six children, as follows: William E. graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, in the class of 1894, took a post-graduate course, taught school for four years, and later entered Dickinson Law School, graduating with the class of 1908; Harrison O., a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1900, taught school for five years, took a course in the Schissler College of Business at Norristown, Pa., and is now connected with the firm of Schwarzschild & Sulzberger, great packers, of New York, being bookkeeper at the Norfolk, Va., office; Maud R., also a graduate of the class of 1900 at the Keystone State Normal School, and of the Reading Commercial College, was bookkeeper for J. B. Miller, of Reading, for several years, and is now a trained nurse at Garfield Memorial Hospital, Washington, D. C.; Lena, who lives at home, attends the Sinking Spring township high school; John, a graduate of the Normal School, class of 1906, taught school for one term; David is a bright and promising lad.

John Sharman, presumably a son of John and grandson of Peter, the progenitor of the family in this country, was the great-grandfather of George B. Sherman, proprietor of the "Mansion House," at Robesonia, in Heidelberg township. This John Sharman was born at the old home in Cumru (now Spring) township, Sept. 25, 1783, and died March 19, 1862. He followed farming, and also for many years kept hotel, in a stone building standing along the Bernville road. He was twice married, his wives being sisters, Rebecca and Hannah Graeff, and all his children were by the first union, with Rebecca. They were as follows: Isaac; John, who lived at Sinking Spring; Reuben, who lived and died at Myerstown, Pa.; Levi, who lived in Reading; Daniel, who lived and died at Boyertown; Lewis, who died unmarried; Catharine, who died unmarried; Sally, who married William Gunkelman; and Mary, who died unmarried.

Isaac Sharman, son of John, was born June 2, 1810, on one of the Sharman homesteads in Spring township, and died Aug. 7, 1882, at Brownsville, this county, in the home which he had purchased after giving up farming. He followed agriculture throughout his active years, as a tenant farmer, and for many years made his home in Heidelberg township. He married Sarah Shannaman, who was born March 24, 1817, and died Jan. 21, 1898. Their children were as follows: Hettie married George Peifer; Lizzie married Peter Hertzog; Katie married John Gaul; Mary married Thomas Hiester; Aaron was the father of George B. Sherman; Frank settled in Dauphin county, Pa.; James settled in Philadelphia; Isaac lived in Reading; Henry died when young.

Aaron Sharman, son of Isaac, born in Spring township, Feb. 21, 1836, was reared in his native locality, where in his boyhood he attended the German pay school, the pedagogue receiving three cents a day from each of his pupils. He was reared to farming, and continued to work for his father until he was of age. For a number of years after beginning life on his own account he was engaged as a laborer, and for some time he was employed in the ore mines in the vicinity of Sinking Spring. But for twenty-four years and seven months he was engaged as toll-gate keeper on the Berks & Dauphin turnpike, having gate No. 4, which is now known as gate No. 1. He retired in the spring of 1907, and has since enjoyed a well-earned rest. Mr. Sharman has been more or less disabled for the past thirty years as the result of rheumatism and hard work, but nevertheless he has managed to attend to his duties.

On Feb. 19, 1862, Mr. Sharman was married to Miss Sarah Grime, who was born Dec. 19, 1836, daughter of Benjamin and Molly (Seitzinger) Grime, who had a family of six children, namely: James, Catharine, John, Sarah, Thomas and Benjamin. Mrs. Sharman's maternal grandfather, Michael Seitzinger, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war. Nine children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Sharman, viz.: George B.; Kate, who is the wife of Robert Swift; Ida, who died unmarried; Maggie, wife of Richard Wolfensberger; Lizzie, who died in infancy; Sallie, who married Walter Fisher; Emma, who died unmarried; and Nora L. and Cora F., twins, both of whom died when seven months old.

Mr. Sharman is a member of the Hain's Church, where he has a family burial lot.

George B. Sherman, son of Aaron, was born April 29, 1864, at Sinking Spring, Pa., where he attended school. He also studied at Heidelberg, Berks county, and took a course at Myerstown, Pa., going to school until he was eighteen. In 1882 he located at Robesonia, where he engaged in hotel-keeping at the stand he still occupies. He is active in the public life of the community as well as a successful business man, serving at present as township auditor and as chief of the Robesonia Fire Company, which latter position he has held since the organization of the company. He is very much interested in fraternal organizations, holding membership in Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of which he is a past master; in Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M., of Reading, Pa.; in DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, of Reading; in Reading Lodge of Perfection, fourteenth degree; and in Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He also belongs to Washington Camp, No. 375, P. O. S. of A., of Robesonia; Mount Penn Commandery, P. O. S. of A., at Wernersville; Robesonia Lodge, No. 119, K. P., and the Uniform Rank K. P., of Reading; the K. O. O. K., of Reading; and Neversink Council, No. 27, O. U. A. M., of Womelsdorf. Mr. Sherman is a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church at Robesonia. He is a Democrat in politics and takes part in local political affairs, having served on the election board.

On Oct. 25, 1894, Mr. Sherman was married to Mary Kline, daughter of John and Matilda (Potteiger) Kline, and their union has been blessed with two children, Elkiana B. and Lydia M.

BOHN. The Bohn family of Berks county, to which the late Jeremiah B. Bohn, of Lower Heidelberg township, belonged, is descended from John Jacob Bohn, who arrived at Philadelphia from Rotterdam Sept. 21, 1742.

Frederick Bohn, son of John Jacob, married a Miss Woomer. He lived in Heidelberg township. He made his will April 14, 1814, and died that same year. His executors were George, David and Frederick Bohn, the witnesses Philip Fidler and Joseph Greth. The children mentioned in this will were: George (who is buried at Bern Church), Frederick, David, Philip, John, Elizabeth (unmarried), Adam and Christina. There was an Adam Bohn who was a taxable in Bern township in 1759.

Philip Bohn, son of Frederick, born March 24, 1781, died Aug. 11, 1861, aged eighty years, four months, seventeen days. He was a well-known farmer in Lower Heidelberg township, Berks county, where he died, and he and his wife were buried at Hain's Church. He married Elizabeth Reedy or Riede, born in 1794, died in 1854, and they had the following named children: Isaac, Polly, Lydia, Susan, Julian, Louisa, Sophia and Eveline.

Isaac Bohn, son of Philip, was a farmer in Lower Heidelberg township and owned a large quantity of land there. He died at the age of seventy-seven years, and is buried at Hain's Church. He was twice married, his first wife being a Brossman, his second an Ahrens, and by the first union there were children as follows: Amelia, Sarah, Mary (deceased), Franklin, Reiley, Thomas and Jeremiah B. No children were born to the second marriage.

Jeremiah B. Bohn, son of Isaac, was born March 31, 1850, in Lower Heidelberg township, and died July 18, 1902, aged fifty-two years, three months, eighteen days. When a young man he learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for several years before he commenced farming, which he carried on in both Lower Heidelberg and North Heidelberg townships. He was the owner of two fine farms, one located in each of the townships named, having a total of 210 acres of valuable land. He died on his place in North Heidelberg township. Mr. Bohn was a well-known and much esteemed citizen, and at the time of his death was serving in the office of township school director. He was a Democrat in political sentiment. A prominent member of the Hain's Reformed Church, he served as elder of same.

Mr. Bohn was twice married, first to Viola Hinnershitz, by whom he had two children: Isaac C., a machinist, of Brownsville; and Katie E., wife of William F. Unger, of Brownsville. Mr. Bohn's second marriage, in 1883, was to Mary A. Barr, daughter of Isaac Barr, and to them were born four children, three of whom survive: Morris C.; Annie L., wife of Clement Boyer, of Wernersville, Pa.; and David F., unmarmied, who resides at Wernersville.

Morris C. Bohn, born Jan. 15, 1885, in Lower Heidelberg township, attended the public schools and learned farming under his father. In time he was put in charge of his father's North Heidelberg farm, which he managed for three years, after which he worked at the carpenter's trade a year. In the spring of 1906 he engaged in the hotel business, buying his present stand at Brownsville, in Lower Heidelberg township, from Moses K. Balthaser. His establishment is known as the "Farmers Hotel," and is an up-to-date place, beautifully located on a fine drive eight miles from the city of Reading, and surrounded by a fine growth of trees. Mr. Bohn knows the wants of the traveling public and is conscientious in his desire to serve his patrons honorably, doing everything possible for their comfort. He has eighteen acres of valuable land in connection with the hotel property.

Mr. Bohn married Miss Elizabeth M. Dreibelbis, daughter of Isaac and Ida (Beckley) Dreibelbis, and they have had three children: Lloyd I., Howard J. and Rufus S. Mr. Bohn is a Reformed member of the Hain's Church. In political opinion he is a Democrat, but he is not active in party work.

ISAAC BARR, late of Bern township, Berks county, was born there Jan. 19, 1819, and died Nov. 10, 1886. In his early manhood Mr. Barr followed fence making, and he did so well at that occupation that at the time he was married, when he was twenty-eight years old, he had eight hundred dollars saved. After his marriage he followed farming until his death, living in Bern township. He owned what was known as the Conrad Reber farm, which comprised nearly two hundred acres, which he sold off until only about 160 acres remained. He is buried at the Bern Church, of which he was a member.

Mr. Barr married Miss Annie Gicker, daughter of Daniel Gicker and wife (whose maiden name was Himmelberger), farming people of Bern township, and eleven children were born to this union: Joseph, of Slate Hill, Pa.; Jared, who died at the age of thirty years; Mary Ann, born Oct. 21, 1851, wife of Jeremiah B. Bohn; Thomas, of Sinking Spring; Matilda, m. to George Noecker; Emma, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-four years; Isaac, who lives near Mt. Pleasant, Berks county; Amanda, m. to John Hettinger; Lydia m. to Horace Hartman; Adam, of Mt. Pleasant; and Kate, m. to Pharis Babb.

Abraham Barr, father of Isaac Barr, was a lifelong farmer in Bern township, where he owned land. He died in 1848, and is buried at Epler's Church, in that township. His family consisted of seven children as follows: John, a resident of Bern township; Isaac, previously mentioned; Joseph, of Lower Heidelberg; Catharine, who m. a Mr. Peffley, a wealthy man, and lived a long distance from her early home; Molly, m. to Jacob Albright; Sarah, m. to Jared Snyder; and Abraham, who lived in Bern township.

ALBERT TREAT, an artist at Reading from 1870 to 1884, was born in that city Dec. 25, 1850. He was educated in the public schools and afterward worked in the coach-making shop of his father at painting until he drifted into landscape painting, which he followed until his decease in 1884.

HOCH-HIGH. (I) Early in 1717 Rudolph and Melchior Hoch, Moravians, left their home in Switzerland for America on account of religious persecution. Tradition says they were without much money when they landed. These two were the ancestors of all of the name in Berks and surrounding territory. The first spelling of the name was "Hoy," the final "h" being added later; some members of the family preferred the spelling "High" to "Hoch," and as early as 1744 Samuel, a grandson of Rudolph, spelled his name High. After wandering about for some time, Rudolph Hoch settled near what is now Pottsgrove, Montgomery county, Pa., while Melchior settled in Bucks county, same State, all of the Hochs or Highs now in Bucks county being descended from his two sons, Philip and Jacob. In 1725 Rudolph Hoch removed from near Pottsgrove, then known as Swedeland, to Oley, and became the owner of a farm of 300 acres two miles northeast of Friedensburg, the land being still in the possession of the Hochs. In 1728 he laid out a burial place, about eighty feet square, and here he and seven generations are buried. Several interesting relics of the two emigrants are still preserved by the family. The large German Bible is owned by Gideon A. D. Hoch. Books brought from over the sea are still at the Hoch farm, the elder Hochs making this provision in their wills. There is also a very ornamental, small open-face watch, which though 266 years old is in excellent condition and keeps perfect time. Philip D. Hoch has a piece of petrified wood brought over by Rudolph Hoch, and used as a whet stone, one of its principal uses being to sharpen razors. Rudolph Hoch was married when he came to America, and his son John was born in Switzerland. His wife died in 1728, and was the first to be buried in the family cemetery. He died in 1748. His sons numbered five, among them being John and Samuel.

In Prof. Daniel Rupp's "History of Berks County," published in 1844, is a letter written by Maria De Turck (born Hochen), of Oley township, which bears date May 14, 1718. It was addressed to her brother, sisters and friends in her native country, and it reflects her profound piety.

(II) John Hoch, son of Rudolph, established the family homestead, purchasing it from William Ranberry. He was the father of eleven children: (1) Deborah was born 1721. (2) Samuel, born 1723, moved to Poplar Neck. He married a daughter of Jonathan Herbein, of Oley, and they had three sons and one daughter, two of the sons dying quite young. (3) Rudolph, born 1725, lived in Maiden-creek, where he reared six sons—John, Daniel, Jacob, Isaac, Abraham and Samuel—and four daughters. (4) Daniel, born 1728, had nine sons—Samuel, Jacob, John, Daniel, Abraham, Isaac, David, Joseph and Philip—and four daughters. (5) Maria and (6) Magdalena, twins, were born in 1730. (7) John, born 1733, married Susannah Levan, had one daughter, and died in 1763. (8) Susan was born in 1735. (9) Jacob, born 1738, married (first) Miss Weiser, and (second) Miss Fisher, and had five sons—David, Abraham, Solomon, William and Daniel—and three daughters, all born and reared in Maiden-creek. (10) Esther was born in 1742. (11) Abraham, born 1745, married Susannah Weiser, and lived on the old Hoch farm, where one son, Abraham, and two daughters were born.

(III) Samuel High, son of Samuel, born 1723, married a daughter of Jonathan Herbein, of Oley, and of their four children—three sons and one daughter—two sons died in infancy. The surviving son was Isaac. They lived in Poplar Neck.

(IV) Isaac High, son of Samuel, was born July 3, 1753. He died May 18, 1795.

(V) William High, son of Isaac, was born in 1786, and his death occurred in 1851.

(VI) Ezra High, son of William, born in 1816, married and became the father of one son, William, and five daughters.

(VII) William High, son of Ezra, married Sallie Beidler, daughter of Conrad Beidler, and they had four sons—Count, William, Charles and Isaac.

(III) Abraham Hoch, son of Samuel, born 1745, married Susanna Weiser, and they had three children: Abraham, born 1771; and two daughters.

(IV) Abraham Hoch, son of Abraham and Susanna, born 1771, inherited the old Hoch farm at his father's death. He married Susannah Schneider, and they had six children: Sarah, born 1795, died 1816; Gideon S., born 1796; Joshua, born 1799; Hannah, born 1805, died 1806; Rachel, born 1807, married David Keck, of Montgomery county, Pa.; and Susannah, born 1811, married Henry Geiss, of Oley Line.

(V) Joshua Hoch, son of Abraham, born 1799, married Lydia Dierolf, and had ten children, five of whom died in infancy. The survivors were: William, a well-known shoe dealer at Reading; Joshua, a successful business man in Reading; Gideon S.; Susannah; and Catherine.

(VI) William High, son of Joshua and Lydia (Dierolf), was born in Oley township, and in 1857 he came to Reading, where from that time until his death, in April, 1904, he was engaged in the shoe business. He was buried at Aulenbach cemetery, of which he had been a trustee for twenty-five years. Fraternally he was a member of the Odd Fellows and the Good Fellows. He married Ellen Keehn, daughter of John Keehn, and she survives her husband and resides at No. 147 North Tenth street, Reading. Their children were: Ezra K., of Reading; Peter K.; Mary Ella; Sarah S., wife of Arthur Arrowsmith; John L.; Katie E., a teacher in the high school in Hammonton, N. J.; and Emma L., Alice, Martha and William H., all four deceased.

(VII) Peter K. High, son of William and Ellen (Keehn), was born in Reading in 1857, and his education was obtained in the public schools of that city. After completing his education he was engaged in business with his father for a number of years, then becoming a messenger of the Penn National Bank of Reading, a position he continued to fill for seven and one-half years. On July 1, 1899, Mr. High was appointed janitor of the postoffice under Mr. A. M. High, the present postmaster, where he continued seven years. On Oct. 1, 1906, he was appointed custodian of the administration building of the Reading school board, a position he now fills. Mr. High is single, and lives with his mother at the home on Tenth street.

(V) Gideon S. Hoch, son of Abraham, born 1796, became the owner of the Hoch farm by inheritance. He married Susannah Weidner, born 1797, died 1881, and they became the parents of six children: Sarah, born in 1819, was the first wife of Daniel Y. Peter, and died in 1854; Catharine, born in 1821, was the wife of Martin Yoder, a well-known farmer of Clay township, who died at advanced age, and she died in 1879; Rachel, born in 1825, was the first wife of Isaac Brumbaugh, of Friedensburg, and died in 1872; Israel, born in 1829, died in 1833; Hannah, born in 1832, married James N. Tee, of Delaware, and is the only survivor of the family; and Gideon W.

(VI) Gideon W. Hoch, son of Gideon S., and to whom the farm descended on the death of the father, was born May 1, 1835, and he died Dec. 29, 1893. He married Naomi L. De Turck, and they had eight children, as follows: Thermuthis A. D., born Sept. 25, 1858, married John H. Fegley, a huckster at Boyertown, and their one child died some years ago; Willi, born in 1860, died in 1862; Seth E., born in 1862, died in 1863; Mahlon S., born in 1864, died the same year; Gideon A. D., born Dec. 15, 1865; Walton Morris, born April 5, 1868; Philip D., born Aug. 11, 1869, married Ida Gross; Naomi, born in 1872, died the same year.

(VII) Gideon A. D. Hoch, son of Gideon W., was born on the old home farm Dec. 15, 1865. His education was obtained in the public schools of Oley township, and the Oley Academy, attending school until he was seventeen years old. Out of school hours he had become familiar with the science of agriculture, and when twenty-five years old he began farming for himself on the home farm, and here he has since continued. He has 150 acres of the best land in Oley Valley. The present house, built of stone, was erected by Abraham and Susanna (Weiser) Hoch in 1788, and is in good condition, bidding fair to be a comfortable home for another century. The western part of the house was built by Abraham and Susannah (Schneider), in 1811. The large Swiss barn was built in 1830. Mr. Gideon A. D. Hoch is a Democrat in politics. He was twice married. In 1890 he married Lydia H. Christman, born April 20, 1867, died Dec. 31, 1901, daughter of Nathan H. Christman. Six children were born of this union: Gideon C. (a fine musician now connected with the Oley Valley Band), Maud, D. Webster, Thermuthis, Edna and Abraham E. Mr. Hoch married (second) Lottie Levingood, daughter of Jacob Levingood, of Oley township. Two children were born of the second marriage: John L. and Jacob L. Mr. Hoch, as well as his father, were musicians and were members of bands.

The following is a short Abstract of the Title of the Original Hoch Homestead in America:

"On May 12th, 1682, William Penn, then of England, gave a Deed to John Snashold, also of England, for Five hundred acres of land in Oley Township, then Philadelphia County, Pa.

"John Snashold died intestate, only heir being Joan Boach, daughter of his brother Richard Snashold, and whereas Joan Boach widow on January the 4th, 1702, did give a power of attorney to John Warder, and John Latcher recorded in and for the County of Philadelphia, in book D 3 Vol. 5 page 230.

"(Deed) And whereas the said John Warder, and John Latcher did for the consideration there in mentioned did grant and confirm unto James Steele, dated March the 29th, 1726—not recorded.

"(Deed) James Steele to William Remberry, dated November the 15th, 1728, for Four hundred and ninety-two acres, recorded at Reading, Pa., in Book A, Vol. 8, page 271, &c.

"(Deed) William Remberry to John Hoy, dated January the 30th, 1728, recorded at Reading, Pa., Book A, Vol. 2, page 275, recorded July the 11th, 1761.

"John Hoch by his last Will and Testament, dated August the 14th, 1769, did grant and devise unto Abraham Hoch, Sr., Two hundred and twenty acres.

"(Deed) Abraham Hoch, Sr., to Abraham Hoch, Jr., Dated August 20th, 1821, for Two hundred and Nineteen acres, said Deed is not recorded.

"(Deed) Abraham Hoch, Jr., to Gideon Hoch, Dated February the 7th, 1827, for One hundred and Fifty acres, Recorded at Reading, February 8th, 1827, and whereas the said Gideon Hoch died intestate in 1865, the Orphans' Court of Berks County did adjudicate the same above mentioned tract unto Gideon W. Hoch.

"And whereas the said Gideon W. Hoch died, and by his last will and Testament, Dated April 17th, 1893, did grant and devise the above mentioned tract of land unto Gideon A. D. Hoch, the present owner."

(VII) Philip D. Hoch, son of Gideon W., was born Aug. 11, 1869, and now resides at Manatawny, in Oley township, successful in business and prominent and influential in the financial world. He grew to manhood on the home farm, becoming familiar with the duties there, and he has never entirely given up agricultural pursuits. Since 1898 he has dealt extensively in hides and tallow, his first location being in Reading, but he is now in Allentown, employing six men all the time. His business has run as high as $38,000 in one week. Mr. Hoch owns the old Tychicus Weidner homestead in Oley, now consisting of 109 acres of very valuable land. On it is the old Weidner burying ground. He lives in a comfortable brick house situated at the cross road of Friedensburg and Lobachsville, and Pleasantville and Kutztown. He has been a director of the Kutztown Bank since its organization, Sept. 27, 1897, missing but three meetings of the board in all these years. This bank opened its doors for business Jan. 3, 1898. Mr. Hoch is an antiquarian of some note, and has a valuable collection of coins, pewter ware, china and books. Probably his most prized possession is a clock that belonged to his great grandfather, Philip De Turck. He has also a copy of deed of land dated May 26, 1682, given by William Penn to John Snashold.

Philip D. Hoch was married Nov. 22, 1891, to Ida Gross, daughter of William and Mary (Reichard) Gross, of Pike township, and granddaughter of Henry Gross, of the same township. Six children have been born of this union: Gross, John, Robert, Ira, Frances and Mary.

(II) Samuel Hoch, second son of Rudolph, married and started a farm in the western part of Oley, near the site of the so-called Moravian School, one and one-half miles southwest of Friedensburg. The land on which this building stands, together with thirty-eight acres additional, was donated by the Hochs. At first the building was used for the double purpose of holding religious services and keeping school, but when no more Moravian services were held, it was used for school purposes only, and now is a dwelling occupied by Daniel Moyer, though still the property of Oley township, including the land.

(III) Daniel Hoch, son of Samuel, was born Jan. 18, 1731, and he died Aug. 27, 1789. He married Mary or Maria Bertolet, born Sept. 18, 1736, died July 17, 1802. They had children: Samuel B., born March 7, 1757, died June 18, 1826; Esther, born June 25, 1758, married Peter Griesmer, and died Jan. 20, 1840; Susanna, born July 8, 1759, married John Nicholas Knabb, and died March 15, 1848; Mary, born Dec. 29, 1761, was the second wife of Philip De Turck, and died Dec. 27, 1821; John B., born Dec. 21, 1763, died Dec. 7, 1835; Elizabeth, born Jan. 12, 1766, married Conrad Rieff, and died Oct. 10, 1843; Daniel, born Jan. 22, 1768, died March 10, 1829; Joseph, born Sept. 24, 1770, died Sept. 6, 1835; Catherine, born Sept. 25, 1772, married Adam Young, and died April 13, 1828; Sarah became the first wife of John George Stitzel, Sr.; Hannah, born Jan. 27, 1777, married (first) Peter Rapp, (second) Anthony Shoemaker, (third) Daniel G. Gulden, Sr., and died Oct. 14, 1842; and Abraham, born June 27, 1779, died April 1, 1854.

(IV) John B. Hoch, son of Daniel, born Dec. 21, 1763, married in 1789, Elizabeth Guldin, born April 16, 1773. She died Aug. 20, 1848, and he passed away Dec. 7, 1835. Their children were: Mary G., born Oct. 24, 1790, married John S. Bechtel, and died Aug. 30, 1863; Catharine, born Feb. 20, 1792, married John F.

Bechtel, and died March 30, 1836; Esther, born Oct. 4, 1793, married John Schaeffer, and died Jan. 8, 1849; Sarah, born May 24, 1798, married Jacob H. Rieff, and died Jan. 20, 1852; Daniel G., born Jan. 18, 1800, died March 1, 1880; John G., born Oct. 19, 1802, died June 10, 1884; Elizabeth G., born Jan. 11, 1805, was the first wife of Samuel H. Leinbach, and died June 17, 1827; Abraham G., born Dec. 10, 1808, married Lydia L. Bechtel, and died May 26, 1844; Hannah G., born April 7, 1814, died Oct. 25, 1823.

(IV) Daniel Hoch, son of Daniel, born Jan. 22, 1768, died March 10, 1829, and is buried in a private cemetery on the homestead, not, however, in the original Hoch family burying ground. He was a prosperous farmer, and was the owner of many acres of valuable land. On Nov. 3, 1789, Mr. Hoch married (first) Sarah Yoder, born April 10, 1769, who died April 14, 1800, aged thirty-one years, four days, the mother of five children: Esther, born in Wassermann (Waterman) April 26, 1791, died Sept. 17, 1793; Eva, born in Wassermann March 10, 1793; Maria, born in Wog Nov. 8, 1795, died Feb. 21, 1817; Jacob Y., born in Krebs March 26, 1798; Peter, born in Schutz April 13, 1800. Mr. Hoch married (second) July 26, 1801, Sarah Angstadt, and their children were: Solomon, born May 25, 1802; Jeremiah, Dec. 31, 1803; Lea, April 7, 1805; Sophia, May 30, 1806; Sarah, June 13, 1807; Rachel, June 20, 1809; Anna, July 30, 1810; Daniel, Nov. 21, 1811; Susanna, Nov. 13, 1813; Rudolph, Sept. 28, 1815 (died July 31, 1883); and Wilhelmina and Moses, Sept. 25, 1817 (the latter died Feb. 20, 1843).

(V) Jacob Y. Hoch, son of Daniel by his first marriage, was born March 26, 1798, and he died May 2, 1878, and was buried at Friedensburg. He was successful in farming, his chosen calling, and he was honored and respected in his district. He made the brick used in the construction of his own house and barn in 1860. For some time he served as school director of Oley. He married Catharine De Turck, daughter of George De Turck (1777-1847), and she, too, is buried at Friedensburg. Eight children were born to them: George, who died young; Daniel D.; Susan, who married Daniel Butz, of Oley township; Miss Mary Ann; Catharine, who married Rev. Lewis Smith; De Turck and Sarah Amanda, who both died young; and Jacob, who lives at Friedensburg.

(VI) Daniel D. Hoch, son of Jacob Y., was born in Oley township Sept. 27, 1838. His early education was obtained in the old Moravian school in his native township, and later in the newly established public schools. When nineteen years old he was licensed to teach in the public schools by Prof. D. B. Brunner, then county superintendent. He taught six terms in his own district. The first term he taught in Friedensburg, and the other five in the Reiff school. In 1863 he began farming the home farm, which is the original homestead of one branch of the Hoch family. The tract originally consisted of 500 acres of land, but Mr. Hoch now has but 126 acres. This is very fertile and is highly cultivated. Mr. Hoch was actively engaged in the operation of this place from 1863 to 1901, and since 1882 has been the owner. The old spring house built in 1806 by Daniel Hoch is still standing and is well preserved. The original house was built in 1749, and was a stone building attached to a log house, which latter, old settlers have said, was one of the very early buildings in the valley, being erected in the early years of the eighteenth century. It was covered with a tile roof. This stone and log house was torn down in 1880 by Jacob Hoch, the present brick house being erected then. The brick for this place were manufactured by Mr. Hoch on his own farm. The barn was built in 1755, and this Jacob Hoch tore down in 1862, and in its stead built the present structure, the walls of which are of brick. Mr. Hoch is now engaged in the manufacture of brick, having had a plant on his farm since 1883. He averages about 100,000 a year.

In politics Mr. Hoch is a Democrat, and he has served his township as school director for six years. For three years he was auditor and for twenty-one years treasurer of Oley Academy. He is a member of the Lutheran Church, while his wife is Reformed, belonging to Friedens Church. Mr. Hoch was a deacon and elder for many years, and for fifteen years was superintendent of Friedensburg Union Sunday-school, and he is very active in church and Sunday-school work, though of late his work has been made more difficult for him because of the loss of his hearing.

Mr. Hoch has been twice married. In 1863 he married Henrietta Knabb, daughter of Daniel Knabb, and they had five children: (1) Clara A. married Jacob B. Hertzog, a school teacher of Oley township, residing at Friedensburg, and former member of the State Legislature. (2) Daniel K., a prominent and respected citizen of Reading, represented that city in the State Legislature two terms, was delegate to the National Democratic Convention in Denver in 1908, and for a number of years has been connected with the Reading Eagle. He is a member of a number of secret societies. (3) Charles K., who has farmed on the homestead since 1902, married Mary Burkey, and has children, Daniel, Samuel, Anna H. and Sallie. (4) George died when eighteen months old. (5) Katie lives at home. Mr. Hoch married (second) Oct. 7, 1880, Mary B. Kerschner, daughter of George and Catharine (Breidigam) Kerschner. Mr. Hoch is a worthy representative of a family prominent in this section of Berks county since 1725, and he holds a high place in the esteem of his fellow citizens.

(V) Susanna Hoch, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Angstadt), was born Nov. 13, 1813, and died Nov. 21, 1846. On Sept. 4, 1838, she married Martin Van Reed High, who was born Nov. 9, 1811, and who died March 4, 1852, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Van Reed) High, and grandson of Samuel and wife (nee Shenkel) High, farming people of Oley, where they are buried. Martin V. R. High was a lifelong farmer, and owned a farm of 135 acres in Oley township, now owned by Jacob S. Strunk. He was buried on the farm now owned by Ephraim K. Kauffman in a private burying ground belonging to the DeTurck family. To Martin V. R. and Susanna High were born the following children: Wilhelmina, m. to Daniel Bower, of Friedensburg; Samuel H.; Sarah M., who died young; Mary, m. to Alexander Ziegel, of Reading; Susan, m. to the late Dr. Thomas Dunkel, of Reading.

Samuel High (or Hoch), father of Martin V. R., was born Oct. 10, 1784, son of Samuel High (or Hoch) and wife (nee Shenkel), and he died March 21, 1844, aged fifty-nine years, five months, eleven days. He was a farmer, owning three large farms, one of which contains the private burying ground, and is now the property of Ephraim K. Kauffman, of Oley. Mr. High was well known in his district. In 1808 he built the large stone house, and in 1823 the present barn on the farm now owned by Jacob S. Strunk, of Oley township. On Dec. 11, 1806, he married Elizabeth Van Reed, born Oct. 21, 1789, and died Feb. 10, 1847. This union was blessed with seven sons and four daughters, those who reached mature years being: Samuel, went South, his last letter stating he was going to Jamaica, and since then nothing more has been heard of him; Martin V. R.; Jacob V. R.; Rebecca m. D. A. Glase; Maria m. Joseph Muthart; Reuben resides in Reading; Eliza Ann m. Ephraim Fishburn, of Reading.

(VI) Samuel H. High, son of Martin V. R., was born in Oley township, Dec. 28, 1841, and was brought up on the farm. He enlisted in Company C, 167th P. V. I., at Reading, in the fall of 1862 for nine months, but his service lasted over ten months, and he was mustered out in July, 1863, at Reading. After the war he engaged in farming, in Oley township, on the farm now owned by James Fisher, living there for three years. The next year he farmed a tract near Griesemersville, and in 1874 he bought his present place, containing twenty-six acres. It is located between Griesemersville and Yellowhouse, on the King's Highway, also called the Church road. On this farm is a house built in 1768 by I. Hunter, and his wife, E. Hunter. The barn was built in 1793. These two buildings are very substantial, the walls being eighteen inches thick. The house was used as a hotel until in the fifties. Mr. High attends the Reading markets and devotes considerable time to truck raising. He has a fine dairy also. With his family he attends the Reformed Church of Oley, in which he was deacon and trustee for a number of years. In 1867 he married Mary E. Griesemer, daughter of Wellington B. and Sarah (Kiefer) Griesemer. Four children were born to them: (1) Miss Sarah A. lives at home. (2) Dr. Warren E., born July 1, 1870, died Feb. 5, 1907, and is buried at Oley Church. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1893, and was then appointed physician in the United States Navy, and visited all parts of the globe. On leaving the Navy he settled at Butler, Pa., and built up a large practice. He married Mary L. Knabb, daughter of Alfred Knabb, and they had one son, Edward Lewis. (3) Martin Wellington died aged eleven months. (4) Florence died aged seven years.

(V) Jacob V. R. Hoch (or High), son of Samuel and brother of Martin V. R., was born in Oley Oct. 9, 1825. He attended the old pay schools in the winter, and later for one winter the Trappe school in Montgomery county. He was reared to farming, and worked for his parents until he was thirty-five years old. He then began farming in Oley township, where he now lives, although since 1872 he has been retired from active work. That year he built a big brick house on the road leading from Yellowhouse to Friedensburg, in which he resided until his death, April 26, 1909. He added a number of out-buildings, but the barn was built in 1844, and the old house in 1842 by Samuel Hoch. Altogether he had 120 acres of good land in Oley Valley. He was a deacon and elder some years in the Reformed Church at Friedensburg, to which his family belong. There he was buried. In 1850 he married Lydia Hoch, daughter of Solomon and Hannah (Weidenhammer) Hoch, of Richmond township. They have had five children: Irwin, a farmer on the homestead; Charles, who died aged six years; Hannah, who married Capt. Frederick Yeager, of Reading; Ella, who died aged twelve years; and Prof. Alfred, a teacher in the public schools at Philadelphia.

Maberry S. Hoch, a well-known farmer of Maxatawny township, was born at Moselem, Richmond township, May 25, 1839, son of Abraham and grandson of John Hoch.

John Hoch was a lifelong farmer in Maiden-creek township, where he owned a large farm, and he is buried in a private ground on the farm he owned. He married Elizabeth Kindt, and their children were: John, Heinrich, Solomon, Rudolph, Jacob, Abraham, Mary (who married Simon Moyer) and Samuel.

Abraham Hoch, son of John, was a farmer at Moselem Springs, in Richmond township, where he owned a farm of some ninety acres. Some years before his death he retired and went to Kirbyville, and there died at the age of sixty-six. He is buried at St. Peter's Church. He married Elizabeth Schwoyer, who bore him ten children, five sons and five daughters: John, deceased, of Richmond township; Benneville, deceased, of Fleetwood; Aaron, of Reading; Solomon, in Richmond; Maberry S.; Maria, who married Jesse Long; Anna, who died unmarried; Jane, who died at New York; Miss Sarah, of Reading; and Florenda, who married Ephraim Scharadin, of Kutztown.

Maberry S. Hoch, son of Abraham, was reared to farming, giving his time to his parents until he was thirty years old. In 1866 he began farming in Richmond township, on the home farm, and continued eleven years, moving at the end of that time to Longswamp township. He remained there two years, and then located in Moselem, where he farmed four years. He next farmed eleven years for Rev. B. E. Kramlich, at Kutztown. In 1897 he bought his present farm near Kemp's Hotel, in Maxatawny township, between Kutztown and Allentown, along the Easton road. It contains 110 acres of level land, good wheat soil, all in good condition, well improved with cement walks. He keeps nine horses and fifteen cows. With his family he attends the Lutheran Church, and they have their family burial plot at St. Peter's. On Sept. 26, 1868, Mr. Hoch married Lucy Ann Kline, daughter of Daniel and Esther (Dreibelbis) Kline, of Richmond township. Four children blessed this union, namely: William H., born May 24, 1869; Franklin, born July 24, 1871; Lizzie and Daniel (twins), born May 20, 1875, Lizzie dying at the age of fourteen years, four months and twenty-eight days.

FREDERICK SPANG, an artist of great talent, a cultured gentleman at Reading from 1870 to 1891, was a lineal descendant of Frederick Spang—a prominent iron master of Berks county. Mr. Spang was born Jan. 31, 1834, in Oley township, and was educated at Norristown, to which place his parents had removed when he was but a boy. While prosecuting his studies in painting at Philadelphia he enlisted in Company C, of the 15th Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, and served a term of three years. Upon his discharge he resumed his art studies in Philadelphia and afterward spent several years in California. In 1870 he located in Reading, Pa., where he continued his art work in a successful manner until his decease, Nov. 21, 1891. He painted many portraits and landscape views of great merit and his pictures of still life displayed talent of a superior order.

DANIEL H. MANWILLER, merchant at Pricetown, Pa., and a director in the First National Bank of Fleetwood, was born Feb. 16, 1865, in Ruscombmanor township, son of Isaac K. and Amanda (Hiester) Manwiller.

Daniel Manwiller, his great-grandfather, was of Oley township, Berks county, born March 19, 1773, died June 26, 1840, and is buried in a private burying ground. His wife was Sarah Gamler (1780-1834). Their children were: John; David; Elijah; Amos; Daniel; Joshua; Eliza (m. to Isaac Hafer); Esther (m. to Isaac Hafer, as his second wife after the death of Eliza); and Mrs. Reuben Keeler (of Illinois).

David Manwiller, son of Daniel, was born in Oley township in 1803, and he died in 1886, aged eighty-three years, and is buried at Pricetown. He lived in Ruscombmanor township the greater part of his life, and was a weaver for twenty-five years. He married Deborah Keeler, who was born in 1804, and died in 1889, aged eighty-five years. They had eight children, Joel, Jacob, Obed, Amos, Rachel (m. Samuel Fox), Malinda (m. William Barzell), Isaac K. and David.

Isaac K. Manwiller, son of David and Deborah, was born Oct. 10, 1836, in Ruscombmanor township. He attended the old pay schools of his day as much as one and one-half months a year. The months consisted of twenty-four days then, and the teacher's pay was two and one-half cents a day from each pupil. Mr. Manwiller learned the carpenter's trade when twenty years old, and this he followed seven years when he became the foreman for the construction of ore mine buildings in eastern Pennsylvania, a work he continued fifteen years. He retired from active work in 1894. Since 1863 he has lived on an 18-acre farm in the eastern part of Ruscombmanor township. In politics he is a Republican, and for three years was school director. He and his family worship in St. John's Union Church at Pricetown, belonging to the Reformed congregation. On Nov. 8, 1862, he was married to Amanda Hiester, daughter of Benneville and Sallie (Brown) Hiester. She was born June 15, 1841, and died March 8, 1909. Their children were: Maggie m. Wilson W. Miller, died aged 41 years; Daniel H.; Newton; Kate m. William Boyer; Alice m. Albert Schaeffer; Emma is single; Henry; Harvey; Ida is deceased; Robert; James; John; Clara is deceased, as is also Deborah; and Hannah m. Harry Brown and has four children, Linwood, Hilda, Helen and Wilmer.

Daniel H. Manwiller, merchant at Pricetown and a director of the First National Bank of Fleetwood, Pa., was born Feb. 16, 1865, in Ruscombmanor township, son of Isaac K. and Amanda (Hiester) Manwiller. He was educated in the public schools of his native township, the Oley Academy and at the Keystone State Normal School, graduating from the latter institution in the class of 1891. He was licensed to teach by Prof. D. S. Keck, the county superintendent, in 1882, and he taught his first term at Drumheller's school in Pike township. He taught in all sixteen terms, one term in District, three in Longswamp, one in Richmond, three in Maiden-creek, and seven in Ruscombmanor. After giving up teaching he became chief clerk with the Reading Cement Company at Molltown, remaining one year. During the next five years he worked in H. F. Hertzog's hardware store at Sixth and Bingaman streets, Reading. In the spring of 1906 he became a general merchant at Pricetown, where he has since been successfully engaged. He carries a full line of general merchandise. He became one of the organizers of the First National Bank of Fleetwood, of which institution he is also one of the directors. He is of a progressive spirit. He was also one of the organizers of Pricetown Rural Telephone Company, which was organized Dec. 5, 1908, and of which he is one of the directors, and is the secretary of the board.

Mr. Manwiller became a justice of the peace of Ruscombmanor May 3, 1909, an office he also filled from 1895 to 1900. In politics he is a Republican, and wields influence for good in his locality. He and his family are members of the Reformed Congregation of St. John's Church at Pricetown. He has served the church as treasurer since 1906, and his daughter, Miss Eva, is a member of the choir.

On Aug. 15, 1891, Mr. Manwiller married Miss Catharine Rauenzahn, daughter of Daniel and Catharine (Brown) Rauenzahn, of Ruscombmanor township, and they have had two children: Eva May; and Catharine, who died aged fourteen months.

JOSEPH B. GANTER, a well known and respected citizen of Reading, Pa., who is now living in a beautiful home that he erected in Mt. Penn, a suburb of the city, was born in Reading, in Jan., 1864, son of Joseph A. and Theresa (Bucher) Ganter.

Philip Ganter, grandfather of Joseph B., was born in Thannheim, Baden, Germany, married Mary Fahrenbach, of the same place, and they became the parents of the following children: Francis Xavier, m. to Farranar Bucher; Joseph A., m. to Theresa Bucher; Barbara, m. to John Balbach; Carolina, m. to John Impink; and Philip, m. to Henrietta Morris. Weary of the tyranny of the Old World governments, Mr. and Mrs. Ganter came to this country in 1850, bringing with them all their children and also the daughter of Francis Xavier. All are now deceased with the exception of the son Philip and the daughter Carolina.

Joseph A. Ganter, son of Philip, was born in Thannheim,—Baden, Germany. When he came to this country, he first worked in a furnace in Marietta, Pa. His wife followed a year later, and they located in Reading, Berks county, he working at laboring and securing employment with the McIlvaine Iron Company. Later he became a driver for the firm. He purchased property on the installment plan, this property being one of the old landmarks of the city, located on North Eighth street, near the junction. He continued faithfully in the employ of the Iron Company, until he was compelled on account of failing health to secure lighter work, and he removed to No. 40 Hamilton street, a story and a half brick house in that portion of the city known as Ricktown, being one of the first to locate there. For some time it was a question with the people whether it should be called Ricktown or Gantertown. He opened a hotel at No. 38 Hamilton street, the only one in that section for a number of years. The business increased to such an extent that he removed to the corner of Schuylkill avenue, Front and Hamilton streets, and his place was known as the "Hamilton House" until his retirement. He then removed to No. 213 North Ninth street, where he resided until his death. He was a man of great enterprise and energy, and was successful, adding greatly to the development of the city in the line of building. His success was attributed to close attention to business, and although he came to America without means, he accumulated a fortune, and gave each of his children a good start in life. He manifested a special interest in his family, aiding them in business during his own lifetime, that he might enjoy the pleasure of seeing them prosper. At different times he would call his children together and give them liberally of his estate, at the same time advising them how to use it,—one of the last things he did was to present each child with a thousand dollars.

To Joseph A. Ganter and wife, were born six sons and three daughters: Benjamin; Lena; Francis X.; Franklin; Rosa; Joseph B.; Theresa; Edward now deceased; and Charles. The two eldest, Francis and Lena, were married upon the same day, and the three youngest, Theresa, Edward and Charles, were likewise married at the same hour of the same day, and had single, double and triple weddings. Mr. Ganter in company with Gregory Heine went over in 1872 to the old country to repair a small chapel, or shrine, that the father, Philip, who was very wealthy for his day, had built in Thannheim.

Joseph B. Ganter's education was secured in the schools of Reading. When he started out in life he worked for as little as seventy-five cents per week, changing from one occupation to the other until he began an apprenticeship with Henry C. Geissler, where he learned the tinsmithing trade. He then started in business for himself at No. 201 Schuylkill avenue, and in addition opened a hardware store, with house-furnishing goods, which he carried on for a period of twenty years. Previous to this he had carried on the cigar business in Cleveland, Ohio. In 1884 he retired and began building operations with Adolph Eichner, and April 5, 1904, the firm became Ganter, Davis & Eichner. At the end of one year, the original firm started again and are still doing business. Mr. Ganter is the original organizer of the Schuylkill Fire Company, and is one of the two original members still living.

Mr. Ganter's success is due to his perseverance and strict attention to business, and just dealing. In politics he is a Democrat. He is connected with the Roman Catholic Church. He is also associated with the Northwestern Beneficial Association; Aerie No. 66, F. O. E.; and Harmonia Beneficial Association.

DAVID DILLIPLANE NEIN, a leading citizen of Mt. Penn, who is engaged as a flour, feed, coal and lumber merchant, was born in Oley township, Berks Co., Pa., Sept. 16, 1858, son of Daniel K. and Catherine (Dilliplane) Nein.

The German spelling of the name is Neün, but the most common modern spellings are Nein and Nine. Casper Neün came to this country about the middle of the Eighteenth century and settled in the Oley Valley, in Pennsylvania. In 1759 he was a taxable and land owner in Alsace township, Berks county, and the federal tax list in 1785 records him as the owner of 200 acres of land in Lynn township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, but it is not known that he ever lived other than in Berks county. In 1781 he was assessed on twenty acres in Exeter township, Berks county.

On April 23, 1787, then a resident of Oley township, he made his last will and testament, and this was recorded July 29, 1788. His wife Barbara survived him, and died in Oley, advanced in years, in 1800. Their children were: Sylvester; Daniel; Catharine m. Frederick Miner, a miller of Rockland township; Susanna m. Jacob Leinbach; Maria m. Jacob Miner; Barbara m. Henry Schwartz; and Elizabeth m. George Schwartz.

Daniel Nein, son of Casper, lived in Oley township. The Pennsylvania archives show that in 1787 he obtained a warrant for forty acres of land located in Berks county. He was married Dec. 1, 1779, to Esther Bertolet, of Oley, who was born Nov. 19, 1749, and died Oct. 5, 1792, and is buried in the Bertolet graveyard on the homestead. She was the mother of four sons and one daughter, which fact is recorded on her tombstone.

From the county records, it is learned that in 1865 David Nein died in Oley township ,and of his last will and testament, made April 17, 1845, his son Peter was the executor. He had a sister Mary, and sons David and Peter. In 1877 Esther Nine, who died in Oley township, mentions in her will her sister Mary and brothers David and Samuel, of whom the latter had three daughters: Catharine, Harriet, and Sarah.

Daniel K. Nein, father of David D., was born in Oley township in 1814, and died in 1890. He followed agricultural pursuits all of his life. With his family he worshipped at the Friedensburg Reformed Church, and is buried there. He was twice married, his first wife being Mary Haas, who died without issue. He m. (second) Catherine Dilliplane, and they had these children: Mary Ann m. Daniel Kline, of Oley, Pa.; Amanda m. Augustus H. Wentzel, of Gouglersville, Pa.; David D.; Daniel D., a member of the firm of Nein & Fisher, of Lancaster, flour and feed merchants, who own a large grain elevator, m. Nettie Benson; Emma m. George Christman, a shoe and basket maker of Alsace; Esther m. Reuben Reifsnyder, a basket maker of Ruscombmanor, and a veteran of the Civil war, in which he lost a leg; Jonathan D. m. (first) Sarah Achey, and (second) Sallie O'Brien, and has children, all by the first marriage—Mary, Carrie, Ammon, Samuel, Luther and Jennie; and Sallie m. (first) John Glasser, and (second) William Williams.

David Dilliplane Nein attended the public schools of Oley, Exeter and Alsace townships, after leaving which he spent nineteen years at farm work, ten years of which were for his mother-in-law, three years for himself and six years for Charles Wentzel. In the spring of 1888 Mr. Nein associated himself in the flour, feed, coal and lumber business with Wentzel & Nein at Mt. Penn, the firm continuing for about two years. In 1890 the firm became Nein Brothers, and this has continued to the present time, Jonathan D. Nein, a brother of David D., being his partner. The firm has a large and prosperous trade in Mt. Penn, Reading and the surrounding country, and the brothers are well and favorably known. Their warehouse and office is a three-story, brick building, 44 x 71 feet, situated on the south side of Perkiomen avenue, and here they carry a large line of stock, the extent of their business necessitating the use of three teams. In politics Mr. Nein is a Democrat. He was postmaster of Denglers from 1888 until 1902, in which year the town was incorporated and became known as Mt. Penn, and he continued in the office until 1905, in which year he resigned, having given universal satisfaction in the office. He was one of the first councilmen of Mt. Penn, being treasurer of that body, and with Dr. M. L. Bertolette as one of the original founders of the Mt. Penn Suburban Water Supply Company, an independent corporation which furnishes excellent water to the borough. Fraternally Mr. Nein is connected with the Castle No. 463, K. G. E., of St. Lawrence. Mr. Nein and his family are members of Trinity Reformed Church of Mt. Penn, of which he was an organizer.

In 1877 Mr. Nein was married to Hannah B. Schaeffer, daughter of Nathan and Catherine (Yoder) Schaeffer, and to them have been born these children: Miss Ella lives in Oley with a grand aunt; W. S., m. Ada Evaul; Jacob S.; Edith, Martha Jane, Della, Viola, David, Jr., and Russell. W. S. Nein and Jacob S. Nein entered into the coal, flour and feed business Aug. 26, 1907, under the name of Wm. Penn Coal Company, W. S. Nein and Bro., No. 604 South Fifth street, Reading.

REIDENAUER. The Reidenauers of Berks county are descended from one Johannes Reidenauer, a German from the Palatinate, who fled to the New World to escape religious persecution. He crossed the Atlantic on the ship "Lydia," which qualified at Philadelphia Dec. 11, 1739. He was born in 1699, and was consequently forty when he came to America. In 1759 one John Reidenauer was a taxable resident in District township, Berks Co., Pa., but it is not known whether it was this John or his son of the same name. Both are buried at Hill Church.

Johannes Reidenauer, the younger, son of the emigrant, was born in Germany Dec. 26, 1723, and was sixteen when he came with his father to America. He died June 14, 1805, and was buried at Hill Church. He made his will Aug. 28, 1801, and it is on record in Will Book 4, page 294. He married Elizabeth Herb, born in 1732, died Jan. 20, 1808, and to them were born the following children: Johannes, 1759-1828; Frederick, 1762-1837; Jacob, 1764-1831; Abraham; Mary Elizabeth, who married George Seibert; Susanna, who married John Stauffer, and had a son Jacob, to whom her father bequeathed a sheep; Barbara, who married Michael Hoffman; and Catharine, who never married.

Johannes Reidenauer, born Dec. 3, 1759, son of Johannes, lived in District township, Berks county, where he owned a small tract of land which he cultivated in addition to working among the farmers. He died July 22, 1828, and is buried at Hill Church. He married Susanna Herb, and their children were: Abraham, who lives at New Berlinville; Jacob, of Maxatawny township; John, who died in Washington township; Daniel; Susan, m. to Abraham Herbst, of District township; Catharine, who became the wife of a Mr. Lehr, and lived in Philadelphia; and Peggy, m. to Peter Case, of Hereford township.

John Reidenauer, son of Johannes, lived in District township, where he owned and cultivated a small farm. Though eighty-four years old when he died, in 1904, he had all his teeth, and he was never sick until about the last year of his life. He married Catharine Becker, daughter of Henry Becker, and she died some years before Mr. Reidenauer, passing away July 24, 1890, when sixty-six years old. Mr. and Mrs. Reidenauer had a family of seven children: William B., John, Lizzie, Emma, James, Mary and Isabella.

William B. Reidenauer was born Aug. 24, 1846, in District township, and grew up on the farm. Such education as he received was gained in the pay schools in vogue during his boyhood, and he had to earn the money for his tuition. The cost was three and a half cents a day, and he attended from thirty to thirty-five days every winter, getting the money by doing various kinds of manual labor for neighboring farmers, threshing, butchering, shelling corn, etc., for which he received twenty-five cents a day. David Benfield and Josiah Schaeffer were his teachers, and he attended in District and Washington townships. He did farm work until fifteen years old, when he went to work in the ore mines at Rittenhouse Gap, continuing at such employment for seven years. He then learned the carpenter's trade from Jacob Dengler, of Washington township, following it for a number of years in lower Berks county, and for five years he was a boss carpenter, employing as many as nine men.

Though principally engaged in putting up houses and barns, he has the reputation of being a good all-round mechanic. At present Mr. Reidenauer devotes most of his time to his sawmill, which is located just above Bechtelsville, in Washington township, and he also has a small farm, having a valuable property, which makes him one of the largest tax-payers in the township. On Sept. 22, 1908, Mr. Reidenauer met with a severe reverse, a disastrous fire destroying his sawmill, gristmill, cider press, house and ice house. The loss was nearly $10,000, and only partially covered by insurance. A quarter of a mile east of his home place he has another gristmill, which is operated by his son Warren. For some four years Mr. Reidenauer was engaged in the manufacture of brick, turning out as many as 300,000 per annum, and he gave employment to twelve men in this line. At present he has two, three or four men in his employ besides his son. He is a man of good judgment, honorable and reliable, and is looked upon as one of the leading and substantial citizens of his township.

Mr. Reidenauer was married in 1872 to Amanda Moser, daughter of William Moser, and she died Oct. 13, 1907, at the age of fifty-six years, the mother of eight children, as follows: Wilson, who is now living in Pike township; Harrison M., of Bechtelsville; Mahlon M.; Elmer, of Boyertown, Berks county; Warren, of Bechtelsville; Ida, wife of Elmer Conrad, of District township; Edwin, who is still at home; and Allen, unmarried.

Mr. Reidenauer and his family are members of the Lutheran congregation of the Hill Church, and he has served three years as elder. He is a Republican in political sentiment. In 1908 he built a substantial residence at Boyertown.

HARRISON M. REIDENAUER, proprietor of the "Keystone House," at Bechtelsville, was born Oct. 7, 1873, in Washington township, and there attended the Reidenauer public school, which was named for his father. He went to school until he was fifteen, and his first work was as a teamster, hauling logs and lumber for his father, who conducted a large sawmill. After six years at this work he learned the milling business, under William C. Bechtel, of Bechtelsville, remaining in his employ one year, when he returned to the gristmill of his father, to work as miller. At that time he continued in his father's employ for two years, after which he conducted the mill for himself, renting it from his father, until 1902. He then became proprietor of the Dale store and hotel, which he carried on for one year. In the spring of 1906 he became the proprietor of the "Keystone House" in Bechtelsville, which he has since conducted with increasing success and patronage. The house contains fifteen rooms and Mr. Reidenauer enjoys his share of the traveling trade as well as the local patronage. In addition to his hotel business Mr. Reidenauer is engaged as a dealer in cattle and horses, having an established trade in this line which has proved very profitable. Every fall he has a sale of cattle at his public house. Mr. Reidenauer is a young business man of good reputation and honorable ideas, and he is making his way in the world very creditably.

On Dec. 29, 1894, Mr. Reidenauer married Miss Sarah M. Eshbach, daughter of George and Sophia (Moyer) Eshbach, and they have two children, Norman and Erma. The family are Lutheran members of the Hill Church. Mr. Reidenauer is a member of Washington Camp No. 327, P. O. S. of A., of Bechtelsville.

MAHLON M. REIDENAUER was born Dec. 24, 1876, at Bechtelsville. He was reared under the parental roof, attended the common schools of Washington township, and from boyhood assisted his father in his various enterprises, beginning at an early age to saw wood and do other work around the sawmill. He worked for his father continuously, giving him his time until he was eighteen years old, after which he remained with him another four years, working for wages. In the spring of 1898 he removed to Bechtelsville, locating at the Red Mill, a gristmill in the south end of the borough, which he conducted as such for ten years, in the spring of 1908 converting it into a planing-mill. Meantime, in 1900, he had become the owner of the mill and property, purchasing same from the Henry Young estate. The mill itself is one of the landmarks of the district and is quite old. The property includes three acres of land, and is valuable particularly for Mr. Reidenauer's present needs. He manufactures doors, windows, etc., and does general mill work, giving employment to several men the year round. Water-power is used in the operation of the mill.

On Jan. 15, 1899, Mr. Reidenauer married Miss Lydia Landis, born Aug. 21, 1880, daughter of Martin and Maria (Rauch) Landis. Mrs. Reidenauer passed away April 21, 1907, aged twenty-six years, eight months. She was the mother of one child, Lottie L. Mr. Reidenauer is a member of the Lutheran congregation of the Hill Church, to which his wife also belonged.

GREENAWALT (GREENAWALD). In Albany township are found many descendants of the emigrant Jacob Greenawalt, and in that locality at least one place, Greenawald Station, perpetuates the name. It is variously spelled Greenawalt and Greenawald.

(I) Jacob Greenawalt, born in Switzerland, came to America in 1738, and upon his arrival at Philadelphia was sold as a redemptioner to a man named Schuler. In 1741 he married Elizabeth Filhower, a native of Germany, then of Montgomery county, Pa. In 1742 he and his wife located in Weisenburg township, Northampton (now Lehigh) county, Pa., where he claimed several hundred acres of land, upon which he erected a gristmill, oil mill and tanyard. He prospered at this place, where were born his six children, four sons and two daughters, namely: Jacob, Johannes, Abraham, George, Mrs. Grim and Mrs. Barbara Weise. All of these reared families of their own. The pioneer and his wife are buried at Ziegel's Church, while others of the family are interred at Seiberlingville, and some at Jacob's Church, Jacksonville, Lehigh county. The Greenawalts are a strong, robust and healthy race, and many have attained ripe old age.

(II) Jacob Greenawalt, son of the pioneer, was born in 1751, and married Maria Stambauch. In 1784 he bought 142 acres of land from J. Sutter, in Greenwich township, and there he spent the remainder of his life, dying at this place in 1839, in his eighty-ninth year. He had built a tannery on this property, which he operated. In 1836 he sold this tract to his son Peter, who in 1884 sold it to his son Henry, the present owner. Jacob Greenawalt and his son Henry and daughter Barbara are buried at Becker's St. Peter's Church, in Richmond township, Berks county. To Jacob and Maria (Stambauch) Greenawalt were born four sons and five daughters, namely: Jacob, Henry, Christian, Peter, Elizabeth, Susanna, Sabina, Barbara and Maria. Of these,

Jacob Greenawalt married Elizabeth Schollenberger, and they had one son and three daughters, the son dying in infancy. The daughters were: Sarah, Elizabeth and Catharine.

Henry Greenawalt married Silben Boté, and they had eight children: Adam, Jacob, Charles (m. Polly Dietrich), Nathan, Samuel, John (died in infancy), Henry and Polly (Nagel).

Christian Greenawalt located near Frederick, in Maryland. He reared a family of four sons and three daughters, the eldest son being Rev. Emanuel Greenawalt, a Lutheran minister of note. The others were: Isaac, Israel, David; and two of the daughters married a man named Zimmerman.

Peter Greenawalt was born on the old home in Greenwich township and there spent his entire life. He married Elizabeth Hummel, and all but one of the eight children born to them became heads of families, namely: John m. Nancy Christopher; Judith m. Charles Baer; Benjamin m. Abbie Dietrich; William, unmarried, lives in Iowa; Joshua m. Sarah Leiby; Henry m. Susanna Meitzler; Manasses m. Emily Stimmel; Maria m. Jonas Altenderfer.

(II) Johannes Greenawalt, son of the pioneer, in 1784-85 settled near what is now Greenawald Station, in Albany township, on the Schuylkill & Lehigh railroad. He was an enterprising man, built an oil-mill on the farm now owned by Isaac Hardinger, on the Pine Creek, and later built a grist-mill on that stream, which is now owned by Albert Kutz. The grist-mill was operated for many years by his son John, but he himself operated the oil-mill. Johannes Greenawalt died at the age of eighty-three, and he and his family are buried at the New Bethel (Corner) Church in Albany township. His children were: John; Abraham, who m. a Miss Hagenbuch and had Benjamin and Isaac; Jacob, who lived on the Pine creek; and Peter, who died unmarried.

(III) John Greenawalt, son of Johannes, was born in Berks county April 15, 1784, and died Nov. 10, 1865. He spent all his life in Albany township, living at the foot of the "Pinnacle," where he owned considerable land, much of which was situated between the Pinnacle (the highest elevation in Berks county) and the "Schnide Berg." Tradition tells us that this locality was an Indian camping-ground. At any rate, many Indian axes, tomahawks, arrow-heads, etc., have been found between these two high points. He farmed and operated a distillery. In their later years he and his wife lived alone in a small house on the slope of the Pinnacle, which belongs to the Blue Mountains. He was reputed to be rich, and it was said he kept his gold and silver coin in a large bag under his bed, and that he had made a small exit back of the bed which ordinarily would attract no notice, and which was to be used in case robbers broke in.

John Greenawalt married Kate Zimmerman, born Sept. 24, 1793, died Feb. 1, 1866, and they became the parents of children as follows: Joseph (who at an early date settled out West), Jacob, Amos, Abraham, Samuel, Dinah (m. Enoch Hagenbuch, who settled at La Salle, Ill.), Lesena (m. Daniel Stein) and Leah (m. Jacob P. Dietrich, who with his wife and family located in Kansas, where in time they prospered). John Greenawalt married twice, his second wife being Hannah G. Kolb, and they had a son Daniel, whose descendants live at Lewiston, Pennsylvania.

(IV) Amos Greenawalt, son of John, was born March 18, 1814, and died Nov. 19, 1879. He was reared in Albany township. He carried on general farming until his death, and also, for some years, conducted "Greenawalt's Tavern," at Greenawald Station. Mr. Greenawalt was a very fearless man, and he had some very exciting experiences with bears. One day, while going to Hamburg with a four-horse team, he passed the home of Mrs. Borrell, and saw her running toward the road followed by a bear. Just as she got over the fence, the bear ran against it on the other side. Mr. Greenawalt cracked his whip as hard as he could and scared the animal away. Mrs. Borrell, who was slightly demented, owned a large orchard in which the apples were ripe. Seeing something on a tree which she took to be a thief, she attempted to scare him away, but she found the thief to be a bear, which began to chase her. On his arrival in Hamburg Mr. Greenawalt related the occurrence, and a large number of men armed with guns at once encircled the woods into which the bear had gone. The animal was chased out, but the man who saw it became so badly frightened that instead of shooting, he hid behind a tree until the bear had escaped. A short time afterward Mr. Greenawalt, in company with a relative, went to hunt raccoon one night and their dog chased a bear upon a tree. Mr. Greenawalt killed it with a shot gun on the second shot. It was so heavy that it required the strength of the two to carry it home. Many thought that this was the same bear that had chased Mrs. Borrell. One winter night, later, Mr. Greenawalt was going home from a farm house where he had been butchering, and had with him a "butcher's sausage" and several knives. Suddenly a bear that had evidently smelled the sausage jumped upon the fence near by, and would doubtless have attacked him had he not raised the knives and screamed lustily, thus frightening the bear away. He had not gone very far when the animal appeared again, and was scared away a second time. From this experience of Mr. Greenawalt a little bridge near the grist mill of Albert Kutz is still known as "Bear Bridge."

On March 31, 1834, Amos Greenawalt married Judith Stein, born Nov. 25, 1816, died Nov. 1, 1891, and fourteen children were born to them as follows: John, deceased; Catharine, deceased, m. to Samuel G. DeTurk; George, deceased, a soldier in the Civil war; William, a retired farmer, living at Kutztown, Pa.; Leah, deceased; Mary Magdalena, deceased, m. to George Dreibelbis; Solomon, deceased, a twin brother of Mary Magdalena; Amos S., mentioned below; Emma Judith, deceased, m. to Samuel Oswald; Susanna, m. to David Fister, of Grimville, Pa.; Moses, a farmer at Orwigsburg, Pa.; Eliza, m. to James Bitner, of Leinbach, Pa.; Matilda, twin sister of Eliza, m. to Seth Heinly, of Virginville, Pa.; and Alfred, formerly a school teacher and organist of the Union Church at Bernville, but now residing at Myerstown, Pennsylvania.

(V) Amos S. Greenawalt, born Oct. 31, 1845, at Greenawald Station, received his education in the public schools. At the age of twenty-two he began teaching, and secured two professional certificates, one from Supt. Samuel Baer and the other from Supt. David Brunner, passing his examinations in nearly all branches with A 1. He taught fourteen terms, in Albany township and Lenhartsville. After his marriage he engaged in farming, in which he has ever since been interested, owning a finely improved farm of 260 acres. He has also been interested in the general merchandise business since 1882, having started in that line in a store at Albany P. O., in Albany township, which he carried on for seven years before purchasing his present place of business at Kempton. His stock is large and he commands an extensive patronage. Mr. Greenawalt is very progressive, and he has made many improvements on his farm property since it came into his possession, particularly in the buildings, all of which are modern and well kept. His place is considered by many the finest and best located in Albany township, and it has suffered no deterioration since it came under his care. He raises many potatoes, seldom planting less than twenty or twenty-five acres to this one crop. He is up to date in his agricultural methods as well as in the conduct of his store.

Mr. Greenawalt is very active in the councils of the Reformed Church, of which he has been a member for many years, is at present an elder in the New Bethel Church, has been secretary of the consistory, and has also served as deacon. His principal work in this line, however, has been in the Sabbath-school. In 1868 he became superintendent of the Greenawalt Sunday-school, in Albany township, serving as such for fifteen years, and later he held the same office in the Trexler Sunday-school and in New Bethel Church Sunday-school, being superintendent of the latter for seven years. He was elected treasurer of the Berks County Sabbath School Association June 12, 1901, and has served in that office ever since. This association is auxiliary to the Pennsylvania Association, and he has also been prominently identified with International Sunday-school work since 1878; from about that time to the present he has been president of the Third District, having eight schools under his charge. He attends all the various county and State conventions of the associations. Mr. Greenawalt and his whole family all hold diplomas of the teachers' training department of the Pennsylvania Sunday-school Association. Mr. Greenawalt is a Republican in politics, and though he has not been remakably active in that field he served seven years as assistant postmaster at Albany.

On Oct. 9, 1869, Mr. Greenawalt married Eliza Dietrich, born in Greenwich township May 18, 1849, daughter of Samuel P. and Sarah (Heinly) Dietrich, the former a farmer of Greenwich township. Mrs. Greenawalt died March 8, 1876, the mother of three children, namely: Nora, born Jan. 2, 1871, m. Amandus A. Weisner, operator for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and residing at Glassboro, N. J., where he also conducts a small store (they have three children, Nevin, Silas and Paul); Edgar D. is mentioned below; Annie, born Nov. 28, 1874, lives at the home of her father. In 1881, Mr. Greenawalt m. (second) Mary Burkey, born in Greenwich township, Sept. 10, 1860, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Ann (Croll) Burkey, both deceased. They have two children: (1) Abner B. was born May 25, 1882, attended the public schools of Albany township, and at the age of thirteen he passed the township graduation examination under Supt. William M. Zechman. He taught school for two terms and then graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in 1902, after which he taught two more terms. He then became a clerk in his father's store. For a number of years he was superintendent of New Bethel Sunday-school and is at present secretary of the third Sunday-school district of Berks County. (2) Anson R., born March 11, 1884, also passed the township graduation examination, taught school one term and graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in 1905. Since that he has taught every year and in the summer he works for his father in the store and on the farm. He is at present superintendent of New Bethel Sunday-school. On April 17, 1909, he married Bertha E. Berk, born Jan. 12, 1886, daughter of Daniel P. and Alice (Lutz) Berk. Mrs. Amos S. Greenawalt is a member of the Lutheran Church.

(VI) Edgar D. Greenawalt, son of Amos S., was born at Greenawald Station March 18, 1872, and received his early education in the public schools of Albany township, under the instruction of his father and of Miss Kate Heinly (later the wife of Prof. Jarius Neff), and under the late Rev. Franklin S. Dietrich (who became a missionary to India, where he died while in the service). Mr. Greenawalt made the most of his advantages, acquired a good business education, later attended a select school at Steinsville, where he was under the tuition of Rev. John Weidlich, Howard Greenawalt, Esq., Rev. James Oswald and George Lutz (now attorney-at-law in Lehigh county, Pa.), and the Millersville Normal, at Millersville, Pa. In 1890 he was licensed to teach public school by Prof. William M. Zechman, then county superintendent, and he followed that profession for eight terms in Berks and Lehigh counties, meeting with gratifying success in his work. During this time he taught the grammar grades at Steinsville, and was also engaged in Albany (at Wessnersville), Maiden-creek and Robeson townships, Berks county. He taught under three county superintendents, William M. Zechman, Eli M. Rapp and J. O. Knauss (the latter of Lehigh county). After he abandoned teaching he clerked for five years in his father's general store at Kempton. Mr. Greenawalt has given considerable time to the study of art and music. He took lessons in the former from Ben Austrian, who is particularly known as a poultry painter, and also from Prof. Harry Sharadin, instructor of art at the Keystone State Normal School. Mr. Greenawalt is holding quite a number of fine works in oil. His musical instruction was received from Miss Trowbridge, a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music, now a teacher at the Millersville Normal; Mr. William Grim, of Hamburg, Pa., and Miss Annie Heinly (now the wife of the Rev. Mr. Shellheimer, of York, Pa.). He is quite proficient on the piano. He is a member of the Fewpera Orchestra, which takes its name from the initials of the Christian names of its seven original members; Frank Heinly is the leader of this organization.

For a number of years past Mr. Greenawalt has been engaged in business as a wholesale shipper of potatoes at Albany Station, and he also deals in flour, feed and grain, seeds, salt, slate, lime, cement, adamant, hair, land plaster and commercial fertilizers. In addition to this line, he takes orders for planing-mill work. His place of business is located along the Schuylkill & Lehigh railroad, and he ships annually about seventy-five car-loads of potatoes. He also handles coal and lumber.

On June 7, 1902, Mr. Greenawalt married Maggie M. Fister, born May 5, 1882, died Sept. 23, 1903, aged twenty-one years, four months, eighteen days. They had a son, Edgar E., born Sept. 12, 1903, who was but eleven days old when the mother died. Mrs. Maggie M. (Fister) was born in Kistler's Valley, the youngest child of Daniel P. and Catharine (Grim) Fister, the latter a daughter of Reuben and Sarah (Wanner) Grim (both buried at New Bethel Church). She was educated in the public schools, from which she graduated, and in select schools at Lynnport and Schnecksville, and in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. She took an active part in entertainments and in society work, and was a talented elocutionist. She met Mr. Greenawalt while he was engaged in teaching, and their marriage followed a year later. For a year the young couple lived with her parents, and then in the spring of 1903 moved to their own home, the death of the young wife occurring a few months later. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at New Bethel Church, the late Rev. J. N. Bachman officiating, taking as his text the Twenty-third Psalm. Miss Elmira R. Fister, sister of Mrs. Greenawalt, came to take charge of the home and the motherless infant, and on Feb. 7, 1907, she became the second wife of Mr. Greenawalt, the ceremony being performed by her cousin, Rev. Charles Kistler, of Reading. Mrs. Greenawalt was born in Albany township, and was educated in the public schools. She is domestic in her tastes and followed that line of work in Easton and in Philadelphia, and now in her own home is a model housekeeper and noted cook. To Mr. and Mrs. Greenawalt has been born a daughter, Miriam Ethel. At the present time they are planning to erect in 1910 a cozy brick home opposite the depot at Albany Station. The family are members of the Reformed Church, in the faith of which Mr. Greenawalt was confirmed by the late Rev. J. N. Bachman. He holds membership in the New Bethel (Corner) Church of Albany township, of which he was a deacon for two years, and he is at present a member of the choir, as are also his father and two of his brothers. Mr. Greenawalt was mainly instrumental in having the pipe-organ of the church repaired, at great expense. He played the organ in Sunday-schools for more than twenty years, and during the summer months played for two or three different Sunday-schools.

Mr. Greenawalt is a Republican in politics, but he was nevertheless elected, in the spring of 1909, in an overwhelmingly Democratic district, to the position of school director.

(V) Solomon S. Greenawalt, son of Amos, was born June 28, 1844, in Albany township, above Lenhartsville, and died on his farm June 3, 1888. He is buried at Jacksonville, Lehigh county. He was a farmer, owning the place which is now the property of his son James, and to which he had moved in the year 1870 and where he afterward lived until his death. He was a good citizen, interested especially in the question of public education, and served several terms as school director. He was a Reformed member of the Jacksonville Church. On May 20, 1866, Mr. Greenawalt married Sarah Faust, who died May 30, 1882, aged thirty-five years, ten months, twenty-three days, and was buried at the New Bethel Church. Seven children were born to this union: James V. is mentioned below; Rosa, born May 21, 1871, m. Jacob Sechler and lives at Steinsville; Mary J., born July 30, 1874, m. Isaac Trumbower, and died in June, 1905, in Denver, Colo., where she is buried; John O., born Dec. 7, 1875, lives at Daykin, Nebr.; Edward, born June 30, 1877, also lives at Daykin, Nebr.; Charles, born July 30, 1879, died Sept. 27, 1879; Lena, born Aug. 23, 1880, m. Herman Demminger, and they live at Phoenixville, Pa. On April 30, 1883, Mr. Greenawalt m. (second) Dianah Glase, of Lynn township, Lehigh county, and to them were born three children: Sarah (m. Harry Reinhart), Alfred (of Lynn township) and Kate (m. Amandus Kocher).

(VI) James V. Greenawalt was born Jan. 20, 1868, in Albany township, and there received his education in the public schools. He was reared to farming, and has lived on his present place since 1870. He bought the homestead after his father's death, and devotes his time to its improvement and cultivation. This place lies along the mountains, in the potato belt of the State, being in the extreme end of Albany township, between Mountain post-office and Steinsville, and adjoins Lehigh and Schuylkill counties. It is valuable as a mineral property as well as for agricultural purposes, coming within what is known as the slate region. Slate has been quarried on his place, and there are three slate quarries within two squares of his residence. Mr. Greenawalt raises many potatoes, planting on an average from twelve to fifteen acres, and his yield is usually about 125 bushels to the acre. The farm comprises 117 acres, of which thirty-five acres are woodland. This was formerly the Gabriel Faust homestead, and has been in the possession of the Greenawalts only since about 1870. The barn was built in 1785, and the house is a relic of Revolutionary days; the foundation and first story are of stone, and the second story is of logs.

On Oct. 3, 1891, Mr. Greenawalt married Miss Cora A. Pfeifly, daughter of Michael and Maria (Follweiler) Pfeifly, of Jacksonville, and granddaughter of Michael and Regina (Klump) Pfeifly, from near Lynnport, where Michael Pfeifly was a farmer. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Greenawalt: Raymond M., Howard S. and Helen C. This family are Reformed members of Jacksonville Union Church, of which he has been a trustee since January, 1909. He was formerly deacon for some years. He is a Republican in political matters. He is a well-known member of Washington Camp No. 288, P. O. S. of A. (in which he has passed all the chairs), and Steinsville Lodge, No. 249, I. O. O. F., both of Steinsville.

(IV) Samuel Greenawald, son of John, was born in Albany township Oct. 10, 1819, and died Dec. 9, 1901. He was an extensive land-owner and farmer in his native township, owning nearly six hundred acres of land in the vicinity of the Pinnacle of the Blue Mountains. A number of stories are told of the Indian depredations committed in the vicinity of Mr. Greenawald's home and thousands of relics have been found on his farm. For many years he conducted a distillery and burned hundreds of barrels of apple-jack. He was a prominent man in his district, and he and his family were members of the Bethel Church, in the burying-ground of which their remains are interred. Mr. Greenawald married Lydia Stump, daughter of Daniel and Lydia (Dietrich) Stump, and to them were born: Catharine, Lydia, Alfred, Sarah Ann, Samuel, Priscilla, Fayetta, John S., Hettie Ann, Elmira, D. Alvin and Thomas L.

(V) John S. Greenawald, who is successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits in Windsor township, Berks county, was born April 16, 1858, in Albany township, son of Samuel and Lydia (Stump) Greenawald. He attended the public schools until he was twenty-one years of age, and worked with his father until he was nearly thirty-four. In 1890 he purchased a good farm of seventy-nine acres, lying about one mile east of Windsor Castle, Pa. The property is in excellent condition and the appearance of the farm indicates that its owner is an up-to-date and hustling agriculturist. In politics he is a Republican of the Lincoln type, and has represented his party at various county conventions.

On Dec. 15, 1888, Mr. Greenawald married C. Janetta Werley, daughter of Daniel and Harriet (Greenawalt) Werley, the former of whom was born in Weisenburg, Lehigh county, June 27, 1823, and met an accidental death April 29, 1898. Her grandparents were Theobald and Magdalena (Bittner) Werley, the former a tanner by trade, who came to Albany township when a young man. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Greenawald. They are members of New Bethel Church, he being a Reformed member thereof, and deacon, and Mrs. Greenawald a Lutheran member. Since living near Windsor Castle they have attended Zion's Union Church, in Perry township. Mr. Greenawald is one of the township's substantial citizens. In 1905 he built an addition to his house and now has spring water at both the house and barn; there are also other conveniences which greatly add to the value of the property.

(II) Abraham Greenawalt, son of the pioneer, had sons: Jacob, Daniel and Abraham, Jr. Of these,

(III) Jacob Greenawalt had six children, viz.: Christian, Jacob, Abraham, Daniel, John, and Sally (m. John Gehringer).

(III) Daniel Greenawalt located in the Stony Run, in Berks county. He had four children, one son and three daughters. The son, Aaron, was a soldier in the Civil war, serving from Anoka, Minn. He was killed in the battle of Gettysburg.

(III) Abraham Greenawalt, Jr., and his family moved to Mercer county, Pa. His son Jonas lived at Easton, Pa. Charles S. Greenawalt, of Steinsville, is one of his descendants.

JOHN W. JACOBS, a substantial business man of Caernarvon township, whose fine farm of fifty-five acres is situated near the town of Joanna, Pa., is also engaged in contracting, and does a large creamery and ice business. Mr. Jacobs was born Aug. 24, 1849, at White Bear, Berks county, son of James R. and Mary (Wells) Jacobs.

James R. Jacobs was a native of Berks county, a son of Christian Jacobs. He married Mary Wells, born at Joanna, the daughter of William and Christiana (Beard) Wells.

John W. Jacobs was educated in the public schools of Caernarvon and Robeson townships, and early in life engaged in agricultural pursuits. On his fine fifty-five acre farm are located a saw and planing mill (where job work is done) and a fine residence, surrounded by native trees. He also has an ice house and creamery, the output of the latter being about 3,000 quarts of milk daily, which is shipped to Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Jacobs has also been quite extensively engaged in contracting, and in this, as well as in his other lines, he has been very successful. He is a man of much business ability, and his reputation for integrity in business dealings is an enviable one. Politically, he is a Republican, on the ticket of which party he has been elected to the offices of judge of election, auditor and member of the school board, of which he is now secretary. He and his family are members of Harmony Methodist Church, where he has served as a member of the board of stewards.

Mr. Jacobs married Barbara Ann Wells, daughter of James E. and Rosanna (Balb) Wells, and granddaughter of James and Mary Wells. To their union have been born the following children: Eva, born July 11, 1875, m. H. W. Dampman, lives in Canonsburg, Pa., and has one son,—John, born in February, 1897; J. Herbert, born June 10, 1877, m. Miss Elizabeth Rhine; Mary R., born Dec. 20, 1880, m. Clarence M. Stocker, lives in Amesville, O., and has two children,—Anna M., and C. Jackson; William Howard, born April 11, 1883; Carrie Ann, Sept. 8, 1885, died June 19, 1907; John W., Nov. 13, 1887; E. Merrill, Jan. 10, 1890; Wynn T., April 8, 1893; and Elizabeth E., June 21, 1897.

JOHN J. K. GITTELMAN, deceased, was for thirty-one years the popular proprietor of the "American House," formerly known as the "Cross Keys Hotel," in Spring township, Berks county, and an honored veteran of the Civil war. He was born in Lower Heidelberg township, this county, near Fritztown, Sept. 24, 1841, son of Michael and Sarah (Kleinginni) Guittelman, and died in May, 1909.

Henry Guittelman, the grandfather of John J. K., lived in Lower Heidelberg township from Revolutionary war times, and previously resided at what is now Germantown, Philadelphia, where his father, Dewalt Guittelman, had settled after coming to the New World from a town near Paris, France. Dewalt Guittelman had these children: Henry; Sarah, who married Daniel Gelsinger; Polly, who married Samuel Gelsinger (brother of Daniel); Barbara, who married Philip Fisher; Susanna, who married Daniel Fisher; Kate, who married Michael Fisher (brother of Daniel and Philip); Hannah, who married Michael Simon; and Elizabeth (Betsy), who died unmarried. It is a remarkable fact that all of Dewalt Guittelman's children died between the ages of seventy-five and ninety-two years. Henry Guittelman owned a small tract of land at the foot of Cushion Hill, in Lower Heidelberg township, where his death occurred. He married Catherine Fisher, and to them were born four children, namely: Michael, the father of John J. K.; Philip, who was a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township; Henry, a blacksmith by trade, who lived in Ohio, New York and elsewhere (he had an accomplished daughter, who traveled extensively abroad); and Elizabeth, who married Abraham Schlott, of Lower Heidelberg township.

Michael Guittelman, the father of John J. K., was born in Lower Heidelberg township, Sept. 17, 1818, and passed to his reward July 16, 1896, at the age of nearly seventy-eight years. He was a miller by trade, and for thirty-eight years worked in the ore banks for the Clymers and Eckerts, well known ironmasters of the earlier days of Berks county. He owned a small farm at Fritztown, which is now owned by Andrew J. Levengood. Mr. Guittelman was buried at Sinking Spring, Pa. He was married twice, first to Sarah Kleinginni, daughter of John Adam Kleinginna (this name is also spelled Klineguinea), of Bern township; she is buried at Epler's Church. To this union there were born: Henry; John J. K.; and Sarah, who married Frank Oxenreider.

John J. K. Gittelman was educated in the schools of Bern and Lower Heidelberg townships, and in the great University of Nature, under the rising and setting sun. He was engaged at farm work in Lancaster county until eighteen years of age, when he learned the trade of blacksmith at Blainsport, Pa., and this he followed for a period of twenty-two years. Upon the outbreak and continuance of the Civil war, young Gittelman's enthusiasm was aroused and his patriotism fired, and on Oct. 19, 1862, he enlisted, becoming corporal of Company E, 17th Pa. Vol. Cav., 2d Brigade, 1st Division, Army of the Potomac. With a snare drum he paraded the town and succeeded in getting four others to go to the front: Martin Reinhold, who was killed at Smithfield; Henry McQuate, who was killed at Shepherdstown; Jeremiah Mumah, who was killed at Five Forks; and J. B. Flickinger, also killed at Five Forks. Mr. Gittelman was thus the only one of the five who went from the town to return home. In time he became farrier of the regiment, which participated in numerous engagements, being engaged part of the time in some battles and throughout other engagements. The list of battles is as follows: 1862—Occoquan Creek, Dec. 19; Dumfries, Dec. 27; near Occoquan Creek, Dec. 28; 1863—Kelly's Ford, April 28; Rapidan River, April 29; Chancellorsville, May 1, 2 and 3; Beverly Ford, June 9; Stevensburg, June 9; Brandy Station, June 9; Aldie, June 16; Upperville, June 21; Ashby's Gap, June 21; Middleburg, June 21; Goose Creek, June 22; Gettysburg, July 1 and 2; Smithsburg, July 4; Williamsport, July 6; Funkstown, July 8; Boonsboro, July 9; Beaver Creek, July 8; Falling Waters, July 14; Brandy Station, Aug. 1; Raccoon Ford, Sept. 14; Robertson Ford, Sept. 19; Barnetts Ford, Sept. 24; Mortons Ford, Oct 11; Stevensburg, Oct. 11; Brandy Station, Oct. 11; Rappahannock Station, Oct. 12; Hunters Ford, Oct. 13; Rapidan River, Oct. 17; Oak Hill, Oct. 13; Thoroughfare Gap, Oct. 20; Liberty, Oct. 24; Bealton Station, Oct. 28 to 30; Ricksville, Nov. 8; Mine Run, Nov. 29, Dec. 30; 1864—Barnett's Ford, Feb. 5; Kilpatrick's Raid, Feb. 27 to March 15; Beaver Dam Station, Feb. 28; Taylorsville, Feb. 29; Ashland, March 1; Atlees Cross Road, March 2; Tunsdall Station, March 3; Wilderness, May 4; Furnace, May 6; Todds Tavern, May 7; Spottsylvania Court House, May 12; Glen Allen Station, May 10; Yellow Tavern, May 11; Meadow Bridge, May 12; New Castle Ferry, May 26; Hanoverton, May 27; Hawes Shop, May 28; Topotomy Creek, May 29; Old Church Tavern, May 30; Cold Harbor, May 31, June 1; Trevillian Raid, June 7 to 24; Trevillian Station, June 11 and 12; Whitehouse Landing, June 21; Jones Bridge, June 23; Charles City Court House, June 24; Deep Bottom, July 27 and 28; Darbytown, July 29; Berryville, Aug. 10; Newtown, Aug. 11; White Post, Aug. 11; Cedarville, Aug. 15; Front Royal, Aug. 16; Berryville, Aug. 22; near Charlestown, Aug. 21; Kearneysville and Shepherdstown, Aug. 25; Leetown, Aug. 28; Smithfield, Aug. 29; White Post, Sept. 1; Berryville, Sept. 6; Opequan Creek, Sept. 7; Bunker Hill, Sept. 13; Winchester, Sept. 19; Luray, Sept. 24; Smithfield, Sept. 29; Tom's Brook, Oct. 9; Newtown, Oct. 11; Cedar Creek, Oct. 19; White Post, Dec. 22; Gordonsville Raid, Dec. 22; Madison Court House, Dec. 23; 1865—Sheridan's Raid, James River, Feb. 28 to March 26; Dinwiddie Court House, March 30; Stony Creek, March 31; Five Forks, April 1; Scotts Cross Roads, April 2; Drummons Mill, April 4; Saylors Creek, April 6; Appomattox Station, April 8; Appomattox Court House, April 9. A number of minor engagements are not included in this list.

During his long and faithful service for his country Mr. Gittelman proved himself time and time again to be a brave and efficient soldier, and that he gained the respect of his officers may be seen from the following letters in his possession:

"Headquarters Company E, 17th Pa. Cav., June 13, 1865.

"I certify on honor that John J. K. Gittelman, Farrier, Co. E, 17th Pa. Cav., was Detailed upon Extra Duty in the Q. M. Dept. May 25, 1863, by proper Authority through the Hd. Qrs. of the 17th Pa. Cav. and has been mustered and paid according to the above named ranks, without any allowances for Extra Duty, upon Company Muster and Pay Rolls.

"WILLIAM TICE, Captain."

"Office Act'g Chief Qr. Master, 2nd Brig.,
"1st Cav. Division, June 14, 1865.

"The bearer, John J. K. Gittelman, a member of Company E, 17th Pa. Cavalry, has for the past two years served as a blacksmith in this Department and during that time has performed his duties well and given entire satisfaction, and I take pleasure in recommending him to be a good Blacksmith and a faithful, trustworthy man.

"J. B. WHEELER,
"Capt. and Act'g Chief Qr. Master."

After his return from the war Mr. Gittelman worked on the farm for a short time, and then engaged in blacksmithing, which he followed until 1878. In that year he became proprietor of the hotel at Montello, Pa., which he had purchased from the John Haas estate in 1876, and which is one of the oldest hotel stands in Berks county. It is known that it was a licensed place as early as 1824, and some of the older residents claim that it was licensed even as early as 1814. Mr. Gittelman rebuilt the hotel, which is located two miles from Sinking Spring on the road leading from Reading to Lancaster, and made it one of the best known and most popular hostelries in this section of the county. Under his management the house was well kept and noted particularly for cleanliness.

In political matters Mr. Gittelman was a Democrat, and he rendered valuable services to his party and to his township, serving as auditor for about fifteen years. He was very prominently identified with fraternal associations in Pennsylvania, being a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., of Reading, with which he was identified from 1884; Reading Royal Arch Chapter, No. 152, and Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T. He was also a member (charter) of Wernersville Lodge, No. 538, I. O. O. F., and of Knights of Pythias Lodge No. 155, at Sinking Spring, of which he was also a charter member. In this old lodge he passed through the chairs of the subordinate lodge five times, was district deputy grand chancellor four years, and was also a member of Castle No. 37, D. O. K. K., the social body of the order. He was well known in K. P. circles throughout Berks county. He was a member of St. John's Reformed Church, of Sinking Spring, of which he was a deacon in 1876, and after that time an elder. He had a fine lot in the new cemetery.

On Jan. 6, 1866, Mr. Gittelman was married to Catherine Houser, born March 20, 1838. They had no children of their own, but an adopted daughter, Mary Schlott, came into the family when seventeen years of age, in 1889. She is married and has a family, but still lives at the home of her adopted parents.

POTTEIGER FAMILY. The Potteiger—Pfatteicher, Batteicher—family of Berks county, Pa., has been on record in this Commonwealth since Oct. 5, 1737, when the ship "Townshead," from the Fatherland, landed passengers at Philadelphia. Among these passengers was Martin Pfatteicher, who settled in Heidelberg township, Berks county. He died probably late in November or early in December, 1791, as his will, made Jan. 19, 1791, was admitted to probate Dec. 20, 1791. [Will Book A., page 209.] He had one son, Martin, and five daughters, namely: Maria Elizabeth, Maria Eva, Maria Catharine, Maria Eva Rosina, and Susanna Catharine, the last named being the youngest in the family.

Martin Pfatteicher (Potteicher, Batteicher or Batteiger), son of the emigrant Martin, was a farmer and owned a large tract of land. The names of his wife and children are not known.

In Will Book A, page 535, is the record of the last will and testament of Adam Pfatteicher, said, by tradition, to have been a brother of Martin the emigrant. He was born Nov. 27, 1727, and died March 24, 1807, and is buried at Little Tulpehocken Church. His will, made May 10, 1804, was entered April 6, 1807, and in it are mentioned his children: John Adam, John, Michael, Conrad, Jacob (known as "Herrgodds" Jacob) and Samuel.

John Adam Potteicher, son of Adam, born June 30, 1755, died March 24, 1827. His wife, Barbara Pfatteicher (spelling of name taken from tombstone in Little Tulpehocken churchyard), born May 8, 1761, died Nov. 8, 1821. They were the parents of three children: Adam, who died young; John, mentioned below; and Catharine (born Jan. 12, 1780, died Sept. 10, 1847), who married Michael Miller (born Aug. 11, 1777, died July 23, 1830, after thirty-one years of married life), both being buried at Little Tulpehocken Church.

Herrgodds Jacob Botteiger, son of Adam, born in 1769, died in 1853. He married Barbara Mountz, and their son, Johannes, born April 5, 1795, who married Margaretha Haak (or Haag), became the father of eight children and died Aug. 27, 1858.

John Potteicher, son of John Adam, was born Aug. 30, 1783, and died April 25, 1858, aged seventy-four years, seven months, twenty-five days. He was a man of more than ordinary intelligence and good judgment, and was prominent in the public life of his day. For many years he was justice of the peace, and he served in the General Assembly in 1831-34 and 1842-44 and was State senator from 1847 to 1849. He married Catharine Noll, born Oct. 27, 1789, who died Dec. 30, 1852, aged sixty-three years, two months, three days. Eight children were born to them, as follows: (1) Daniel was reared in Upper Bern township, and became a prominent man, holding a number of county offices, serving as county surveyor, 1845-50; clerk of Orphans' court, 1854-57; clerk in Reading post-offic , three years. He died in Reading and is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. He married Maria Babb, and they had sixteen children, eight of whom died young, those surviving childhood being Dr. Jonathan B. (prominent man and noted surgeon of Hamburg, with an enviable Civil war record, who has a son, George, also a physician and surgeon), Alfred, Maria, Eli, Sarah, Catharine, Rebecca and Augustus. (2) John married Eliza Conrad, and had ten children: Hiram, Rancon, Lizzie, Catharine, Ellen, Emma, Calvin, John, Wilson and Sydney. (3) William N., born Nov. 15, 1821, died Sept. 5, 1894, aged seventy-two years, nine months, twenty days. For about six years he lived on the old John Adam Potteicher homestead in Jefferson township, and then purchased a part of it, on which he erected a set of fine buildings, and there made his home for some thirty-odd years, being a very successful and prominent farmer. He was an honored citizen and always active in public affairs, making a fine record as an official. For thirty years he served his township as justice of the peace; from 1862 to 1864 he was an Assemblyman. He retired in 1890, and moved to Reading, where he died four years later, his wife surviving but one year. He married Esther Kauffman, born Aug. 16, 1830, died Nov. 14, 1895, aged sixty-five years, two months, twenty-eight days, and they became the parents of eleven children: Mary, who married Daniel S. Schaeffer; Clara, who married George Huber; John, unmarried; Alice, who married Edward T. Schmehl; Annie, who married Morgan Klopp; James, who married Maggie Harner; Thomas (1865-1882); Sallie M., who married William A. Dietrich (1866-1903); Nora E., who married James H. Unger (1869-1898); Rosa, who married William Bernhart; and Ella, who married Dr. Walter Herr. (4) Samuel married Eliza Moyer, and they have five children: Ann Matilda, Kate, Frank, George and Madison. (5) Adam married Maria Schaeffer, and has two children, Wilson and John. (6) Elizabeth married Jacob Minnich, and they had two children, Adam and Ellen. (7) Catharine married Adam Bright. They had no children. (8) Sallie married John Filbert, and had three children: Heister; Frank, deceased; and Amelia.

Michael Potteicher, mentioned as a son in the last will of Adam Pfatteicher, filed April 6, 1807, married and had a son John.

John Potteicher, son of Michael and grandson of Adam, was a very prominent man, and was known all over Berks county. He was high sheriff of the county from 1850 to 1853, and it is probable that he is the John Potteiger on record as county commissioner from 1825 to 1828. Sheriff Potteicher had three sons: (1) Levi is mentioned below. (2) Amos married and had two children: Samuel N., a prominent real estate dealer of Reading; and Clara, who married George Haag. (3) William married a Miss Ruth and had a daughter, Nora.

Levi Potteiger, son of Sheriff John, was born near Kissinger's Church in Bern township, and he engaged in agricultural pursuits and cattle droving in Berks county all his life. He carried on an extensive business, and was known not alone all over his own county but as far as Philadelphia. He married Barbara Beidler, of Reading, and they had children: John; Abraham Lincoln; Alice, who married John Grill; Annie, who married Calvin Leinbach; Sallie, who married William Kolp; Nora, deceased; Irwin and Alvin.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN POTTEIGER, son of Levi and Barbara (Beidler), was born in Spring township April 19, 1861. He attended the district schools in Spring and Bern townships, and at the age of twenty-one began life for himself, first engaging in butchering, a trade which he followed successfully at West Reading and Shillington. In 1897 he located at Third and Walnut streets, Reading, to carry on the same line, and then went into the hotel business at Myerstown, Lebanon county, where he remained two years. From there Mr. Potteiger went to Kleinfeltersville, where he also spent two years. In 1902 he returned to Cumru township, taking charge of the "Green Tree Hotel," which he conducted with great profit for four years. In the spring of 1906 he removed to his father-in-law's farm of 100 acres, near the "Three Mile House," and there he is still actively engaged in farming. In politics Mr. Potteiger is a Democrat, and in religious faith he and his family are Reformed, belonging to the Shillington Church. He is a member of Reading Castle, No. 49, K. G. E., and of the Independent Order of Americans at Shillington.

In June, 1883, Mr. Potteiger married Hannah C. High, daughter of William P. High, and to this union have been born three children: Florence H., Helen H. and Ralph H., of whom the last named died in infancy.

Jacob Batteicher, grandfather of Charles W. Potteiger, of Reading, and of the brothers Albert, Webster J., Charles E. and Samuel O., of Spring township, was born March 5, 1797, and died Nov. 22, 1854, aged fifty-seven years, eight months, seventeen days; he is buried at Kissinger's Church, of which he was an official member. He was a lifelong farmer in Bern township, also operating what is known as the Potteiger Mill. He married Christiana Minnich, daughter of Benjamin and Susan, born Sept. 9, 1799, died Sept. 19, 1873, aged seventy-four years, ten days. They were the parents of seven children: (1) Adam, born Jan. 14, 1825, died June 24, 1882, aged fifty-seven years, five months, ten days, and is buried at Hinnershitz church. He lived near Leesport. He married Lovina Peacock, and they had children, Catharine, Samuel, Adam, William, Wellington, Emma, Mary, Kate and Nora. (2) Henry is mentioned below. (3) Mary Ann married William Yocum, who lived at Stouchsburg, and is mentioned at length elsewhere in this work. (4) Ellen, born in 1839, died in 1903, married James Hess, of Tuckerton, Pa. (5) Jacob is mentioned below. (6) Ann married Israel Shirk, and had four children: Frank, Henry, Sallie and Mary. (7) Another daughter married (first) Levi Gring, and (second) Israel Shirk. The family were all Lutherans in religious belief, and the father was a Whig in politics.

Henry Potteiger, son of Jacob and Christiana (Minnich), was born in Tulpehocken township March 15, 1828, and died March 20, 1896, aged sixty-eight years, five days. He was early trained to farm work, and when he started out for himself it was to engage in farming and droving. He bought his cattle in the neighboring counties, and many of them he shipped to Spring City, where he disposed of them at public sale. He was a very well-known man, and had friends wherever he went. About 1855 he came to Sinking Spring, and purchased a farm of about ninety-six acres, upon which he made his home for twenty-eight years. This farm is now in the possession of his son, Albert. In his political faith he was a Republican, and in religious belief a Lutheran, for many years being an elder in St. John's Lutheran Church at Sinking Spring, and he is buried in the cemetery there. He married Eliza Ann Yocum, who was born March 16, 1832, daughter of Daniel Yocum; she died Feb. 9, 1896, when she was aged sixty-three years, ten months, twenty-three days. They had twelve children: (1) Daniel married Lizzie M. Spohn, and they live at Annville, Pa. He is one of the most extensive cattle dealers in Lebanon and adjoining counties. (2) Franklin married Sarah Reber, and lives in Spring township, where he conducts a large farm, paying great attention to dairy products. Their children are: William, Jennie, Hettie and Cora. (3) Howard. (4) Albert. (5) Henry W. married Ida S. Leinbach, and they reside at No. 200 West Oley street, Reading. (6) Webster J. (7) Emma C. married Henry H. Yost, a farmer one and one-half miles north of Sinking Spring. (8) Charles E. (9) William died in infancy. (10) Samuel O. (11) Ellen E. married Charles Schrack, formerly a railroad employe, but later in the wheelwright business at Wernersville. (12) Agnes M. married Stephen Weidman, of Sinking Spring, where he conducts a butcher's stand. In 1908, on the fifty-fifth birthday of the eldest son, Daniel, the sons and daughters of Henry and Eliza Ann (Yocum) Potteiger assembled at his home in Annville. Eleven of the twelve children are living, and these were all present. The family at that time included thirty grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

ALBERT POTTEIGER, son of Henry, and a well-known farmer of Sinking Spring, was born in the township where he still resides Nov. 17, 1857. He was reared upon his father's farm, which, as stated above, is now in his possession. For twelve years he lived at Wernersville, where he was employed at different occupations. In 1897 he became the owner of his present place of seventy-two acres, and has since devoted his entire time to its cultivation. He has all the latest improved machinery, and has some fine live stock. He sells his butter and cream in Sinking Spring and markets his fine fruit in Reading. In politics he is a Republican. Socially he is a member of Washington Camp, No. 99, P. O. S. of A., at Wernersville. He and his family attend Trinity Lutheran Church at Wernersville. On Oct. 18, 1883, Mr. Potteiger was married to Miss Kate Gaul, born July 28, 1861, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Gockley) Gaul. They have one child, Roy H., born Jan. 20, 1894.

Mrs. Potteiger's grandparents were Dietrich Gockley, born 1777, died 1845, and his wife, Eva Mohr, born 1784, died 1851. They are buried at Hain's Church.

WEBSTER J. POTTEIGER, son of Henry, and a well-known farmer and dairyman residing at Sinking Spring, was born Dec. 9, 1861. He was brought up on the farm, and worked for his father until he was of age. He then worked for four years in the warehouse of Conrad D. Reber, of Sinking Spring, and at the end of that time entered the dairy business. He has conducted a daily milk route in Reading since 1897, and until the spring of 1904 purchased his milk from other farmers, but that year he purchased the Joel Steffy farm from Mrs. H. W. Potteiger, of Reading. His farm consists of 115 acres of the best land in Spring township. The buildings are of the very best, the barn is 46x108 feet in dimensions, and everything about the place reflects the greatest credit on the management. Mr. Potteiger has twenty head of cattle and some excellent horses. The most up-to-date and approved methods and machinery are used on his place. As a good Republican he is keenly interested in public affairs, although his own business leaves him no time for the holding of public position. He and his family are members of St. John's Lutheran congregation, and he served as deacon for a number of years.

On Oct. 30, 1887, Mr. Potteiger was married to Miss Sallie Y. Phillips, daughter of Reuben and Mary (Yoder) Phillips, farming people of Leesport. Eight children have blessed this union, namely: Herbert P., Reuben H., Clinton S., Grace E., Mary M., Mabel I., Granville Webster and Paul E. The members of this family are all highly respected and hold an enviable place in the community.

Charles E. Potteiger, son of Henry, is a farmer and drover at Sinking Spring, residing on the farm on which he was born Dec. 7, 1865. He acquired his education in the township schools, and assisted his parents on the home farm until he was twenty-one. For the following thirteen years he was employed as a lineman for the railroad company. In 1902 he began farming, and for two years continued this vocation in connection with droving. Since 1899 he has made his home in Sinking Spring. At the present time he is dealing extensively in cattle, which he buys on frequent Western trips by the carload, and disposes of at public sale in his village. He is very enterprising and progressive, and is looked upon as one of the successful men of Sinking Spring. Like all his family he is a stanch Republican in his political views. He is a member of Camp No. 282, P. O. S. of A., at Sinking Spring.

On May 24, 1890, Mr. Potteiger was married to Miss Kate H. Yocum, daughter of Benjamin and Catherine Yocum, of Sinking Spring. They have one daughter, Helen Y.

Samuel O. Potteiger, son of Henry, and now a popular rural mail carrier at Sinking Spring, was born in Spring township on his father's farm Aug. 16, 1868. He received a good common school education in his native township, and worked on his father's farm. In 1887 he learned the hat finishing trade with the Hendels at Montello, this county, and this he followed until 1904, when he was appointed rural mail carrier from the Sinking Spring office. He was assigned to Route No. 2, which covers twenty and two-tenths miles per day. In politics he is a Republican, and has been active in public affairs, was a delegate to county convention, and in 1900 was the census enumerator of Spring township.

Mr. Potteiger resides in his own comfortable residence, which is on Lancaster avenue, and is surrounded by a beautiful lawn. He is a good citizen and has many friends. He is financial secretary of Camp No. 282, P. O. S. of A., a position he has held since 1896; and he is Sir Knight Marshal of Loyal Chamber, No. 43, Knights of Friendship, both lodges at Sinking Spring. He and his family are members of St. John's Lutheran Church, in which he has been deacon and (since 1901) a member of the choir. Prior to 1898 he was a teacher in the Sunday-school, that year becoming assistant superintendent, and he has also continued teaching a part of the time since.

On May 20, 1887, Mr. Potteiger was married to Miss Emma I. Body, daughter of Henry and Catherine (Leader) Body, farming people of Bern township. Two sons and two daughters have come to this union: Harry E., chief clerk of the Reading Shale Brick Company; Walter L.; Helen Margarite, and Esther May.

Jacob Potteiger, son of Jacob and Christiana (Minnich), and brother of Henry, mentioned above, was born Feb. 6, 1834, in Bern township. Until he was sixteen years of age he lived on the home farm, assisting as he could in its operation. He then began to learn the shoemaker's trade, which, however, he never followed. He engaged in the buying and selling of cattle and horses, this continuing to be his occupation as long as he lived. He died April 27, 1898, in the faith of the Lutheran Church. In politics he was a Republican. He married (first) Sarah Ahrens, born Feb. 2, 1835, and the children of this union were: Charles W.; Peter, born Sept. 19, 1859; Anna L., born July 23, 1861; Jacob B., born Jan. 7, 1863; and George W., born Dec. 15, 1865. Mr. Potteiger married (second) Eliza Shanneman, born in Berks county, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Gable) Shanneman, and to this marriage was born one daughter, Elizabeth, Sept. 23, 1873, now the wife of Frank W. Bitting, of Shillington. Mrs. Potteiger resides with her daughter.

Charles W. Potteiger, son of Jacob and Sarah (Ahrens) Potteiger, was born in Bern township March 23, 1858, and is now engaged as a wholesale and retail tobacconist at Reading. He was educated in the common schools of Berks county, and at Muhlenberg College, Allentown, and for five years was engaged in teaching school in his native township. He then engaged in business with his father, purchasing cattle throughout the Western states, a business he later followed with John C. Potteiger, and still later alone until 1888, when he was appointed revenue collector for the First district of Pennsylvania. He served in that capacity until 1892, when he engaged in the jobbing and wholesaling of cigars, a business he has carried on to the present time with much success. He employs several salesmen in the conduct of his business, and his goods are known for their excellence and uniform quality. His factory is located at Sixth and Washington streets, Reading, with a branch store at No. 510 Penn street.

In 1881 Mr. Potteiger married Miss Ida Ruth, daughter of Reuben Ruth, and they have three children: Clarence, Edna and Adeline. In fraternal connection Mr. Potteiger is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 62, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Harrisburg Consistory; Reading Lodge of Perfection; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Lexington Lodge, K. of P. He and Mrs. Potteiger attend Trinity Lutheran Church. Mr. Potteiger is a stanch Republican, and was on the board of public works for eight years, and chairman of the Republican committee, as well as a delegate to the convention at Chicago that nominated President Roosevelt. He is a member of the Republican State Central Committee, and in 1908 was a candidate on the Republican ticket for county commissioner. He has always been a public-spirited citizen, and any movements having for their object the welfare of the city or its citizens have Mr. Potteiger's hearty support.

Franklin S. Potteiger, who was a miller by trade, followed that occupation for many years in Schuylkill county, and later removed to Berks county, where he operated the well-known Hiester mill. In 1866 he located in Reading, and died here at the age of thirty-eight years. He married Susan Brobst, daughter of David Brobst, and she now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Walter M. Tyson, of Reading. To Mr. and Mrs. Franklin S. Potteiger were born children as follows: James, a barber at Ninth and Franklin streets, Reading; Edward, who died young; Albert S.; Mary, who married Walter M. Tyson, city treasurer of Reading; and Franklin, who died young.

Albert S. Potteiger, son of Franklin and Susan, and proprietor of the Riverside Planing Mill, at Third and Bern streets, Reading, was born in Schuylkill county, Jan. 25, 1863. He attended the schools of Reading and Upper Bern township, at the latter place taking a two years' course in German. He then entered the business college of E. E. Post, Reading, after leaving which he engaged with the Penn Hardware Company, being employed in the drilling and riveting department. He next learned the hat making business with a Mr. Stieff, with whom he continued for some time, his next work being with the Reading Iron Company. At the end of two years he engaged in the planing-mill at Franklin and Carpenter streets, later known as the Penn Planing Mill, where he remained for eight years. He then took charge of the Reading Box Factory for a year, after which he assumed charge of the old planing-mills. In 1894 Mr. Potteiger associated himself with Joseph Hodge, Isaac Sherman and James W. Kerst, under the name of the Excelsior Planing Mill, Hodge & Co., for general mill planing work. They located at No. 133 Pearl street, and began with several hands. Mr. Potteiger was president and general manager of this company, with which he remained twelve years, at the end of which time the business of the company had so grown as to necessitate the employment of sixty-eight hands. On March 14, 1896, Mr. Potteiger retired from this company, and on June 1, 1896, he began his present business, buying the building of the American Match Company, at Riverside, and in fourteen days had his plant operating and receiving orders. He has had a large and rapidly increasing trade throughout the State, employing thirty-five skilled mechanics. The factory is a large two-story building, 80x120 feet, and is fully equipped with the latest planing-mill machinery.

In 1906 Mr. Potteiger married Catharine Kochel, daughter of John A. Kochel, a well-known stone-mason who worked for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and the Wilmington & Northern Railroad Company. Mr. Potteiger is a member of the B. P. O. E., Lodge No. 115, Reading; the K. G. E., and the Modern Woodmen of America. Both he and his wife are consistent members of the Lutheran Church, and are active in its work. They reside at their pleasant home, No. 127 Spring street, where their many friends are always welcome. Mr. Potteiger is independent in political matters.

HEYDT. The Heydt family of Berks county is descended from one George or Jacob Heydt, a German of high birth who emigrated to this country in pioneer times and on coming to this section first settled in the vicinity of what is now Bechtelsville. Later he lived in what is now District township, Berks county, owning the farm which is now the property of Joshua Heydt. He was an educated man, and was a "lehrer" or schoolmaster in Berks county long before the establishment of the public school system, following the profession for many years, so that he was well known to the youth of the early days. He was a true Christian man, well versed in the Scriptures, and a strict member of the Lutheran denomination, belonging to the Hill Church, where he and his family are buried. He married a Muthart, and they had eight children: Jacob, a blacksmith, who lived in District township, m. Maria Reichert, and they had thirteen children, Betzy, Catharine, Elijah, Maria, David, Jacob, Sally, Sophia, John, Rebecca, Joseph, Leah and Lydia. Abraham is mentioned in the next paragraph. John was a farmer in Washington township, where he died; his children were John, Henry, Helena, Sally and Abby. Daniel, a stone-mason and farmer, lived and died at Landis Store, in District township; his children were John, Thomas, Daniel, George and Lewis. George, a mechanic, lived in the vicinity of Huff's Church; he had three children, George (whose son Horace is a judge of Carbon county, Pa., and who has the passport of his emigrant ancestor Heydt), Nathan and Jonas. Matthias, who located at Mahanoy City, Pa., had two sons Catharine m. Henry Snyder. Peggy m. Philip Weller.

Abraham Heydt, son of the emigrant, was the grandfather of Henry B. and Abraham M. Heydt, cousins, residents, respectively, of Earl township and Bechtelsville, Berks county. He was born Dec. 19, 1786, died Sept. 1, 1853, and is buried at the old Hill Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. He was an intelligent man, especially familiar with the Scriptures. Though a shoemaker by trade, he followed farming principally, living in what is now District township, where he owned a small farm; he also owned a farm in the Falkner Swamp. He married Maria De Frain, (Froene), daughter of Peter and Bevvy (Bolich) De Frain, and eight children were born to them: Benjamin is mentioned farther on; Joshua lived in District township; William is mentioned farther on; Benneville died young; Elizabeth m. a Frederick; Judith m. Joseph Hoffman; Harriet m. William Quillman; Catharine m. Lafayette Gehris.

Benjamin Heydt, son of Abraham, born in Hereford township Oct. 19, 1813, died in Washington township in March, 1887, in his seventy-fourth year, and is buried at the Hill Church. He was a shoemaker, but followed that trade only a short time, and worked out, hauling and burning wood, etc. He owned a farm of twenty-six acres. Mr. Heydt married Margaretha Becker, daughter of Henry Becker, born Sept. 11, 1819, died Feb. 20, 1903, aged eighty-three years, five months, ten days. Ten children were born to this union: Henry B.; Lavina, m. to Daniel Herb; Mary, born April 5, 1844, m. to Israel Weller; Elizabeth, born April 5, 1846, m. to Adam Herb (deceased); Benneville, born in 1849, who died in 1854; Fietta, born Jan. 25, 1851, m. to Esaias Heydt; Matthias, born in 1854, who died the same year; Carl, born Nov. 6, 1857, who lives in District township; Sarah, who died young; and Emma, born June 5, 1861, m. to Charles Bechtel.

Henry B. Heydt, son of Benjamin, was born July 11, 1838, in District township. He attended the old pay schools, and also had a few winters in the free school. In early youth he began to assist his father hauling wood, which was plentiful in those days, and which was converted into charcoal. The roads at that time were few and bad, and it required some skill to be a good teamster. When he was nineteen Mr. Heydt began to learn the trade of stone and brick mason, which he followed for twenty-three years, in 1880 settling down to farm life. That year he bought the W. Renninger tract of fifty-six acres in School District No. 5, Earl township, where he has since lived, and which place he and his family continue to cultivate. It was the property of David Koch before Mr. Renninger owned it. Mr. Heydt is a Democrat in political opinion, and has been quite active in his party, having served as delegate and held various local offices.

In 1861 Mr. Heydt married Lavina Moser, daughter of Michael and Mary (Weller) Moser, of District township, and they have three children: Fianna, who is unmarried; Jerome, a farmer in Pike township, Berks county; and Andora, unmarried. Mr. Heydt and his family are Lutheran members of the Hill Church.

William Heydt, son of Abraham and grandson of the emigrant, was born in 1825 in District township, and died in 1891, at the age of sixty-five years, at Alburtis, Lehigh county, being accidentally killed on the railroad. He is buried at Lehigh Church. He was a forge man, in the iron business, and owned a forge in Rockland township, Berks county, which he carried on for twelve years, meeting with steady success in business. He owned two farms. Mr. Heydt married Villia Mast, daughter of Daniel Mast, of Rockland township, and she died in November, 1879, the mother of children as follows: Abraham M., Mary, Frank, Jefferson, William, Sarah, Katie, Annie and Emma.

Abraham M. Heydt, son of William, was born Sept. 7, 1853, in Rockland township and there and in Longswamp township received his education in the public schools. His teachers in Rockland were Isaac and Jonas Eckert. Upon commencing to earn his own living he worked in the ore mines in Longswamp township and also in Lehigh county, continuing thus for six years, and becoming an engineer. When twenty-five years old he learned the milling business, at Ludwig's, in Lehigh county, and then removed to Saegerstown, Crawford county, where he was in the milling business for two years. Returning to Berks county he located in Hereford township, where he worked in Christman's mill, in Spoon Valley, and later he was employed at Treichlersville, also at milling. He was next at the Rush mill for a year, thence coming to Oberholtzer's mill, near Bechtelsville, in Colebrookdale township. At that place he worked nineteen years for J. B. Oberholtzer, and in the spring of 1904 commenced the business on his own account, at Bechtelsville, being the proprietor of the Bechtelsville roller-mill. His establishment is well patronized and profitably conducted, and Mr. Heydt enjoys the reputation of being one of the substantial citizens and business men of the borough.

In 1878 Mr. Heydt married Emeline R. Moll, daughter of Christophel and Susanna (Rapp) Moll, of Hereford township, and three children have been born to them: Katie S., m. to William R. Conrad, of Bechtelsville; Clara V., m. to Harvey W. Stauffer; and William, who died in infancy. This family are members of the Bechtelsville Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Heydt has been a prominent worker, having served sixteen years as a member of the church council.

Mr. Heydt is a stanch Democrat, and since 1905 has been the member from Bechtelsville on the Democratic county committee. He has frequently served as delegate to the county conventions, and for eight years was committeeman of Colebrookdale township. His activities have made him a well-known figure in county politics, and in 1903 he was a candidate for the office of county poor director. Mr. Heydt belongs to Camp No. 324, P. O. S. of A., at Bechtelsville, and to Council No. 1019, Order of Independent Americans, at Eshbach, Berks county.

JOHN R. MELCHER, superintendent of the Orr & Sembower Company, of Millmont, a suburb of Reading, was born in Reading, June 4, 1866, and has resided there all his life. His parents were Charles and Sarah (Lotz) Melcher. Charles Melcher, a machinist who conducted a shop at Nos. 226-228 Carpenter street, was born in Philadelphia in 1831. He was captain of Company B, of the 167th Regiment, Pennsylvania Militia, receiving his commission from Andrew G. Curtin, then governor of the state, Nov. 6, 1862. He began service Dec. 11, of that year, and was mustered out Aug. 12, 1863. Sarah (Lotz) Melcher, his wife, was born July 17, 1836, and died Dec. 24, 1886, aged fifty years. She was the daughter of Philip and Annie (East) Lotz of Germany. Philip Lotz was the father of the following children: Cyrus (m. Hannah Trate); Jeremiah, who died in war; Sarah (m. Charles Melcher); Catharine (m. Alfred Franks); Michael, who died in war; Ivens (deceased, m. Catharine Wolf); Andrew (m. Ellen Leab); Annie (m. Joseph Higel and Harry Cook); and three children who died in infancy.

This family was endowed with a noble patriotism, for the brothers and brothers-in-law on both sides fought for their country in the Civil war.

John R. Melcher attended the public schools and when ready for the practical business of life learned the hatting trade with the Henry B. Hendel Company. After his apprenticeship was completed, he entered the employ of the Orr & Sembower Company, at the time it established its plant on Pine street, and has remained with the firm ever since, with the exception of about a year and a half. He has practically grown up with the business, has been promoted from time to time, and in 1901 he was made superintendent of the plant, in charge of all the machinery and with 225 men under him. His steady rise tells in itself the story of his faithfulness and efficiency and indicates the many sterling qualities of Mr. Melcher's character.

On May 30, 1889, Mr. Melcher was married to Miss Ada Rhoads, daughter of Jonathan Rhoads. To them have been born a son and daughter, Herbert R. and Dorothy R. Mr. and Mrs. Melcher are members of the Universalist Church. Mr. Melcher belongs to two secret orders, the Odd Fellows and the Royal Arcanum. In the former organization he is enrolled in Lodge No. 218, in Mt. Penn Encampment, No. 152, and in Canton No. 2, Patriarchs Militant. In the Royal Arcanum he is a member of Lodge No. 495. He also belongs to Liberty Fire Company.

JOSEPH LININGTON GEHRIS, a leading citizen of Reading, Pa., who is now serving in the position of school controller of the Tenth ward of the city, was born March 27, 1868, in Reading, son of James and Martha (Moyer) Gehris.

James Gehris (Garis), father of Joseph L., was born in 1826, in the Falkner Swamp, near Pottstown, Pa., and came to Reading prior to the Civil war. When a young man he learned the carpenter trade, and this occupation he followed the major portion of his life in Berks and Schuylkill counties, residing at Frackville from 1869 to 1892, and from the latter year until his death in November, 1895, in the First ward, Reading. While a resident of Frackville Mr. Gehris acted as foreman of bridge construction for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, was an excellent mechanic, and taught many carpenters the trade. At the outbreak of the Civil war Mr. Gehris went to the front in the defense of his country, enlisting as a private in Company F, First Pennsylvania Reserves. After the war Mr. Gehris took a great deal of interest in Grand Army affairs, being a member of Sherandoah Post until his death, and was also connected with the Union Veteran Legion.

Mr. Gehris was married to Martha Moyer, daughter of Michael and Catherine (Hartline) Moyer, the former a hotel keeper of Reading. To Mr. and Mrs. Gehris were born these children: Henry A., foreman of the Reading Brass Foundry, a department of the Reading Railway, married Katie Reifsnyder; John, a machinist in the employ of the Government at the Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va., married Lizzie Humma, who is now deceased; James, a machinist of Reading; Joseph L.; George, who conducts a restaurant at Johnstown, Pa.; Elizabeth, who married Noah Rissmiller of Sacramento, Cal.; and Martha, who married E. Fred Davis, a merchant of Hampton, Va.

Joseph Linington Gehris was taken when one year old to Frackville, Schuylkill county, by his parents, and there he obtained his preliminary education, later attending the late Prof. D. B. Brunner's business college at Reading After his school days were over he worked in the coal mines for two years, and at the age of seventeen years he learned the machinist's trade with the Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co., serving a full apprenticeship with this company. In 1891 he entered the employ of the Diamond Drill & Machine Company, Birdsboro, where through industry and ability he has worked his way to the position of master mechanic. In politics Mr. Gehris is a Democrat, and in the spring of 1904 he was elected a school controller of the Tenth ward, being interested in educational matters, in the advancement of which he has been very active. Mr. Gehris is a thirty-second degree Mason, served as master of Lodge No. 62, of Reading, was later a charter member of Isaac Hiester Lodge No. 660, and is a presiding officer, a charter member of Reading Lodge of Perfection, of which he is orator, and a member of Bloomsburg Consistory and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of which he is High Priest. He is also a member of Camp No. 611, P. O. S. of A., and has been a contributing member of the Ringgold Band for a number of years. Since the spring of 1905 Mr. Gehris and his family have lived at No. 1216 Spruce street.

On Dec. 10, 1891, Mr. Gehris was married to Elizabeth R. Hahn, born June 18, 1873, daughter of Ezra E. and Annie (Moyer) Hahn and granddaughter of Daniel M. Hahn, and to this union there have been born eight children, as follows: Annie E., born Dec. 18, 1892; Helen N., born Nov. 20, 1894; Florence J., born Sept. 27, 1896, died March 26, 1898; Joseph L., Jr., born April 20, 1898; Martha C., born Dec. 30, 1900; Thomas P., born July 24, 1903, died Sept. 27, 1903; John P., born Feb. 9, 1905; and Emma Jane, born March 9, 1907. Mr. Gehris and family are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Reading, Pa. He is a vestryman and treasurer at the present time.

IRVIN P. FESSLER, a well known citizen of the borough of West Reading, where he has resided since 1902, was born Jan. 10, 1875, at Womelsdorf, Berks county, son of John and Clara S. (Feeg) Fessler.

John Fessler was born near Strausstown, Berks county, Aug. 9, 1844, a son of Isaac and Catherine (Hide) Fessler. He was reared in the vicinity of his birthplace living five years with Reuben Manbeck, two with Admer Ruth and two with Michael Miller, when he became eighteen years of age and enlisted as a private in Company H, 151st Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. His company became a part of the army of the Potomac and took an active part in the series of engagements throughout Virginia which culminated in the battle of Gettysburg where he was severely wounded in the first day's fight. Shortly after the battle he received an honorable discharge and, after his wound was healed, became an attaché of the Engineer Corps of Hood and Thomas in their Tennessee campaign and remained until the close of the war, when he returned to care for his mother at Strausstown.

He learned the trade of carpentry and later removed to Womelsdorf where he engaged in contracting and building. Here he married Clara S. Feeg, born Sept. 30, 1848, at the Conrad Weiser homestead, a daughter of Daniel and Rebecca (Foltz) Feeg, of Heidelberg township. To this union there were born children as follows: Elva, who married Geo. B. Kafroth of Ephrata township, Lancaster County, and to whom two children were born; Minnie, wife of Harvey G. Zwalley, Philadelphia, and Ida E. (Millersville S. N. S.); Frederick, of California, who married Bessie White of Indianapolis, Ind. and to whom three children are born, Glenn, Alice and Theodore; Minnie who died in infancy; Laura, who died Feb. 24th, 1892 and was buried on her nineteenth birthday; Irvin P.; Ada B., of Indianapolis, Ind., who married William Halligan, of Ephrata, Lancaster county, to whom are born Ralph, Lowell Feeg and Clair William; Arthur J., of Indianapolis, Ind., who married Maud Miller of that city, a grand niece of Frances Slocum who was abducted from Wilkesbarre by the Indians, and now lies buried at Peru, Ind. (To them are born Myron John, Laura Frances and Armen); and Robert V., a student of the University of Chicago.

In politics John Fessler is a Republican. He and his family, formerly of the United Brethren faith, are now connected with the M. E. Church. During the course of his life he has resided with his family in Canton, Ohio, Indianapolis, Ind., Womelsdorf, Berks county, Pennsylvania, Ephrata, Lancaster county, Pa. and at present is at Indianapolis, Ind. He had several brothers and sisters.

Daniel Feeg, the father of Mrs. John Fessler, learned the tanning business at the Miller tannery, near Bernville, and later removed to the Conrad Weiser homestead at Womelsdorf, where he also followed tanning. From the latter place he removed to the Tulpehocken Reformed Church, and engaged in the contracting business, assisting in the building of the "Old Union Canal." His later life was devoted to the pottery business at Womelsdorf, where he died. He was the son of John and Catherine (Fisher) Feeg, the former a shoemaker who served in the war of 1812-14 and the Mexican War, and lived in Heidelberg township, near Charming Forge.

The Feegs are an old Berks county family, settling here prior to the American Revolution. Daniel had one brother Joseph and a sister Elizabeth (Anderson), one son, Joseph deceased, and three daughters, Maranda, wife of Willoughby Smith, Womelsdorf; Clara S.; and Emma E. wife of David Bennethun, La Porte, Ind.

Rebecca (Foltz) Feeg, the mother of Mrs. John Fessler, was a daughter of Isaac and Nancy (Hoover) Foltz. She had five brothers: Isaac, Schaefferstown, Lebanon county; Joseph, Schaefferstown, Lebanon county; Frederick, Rehrersberg; Samuel, of Salem, Ohio; and Franklin, Lebanon county.

Irvin P. Fessler was brought from his native town to Ephrata, Lancaster county, when eight years old, and there he received a good education in the district schools. In 1896, when his parents went West, he located in Reading, Pa., and associated himself as foreman in the assembling department of T. A. Willson & Company, spectacle manufacturers, Second and Washington streets, in whose employ he continued until March 29, 1909, rendering efficient service, when he left them to engage in contracting and building.

While living at Ephrata, Mr. Fessler worked for some years in a planing mill, and for two years during the school terms of 1894 and 1895 he taught school in Clay township. He was also a night school instructor in the public schools of Reading during 1901. Politically Mr. Fessler is a Democrat. As a good citizen he takes a lively interest in public matters, and has proven himself an honest borough official.

Socially he is connected with Chandler Lodge No. 227 F. & A. M., Reading, and the Sons of Veterans. He is a prominent member of the People's Methodist Church, of Reading.

On Sept. 4, 1902, Mr. Fessler was married to Miss Nora Luella Trexler, born Sept. 21, 1872, daughter of E. Marshall and Anna Margaret (Ranck) Trexler, and granddaughter of Anthony and Louisa (Marshall) Trexler. Grandfather Trexler, when a youth, emigrated to this country from Switzerland, with his parents, and settled in Lancaster county, Pa., where he learned the saddler's trade. He died of cholera during the epidemic, leaving four small children: Elizabeth, wife of B. M. Root, York, Pa.; Emma, wife of Rev. A. L. Hurban, Royersford, Pa.; E. Marshall; and Minnie, wife of J. M. Allem, Hiawatha, Kans. Mrs. Fessler has no brothers, but two sisters, Minnie, deceased, and Gussie Minerva, wife of Prof. E. R. Barclay, superintendent of the Huntingdon public schools, Huntingdon, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Barclay have one son John Marshall, and one daughter Ruth deceased.

Grandfather David Ranck married Mary Weidman. Both the Ranck and Weidman families are among the oldest and most respected families of Lancaster and Berks counties.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Fessler have one child, John Trexler, born Sept. 27th, 1908.

WILLIAM J. SPAAR, of Reading, Pa., was born Jan. 26, 1871, at Hillegas, Montgomery county, Pa., son of Augustus and Matilda (Deysher) Spaar.

Augustus Spaar, who died Dec. 24, 1905, at the age of fifty-nine, is buried at Bally, Pa. He was a saddler by trade, a business which he carried on practically all of his life, also conducting a general store in connection therewith. He and his wife, who still survives him and makes her home in Montgomery county, had eight children, six of whom are still living: William, Henry, Charles, Augustus, Matilda and Katie. The family is connected with the Catholic Church.

William J. Spaar received his education in the schools of Montgomery county, and worked on a farm until sixteen years of age, when he entered a general store as clerk, a position which he continued to fill for about six years. He then went to Philadelphia in a like capacity, but after six years came to Reading, where he clerked in stores for several years. In 1905 he became connected with Deysher & Company, grocers, with whom he remained for one year, when the firm of Spaar Brothers—William J. and Henry Spaar—was established. This business being converted in September, 1906, into a branch distributing point for the Penn Produce Company, which does a wholesale business, he remained with it for two years. Since the summer of 1909 he has been connected with S. S. Wisser, merchant at West Reading. Mr. Spaar has been successful as a salesman, and is favorably known to the business men of Reading. He is a member of the Grand Fraternity and the American Casualty Company, and in political matters is a Democrat.

On April 22, 1897, Mr. Spaar was united in marriage with Miss Leah Geiger, daughter of Amos and Lillie (Smeck) Geiger, and to them there have been born four children: Walter, Lillian, Raymond and Harold. Mr. Spaar is a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, while Mrs. Spaar is a Protestant.

SHEARER. The Shearer family has been settled in Berks county for over one hundred and forty years and is still represented among the best elements of its citizenship. Its members have during all this time contributed their full share toward maintaining the high standing of the name for honor in business and social relations.

John Christopher Shearer, the emigrant ancestor of this family, was born in Germany in 1752, and emigrated to America, sailing from Rotterdam. He was a shoemaker by trade. Settling at Reading, Berks Co., Pa., which was then a very small town, he there passed the remainder of his life, except for the time he was serving as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He was in the Colonial forces, enlisted as a private in the company of Capt. John Diehl, of Reading, and took part in the battle of the Brandywine, in which he was wounded, a bullet passing through his forearm and breaking it. He became one of the most prominent men of Berks county in his day, and long served as justice of the peace, holding that office for nearly twenty years. He received his commission from Governor Snyder. He died in 1830, at the age of seventy-eight years, widely known and respected all over his portion of the State. His wife was Juliana Phillippi, a daughter of John Phillippi, of Reading, and a member of a French-Huguenot family; and she was the first white female child born at Reading, and died Dec. 28, 1831, aged seventy-eight years.

Jonathan Shearer, son of John Christopher, was born Sept. 18, 1780, and was brought up at Reading. He received such education as the average schools of his day afforded, and was well prepared to make his way in the world, having a knowledge of three different trades, shoemaking, tanning and the painting of clock dials. He also farmed out-lots, being what was then known in Reading as a town farmer, having about fifteen acres of land now included in the city, which he cultivated successfully. He and three other enterprising young men of Reading (his brother Solomon Shearer, John Printz and Abraham High) started the cultivation of the first vineyards in Berks county, each for himself on half-acre adjoining lots, situated on South Eighth street, between Bingaman and Muhlenberg streets. Thus it may be judged that he was a man of energy and resource, and he became a citizen of excellent standing. Jonathan Shearer married Mary Rapp, daughter of Peter and Hannah (High) Rapp, of Reading, and she survived him many years, dying in 1879, at the advanced age of eighty-two. Mr. Shearer had died in 1845, at the age of sixty-five years. They had a family of eleven children, namely: Peter, an attorney of Reading, who died unmarried; Christopher A., now a retired contractor and builder of Reading, who married Catharine Diehm; Benjamin, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-nine years; Joseph, who is mentioned below; Solomon, mentioned below; Jonathan, who married Mary Witman; Daniel, mentioned below; Rebecca, unmarried; Julianna, wife of William S. Ritter; Mary, married to William Ribble; and Hannah, who married David Keiser.

Joseph Shearer, who has lived retired for the past few years, is one of the oldest residents in his part of the city of Reading, having occupied his present home, at the corner of Eighth and Franklin streets, since 1858. Fifty years is a long period of residence in one spot, and involves a test of good citizenship which Mr. Shearer has stood well. He was born Feb. 13, 1828, in Reading, and there received his education in the common schools. He attended the very first day of free school. Carpentry, which trade he learned early, has been the principal business of his life, and he followed it off and on the greater part of the time during his active years, doing considerable building and selling for himself. For about four years he was also engaged in the mercantile business, and for many years following was greatly interested in the culture of fruit and truck, but for several years past he has lived retired, enjoying the competence he laid away in his younger days. Mr. Shearer is particularly fond of good literature and has a good supply in his home, which his leisure enables him to enjoy as never before. He has always been an industrious man, and deserves the esteem which is everywhere accorded him. His acquaintanceship is wide, and he is favorably known wherever he has had dealings with his fellow-men, whether in business or other relations. In his political faith Mr. Shearer is a Republican, and though he has not been active in party affairs he served in the council in 1859-60. Mr. Shearer can relate many stories of the early days in Reading, which have been handed down from his father and grandfather, and which are particularly interesting to those who have a taste for folklore and characteristic incidents of old times in Berks county.

Mr. Shearer was united in marriage with Louisa Sellers, a daughter of Nathaniel Sellers and granddaughter of Dr. Tobias Sellers, of Montgomery county, who practised medicine in that county, where he died. Nathaniel Sellers followed the trades of cooper and potter, and was engaged in business for several years. He died in Reading at the age of fifty-eight, and his wife, Magdalena (McNulty), died at the age of fifty-six. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Shearer: John Christopher died in infancy; Charles Oscar and Joseph Sellers died in childhood; Louisa M. is the wife of William C. Burkey, who is engaged in the contracting and building business in Reading; Helen Mary is the wife of George S. Stirl, of Reading; William J., a farmer in Alsace township, Berks county, married Ellen Potts, and they have six children, William, Charles, Mabel, Irene, Irvin and Emily.

Solomon Shearer, for fifty years one of the most enterprising and successful farmers and fruit growers of Berks county, residing at Vinemont, was born at Reading March 16, 1830, son of Jonathan Shearer. He received a limited education in the public schools of Reading (the free system having just been started when he began going to school) and then learned the trade of carpenter. He had followed that pursuit as a journeyman but a short while when he directed his attention to the cultivation of trees and fruits of various kinds, beginning at Reading in a small way. He remained at Reading two years, but wishing to engage in the business more extensively purchased a farm in Muhlenberg township, near Tuckerton, where he could carry out his plans, enlarging the business year after year for twenty-seven years, which evidences the success of his enterprising efforts. Then, in 1881, having purchased a large farm in Lower Heidelberg, a short distance beyond Fritztown, his operations were developed to still greater proportions, and were extended year after year until he came to own three farms embracing 375 acres, all under active cultivation, and to produce valuable and wonderful crops, as the following particulars will show most conclusively: Seven acres of strawberries; four thousand to eight thousand bushels of picked apples; two thousand to eight thousand bushels of peaches (varying according to seasons); hundreds of barrels of wine, of five different kinds; and great quantities of cider. The looking after all these productions annually from the beginning to the end, through the several seasons, undoubtedly required exceptional ability, and Mr. Shearer displayed such ability in a manner as remarkable as it was most successful. Besides these great operations, he took upon himself the burdens of other persons involving many thousands of dollars, which he also mastered, but only by the exercise of the greatest possible skill, economy and determination in the management of his multitudinous affairs. His life has been one continuous struggle against adverse circumstances, if not the natural enemies to farmers and fruit growers on the one hand, then the financial embarrassments of others on the other, which a sympathetic disposition led him to assume; and he has the proud satisfaction of knowing that he survived them all, making of himself a free and independent man.

In 1857 Mr. Shearer married Amelia Zacharias, a daughter of John Zacharias, farmer of Muhlenberg township, and by her he had three children, Emma D. (unmarried), Catharine (who has become a successful teacher and traveler) and Rosa E. (who has become a successful nurse in New York City). Upon his wife's decease, in 1866, he married Mary A. Sellers, a daughter of Dr. Henry A. Sellers, druggist at Pottstown, Pa., and by this union had two children, Martha M. (married Malcolm McCallum) and Walter J.

John Zacharias, father of Solomon Shearer's first wife, was married to Catharine Rothermel, born Oct. 30, 1797, a daughter of Peter Rothermel, and they had eight children, John, Peter, Rebecca, Sarah, Mary, Amelia (Mrs. Shearer), Catharine and Deborah.

Dr. Henry A. Sellers, his second wife's father, was married to Mary A. Hesser, of Pottstown, by whom he had eight children: George, Harry, John, Faber, Anna, Juliet, Mary A. (Mrs. Shearer) and Louisa.

Daniel Shearer, another son of Jonathan Shearer, was the father of Frank D. Shearer, florist, of the borough of Wyomissing. He was born in Reading, Feb. 10, 1843, and died there Dec. 25, 1880, at the age of thirty-seven years. He was cut down in the midst of a successful career, for he had already attained a good reputation in the shoe business, which he carried on at Nos. 704-706 Penn street, Reading. He is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mr. Shearer was one of the well-known men of his day and generation, and he was one of the early Rainbow firemen of the city. He married Annie Breiner, daughter of Charles and Catharine (Hetrich) Breiner, the former a grocer at Third and Chestnut streets, Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Shearer had one son and one daughter: Annie May, unmarried, who is a well-known school teacher in Reading; and Frank D., mentioned below.

Frank D. Shearer, son of Daniel, was born at Reading Sept. 27, 1879. He attended the public schools of his native city, going as far as the high school, and commenced work as a young man with William H. Luden, the confectioner of Reading, entering his employ in 1895. He remained with him for five years, working in turn as office boy, clerk and assistant paymaster, and at the end of that time went to work for C. F. Heller, the book-binder. After being in his employ for two years Mr. Shearer took an educational tour to Indianapolis, Ind., where he acquired his first knowledge of his present business with Fred Robinson, a well-known florist of that State. He remained one year with Mr. Robinson, learning the various branches of the trade, and on his return to Berks county established himself in his present business at Wyomissing. Commencing in a small way, he has extended his accommodations to meet the demands of a constantly growing patronage, and he has three modern greenhouses, having 10,000 feet under glass. He is located at the corner of Evans and Garfield avenues, in the borough of Wyomissing. Mr. Shearer's trade is not confined to the locality, his customers being found as far distant as Philadelphia and at points in New Jersey. He raises fine flowers, making a specialty of chrysanthemums and carnations, and also grows vegetables under glass, such as lettuce, radishes, cucumbers, tomatoes. Mr. Shearer finds this branch of his business quite profitable. He has won success by industrious and intelligent application to the advancement of his business, and deserves the rewards which have come to him.

On March 29, 1903, Mr. Shearer was married to Miss Edith Warley, daughter of Frank and Kate (Eisenberger) Warley, of Reading. Two children have been born to this union, Warley Donald, March 21, 1907; and Dorothy Virginia, Sept 3, 1908. Mr. Shearer is a member of the Church of our Father, the only Universalist Church in Reading. He is likewise liberal in political sentiment, inclining toward the best tenets of socialism, with equal rights for all.

DANIEL SAUL, a coachmaker at Eagle Point, formerly Kroningersville, in Maxatawny township, Berks Co., Pa., was born Feb. 11, 1837, son of John Saul.

Johann Nicholas Saul was born Dec. 16, 1726, died Aug. 14, 1795, aged sixty-eight years, and is buried at the Swamp Church. He emigrated from Europe, landing at Philadelphia Sept. 14, 1753. Among his children was a son Nicholas.

Nicholas Saul, born July 8, 1766, married, March 9, 1793, Mary Rosina Hartman, born Aug. 30, 1762, in District township, Berks county, daughter of Paul and Mary (Heepner) Hartman. Their children were: (1) Samuel. (2) John. (3) Jacob had children: Nicholas; Mary; Daniel (m. Caroline Derr, and had children, Howard; Margaret; Emanuel; Jacob; Mary; Agnes; Daniel; and Calvin E., born Sept. 23, 1871, who married in 1891, Alva E. Strasser, was from 1897 to 1907 organist of Zion's Union church in Perry township); Catherine; Franklin; Lydia; Sarah; Racey, and Thomas. (4) Salome. (5) Sarah. (6) Hannah. (7) Esther.

John Saul was a resident of Molltown, Maiden-creek township, and there farmed his large property. His children were: Elias; Jacob; Simon; Nicholas and several daughters whose names are not known.

John Saul, father of Daniel, now living retired at Shoemakersville, Pa., was born in Maiden-creek township, Sept. 9, 1843, and for many years was successfully engaged as a boatman. Later he embarked in a mercantile business, handling flour, feed and groceries for thirty-four years at Shoemakersville Locks, and he also operated a hotel, making a success of all he undertook, and amassing considerable very valuable property. He now owns the Ideal Stock farm at Shoemakersville, which has long served as a model farm throughout Berks county. Mr. Saul at various times conducted branches at Molltown, New Philadelphia, Shoemakersville and other points along the old Schuylkill canal, and is well remembered in the business world, although for some time he has not taken an active part in it. Mr. Saul married Sarah Reinert and they had two children, Daniel and Edna. In 1867 Mr. Saul m. (second) Katie Gearhart, daughter of Tobias and Esther (Adam) Gearhart, of Perry township. They had no children.

Daniel Saul was reared in Greenwich township, until he was fourteen years of age, when he removed to Eagle Point, to learn the coachmaker's trade with Daniel Kroninger, and he has followed this calling ever since. For many years he worked for Mr. Kroninger, finally, in 1878, succeeding him in business, and has conducted his establishment, with a blacksmith shop in conjunction, for more than a quarter of a century.

In addition to his trade, Mr. Saul farms in a small way; his property, consisting of eighteen acres, is in excellent condition. The buildings upon it are the brick residence erected by Daniel Kroninger, and a coachmaking shop that has withstood the storms of nearly a century, and is one of the oldest structures of Berks county, now being quite a landmark, and pointed out to visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Saul with their family are members of the Grimville Union Church, belonging to the Lutheran congregation, and are active in its good works.

In 1875 Mr. Saul married Sarah Kroninger, daughter of Daniel Kroninger, his employer. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Saul, namely: Edward Eugene; John Harvey; Lillie V.; Charles Robert; Jennie M.; Daniel M.; and William F.

The Saul family is one of the oldest in Berks county, and its representatives are many. Men and women bearing the honored name are to be found in almost every walk of life, and they are all characterized by those old sterling characteristics that made the founder of the family successful, thrift, industry and honesty.

Mr. Saul is a man who enjoys the confidence and respect of a wide circle of business acquaintances, as well as his inside circle of friends, and he is justly regarded as one of Berks county's representative men.

BARE. The branch of the Bare family now well represented in Berks county has been for the most part a Lancaster county family since its foundation in this country almost two centuries ago. Like many of the old Lancaster families the Bares are of Swiss Mennonite origin, and some members of the family were ministers of the Mennonite Church. John Bare (or Bear), a native of Switzerland, came to America prior to 1730, and had sons who settled in York, Adams, Cumberland and Perry counties, Pa., where their descendants are still to be found.

Stephen Bare, son of the emigrant John Bare, was a farmer of Lancaster county, where he died.

Abraham Bare, son of Stephen, was born in Lancaster county about 1780, and died there in 1857. He spent his life in agricultural pursuits, and owned several farms of more than 150 acres each. Abraham Bare married Nancy Erb, and among their children were: Abraham lived and died on the homestead; Samuel is mentioned below; Sally m. Samuel Gougly; Anna m. Samuel Bollinger; Maria m. John Brubaker; Elizabeth m. Daniel Kline; and Polly m. Joseph Bowman.

Samuel Bare was born in 1807, on the homestead in Lancaster county, and his death occurred in August, 1865. He served during the Civil war for three years as a private of Company E, 79th Pa. V. I., and his war record was that of a faithful, brave and efficient soldier. He married Susanna Garnand, born May 11, 1811, who died April 14, 1900, in her eighty-ninth year, and they had the following children: Henry G., born Oct. 20, 1836; John G., born April 13, 1839; and Abraham G., born July 26, 1841, who resides in his own home in Reading (he and his wife had six children, Ellen, Nora, Kate, Willis, Luke and Chester, of whom Luke is deceased).

Henry G. Bare is now retired from farming, and since 1899 has lived on a neat little place located along the trolley line, near Wyomissing, in Spring township. He was born Oct. 20, 1836, near Stevens, in East Cocalico township, Lancaster county, and from his youth was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Coming to Berks county with his parents in 1843, he spent his boyhood days in Cumru township, and continued to live there until he bought the tract on which he now resides. He obtained a fair education in the pay schools in Cumru, leaving school for good when about twenty years of age. During his youth the school terms were very short, lasting only two months. Mr. Bare began farming for himself in 1862, while the Civil war was in progress, and followed that occupation with good average results until he retired, in 1899. He makes his home at present upon a small tract of six and a quarter acres, where he has a substantial dwelling and is very comfortably established. However, he still retains ownership of the ninety-acre farm in Cumru where the greater part of his life was spent, and which is now being cultivated by his son Harry F. It is located along the Wyomissing creek. By steady industry Mr. Bare managed to accumulate a competency, which he is well able to enjoy, for he is a man who takes an interest in life and in books, and has made a success of his own career in more ways than in a worldly sense.

In 1860 Mr. Bare married Elizabeth F. Hunter, who was born in 1839, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Faber) Hunter, of Yellow House, Berks county. Six children have been born to this union, as follows: John M., a dairyman of Cumru township, is mentioned below; Howard H. m. Dora Peterson, and died in 1906, at Ottawa, Kans., in his forty-third year; Addie L. is the wife of Wilson Kintzer; Harry F., who conducts his father's old farm in Cumru, m. Annie Mays; Irwin D. m. Hettie Potteiger; Calvin H. died young. Mr. Bare and his family are members of St. John's Reformed Church at Sinking Spring. He is a Republican in political sentiment.

John M. Bare, son of Henry G., was born Feb. 14, 1862, in Cumru township, and was there reared on the home farm. He received his education in the public schools of the township, which he attended until seventeen years of age. Farming has been his life work, and he began for himself in the spring of 1887, in Alsace township, where he remained one year. Returning to Cumru township, he settled on the well-known Seitzinger farm, which he cultivated for the next sixteen years, in 1904 locating on his present property near the "Five Mile House," a fertile tract of seventy-five acres which is considered one of the finest places in Cumru. He purchased this land in 1898, and it has been brought to a high degree of cultivation under his care. Mr. Bare has good, substantial buildings and the latest improved machinery, and he is a man of enterprise and progressive ideas, being regarded as one of the intelligent farmers and successful dairymen of his township. He keeps fine live stock and runs a daily milk team to Reading. In politics Mr. Bare is a Republican, and he and his family are Reformed members of Sinking Spring Church.

Mr. Bare married Agnes H. Hain, born June 5, 1864, daughter of Adam and Mary Ann (Hill) Hain, and two children have come to this union: Gertrude May, born May 14, 1886, who died Oct. 12, 1901; and John Adam, born July 22, 1904.

John G. Bare, son of Samuel, was born April 13, 1839, in Lancaster county, near Stevens, but since his marriage has lived in Berks county, owning a farm of 139 acres in Upper Tulpehocken township. Since 1902 he has lived retired, his son Milton now operating the home farm. Mr. Bare married Harriet Ruth, born April 4, 1844, who died March 11, 1903; she was a daughter of Francis Ruth. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bare, namely: Edwin, a section foreman living in Iowa, m. Jennie Moyer; Susan and Peter died in childhood; Allen died in infancy; John H.; Milton m. Sallie Fink; Irwin m. Sallie Goodman; Paul m. Sallie Miller; and Lydia Ann m. Samuel Hause.

John H. Bare, son of John G., a successful agriculturist and dairyman of Cumru township, was born Feb. 28, 1869, in Lower Heidelberg township. He received his education in the district schools, which he left at the age of seventeen years, at which time he started to work on his father's farm in Berks county. In 1889 he went to Frontier county, Nebr., where he worked on a farm for one year, and then engaged in bridge carpentering for the Burlington Railway Company for two years. After one year spent in farm work in Illinois Mr. Bare returned to Berks county, in 1894, and for about a year carried on huckstering in Upper Tulpehocken township. After his marriage he began farming in Lower Heidelberg township, on the property of his grandfather, Francis Ruth, a property of nearly two hundred acres, and in 1899 he came to Cumru township, where for the past three years he has been operating the old Kurtz farm. In the fall of 1906 Mr. Bare purchased the old Franklin Bender estate in Lower Heidelberg township, which consists of 106 acres of good, fertile land, furnished with running water and including a productive orchard, and this property he has rented to his brother, Paul Bare. Mr. Bare's farms are supplied with the latest and most highly improved farming machinery, and under skillful management yield large crops. He operates a milk route to Reading, having over 120 customers on the south side of Penn street, has a fine, modern dairy, and keeps an average of twenty milch cows the year around.

On April 6, 1895, John H. Bare married Miss Rebecca Feick, born May 26, 1874, daughter of Gabriel and Mary (Reichard) Feick, farming people of Upper Tulpehocken township. No children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bare. They are consistent members of Sinking Spring

Lutheran Church, and in political matters Mr. Bare is a Republican.

Gabriel Feick, father of Mrs. Rebecca (Feick) Bare, died June 27, 1885, aged seventy-two years, and is buried on the old Feick homestead. His children were: Daniel R., Joseph R. and Matilda R. all deceased; Rebecca, Mrs. Bare; Franklin R., deceased; and Annie R., who married Samuel Ebling, and died in 1908, leaving two children, Lizzie F. and Mary F. After the death of Gabriel Feick, his widow married Benjamin F. Drey.

ANDREW J. POTTS, residing on a farm near Douglassville, is a native of Union township, Berks Co., Pa., born March 27, 1841.

The Potts family is a very old one in Berks county. The towns of Pottstown and Pottsville in Montgomery and Schuylkill counties, respectively, perpetuate the name. The early history of the family is most difficult to trace. One David Potts, Jr., lived in Douglass township and he had daughters, Ruth, Martha and Anna (m. John Ellis). He also had a sister, Rebecca (m. John Baird). A Pott or Potts family in Berks county had its origin in a Hessian soldier, who after the American Revolution lived in Heidelberg township, in the mountains.

Edward Potts, Jr., grandfather of Andrew J., was born in Berks county, Oct. 8, 1776, and died at the home of his daughter Julian in Union township Aug. 27, 1856. He was a farmer and made frequent trips by team to Philadelphia with grain, produce, etc., bringing back on his return trip all sorts of merchandise. He married Maria Magdalena Leawren, born July 17, 1781, daughter of Jacob and Margareta Leawren. She died Jan. 9, 1849, and both she and her husband are buried at Amityville on the south side, second row from west wall (Tablets). They had nine children: Julian m. David Schrack; Maria, born March 25, 1805, m. William Reed, and died Aug. 1, 1882; Charlotte, born July 22, 1812, died unmarried April 29, 1853; Eliza died unmarried; William, born Oct. 13, 1811, lived at Monocacy and was killed Oct. 14, 1870, on the railroad; Lewis, born June 21, 1814, died Feb. 28, 1889, lived at Monocacy; Jacob, born April 4, 1818, lived at Monocacy Hill, and died July 29, 1851; David, born Oct. 13, 1820, died July 19, 1843; and Amos. Maria, Charlotte, Jacob and David are buried on the same lot with their parents (Tablets). Edward Potts, Jr., made his last will and testament Aug. 23, 1853, and it is recorded in Will Book 10, page 344. The executor was his son-in-law David Schrack. At the time of making the will he lived in Amity township, where he owned a farm.

Amos Potts, son of Edward, Jr., and father of Andrew J., was born at 8:00 A. M., July 4, 1808, in the sign of the Scorpion, in Pottstown township, Montgomery county, and was baptized at the same place Sept. 16, 1808, by the Rev. Frederick William Geisenheiner. He was a farmer in Amity township, where he owned and operated the farm until lately the property of his son Andrew J. This farm he purchased in 1843, later selling it to his son, who on Dec. 28, 1901, presented it to his daughter, Emma J. Mr. Amos Potts built the present set of buildings on this farm. He was confirmed a member of the Evangelical Lutheran church at Amityville April 28, 1827, by Rev. Conrad Miller, pastor, and held the offices of deacon and elder. He was a school director and interested in the public affairs of his township. About the year 1833 he married Sarah Reifsnyder, born May 12, 1810, daughter of Samuel and Mary Reifsnyder. She died Aug. 26, 1846, and is buried on the south side of the Amityville church, near the gate (Tablet). To this union were born: Henry F., born March 27, 1836; Mary Ann, born July 16, 1838; William H. and Andrew J., twins; and James K. P. The twins were born March 27, 1841, the fifth birthday anniversary of their elder brother Henry F. Amos Potts married, (second) Nov. 18, 1848, Maria Spies, daughter of Ludwig Spies, born April 2, 1813, in North America, and baptized the same day by the Rev. Mr. Herman. Amos Potts died suddenly Sunday morning, May 19, 1895, and was buried at Amityville Cemetery, Row four, on Ascension Day. He left three children, twelve grandchildren, and fourteen great-grandchildren, all of whom were present at the funeral. Mrs. Maria (Spies) Potts died at the home of her brother Daniel Spies, on Monocacy Hill, Jan. 9, 1899, and was buried beside her husband in Amityville cemetery, Jan. 14th following.

Andrew J. Potts, son of Amos, was born March 27, 1841, and grew to manhood on his father's farm in Amity township, two miles from Douglassville. He made farming his work until 1902 when he retired, and was succeeded by his daughter Emma J. The farm consists of sixty acres. Mr. Potts was one of the organizers of the Mission Manufacturing Company, at No. 74 North Charlotte street, Pottstown. They manufacture paper boxes and do fine printing, employing altogether thirty-five persons, four in the printing department and the others in the box factory. The firm enjoys a large local trade. The company was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania Sept. 24, 1907, and is capitalized at $25,000. Mr. Potts is a stockholder and vice president of the company. In politics he is a Republican. He and his wife are members of Baltzell United Brethren Church of Pottstown, and while a member of Amityville he was trustee of the same denomination for twenty-five years, and for twenty successive years an exhorter. He gave liberally toward the church at Amityville, and is one of the loyal supporters of the church at Pottstown.

On May 20, 1869, Mr. Potts was married by the Rev. C. T. Poulton, to Willemine Spies, born in Amity township July 20, 1849, baptized Nov. 18, 1849, by Rev. George Miller. She is a daughter of Daniel and Mary (Stapleton) Spies, of Amity township, and granddaughter of Ludwig and Mary (Reifsnyder) Spies, the former a merchant at Weaverstown.

Emma J. Potts, daughter of Andrew J. and Willemine (Spies) Potts, was born at Douglassville, Pa., Feb. 25, 1870, and was baptized in August, 1874, by the Rev. A. H. Kauffman. On March 21, 1905 (the twenty-seventh birthday anniversary of her brother Wilmer S.), she married George W. Kessel, son of Ferdinand Kessel (of Wurtemberg, Germany), the ceremony being performed at Pottstown, Pa., by Rev. L. K. Evans, D. D., pastor of Trinity Reformed Church. Mr. Kessel was born at the foot of Monocacy Hill in Amity township Sept. 6, 1880. They have a son Herbert, born April 20, 1906.

Wilmer S. Potts, son of Andrew J. and Willemine (Spies) Potts, was born at Douglassville, Pa., March 21, 1878, and was baptized July 21, 1878, by Rev. A. H. Kauffman. He acquired a common school education in the township schools. On Jan. 22, 1895, he began the study of telegraphy in the Philadelphia & Reading Station at Douglassville, and in July of the following year qualified as an efficient operator and is at present a commercial telegrapher in Pottstown, Pa. Mr. Potts was one of the original members of the Citizens Band of Douglassville, which was organized Oct. 18, 1903, and had a successful career of several years. Mr. Potts played the bass drum. On Wednesday, May 23, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon, Mr. Potts was united in marriage to Miss Ruth Kephart, daughter of Jonathan and Martha Kephart, at her home No. 74 South Charlotte street, Pottstown, by Rev. O. P. Smith, D. D., pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Transfiguration. On Sunday morning Sept. 8, 1907, Mr. and Mrs. Potts were admitted into full membership of the Temple M. E. Church in North Coventry township, Chester Co., Pa., by Rev. John Flint, pastor. Mr. Potts is the historian of the Potts and Spies families.

JEREMIAH R. GULDIN, county commissioner of Berks county from 1879 to 1881, and a lifelong farmer near New Berlinville, died at his home there Aug. 9, 1892. He was born in Colebrookdale township Nov. 12, 1822, son of Jacob Guldin.

The Guldins were Pietists in Switzerland. Their home was originally in St. Gall, where Melchior Guldin was born in 1529, was made guildmaster in 1550, senator in 1583, and where he died in 1596. Melchior Guldin, Jr., was born in 1571, and died in 1645. He was town clerk in 1604.

(I) Hans Joachim Guldin, born at St. Gall, Switzerland, became a citizen of Berne in 1633. He married Susanna Tribolet, and their children were: Hans Joachim (2), born Feb. 4, 1635; Anna, born Sept. 22, 1636; Samuel, Sept. 22, 1638.

(II) Hans Joachim Guldin (2), born at Berne Feb. 4, 1635, married Anna Maria Koch, and their children were: Maria, born Aug. 24, 1660, died in infancy; Anna Maria, born March 19, 1662, died in infancy; Samuel K., born June 8, 1664, died Dec. 31, 1745; Anna Magdalena, born June 18, 1667.

(III) Rev. Samuel K. Guldin, born at Berne, June 8, 1664, married Mary Magdalena Malacrida, and came to Philadelphia Sept. 24, 1710. He died at Roxboro Dec. 31, 1745. His children were: Samuel M., born Nov. 8, 1693, at Stettlen, Switzerland; Maria Catherine, born at Stettlen Jan. 8, 1696; Christoffel, born at Berne July 17, 1697; Emanuel Fred, born at Berne March 15, 1699. Rev. Samuel K. Guldin and Rev. Christopher Lutz were classmates at Ole University at Berne, Switzerland, from 1679 to 1689. In 1692 the Rev. Mr. Guldin was appointed pastor at Stettlen, three miles east of Berne. Shortly after entering the University he passed through a great spiritual experience and became a Pietist. Prof. Hadorn says that Guldin, Schumacher, Lutz and Dochs were the fathers of Swiss Pietism. These church fathers became so bitterly persecuted that Guldin emigrated to Philadelphia in 1710, and all of the Guldins of America are descended from him.

(IV) Samuel M. Guldin, son of the Rev. Samuel K., born Nov. 8, 1693, at Stettlen, accompanied his father to America, and with him settled in Oley township, Berks county, Pa. He learned blacksmithing and then together with Engel Peter and a Mr. Bartolet, all blacksmiths, was in Oley, then known as "The Land of Great Trees," in 1718. Each built a log house and began to clear the land. The houses were somewhere along what is now the public road from Yellowhouse to Friedensburg. On May 22, 1722, Samuel M. Guldin married Elizabeth Hilsaweck. Their children were: Samuel, born July 12, 1725; Susanna, Oct. 5, 1724; John, Feb. 22, 1726; Mary Magdalene, Aug. 26, 1728; Frederick, August 2, 1729; Daniel, April 20, 1735; Johanna Esther (twin to Daniel); and Clara Elizabeth, Sept. 17, 1738. Berks county was incorporated in 1752, and Samuel M. Guldin was one of its first county commissioners. At that time there were still Indians in the county, and without doubt he bore his part in defending the people. The records show that at least three of his children married and reared families.

(V) Daniel Guldin, son of Samuel M., was born April 20, 1735, and he died Aug. 17, 1817. He married Catherine Elizabeth Geltbach in 1762, and she died about 1785. Their children were: Samuel G., 1763-1769; Daniel G., 1764-1845; John Jacob, 1766-1829; Samuel G., 1769-1775; John G., 1770-1862; Elizabeth G., 1773-1848; George G., 1774-1814; Abraham G., 1776-1838; Samuel G., 1777-1854; Frederick G., 1779-1838; Peter G., 1782-1826; David G., 1784-1799.

(VI) John Jacob Guldin, son of Daniel, born in 1766, died May 6, 1829. He married Polly Reidnauer.

(VII) Jacob Guldin, born Oct. 13, 1798, was a farmer. He died May 8, 1866. Among his children was Jeremiah R.

(VIII) Jeremiah R. Guldin engaged in the cultivation of his farm of 130 acres near New Berlinville, on the road leading from that town to Bechtelsville, until about twenty years before his death, when he retired. He built a substantial brick house on the farm, and there his widow still resides. The farm has been rented ever since Mr. Guldin's retirement. With all of his active work on his farm he took a lively interest in public affairs, and for three years was county commissioner, being elected on the Republican ticket; and for three years he was school director. He was a man of good judgment, and his advice was sought frequently. He was a member and deacon of St. John's Lutheran Church, in which his widow is still an active worker. Mr. Guldin was laid to rest in Fairview cemetery.

In 1851 Jeremiah R. Guldin was married to Esther (Hettie) Ritter, born April 16, 1830, daughter of John and Mary (Maurer) Ritter. To this union was born a daughter, Clara, who married John G. Rhoads, former register of wills, in Berks county, and died in 1892, leaving a son Clarence, now making his home with his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Guldin.

JOHN GULDIN was born July 6, 1796, and was baptized by the Rev. J. F. Weinland. He died Jan. 2, 1861, aged sixty-four years, five months, twenty-six days, and is buried at Boyertown. He resided at the present home of Ambrose Stauffer, in Colebrookdale township, owning a tract of forty-five acres, and conducted a sawmill besides engaging in blacksmithing and farming, becoming well known in his district in these various capacities. He prospered in all his work.

Mr. Guldin married Maria Grim, daughter of Heinrich Grim, born Jan. 16, 1791, died Aug. 6, 1865, aged seventy-four years, six months, twenty-one days. Mr. and Mrs. Guldin had a family of six children, namely: Edwin, who died in infancy; Henry, who lives in Indiana county, Pa.; Mary A., who now lives at New Berlinville; James, born Sept. 21, 1827, who died May 7, 1864; Cyrus, born Oct. 8, 1829, who died Nov. 29, 1856; and Horace, born Aug. 23, 1833.

Mary A. Guldin, daughter of the late John Guldin, was born Feb. 9, 1825, and though eighty-four years old is very well preserved, her only affliction being defective hearing. She has never married, and for some years has made her home at New Berlinville, where she is a devout member of the United Evangelical Church, being deeply interested in the work of that congregation. She is a highly respected member of the community and is enjoying her years in comfort and contentment.

BLANKENBILLER. The firm of Blankenbiller Brothers in West Reading is a most popular and successful one, and is composed of Daniel B. and Harry B. Blankenbiller, sons of Elias W. and Amanda (Brunner) Blankenbiller.

The progenitor of this old and honored family in America was Johan Georg Blanckenbiller, whose date of emigration is given in the Pennsylvania Archives as Oct. 7, 1755, when he landed at Philadelphia and took the oath of allegiance. He made the journey to the New World on the good ship "Neptune," George Smith, captain.

Jacob Blankenbiller, son of Johan Georg, was a farmer in Cumru township, Berks county, and belonged to the Lutheran congregation of the Allegheny Church, of which his wife, Dolley (Fitterling) Blankenbiller, was also a member. They had these children: George, who died unmarried; Jacob; David, who had sons, William, Samuel and Joseph; Dolly, m. to John Rathman; Elizabeth, m. to Dietrich Heitzman; Peter, the father of John R., deceased; Catherine, m. to William Remp; Polly, m. to Solomon Weidman; Isaac, who settled at Flat Rock, Ohio; and Susan, m. to Jacob Artz.

Jacob Blankenbiller, son of Jacob and grandfather of Daniel B., was born in Cumru township, April 23, 1803, and died March 19, 1895, aged ninety-one years, ten months, twenty-six days. He was a lifelong farmer, and owned a 225-acre farm in Spring township, which is now divided into three tracts. He was a member of the United Brethren Church of Sinking Spring (where he is buried), and was a church official and a good man of his community. He married Anna Maria Weidman, born Jan. 18, 1805, who died March 3, 1888, aged eighty-three years, one month, fifteen days, and they had the following children: Elias W.; Maria, born Oct. 24, 1835, m. Henry Mosser, of Reading; Katharine, born in 1838, died unmarried in 1870; Elizabeth m. Isaac Moyer, of Reading; and Jacob, a farmer of Mohn's Hill, m. Emma Hinnershitz, and has three children, Eulalia, Cordelia and Pruella.

Elias W. Blankenbiller, father of Daniel B., was born in Cumru township, Sept. 23, 1833, and died April 12, 1898. He was a lifelong farmer, but two years prior to his death retired and spent the rest of his days in his residence at Mohnton. He was a faithful member of the United Brethren Church of Sinking Spring, where he was an exhorter for many years, and later became connected with Salem Evangelical Church of Mohnton, of which he was a liberal supporter until his death.

Mr. Blankenbiller was married to Amanda Brunner, born Aug. 11, 1840, daughter of Henry Brunner, of Reinhold's Station, Lancaster county, and to them were born seven children, namely: Harry B.; Emma, m. to Levi Miller, of Mohnton; Ezra; Daniel B.; Edwin; Ella, who is unmarried and lives with her mother; and William B., who m. Martha Von Neida, has three children, Carrie, Stella and William, and resides at West Reading, being in the employ of Blankenbiller Brothers.

Harry B. Blankenbiller, eldest son of Elias W. Blankenbiller, was born at Sinking Spring, Berks county, Jan. 30, 1864. He spent his boyhood days there and at Reinhold's Station, Lancaster county, where his parents lived for some time, and attended public school at both places, beginning his education in his native place. When eighteen years old he commenced to learn the cigar-maker's trade, which he followed for sixteen years at what was formerly Mohnsville, now Mohnton. In November, 1901, Mr. Blankenbiller formed a partnership with his brother Daniel B., under the firm name of Blankenbiller Brothers, and settling in West Reading they have since carried on a general merchandise business there, at the corner of Penn avenue and Fifth street. They carry staple and fancy groceries, dry goods, shoes, notions, etc. The brothers enjoy an extensive patronage in West Reading, Reading and Mohnton, making a speciality of groceries. In 1908 they enlarged their store, equipped it with Walker bins, and made it strictly up-to-date in every respect. They have stands at the Kissinger market-house and at the Crystal Palace market-house, both in Reading, which they attend every market day. The business has prospered from the start, and five people are employed in the store. Since May 20, 1904, Mr. Harry B. Blankenbiller has been postmaster at West Reading, and his brother Daniel serves as assistant postmaster.

On Feb. 9, 1901, Mr. Blankenbiller married Sallie Burley, daughter of the late Daniel and Emma (Davis) Burley, of Reading, and they reside in a comfortable home at No. 444 Penn avenue, West Reading, which Mr. Blankenbiller owns. He is a member of Camp No. 211, P. O. S. of A., of Mohnton, and he is a Republican in political connection.

Daniel B. Blankenbiller was born at Sinking Spring June 1, 1871, son of Elias W., and spent his boyhood days under the parental roof and worked for his father until twenty-one years of age. When sixteen years old he learned the cigar making business at Reinhold's Station, and this occupation he followed for about three years, in 1888 learning the hatting trade with J. H. Spatz & Co., in whose employ he continued for thirteen years, the last eight years of which he had charge of the packing and shipping departments. In 1901, with his brother Harry B., he formed the firm of Blankenbiller Brothers, and engaged in a general merchandise business in a small way at the corner of Fifth and Penn Avenue, West Reading, and since that time by strict attention to business and honest dealing, the firm has increased the business manifold and become one of the leading establishments of the borough. Mr. Blankenbiller owns his own residence at No. 508 Penn avenue, which he purchased in the fall of 1903. In politics he is a Republican. He and his family are consistent members of Ebenezer Evangelical Church, of Reading, he having been formerly an official member of Salem Evangelical Church, at Mohnton.

On Aug. 17, 1895, Mr. Blankenbiller was married to Debbie S. Krick, born Aug. 3, 1874, daughter of Harrison and Elizabeth (Spatz) Krick, the former a son of Jonathan Krick, of Kricktown, in Spring township. Three sons have been born to this union, namely: Paul D., born Nov. 25, 1896; Harold C., Jan. 23, 1901; and Norman H., Jan. 30, 1906.

Daniel Burley, father of Mrs. Harry B. Blankenbiller, was born Jan. 26, 1832, in Eastington, Gloucestershire, England, son of William and Harriet Burley, of that place. On Oct. 12, 1852, he married Emma Davis, daughter of Job Davis, of Eastington, England, who died in 1834-35, and four days later, on Oct. 16th, the young couple embarked for America. They settled in Berks county, Pa., and there passed the remainder of their lives. In his native land Daniel Burley had been a woolen worker in the woolen mills, and his wife followed the same occupation before her marriage, but for many years Mr. Burley was the agent and manager at Mertztown, this county, for the Allentown Iron Company. He and his family long made their home at that place, where Mrs. Burley died Oct. 19, 1891, in her sixty-second year, after which Mr. Burley moved to Shillington to live with his son John, who is now, however, a resident of Reading. He died Jan. 19, 1908, when only seven days less than seventy-six years old, and with his wife is buried at Mertztown. In her native country Mrs. Burley was a member of the Wesleyan Church, and Mr. Burley belonged to the Established Church of England, but after settling in Berks county they became Lutherans.

Mr. and Mrs. Burley had a family of thirteen children, including two pairs of twins: Joseph is deceased; Eliza H. m. Dr. A. A. Stamm, of Mohnton; John H.; Sallie m. Harry B. Blankenbiller; Elizabeth m. Daniel Long; Charles m. (first) Alice M. Kline, and after her death (second) Lizzie Shugar; Alfred and Albert, twins, make their home with Dr. A. A. Stamm in Mohnton; Fannie died in infancy; Frank died when young; twins died in infancy; Wilson died when four years old.

TREXLER. The Trexler family is one of the oldest and most numerous in Berks county. It has numbered in its ranks not alone the honest farmer and industrious laborer, but men in every profession, in civil and military life, and its women have been gracious and womanly. Industry has been a marked characteristic of the family. Money has been made, and when spent, spent wisely, even lavishly when given to the less fortunate. Ambition coupled with ability has made leaders of men, and temperate lives have given strength to meet any issue. To Berks county, Pa., came (I) Peter Trexler, some time prior to 1720, settling in Oley township. As early as Sept. 5, 1720, he was one of the petitioners for the erection of the township. It was but a short time afterward, however, that he left Berks county, and moved to what is now Upper Macungie township, Lehigh county, a territory that, covered with brush and scrub oak as it was, offered very little in the way of attraction to the early settler, other than an abundance of water, with which it was blessed. He settled near Breinigsville, his land embracing what is now the John R. Gonser farm. On Nov. 18, 1729, he obtained from Casper Wister, the patentee, a deed for this land, and this deed is one of the earliest, if not the earliest, in that region. A seven-year residence was required before naturalization, and Peter Trexler did not take out his papers until 1730. He and his family were the first white settlers in Macungie, and Dr. Helfrich, in his history of the various congregations in Lehigh and Berks counties, says, "Way down in the valley near what is now Breinigsville lived, before the general migration into this neighborhood, a Trexler family, with whom the Indians were very friendly. Mother Trexler often presented the Indians with gifts and gave them bread, and in return they brought her wild skins and showed friendship to the pale-faces."

Peter Trexler died in 1758, and his will, dated Dec. 17, 1744, divides his estate among his widow, Catharine, and three sons and three daughters—Jeremiah, John, Peter, Anna, Catharine and Margaret. The son, Peter (2), was made executor of the will. Peter Trexler and his wife were both buried in the family cemetery on their farm, but the graves, originally marked by soft sandstones now wasted away, cannot be definitely located. Steps were recently taken by the Trexler Family Association, in Reunion Aug. 28, 1907, to restore this ancient burial place of their ancestors, and to place a tablet to the memory of Peter Trexler and wife. Of the daughters of Peter Trexler nothing is known, but in the diary of Rev. John Casper Stoever, Nov. 9, 1732, is the record of the marriage of John George Schumacher and Catharine Trexler, of Macungie.

(II) Jeremiah Trexler, eldest son of Peter, had a public house at Trexlertown, as early as 1732. He removed to Easton, and became prominent in public affairs, in 1768 being county tax collector. On Nov. 11, 1776, he was made a member of the General committee of Northampton county, and at the meeting held the same day was made a member of the Standing committee. Later he sold his property at Easton, and returned to Macungie township, Berks county. His wife's name was Catharine. He died in 1783 intestate. There is no record of his children, but it is supposed that John Trexler, who conducted the tavern at Trexlertown some years, was his son.

(III) John Trexler, supposed son of Jeremiah, was twice married. After the death of his first wife, Maria Elizabeth, he married Susanna Hassler, widow of John Hassler and daughter of Casper Bauer. At the time of the Revolution the entire Hassler family was taken captive by the Indians, and one of the children scalped. The father escaped, but for three years the mother and children were held prisoners, then all except the children Jacob and Elizabeth, released. In the will of John Trexler, dated Jan. 26, 1795, probated March 10, 1795, he gave fifty pounds to his wife Susanna for life, and after her death to be divided equally among his step children, "of which Jacob Hassler and Elizabeth are prisoners by the Indians." In this will his own children are mentioned as follows: Peter, Jeremiah, Emanuel, Ferdinand, Philipina Albrecht (or Albright), Margaret Kroner, Maria Elizabeth Jarrett and Israel. Of these, Peter is supposed to have moved West. Jeremiah was for many years a justice of the peace at Trexlertown, and died Feb. 25, 1827, leaving his widow, Elizabeth (Reiss), and children: Margaret (m. Andrew Shiffert), Catharine, Jeremiah (a tailor near Cedar Creek, Allentown), Lucas, Charles, James and John. Emanuel is not mentioned in any record, nor is Philipina Albrecht and Maria Elizabeth Jarrett, Ferdinand married and became the father of a son Benjamin, who in turn became the father of Benjamin F. Trexler, of the Allentown Friedensbote. Israel attained old age in Hanover township, and was survived by nine children—Emanuel, Jonathan, Israel, Jr., John J., Reuben A., Abraham R., Charles H., Mrs. Polly Bush and Mrs. Solomon Wandel.

(II) Peter Trexler, son of Peter the emigrant, was born Feb. 11, 1721, and was bequeathed the homestead near Breinigsville, which had been deeded to him in 1748. He became a man of considerable importance, and was justice of the peace from 1752 to 1776, and as such, under the colonial system, sat in the courts at Easton. The first election in Northampton county occurred Oct. 1, 1752, many of the voters being obliged to travel twenty-five miles to deposit their ballots. The opposing parties were the Irish and German settlers. Peter Trexler was elected one of the three county commissioners. He was a frugal man of methodical habits, and in favor of education. When compelled to be away from home to attend court, he filled his saddle bags with provision so he could board himself. When schools were established in Pennsylvania by the English nobility for the purpose of teaching the English language, Peter Trexler was made one of the trustees of the William Parsons School at Easton. He died Aug. 25, 1798, and was buried in the family cemetery on the home farm. He married Catharine Winck, born Aug. 7, 1728, and died Aug. 14, 1815, aged eighty-seven years, daughter of Casper and Gertrude (Kemp) Winck. According to the Lehigh Church Book, at her death she left sixty-two grandchildren and seventy-nine great-grandchildren. Seven children—three sons and four daughters—survived Peter Trexler. The sons were: Peter, Jonathan and John. The daughters: Maria Christine, born Nov. 3, 1753, married Aug. 13, 1776, Peter Haas, and died Sept. 13, 1829, the mother of ten children; Mrs. Philip Fogel; Mrs. Henry Grim; and one of whom there is no record.

(III) Peter Trexler, son of Peter of Macungie and the third of the name, was born Aug. 15, 1748, and is known as Mertztown Peter, and frequently in the records appears as John Peter or Hom Peter. He was a patriot of the Revolution, serving as captain of the Fifth Company of Col. Breinig's second battalion of militia, and on May 5, 1783, was made lieutenant-colonel. He was elected county commissioner in 1782; representative in the General Assembly, 1785-86-87-88, thus serving four years, the time limit set by the constitution of 1776. He died March 13, 1728, aged seventy-nine years, six months, twenty-eight days, and was buried in the family cemetery. His will (See Will Book 6, p. 187) was made Feb. 15, 1825, and entered April 3, 1828, his sons Peter, Jacob, Reuben and Jonas being executors. He married Catharine Grim, daughter of Henry Grim, youngest son of Geittie Grim, the ancestor of the Grim family, so prominent in this section. She was born July 30, 1757, and died July 7, 1828, aged seventy-one years, less twenty-three days. Eleven children were born to Peter and Catharine (Grim) Trexler, namely: (1) Maria m. John Folk, and had children, Joshua, John, Reuben, Anna (Shuman), Catharine (first m. to a Keizer, and second to a Hilbert), Caroline (Guise) and Lydia (Guise). (2) John Peter (Jan. 2, 1777-March 6, 1828) m. Rachel Fogel (Sept. 11, 1784-Jan. 1, 1867), and had children: Caroline (Horlacher), Sarah (Seiberling), Maria (Fogel) and Jonas. (3) Jacob became the father of Reuben, David, Peter, Jacob, Mrs. James Breinig, Catharine (Breinig) and Mrs. Stephen Sawyer. (4) Reuben (1782-1846) was an iron master, residing in Mertztown, Longswamp township, where he also carried on farming and was well and favorably known. He married Anna, daughter of Jacob Lesher, a charming, charitable woman of refined taste, and they lived in the old Trexler mansion in Longswamp. They had children: Col. William (1816-1905), Horatio (who lived at Reading, where he was president of the National Union Bank), Dr. Lesher (of Fort Wayne, father of Mrs. Anna Wertz, of Allentown, and Mrs. Judith Reno, mother of Claude Trexler Reno, of Kutztown), Lucinda (wife of Gen. James Rittenhouse) and Caroline (wife of William Schall). Mrs. Anna (Lesher) Trexler died in 1848, aged fifty-four years. (5) Benjamin (1784-1855) is mentioned below. (6) Catharine m. a Mr. Haas, and had children: Judith (Gregory), Nathan, Leana (Butz), Kate (Hoffman), Tallie (Hoffman), Jonathan T., Reuben T. and I. P. T. (7) Jonas had children: Jonas, Willoughby, Abyle, David, Peter, Sarah (Ludwig), Angeline (Ahlum) and Eliza (Miller). (8) Anna m. Philip Dresher, and had two children: Nathan and Judith (Reiter). (9) Nathan lived in Long-swamp township, where he died in February, 1865. His will is on record in Will Book 11, p. 363. His wife Phoebe bore him four children: Edwin H., Mary (Mrs. George Schall), Amelia (Mrs. Jonathan B. Grim) and Sarah (Esterly). (10) Daniel died leaving no children. (11) Judith m. Rev. Isaac Roeller, and was affectionately known as "Aunty Roeller." She died in 1885, leaving no children. On Aug. 17, 1809, Peter Trexler bought his son Benjamin a large family Bible, printed in 1798, costing seven dollars. This is now in the possession of Oliver Trexler (born Dec. 21, 1852), son of Nathan and grandson of Benjamin.

(III) John Trexler, son of Peter (2), or Macungie Peter, and his wife Catharine (Winck), was born Oct. 12, 1750. About 1784 he moved to York county. He died June 22, 1829, aged seventy-eight years, eight months and ten days, and was buried on the Gonser farm in the old family cemetery. Among his children was Solomon, whose son Daniel lived in York county as late as 1869; and Lydia, Mrs. Borger, of Breinigsville.

(III) Jonathan Trexler, son of Macungie Peter and Catharine (Winck), was born May 1, 1762, and he died May 11, 1846, aged eighty-four years and ten days, and was buried in the old family cemetery. He married Elizabeth (name on tombstone given as Eliza) Horlacher, born Jan. 9, 1772, died April 3, 1854, aged eighty-two years, two months and twenty-four days. They had children: Jonathan; Anna, m. to Gen. Benjamin Fogel; Diana, m. to Joseph Schmoyer; Catharine, m. to Joseph Miller; Lydia, m. to John Metzger; Sophia, born March 4, 1793, and died unmarried Oct. 9, 1864, aged seventy-one years, seven months, five days; David, born Nov. 27, 1796, and died Aug. 20, 1823, aged twenty-six years, eight months, twenty-three days; Solomon, born May 22, 1810, and died Aug. 31, 1814, aged four years, three months, ten days.

(IV) Benjamin Trexler, son of Peter (3) of Mertztown and Catharine (Grim), was born Feb. 2, 1784, and he died June 20, 1855, aged seventy-one years, four months, eighteen days. He first settled in the Catawissa Valley, but in 1825 moved to Albany, Berks county. He married (first) March 10, 1805, Maria Drescher, and became the father of nine sons and two daughters: Daniel, born Nov. 30, 1805; Benjamin, Jan. 31, 1807; Amos, April 27, 1808; Fianna, July 26, 1809 (died young); Jonas, Dec. 16, 1810; Aaron, May 3, 1812; Jairus, July 26, 1813; Anna, April 25, 1815; one still born; Nathan, Jan. 11, 1818; and Peter, May 22, 1820. The wife and mother died May 23, 1820, and he m. (second) June 13, 1823, Catharine Bolich, who bore him one daughter, Catharine, Sept. 3, 1824. Mrs. Catharine Bolich Trexler died Sept. 7, 1855, aged sixty-eight years, nine months and twelve days.

(V) Daniel Trexler, son of Benjamin, born Nov. 30, 1805, married and had children: Uriah, whose son Edward Dietrich Trexler is a foremost lawyer of Berks county; Rev. Daniel, of Bernville; Charles, a wealthy merchant of Topton, Pa.; Dr. William, deceased; and Mary.

(V) Benjamin Trexler, born Jan. 31, 1807, son of Benjamin and Maria (Drescher), died March 18, 1876, aged sixty-nine years, one month and seventeen days. He was a farmer in Longswamp township, and is buried at Mertztown. He married Susanna Leininger, born July 4, 1812, died Dec. 27, 1891, aged seventy-nine years, five months, twenty-three days. Their children were: Amanda, m. to John Miller, of Topton; Susanna, m. to Ephraim Butz, of Topton; Eliza, m. to Marcus Long, of Longswamp township; and Charles L.

(VI) Charles L. Trexler, son of Benjamin and Susanna (Leininger), was born in Longswamp township in 1837, and died upon his farm in Maxatawny township in 1878. He owned and cultivated a large and fertile farm near Lyons, and was very successful in all his undertakings. He was a member of De Long's Lutheran Church, in which he served as deacon for some years. He married Leanda Grim, daughter of the late Daniel and Judith (Sell) Grim, and granddaughter of Heinrich and Gertrude (Trexler) Grim, of Bowers Station (whose children were: Absalom, Jonathan, Daniel, Reuben, Solomon, Ann and Polly). To Charles L. and Leanda Trexler were born: Annie m. Edwin Merkel, of Topton, and has a son Charles (They live with Mrs. Merkel's mother in a fine home on Kemp street, Lyons); Emma m. Morris Bauer, and has two sons, John and Charles; Sarah m. Walter Swoyer (mentioned elsewhere); and Miss Mary resides with her mother.

(V) Amos Trexler, son of Benjamin and Maria (Drescher), born April 27, 1808, died March 4, 1892. He was a farmer and tanner near Greenawald Station, in Albany township, and was very prominent in township affairs, holding various offices, and being especially interested in educational affairs. He married Elizabeth Dietrich (1810-1888), daughter of John Adam Dietrich, and their children were: Katharine, Fietta, Sally Ann, Nathan D., Jonathan D., Amos, Emma, Dr. Horatio and Dr. William.

(VI) Nathan D. Trexler, son of Amos and Elizabeth (Dietrich), and now living retired at Trexler Station, in Albany township, Berks county, was born in that same township July 4, 1839. His education was acquired in the old pay schools, in three terms at the township schools, and in Kingston Academy in Luzerne county, Pa. He was early trained to the tanning trade, and when in his eighteenth year worked in a tannery at Lewisburg, where he remained one and one-half years. He then returned to Berks county and worked for his father until 1860, after which he operated 143 acres of land in Perry township for two years. He had married in the meantime, and after his wife's death in 1862 he returned to his father's home, and on Oct. 16, 1862, he enlisted in the Union army, as a member of Company K, 179th Pa. V. I., serving until July 31, 1863, when he was mustered out at Harrisburg. He returned home and worked at his trade until 1866, and on March 13th of that year he located at what is now Trexler Station (named for him), where he purchased the Henry Kerper & Co. tannery, and this he operated from 1867 until 1892. From 1867 to 1877 he was in partnership with his brother Amos D., whose interest he later purchased. In 1885 he sold the tannery and eleven acres of land to his brother and rented it from him. Since 1892 the tannery has been abandoned. In that year he purchased a farm of ninety-three acres at Greenawald, which he cultivated over two years, cutting down twelve acres of heavy timber which he sold to Job Wilber & Co., of Providence, R. I. The tract was valuable to this firm because of the red shale or ochre, and they are now operating the shale quarry under the supervision of James S. Focht. Mr. Trexler moved into his present residence in 1890. He erected another house near by in 1875. He is known all over the county, and he has served continuously as Republican county committeeman in Berks county since 1866. During 1865-66 after his return from the war he was bounty tax collector. From 1893 to 1895 he was county auditor, and since 1866 has been annually a delegate to the county convention of his party, and has served a number of times as delegate to the State conventions. He is a member of the Lutheran, and his wife of the Reformed, congregation at New Jerusalem Church, and he has been trustee and elder. He is a member and past commander of Capt. Lewis Harmony Post, No. 606, G. A. R., at Steinsville.

Mr. Trexler's first wife was Polly Heinly, who died March 10, 1862, leaving no children. He m. (second) Sept. 8, 1864, Harriet Kline, daughter of Peter and Sarah (Dietrich) Kline, of Greenwich township, and granddaughter of Peter, Sr., and Elizabeth (Altenderfer) Kline, of Klinesville, a village in Greenwich township named for Peter, Sr. Three children have been born to this union: Mary E., m. to Lloyd P. Kistler, of Lehigh county; Dr. Charles Amos, of Knoxville, Tioga county; and James Spenser, a member of the James R. Ahrens Construction Company, of Lewistown. Mr. Trexler has a grandfather's clock which his grandfather Benjamin obtained from his father when he began housekeeping.

(VI) Jonathan D. Trexler, son of Amos and Elizabeth (Dietrich), born in Albany township, July 4, 1848, was a prosperous farmer, living along Ontelaunee creek, above Lenhartsville, Berks county, where he owned 137 acres, improved with good substantial buildings. He married Susanna Greeber, of Perry township, who bore him the following children: Sarah, wife of James Howerter, a farmer near Hamburg, Pa.; Jerome G., a wealthy farmer in Windsor township; Richard G.; and Mary Ann, wife of Henry Stump, a farmer of Klinesville, Pennsylvania.

(VII) Richard G. Trexler, son of Jonathan D., was born in Perry township, Sept. 4, 1867, and is now a prosperous farmer of Richmond township. He was given a limited education in the schools of Albany and Greenwich townships, attending for a few months each winter until he was seventeen years old. Early in life the habits of economy and industry were instilled in him by his worthy parents, and he has become very successful, owning a good farm and fine modern buildings. In 1895 he married Caroline S. Christ, daughter of Jacob and Esther (Merkel) Christ, of near Dietrich's mill in Greenwich township. Two children were born to them: John Albert and Annie Esther. Both Mr. and Mrs. Trexler are Lutherans, and attend Dunkel's Church. In politics Mr. Trexler is a Republican, and is much interested in his party's success.

(V) Jairus Trexler, son of Benjamin, was born in Catawissa township, Columbia county, July 26, 1813, and died Jan. 25, 1893, aged seventy-nine years. He was engaged in farming near Round Top, in Albany township. He married Maria (Polly) Komp, daughter of Johan and Maria Magdalena (Dietrich) Komp, of Greenwich township. She was born May 17, 1825, and died at a ripe age. The children born of this union were: Fianna, born July 19, 1844, married Peter Kunkel, of Lehigh county, Pa.; Benjamin K., born Feb. 17, 1846, of Albany township; Celinda, born Oct. 24, 1848, m. to Benneville George, of Greenwich township; Anna M., born Nov. 22, 1850, m. to David Roth, of Albany township; Jonathan, born Nov. 13, 1852, and died Sept. 11, 1863; Isabella, born Sept. 27, 1854, and died May 4, 1857; Jairus, born April 7, 1857, of Albany township; Mahlon, born April 23, 1859, of Albany township; Joel, born May 30, 1861; Caroline, born Dec. 21, 1863, m. to Aaron L. Krick, of Reading, Pa.; Missouri, born May 2, 1866, widow of Elmer Lenhart, of Albany township; and Ellen, born Feb. 13, 1871, and died May 9, 1876.

(VI) Benjamin K. Trexler, son of Jairus and Maria (Komp), and a leading citizen of Albany township, Berks county, was born on his father's farm in that township, Feb. 17, 1846. He was educated in the township schools, and gave his services on the farm to his parents until he reached his majority. In the spring of 1875 he began farming in Siegfried's Dale, in Maxatawny township, and there lived two years. In the spring of 1878 he came to Albany township, and located on a farm belonging to his father-in-law, Jonas Koenig, where he has since lived, conducting the farm with great success until the spring of 1907, when he retired and was succeeded by his son, Elton J. After he had lived there some years Mr. Trexler purchased the farm. The stone house was built in 1851 by Michael Hauckenbuch. This has one of the best walls in the township, being built of regular stone in an unusually substantial manner. The present barn was erected in 1798. There are ninety-two acres of excellent farming land, and Mr. Trexler also has about 100 acres of woodland. With his brother Mahlon he owns the old homestead farm of 197 acres, located at Round Top. On this farm is found a valuable shale. Like all the Trexlers Mr. Benjamin K. Trexler is a stanch Republican, and one of the foremost men of his township. For twenty-five years he has been tax collector of the township, and is always one of the first in the county to settle his duplicate. He and his family are members of the New Bethel (Corner) Church, belonging to the Lutheran congregation. He has held many offices and is one of the active and useful members.

On July 6, 1873, Mr. Trexler married Kate Koenig, daughter of Jonas and Catharine (Kerschner) Koenig, the former a son of Jacob Koenig, of Albany township. To Mr. and Mrs. Trexler was born one son, Elton J., Nov. 25, 1884, now a farmer in Albany, and m. to Mary V. Dietrich, daughter of Alfred and Louisa (Merkel) Dietrich, late of Albany township. Mr. Dietrich was a miller. Mr. and Mrs. Elton J. Trexler have a son, Clinton M.

(VI) Joel Trexler, son of Jairus, was born at Round Top, in Albany township, May 30, 1861. He was reared to farming and worked for his parents until he was twenty-seven years old. In 1888 he began farming on his father's farm, and continued there for seven years. In 1895 he came to Maxatawny, where he has since lived on the Butz farm. He has been very successful, and he has good live stock. In his political principle he is a stanch Republican, and he has been a regular voter since he attained his majority, and he has been honored with a number of local offices. Like all his family he is a Lutheran, and is a member of St. John's Church, while his wife belongs to St. Paul's Reformed Church. While in Albany township he was a deacon in New Bethel Corner Church, and at present is serving as a trustee of St. John's in Kutztown. On Dec. 23, 1882, Mr. Trexler was married to Lucy Ann Moyer, daughter of the late John and Hettie (Dietrich) Moyer, of Greenwich township, and granddaughter of John Henry and Polly (Leiby) Moyer, early residents of Greenwich township. Her great-grandfather settled on the farm now owned by William Baver, who became its owner in 1908. Mr. and Mrs. Trexler have four children: Herbert G. m. Sally Gaby, daughter of Samuel Gaby, of Maxatawny, and has three sons—Warren E., Lloyd H. and Howard J.; Ethan V., Laura H. and Ralph J., all three at home.

Benjamin C. Trexler was a native of Maxatawny township. He was a shoemaker by trade, and this he followed for seven years, but ill health necessitated a change of occupation, and he began farming on his fine farm near Monterey, containing ninety-six acres. This he farmed for seventeen years with great success. He is buried at Zion's Church, of which he was an official member. He married Lydia Reider, of Maiden-creek township, whose mother in her maidenhood was Catharine Rothermel. They had four sons: Milton C., of Breinigsville, m. Agnes Miller, and has three children—Mamie, Clarence and Lloyd; Clayton H., of Breinigsville, m. Catharine Merkel, and has two children, Adda V. and Edna M.; Jeremiah F., of Breinigsville, m. Alice Boyer, and has six children—Lillie M., Mabel M., Horace E., Hattie, Fred and Marguerite; and Levi B.

Levi B. Trexler, son of Benjamin C., was born in Maxatawny township, March 4, 1878, and is now a successful teacher in Newtown, Lehigh county. He was reared to farming, and was educated in the public schools and the Keystone State Normal at Kutztown, graduating from the latter institution in 1898. He taught his first term of school at Kuhnsville, Upper Macungie township, Lehigh county, in the fall of 1898, and he has since taught every term. He owns a farm of nineteen acres, located in Maxatawny township, near the Siegfried's church. This land lies adjacent to a large tract owned by his father. On Mr. Trexler's farm is a new Swiss barn that he erected in 1908, also a stone house, the latter built by Johannes and Julian Fisher in 1829. This house is in good condition, and the walls are good for one hundred years to come. Mr. Trexler is a Lutheran in his religious belief, and belongs to Zion's Church in Maxatawny township, taking an active part in its work. He is connected with the Breinigsville Sunday-school, of which he has been superintendent since 1899. He is a man of high moral principle, and is highly esteemed in the county. He is a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M. No. 403, of Fogelsville, Pennsylvania.

Jonas Trexler, who died at his home in Allentown Feb. 3, 1908, at the age of seventy-nine, was one of that city's prominent business men during the years of his active life. His later years were passed in comparative retirement. He was born in Upper Milford, near Emaus, Sept. 29, 1828, son of Reuben and Salome (Mattern) Trexler, and was a boy of twelve years when his father died. He attended the schools of Upper Milford, and took a course in the Norton School at Belvidere, N. J. For a number of years he clerked in stores at Easton and Allentown, learning the principles that guide in commercial life. He passed one year in the West, and on his return to Allentown in 1856 he found employment in the Dresher lumber yards. Shortly after he entered into partnership with Edwin Trexler and William Dresher, under the firm name of E. W. Trexler & Co., and they purchased the lumber business. The firm remained unchanged for some years, and then became Trexler Brothers. In 1870 Mr. Jonas Trexler retired from that business, and in 1876 he gave up active business entirely, other than looking after his own property. On June 11, 1874, he married Christiana R. Saeger. They had no children. Mr. Trexler was survived by his sister, Mrs. Henry Leh. His brothers Edwin and Willoughby preceded him in death, the latter being killed at the railroad crossing in Emaus July 10, 1900.

REV. BENJAMIN ELIAS KRAMLICH was born in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, Pa., Oct. 7, 1831, son of Christian and Catharine (Kocher) Kramlich. During his boyhood he attended the common schools at Fogelsville, after which he was a pupil at an academy conducted by Rev. Van Deveer at Easton. In that city he was engaged for several years as a clerk in a dry goods store. In 1851 he resumed his studies, entering the preparatory department of Pennsylvania College, Gettysburg, and he graduated from that institution in 1856. The next two years were spent at the Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, and in the fall of 1858 he was licensed by the West Pennsylvania Synod, and was admitted into the Ministerium of Pennsylvania, and was ordained by it at Lebanon, Pa., in 1859. He first took charge of Trexlertown, Maxatawny (Siegfried's), Moselem, Fleetwood, Rockland (Mertz's), Hereford (Huff's) and Mertztown. At various times during the long years of his ministry he served Mohrsville, Shoemakersville and Jacksonville, and at the time of his death he was still serving five of the original congregations, having given up Moselem and Huff's years before, and added St. Peter's, Topton, which he organized.

During his entire ministry he was connected with the Keystone State Normal School, which he helped to establish. He was a member of the board of trustees from the very beginning, and its president during the last twenty-three years. From 1885 to 1888 he also served as president of Conference.

On May 23, 1863, the Rev. Mr. Kramlich married Sophia B. Bieber, daughter of John and Hannah Bieber. He died Jan. 1, 1900, leaving his widow and three sons—Rev. William Wilberforce, Rev. John Frederick and Prof. George Edgar—and two daughters—Ella Evangeline and Charlotte Belle. His remains rest in the cemetery at Kutztown. The board of trustees of the Normal School placed a tablet in that institution in commemoration of his excellent services in its behalf.

Rev. William Wilberforce Kramlich, eldest son of the late Rev. Benjamin Elias, was born in Kutztown, Jan. 22, 1866, and was educated in the Normal School of that town, and at Chambersburg, entering Muhlenberg College, 1883, and graduating therefrom in 1887. In the fall he entered the Theological Seminary, from which he graduated May 19, 1891, and he was ordained at Pottstown. During the first years he assisted his father, and was then called to the Womelsdorf parish—Zion's, St. Daniel's near Robesonia, St. John's, Host and Zion's at Strausstown. This field he served until the latter part of November, 1901. He is now located at Pinegrove, Pa. On June 14, 1894, he married Ida Ahrens, of Reading.

Rev. John Frederick Kramlich was born at Kutztown, Aug. 20, 1871, and his early literary training was received in the Normal School, from which he graduated in 1889. For three years he taught in the public schools of Lehigh county. He later entered Muhlenberg College, and graduated in 1896. In 1899 he graduated from Mt. Airy Seminary, and was ordained May 29th, by the Ministerium of Pennsylvania. He then took charge of Grace Church at Royersford. The congregation has built a fine new church during his ministry.

Prof. George Edgar Kramlich was born at Kutztown Oct. 3, 1873, and received his elementary training in the Normal School, graduating in 1891. After teaching several terms in Berks and Montgomery counties he entered Muhlenberg College, from which institution he graduated in 1897. He then taught in the classical department of the Keystone State Normal School for two terms, after which he became principal of schools in Brookville, Jefferson county, and later was superintendent of schools at Tarentum, Allegheny county. After pursuing a post-graduate course in the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University, he accepted the chair of German and Latin in the Ball high school, Galveston, Texas, where he is now located.

JOSIAH E. PRICE, son of John and Mary (Deppen) Price, was born at Womelsdorf, in Berks county, Dec. 4, 1843, and educated at that place and at Reading, to which city his parents removed when he was a lad. After filling positions as district school teacher, and working in the art studios of Maurer and Devlan until 1864, he secured a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, at Reading, in the office of Gustavus Anthony Nicolls, Esq., who was then the general superintendent of the company. By his devotion to duty and efficiency in its performance, he was promoted gradually, and in 1877 transferred to the accounting department in the general office at Philadelphia, removing then to that city with his family. In 1892 he was appointed auditor of disbursements of the Reading System, and he has been at the head of this important department ever since. He has been in the continuous employment of the company forty-five years (1864-1909).

On account of his great proficiency, Mr. Price was selected as a member of the Association of American Railway Accounting Officers. He served on the standing committee on disbursements at the time this committee prepared a tentative text of the Classification of Operating Expenses, which was submitted Dec. 15, 1906, and after modification by the Association was promulgated by the Interstate Commerce Commission and made effective July 1, 1907.

Mr. Price was married in 1866 to Mary Ann Whitaker, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Derr) Whitaker. They have four children: Samuel W. m. Letitia H. Price of Middletown, Del.; Frederick W. m. Adeline W. L. Schab, of Bethlehem, Pa.; Edmund Janes m. Mary Strawn Jamison, of Elkins Park, Pa., Sept. 22, 1909; Irene m. Herbert B. Shearer, of Lancaster, Pa. They are members of the Tioga Methodist Episcopal Church, having resided in this section of Philadelphia since their removal from Reading. Besides taking an active part in the Sunday-school work for a number of years, Mr. Price was also prominently identified with the Y. M. C. A., and the Culture Extension League of Philadelphia.

John Price, the father, was born at Womelsdorf, in 1809, and his wife, Mary Deppen, in Heidelberg township in 1814. He was a custom tailor by trade, and removed to Reading with his family in 1852. He died at Reading at the age of sixty-nine years, and his wife at the age of eighty-five years. They had five sons and three daughters: Elkanah, who died in infancy; Franklin, who m. Annie Hottenstein; John A., who enlisted in the Civil war and was mortally wounded while in active service in the seven days' fight in front of Richmond, Va.; Josiah E.; William H., m. to Christie Bausher; Matilda, unmarried; Rebecca, m. to John C. Dehart; and Mary E., m. to John S. Rudisill.

Mr. Price's ancestors emigrated to America before the Revolution. His great-grandfather, William Price, was born in England in 1750. The Deppens are descendants of the French Huguenots, this being attested by an interesting heirloom of the family in the form of a gold signet ring, which bears the initials of a grand-uncle, Christian Deppen, with the "Fleur de lis" on the seal.

ECKENROAD-ECKENROTH. The descendants of Zacharias Heckenrode, an early settler of Berks county, spell the name in various ways, Eckenrode, Eckenroad, Eckenroth, Heckenroad and Heckenroath being common forms among the present day representatives of the family. This

(I) Zacharias Heckenrode, who was the first ancestor in America of this numerous family, was a resident of Tulpehocken township in 1759, in which year it is recorded he was a taxable there, paying $2.66 federal tax. Many of the name still cling to the religious faith of their forefathers, who were Catholics.

(II) Jacob Eckenroth, son of Zacharias, was a farmer in Heidelberg township, Berks county. His children were Peter, Jacob, Henry, Michael, Lewis, Lizzie and John.

(III) Henry Eckenroth, son of Jacob, born in Heidelberg township about 1792, died about 1874, when eighty-two years, five months, fifteen days, old. He lived in Cumru township, near Gouglersville, owning a small tract of land, and though he attended to its cultivation he was best known throughout lower Berks county as a charcoal burner. He married Barbara Saugner, a native of western Berks county, who died near Gouglersville about 1892, at the great age of 103 years, fifteen days. She was known far and wide for her remarkable vitality. Mr. and Mrs. Eckenroth were members of the Catholic Church, and they are buried side by side in the Catholic cemetery at Reading; their graves are unmarked. He was a man of firm convictions, and strict with his children, rearing them to be honest and industrious members of society. They were eleven in number, as follows: Henry, George and Katie died unmarried; John, who lived in the vicinity of Wernersville, married Mary Hartman; Francis (born 1826—died 1906) had children—Wallace, Edward, Charles, Emma, Ida, Irwin and Harry (this family is mentioned elsewhere); Thomas was next in the family; Lewis is mentioned farther on in this article; Richard; Samuel is mentioned farther on; Jacob; Reuben was born March 22, 1852.

(IV) Lewis Eckenroth, son of Henry and father of Albert L., was born in Heidelberg township and died Oct. 10, 1880. He followed farming in Heidelberg and Spring townships, and died in Cumru township, where he owned a tract of fourteen acres. He married Susan Trostle, daughter of Henry Trostle, of Brecknock township, and they had children: Ellen, deceased, m. John Mohn; Frank is now of Mohnton, Berks county; Ida died young; Cassie died aged eight years, three months; Albert L.; Lizzie m. Charles Fitterling; Thomas; Nora m. Martin Matz; Charles lives at Mohnton; and Annie died aged fourteen years.

(V) Albert L. Eckenroth, son of Lewis, was born May 15, 1868, in Heidelberg township. He received his education in the district schools, but he began to learn the hatter's trade at an early age, with Spatz, Hornberger & Co., of Mohnton, working with that firm for eight years. He was next with John Hendel's Sons, on South Fifth street, at Reading, remaining in their employ for eleven years, and since 1900 he has been working at hatting for J. G. Mohn & Bros., well-known manufacturers of Reading. He is considered one of the best tradesmen in his line in Berks county. Mr. Eckenroth owns a farm comprising over twenty acres in Cumru township, between Mohnton and Gouglersville, and he makes his home on his farm in that township, where he is considered one of the most progressive citizens of the day. He is an industrious man, energetic and ambitious, shrewd and conservative in planning his affairs and able in carrying out his ideas.

As a local worker in the Democratic party Mr. Eckenroth is well known in the county. Since 1900 he has been a member of the county standing committee from Cumru township; he was watchman at the Berks county prison for one year, and for three years was a member of the township board of school directors. During two years of that time he served as president of the board, and it is but a just acknowledgment of his efforts to record that his administration throughout was one of notable progress. During his period of service as director two of the finest school buildings in the county were erected. The one at Shillington was built in 1901, and the one at Oakbrook in 1899. It was also during his administration that the first township high school in Berks county was established, under the new law, and this school is now the leading institution of the kind in the county. It is under the care of Prof. A. M. Dietrich. The salary of teachers was increased and numerous other improvements were made in the school system while Mr. Eckenroth was in office, and both teachers and pupils have reason to remember his services with gratitude.

In fraternal connection Mr. Eckenroth is a member of the P. O. S. of A., the Modern Woodmen and the I. O. O. F. He assisted in organizing Camp No. 211, P. O. S. of A., of Mohnton, and was its first president; is a member of Unamis Tribe, No. 330, I. O. R. M., of Reading; belongs to Mt. Penn Lodge, Odd Fellows, of Reading, and to the Junior Fire Company No. 2, of Reading.

Mr. Eckenroth married Miss Clara Kegerise, daughter of Elias and Elizabeth (Sweigert) Kegerise, who are now deceased. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Eckenroth, namely: Bonding, Harry, George W., Albert L., Jr., Charles and Susan Elizabeth. Mr. Eckenroth and his family are Reformed members of the Gouglersville Union Church.

(IV) Samuel Eckenroad, son of Henry, born Sept. 10, 1844, in Brecknock township, died April 5, 1886, aged forty-one years, six months, twenty-five days. He is buried at Sinking Spring. He lived and died in Lower Heidelberg township, where he owned a tract of land, and he engaged in stone quarrying, in his later years leasing a quarry at Sinking Spring, which he was working at the time of his death. Samuel Eckenroad married Mary Ann Ruth, born March 4, 1841, daughter of Absalom and Ann (Fisher) Ruth, and five children were born to them, namely: George S.; Charles A., a farmer, residing near Wernersville; Annie, unmarried, who lives with her mother; Harry O., a cigar-maker, also living at home; and Edwin R., a school teacher of Spring township, unmarried and living at home.

(V) George S. Eckenroad, son of Samuel, was born Jan. 19, 1867, in Spring township, and obtained his schooling at Gaul's school, in Lower Heidelberg township. From the time he was fourteen until he was eighteen he worked on the farm, and then went to learn the blacksmith's trade with David Sharman, of Fritztown, Berks county. He has followed this business ever since, being located at Fritztown, where he enjoys the good-will and patronage of a large proportion of the people, doing horseshoeing as well as general blacksmith work. In 1904 he built a shop 24 x 36 feet, and has an up-to-date establishment. He is a citizen of high repute, honest and upright in his relations with his fellow men, and respected for his honorable life. He has been successful in business, and besides his shop owns two acres of valuable land at Fritztown, and two nice residences in Sinking Spring, one being his own home, which he has occupied since it was built in 1891. In the fall of 1906 he was one of a company of men, the others being A. S. Stiely, J. S. Hatt, Joseph Smith, N. M. Wenrich, B. F. Huntzinger and Frank C. Fisher, who purchased a small tract of land at a discount from N. M. Wenrich and thereon erected a building 26 x 36 feet in dimensions, two and a half stories high, in which they have since carried on the manufacture of hosiery.

On March 31, 1889, Mr. Eckenroad married Amelia Matz, born Jan. 29, 1862, daughter of David and Mary Ann (Ulrich) Matz, of Spring township, and three children have been born to them: Charles, a molder, now living at Sinking Spring, who married Laura Gromis; Paul M., learning the blacksmith trade with his father; and William S., at school.

Mr. Eckenroad is active in the Democratic party, and has held the various precinct offices with satisfaction to the organization. Socially he belongs to Wernersville Lodge, No. 835, I. O. O. F., and to Castle No. 334, K. G. E., of Sinking Spring.

(III) Lewis Eckenrode, son of Jacob, was a lifelong farmer, and lived at various places, for a number of years making his home at Churchtown, Lancaster county, where he died when about sixty-five years old. He is buried in the Catholic cemetery at Reading. He married Catharine Schnabel, and to them were born the following children: Betzy, wife of Henry Bolten; Adam, mentioned farther on; Christian, who died unmarried; Susan, Mrs. Clark; Catharine, wife of Frank Seiling (she is a member of the Catholic Church); Annetta, wife of Wellington Poff, of Reading; and Henry, a farmer of Lancaster county, whose children were Albert, Maggie, Henrietta, Rosa, Kate and Ida.

(IV) Adam Eckenroad, a retired farmer living in Lower Heidelberg township, was born Jan. 15, 1831, in Lancaster county, near Churchtown, and was reared to farming. For thirteen years he was employed at the Mount Penn Furnace, but with that exception he followed farming throughout his active years. In 1874 he purchased the farm upon which he now lives, and two years later, in 1876, he built the present barn upon the place. The house was erected by Daniel Texter in 1852. The farm comprises 165 acres, and besides this property Mr. Eckenroad owns a tract of forty acres in Lancaster county. He attends the Reading Market, having stand No. 188, at the Bingaman Street Market House.

Mr. Eckenroad married Sarah Smith, of Sinking Spring, daughter of Frederick Smith, the latter a member of the Catholic Church, to which Mr. Eckenroad also belongs, his membership being in St. Peter's Church at Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Eckenroad have three children, namely: Christian, born Nov. 23, 1874, assists his father with the work of the farm; Lizzie is the wife of Nelson Krick, who is employed in Reading, and they live with the Eckenroads; Kate is the wife of David Hassler, of Blainsport, Pennsylvania.

CALVIN W. BUCKS, proprietor of the Old Honesty Cigar Box Company, at Reading, and one of the representative business men of that city, was born Dec. 18, 1871, in Upper Bern township, son of Joshua N. and Valeria (Winters) Bucks, and grandson of John Bucks.

The original Bucks homestead in Bern township, was granted by the Penns to Jacob Grimm in 1744, and he retained it until 1770 when it was sold to Hans Books. The name Bucks on the old parchment deeds was spelled Books, these deeds now being in the possession of Calvin W. Bucks, of Reading. In 1814 Abraham Bucks, son of Hans Books (or John Bucks) sold this tract to his son Daniel Bucks. It was owned by the family for more than one hundred years.

In 1759 John Bucks was a taxable in Bern township, paying a tax of £9. In 1770 he purchased property from Jacob Grimm as above stated, and in 1785 he sold this to his son Abraham. In 1790 according to the Federal census, he was a resident farmer of Bern township, and had two sons under sixteen years of age, and one daughter. He died in 1816, leaving a son John, Jr., who was the executor of his father's estate, as recorded in Will Book C, page 112. His children were: John, Jr.; Abraham; Anna Mary (m. to Conrad Christ). It is evident from the census report that there was at least a daughter whose name is not recorded.

Abraham Bucks (probably a brother of John) was a farmer in Bern township. In 1790 two of his sons were under sixteen years of age. His last will and testament was made April 24, 1811, and he died the same year. His will is on record in Will Book A, page 587. His children were: John, Abraham, Daniel, Susanna, Sarah, Margaret, Magdalena, Catharine and Anna Maria. The sons were given the lands in Bern, and were to pay their sisters £1,500 for their share of the large estate. Daniel, the youngest son, was given the four horses and their harnesses and the other farm implements.

John Bucks, grandfather of Calvin W., was born in Centre township, Berks county, where at one time he was the owner of considerable property. He married Susanna Noecker, and their children were: Emanuel; Sarah m. (first) a Graeff, (second) Samuel Althouse; Matilda and Caroline both died unmarried; Catherine m. Monroe Miller; Frank resides at Reading; Mary m. Henry Lazarus; and Joshua N. Of this family there are yet living Emanuel, Sarah, Frank and Joshua N.

Joshua N. Bucks was born in Centre township, and was reared to agricultural pursuits. He continued to farm until 1904, when he removed to Reading. He owned two adjoining farms, one of nearly 100 acres and the other of fifty-eight acres, both in Centre township, and these he sold before taking up his residence in his comfortable home at No. 226 West Oley street, Reading. He is engaged in the box manufacturing industry. In politics he is a Democrat and he served as auditor of Centre township. He married Valeria Winters, daughter of John R. and Amanda (Spatz) Winters, of Bern township.

Calvin W. Bucks, only son of his parents, was reared on the home farm. He attended the public schools of his native township, and of Centreport, and later the Keystone State Normal School, where he was graduated in 1900. He had taught school, however, three years prior to his graduation. For two years more he engaged in teaching and was then granted his master's diploma, teaching in all five years. In 1902 he took a commercial course in the Reading Business College, and later taught one year in that institution. In 1903 he became bookkeeper for the firm of A. Thalheimer & Son, being employed there for about two years, when it was incorporated under the name of A. Thalheimer Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of cigar boxes. For two years Mr. Bucks served as secretary and treasurer of this company. He then withdrew his interests and embarked in a similar business, Jan. 15, 1907, in association with his father, Joshua N. Bucks, under the firm name of Old Honesty Cigar Box Company. The business is prospering. It is located at No. 634 Washington street, and employment is given fifteen workers.

On June 13, 1896, Mr. Bucks was married to Maggie Bhaer, daughter of Levi and Rebecca (Boyer) Bhaer, of Mohrsville, and a granddaughter of Isaac and Anna Bhaer, of Bern township. Mr. and Mrs. Bucks have one daughter, Consuelo Beatrice.

In 1894 Mr. Bucks learned telegraphy at Shoemakersville, and subsequently filled positions in New Jersey, also at West Falls and Philadelphia. Both he and his wife belong to the First Reformed Church at Reading. He is a member of Washington Camp, No. 446, P. O. S. of A., Centreport; and Reading Lodge, No. 549, F. & A. M., Reading.

NEWTON R. NEWMAN, a well known contractor formerly of Reading, but now residing at Canton, Ohio, was born in February, 1854, in the State of Ohio, son of David S. and Mary Melvina (Dean) Newman. The father was born in Ohio and was a farmer by occupation. The mother belonged to a well-known family of West Virginia. The surviving members of their family of seven children are: J. D., who is engaged in silver mining in Colorado; S. D., of Canton, Ohio, and Newton R., the bridge contractor.

Newton R. Newman was educated at Portsmouth, Ohio, and attended school regularly until eighteen years old, going to work on a farm at that time. He then learned bridge-building, at Wilmington, Ohio, and for twenty-three years he was with the Wright Iron Bridge Company of Canton, that State, where he was foreman for three years. For three years he worked with the Dominion Bridge Company, of Canada. Among the notable bridges on which he has been contractor is the great bridge which crosses the Ohio, at Wheeling, West Va.; and the 200 foot span bridge of Lewis and Clark county, Montana, the metal for which had to be hauled sixty-five miles on wagons through the foothills of the main range of the Rocky Mountains. The north fork of the Sun river is the most rapid stream in the Rocky Mountains, and it is across this mountain torrent that Mr. Newman constructed this bridge, a remarkable feat of engineering. So great an event was it that on the opening of the bridge people rode a hundred miles to attend it and a band of music came a distance of fifty-six miles in order to celebrate so wonderful an accomplishment. At the time the newspapers gave great credit to Mr. Newman for the completion of his difficult task. It was the first bridge ever built in Lewis and Clark county, and its location is known as the Old Hay Stack Butte. Still another large contract successfully filled by Mr. Newman was the big steel viaduct at Toronto, Canada, near the Reservoir Park, over the Don. This structure is 120 feet above the ground, and is 800 feet long. He built the steel viaduct and trestle work to the Windsor street depot at Montreal, on which he worked continuously from the first of August to the first of February, working many days when the thermometer was registering thirty degrees below zero, in order to complete the road in time for the great Ice Carnival. He completed his contract in plenty of time for all trains to make use of it.

Mr. Newman secured, in 1905, the stupendous job of putting up the extension of the Reading Car Works, which involves the use of 2,200 tons of steel. Large as this contract is he has filled one still larger, this being the one he completed for the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company of Michigan, in which he built up 5,000 tons of steel. Mr. Newman was assistant superintendent of construction on the immense bridge across the Mississippi river at Memphis, where he built a truss span of 621½ feet, this being the largest truss span in the world of this kind. As may be judged Mr. Newman has few superiors in his work, and as a bridge builder and contractor he is known all over the country. His work speaks for itself as to his ability. To the lay mind many of these vast constructions before they became facts seemed like dreams of fancy.

In 1891 Mr. Newman was united in marriage with Miss Anna Stout, of Manchester, Ohio. They have had three children, of whom the only son died in January, 1903, aged ten years. The survivors are Hazel and Doris. In politics Mr. Newman is an independent voter. He was reared in the Baptist Church.

MILLER. The Miller family of Berks county has resided here for a century and a half, and its members have proved themselves loyal and useful citizens in war and in peace.

(I) Johan Nicholas Miller, Sr., was a native of Germany. He came to America during the middle of the eighteenth century, and settled in Cumru township, Berks county, Pa., where he followed his trade, that of butcher, during the remainder of his life. During the War of the Revolution he gave valiant service to his adopted country. He was the father of four sons: Johannes, mentioned farther on; Johan Nicholas; Peter, a butcher in Spring township, who married Mary Dusing, and had two sons and three daughters; and Philip, who died unmarried.

(II) Johan Nicholas Miller, son of Johan Nicholas, Sr., was born Sept. 12, 1794, and died Feb. 24, 1883. In early life he learned the butcher's trade with his father, and this he followed in connection with farming all of his life near Fritztown, Spring township. He married Judith Kessler, daughter of Peter and Polly (Weiss) Kessler, and they had these children: Jonathan K. (mentioned below), Priscilla (m. Isaac Pott), Leah (m. Jacob Kelchner), Elizabeth (m. Patrick Odier), Susan (died aged four years), Augustus (a farmer in Heidelberg township), Louisa (died aged seventeen years) and Kate (m. William Focht).

(III) Jonathan K. Miller, son of Johan Nicholas, was born in Cumru township Aug. 9, 1838, and when a young man he learned the trade of stone mason with William Bressler, of Spring township, for whom he worked until Oct. 27, 1862. On that date he enlisted as a private in Company E, 167th Pa. V. I., and served as a musician. He was honorably discharged Aug. 13, 1863. After the close of his army service he resumed his trade which he has followed to the present time. Since 1889 he has made his home in Mohnton. On Feb. 26, 1867, Mr. Miller married Sarah Hill, daughter of Henry and Maria (Fix) Hill, and to them have been born these children: James, born in 1867, m. Lillie Bitting; William A.; and Lizzie, born Dec. 13, 1873, m. Daniel Krick, of Mohnton.

(IV) WILLIAM A. MILLER, son of Jonathan, was born in Spring township March 12, 1870, and he received his education in the local schools. He left school to work on the farm, but after several years he learned cigar making with John Steffey, of Vinemont, an occupation which has engaged his attention since. In 1897 he removed from Spring township to Mohnton, Cumru township, where he lived with his parents for four years, and then located in Shillington, where he has since been employed by Kramer Brothers. In the fall of 1905 Mr. Miller erected a fine two-story house, at the corner of Miller and Church streets, in the front of which he keeps a grocery and carries a fine line of staple and fancy groceries and notions. His wife takes care of the business during the day time, and they enjoy a large and ever increasing trade.

Mr. Miller is a gifted musician and is leader of the Winona Band of Mohnton, which consists of twenty-five pieces, and which has played at Philadelphia, Reading, Allentown, Lancaster, Kutztown and Dorney's Park. He enjoys an enviable reputation as a clarinet player, and has given lessons on this instrument and on the cornet, on which he is also a skilled performer. Mr. and Mrs. Miller are consistent members of Emanuel Reformed Church at Shillington, of which he is a trustee, and for the past nine years has been choir leader. He is also superintendent of the Sunday-school, and in various ways has been active in church and Sunday-school work. In political matters he is a Republican, has been elected to the school board of Cumru township, which has thirty-two schools, and is president of the township board of education, this board having charge of the best managed and most thoroughly equipped schools of Berks county. Socially Mr. Miller stands high. He is a man of progressive and enterprising spirit, and when the question of incorporating Shillington arose he was in the foremost ranks of leading citizens in the movement, believing that it was for the welfare of the community.

On May 12, 1891, Mr. Miller was united in marriage with Miss Mary Ellen Schweitzer, born Sept. 5, 1873, daughter of Adam B. and Maria (Steffy) Schweitzer, and granddaughter of John and Catherine (Eshelman) Schweitzer. By this union there is one daughter, Maggie Minerva, born Feb. 2, 1901.

(II) Johannes Miller, son of Johan Nicholas, Sr., lived in Spring township. He married Catherine Snyder, and they became the parents of three sons and three daughters.

(III) Peter Miller, son of Johannes, was a shoemaker, woodchopper and farmer. By hard labor he acquired a farm of sixty-five acres, on which he erected a house in 1843, and a barn in 1844. This house he replaced with a much larger and more modern home in 1889. On an adjoining farm lived his brother, George Miller, who erected his home in 1842. This locality took the name of Millerstown from the three brothers, Peter, George and John. Peter Miller married Sarah Stieley, daughter of John Stieley, and they became the parents of these children: Rebecca (m. Jacob Hatt), Sarah (m. John Hatt), John (died aged eighteen years), Katie (m. Thomas Moyer), James (died in infancy), Anna (m. Daniel Mellon), Levi (m. (first) Katie Zacharias, and (second) Sallie Seltzer), Peter S. and Isaac. Peter Miller Sr. died in 1896.

(IV) Peter S. Miller, son of Peter and Sarah, was born Dec. 11, 1850, in Spring township, and was educated in Miller's school-house on the homestead, which was erected by the township in 1845. He left school when eighteen years of age, and worked at home for his parents until he was twenty-four. He then worked as a laborer for seven years, making his home during this time at Weitzeltown. In 1882 he returned to the farm and tenanted it until his father died in 1896. He then purchased the farm, and he still continues to cultivate it with great success. This farm consists of 102 acres, including six acres of woodland. He also does some trucking and attends the Reading market, having had stand No. 28 at the Bingaman street market since 1882. His farm is equipped with the latest improved machinery, and he also owns some fine live stock. The excellent buildings and the generally neat appearance of the premises all reflect credit upon his management. He built his fine barn in 1905. He also owns a farm of fifty-eight acres in Spring township, one of the old Krick farms, which he purchased in 1907, and which is tenanted by his son, Peter H.

In politics Mr. Miller is a Democrat, and has been delegate to several county conventions, and as early as 1881 served as township supervisor, repeatedly since then refusing nominations. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, No. 155, Sinking Spring; I. O. O. F., No. 835, Wernersville; and K. G. E., No. 344, of Sinking Spring. He and his family attend the church at Sinking Spring, he being a Reformed member and his wife a Lutheran member.

On March 11, 1871, Mr. Miller married Susan Epler, daughter of John and Rachel (Irving) Epler, of Gouglersville, Pa. and their eleven children were: Prof. Franklin P. is mentioned below; William C., a machinist at Mohnsville, m. Amanda Mosser; Ida S. m. Milton C. Rentz, a teacher at West Reading; Lillie E. m. Well. Kachel of Edison, Pa.; Edna E. m. Martin Kocher, of Reading; Peter H., a farmer, m. Carrie H. Krick; Mazie m. Franklin Grill, of Sinking Spring; John L., unmarried, is at home; Theodore C., who graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1906, is now a student at Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.; and Gertrude A. and Carrie M. are at home.

(V) Prof. Franklin Pierce Miller, A. B., A. M., was born at Fritztown in 1871, son of Peter S. and Susan (Epler) Miller. He attended the public schools of Spring township, and later the Charter Oak Academy of the same district, under Thomas J. Oberlin. He then taught school in his native township for four terms, after which he attended the Kutztown State Normal School, from which he was graduated in 1893. Returning home he taught the Montello grammar school for two terms, and during this time prepared himself for the freshman class of Franklin and Marshall College, with the assistance of Rev. Dr. J. V. George. He graduated from that famous institution in 1899, with the degree of A. B., receiving his master's degree three years later. During his college course he specialized in Ethics. In the spring and summer of 1899, Prof. Miller conducted a summer school at Leesport, Pa., and prepared many young men and women, who since have become well known educators. In the fall of the same year he entered the Theological Seminary at Lancaster, where he pursued his studies successfully for about two years, and then accepted a call from the Keystone State Normal School to the department of Physical Science, a position he filled with great ability. He successfully reorganized the department and built it up after the most modern approved plans, his laboratory being better equipped than any other in similar institutions in the State, and his pupils being universally noted for their thoroughness in this line. The authorities of the Theological Seminary being impressed with Prof. Miller's zeal and ability granted him permission to finish his theological course in absente, which he did in two years' time, becoming a regular graduate. He was licensed at Womelsdorf by the Reformed Church of America in 1902, to preach the Gospel, after which time he filled various pulpits in Eastern Pennsylvania. In 1904 Prof. Miller took a post-graduate course at the University of Chicago. He wrote and published a laboratory Manual on Physics. He died Jan. 2, 1909.

On July 2, 1901, Prof. Miller was married to M. Ella Krick, daughter of Adam B. and Lucy (Reber) Krick, and to this union came one son, LeRoy K., born Oct. 26, 1904.

WILLIAM A. FILBERT. Among the worthy bearers of the Filbert name in Berks county may be mentioned William A. Filbert, a prosperous farmer in Bern township.

John Filbert, father of William A., was born in Marion township, Berks county, in October, 1832, and he followed the occupation of farmer in his native township all his active life, owning 162 acres of valuable land near Womelsdorf, now the property of George Filbert. The last years of his life he passed in Womelsdorf living retired. He died in 1895 and is buried at Womelsdorf. He married Maria Schoener, daughter of Andrew and Mary (Leiss) Schoener, and she now lives in her own home in Womelsdorf. Mr. Filbert was a member of Zion's Lutheran Church, and he served as deacon and elder. The only children of this marriage were the two sons, William A. and Samuel E.

William A. Filbert was born in Marion township, Jan. 25, 1858, and he attended the public schools in the vicinity of his home until he was twenty years of age. He assisted his father on the farm, and then farmed his father's farm for three years. In 1891 he moved to Bern township, and located on his father-in-law's farm of 162 acres. This is located on the main road from Heister's Mill to Reading. He has become well known and highly esteemed, and he has been active in public affairs as a loyal Democrat. In 1907, he was elected a member of the school board of his township, and he has long taken an active part in the betterment of the educational system. Mr. Filbert is a member of the Lutheran church and he has been both elder and deacon in Womelsdorf and Bern churches, and he is active in all religious work.

Mr. Filbert has been twice married. His first wife, Florenda Fisher, was a daughter of Daniel Fisher. To this union was born one daughter, Annie, m. to Harry Basley, a cigar manufacturer at Womelsdorf. Mr. Filbert m. (second) Emma Snyder, daughter of John L. and Matilda (Smith) Snyder, of Bernville. Three children have been born to them, namely: Millie and Lottie, at home; and one that died in infancy.

GRETH. The Greth family has given to Berks county some of its most substantial and industrious citizens, and among these may be mentioned Isaac C. Greth, who resides near State Hill, Charles A. Greth, of near Wernersville, and the late Samuel U. Greth, a farmer in the vicinity of Wernersville.

(I) Andreas Greth (or Grett) was the ancestor of all of the name in this section of Pennsylvania. He was a native of southern Germany, and on coming to the New World settled in Windsor township, Berks Co., Pa. In 1771 he obtained a warrant of land from the proprietors of the Commonwealth, for forty-five acres. In 1780 he paid a federal tax of £20, and owned 235 acres in that township. His sons were: (1) Daniel is mentioned farther on. (2) John lived in Bern township in 1784, at that time owning sixty-five acres of land. In that year his family consisted of four persons. (3) Nicholas Grett lived in Windsor township on the homestead. He died advanced in years in 1845, and his will is recorded in Will Book IX, p. 64. His executors were John Grett and Jacob Balthaser. His children were: Susanna; Barbara Baver, widow of John Baver; Hannah, who married (first) Thomas Dum, and is now the widow of Henry Gibson; John; Molly, widow of Jacob Balthaser, of Bern (now Tilden) township; Eve, wife of Jonas Gilgert; Christian; Samuel, of Lebanon, Pa.; and Andrew, who married Rebecca Obold, and had children—Amelia (who lives at St. Joseph's Hospital, Reading), Amanda, Mary, Rebecca, Matilda, Louisa, Joseph, Darius, William, Israel, Phoenas and John.

(II) Daniel Greth, son of Andreas, was a resident of Lower Heidelberg township. He is buried in a Catholic (private) burying ground at Hetrichstown, in Penn township, his death taking place about 1848, when he was quite advanced in years. The maiden name of his wife was Polly Reifsnyder. Their children were: Samuel, born 1808, died 1882; John, born 1811, died 1874; Daniel had children—Adam, Amanda, Joshua, Clorinda, Daniel, John and Frank; Emanuel had children—Eliza, Mary, Sarah, Adam and George; Betzy married James McCallister; Matilda m. Philip Miller; Mary m. William Fisher.

(III) Samuel Greth, son of Daniel, born Feb. 10, 1808, died Oct. 16, 1882, when he was aged seventy-four years, eight months, six days. His occupation was that of a stone-mason, and he had in his employ some four or five men. He also owned a tract of sixty acres of land in Lower Heidelberg township, and while he gave necessary attention to the cultivation of this, the major portion of his time was devoted to his trade, and he laid the foundations for many buildings, and as well built many stone houses and barns. In his religious faith he was a Roman Catholic, and he is buried at Hain's Church. He m. Kate Ulrich, born June 4, 1808, died Sept. 29, 1872, aged sixty-four years, three months, twenty-five days. Twelve children were born to them: Richard, Catharine, Rebecca, Maria, Samuel U., Caroline, Sarah, Levi, William, John (died young) and the twins, Darius and Frank.

(IV) Samuel U. Greth, son of Samuel, born on the Greth homestead in Lower Heidelberg township June 18, 1841, died December 5, 1907, aged sixty-six years, five months, seventeen days. He was reared to manhood on the home farm, giving to his parents the benefit of his labors until he was twenty-three years of age. He then learned boat-building from William Hiester, at Unionville, in a yard owned by Daniel Linderman. This occupation engrossed his attention for four years, and then for a period of ten years he assisted in the building of coal cars in the Mellert shops at Reading, receiving excellent wages. For several years he engaged at carpentering, and for fourteen years burned lime at Wernersville, burning as high as 30,000 bushels in one year. His trade was large and profitable. In 1888 he moved to Main street, Wernersville, where he owned a comfortable residence and fine farm. His tract of fifteen acres was very productive under his capable management, and he was a regular attendant at the local market. In his political faith he was a Democrat. He and his family all attended the Hain's Reformed Church, in which he served as deacon and elder for a number of years. In 1867 he m. Matilda Grimes, daughter of Israel and Sarah (Krick) Grimes. Four children blessed this union, namely: George died in 1887, at the age of nineteen years, and is buried at Hain's Church; Sallie died in infancy; Samuel died aged seven years; Mary m. Howard Baer, then of Sinking Spring but now of Wernersville, and has one child; Marion C.

(III) John Greth, son of Daniel, born Aug. 5, 1811, died July 18, 1874, aged sixty-two years, eleven months, thirteen days. He passed his life engaged in farming in Lower Heidelberg township. He m. Elizabeth Knorr, born March 6, 1808, died Jan. 2, 1885, aged seventy-six years, nine months, twenty-six days. To this union were born children as follows: Israel, Sallie, John D. (m. Amanda Hiester) and Amanda (m. first Frank Riegel, and second James Schaeffer).

(IV) Israel Greth, son of John and Elizabeth, was a farmer in Lower Heidelberg township, and also followed the stone-mason's trade. He m. Sarah Shower, daughter of Isaac and Polly (Wenrich) Shower, farming people of Heidelberg township, whose other children were: Mary Ann m. Augustus Harner; Eliza m. Isaac Palm; Isaac m. Catharine Naftzinger; David never married. To Israel Greth and wife were born these children: Frank m. Sallie Grime; Isaac C. is mentioned below; Lizzie m. Henry Reber; Annie m. Lewis Gottshall; Kate m. James Burkey; Emma m. (first) Tyson Himmelberger, who is deceased, and (second) John White; Maria Agnes remained unmarried; one died in infancy. Mr. Greth died Feb. 29, 1904, aged sixty-nine, and his wife died March 1, 1903, aged seventy years.

(V) Isaac C. Greth, son of Israel, was born in Lower Heidelberg township, Nov. 26, 1868. He was educated in the township schools and his early training was along agricultural lines. When but fourteen years of age he began assisting his brother Frank in his general store at State Hill, and after remaining with him for six years he and Henry H. Reber purchased the store and carried it on for a year. He was next employed at butchering and huckstering for three years, at the end of that time engaging in business for himself and meeting with great success to the present time. In 1898 he purchased the store stand and store at State Hill, which is situated on the thoroughfare from Reading to Bernville, and carried it on for seven years in connection with his regular business. Then he sold the store stock in order to devote all his time to huckstering, but retained the ownership of the stand. While in the store business he officiated as postmaster at the Lorah office. He still attends the weekly market at Reading, as he has regularly since he was a mere boy of ten years. In 1894 he purchased the old Greth homestead; in 1903 the old and well-known "Dry Tavern" property; and in 1904 the old Deppen homestead, situated on the Bernville road. Having then decided to establish his residence on the "Dry Tavern" property, one mile west of State Hill, he in 1905 erected a commodious house with all modern improvements, which is generally recognized as the finest home in this section of the country. It occupies an elevated position and commands a magnificent view of the surrounding country for many miles. His career in business has been very successful, and by his straightforward course he has won the respect and confidence of the entire community.

In 1891 Mr. Greth m. Kate Himmelreich, daughter of Adam Himmelreich, a farmer of Lower Heidelberg, and nine children have been born to them: Walter I., Israel P., Adam D., Warren S., Elda S., Edna M., Erma A., Isaac C. and Elmer L.

Adam Himmelreich, father of Mrs. Isaac C. Greth, m. Catharine Ochs, daughter of Charles Ochs, a farmer of Bern township, and they had children: Kate m. Isaac C. Greth; George married Ida Leinbach; Maggie m. David Yoder. Adam Himmelreich died in 1893, aged forty-nine years.

Nathan Himmelreich, father of Adam, m. Mary Yoh, daughter of John Yoh, and had seven children: Samuel m. Catharine Reininger; Adam m. Catharine Ochs; Catharine m. Elias Brendel; Ellen m. George Roth; Emma m. Wilson Trupp; Alice m. George Mint; Isabella m. George Sallade.

Charles Ochs, maternal grandfather of Mrs. Isaac C. Greth, a farmer of Alsace township, m. Catharine Schildt, and became the father of four children: Catharine m. Adam Himmelreich; Susan m. Jacob Dunkelberger; Cornelius remained unmarried; Henry m. Elmira Stitzel. He died in 1878, aged sixty-nine years, and his wife died at the age of seventy years.

Frederick Ochs, father of Charles, was a farmer in Bern township. He m. Susan Bussler, and they had five children: Jeremiah m. Catharine Zerbe; Henrietta m. Isaac Fornwald; Harriet and Lydia remained unmarried; Charles m. Catharine Schildt.

(IV) John D. Greth, son of John and Elizabeth, was born in Lower Heidelberg township in August, 1842. He was a huckster for many years, also for a long time drove a milk route, and is now engaged in selling liquor for A. M. Young, of Womelsdorf, a business he has been engaged in since 1902. He owns his own home, and is quite popular in his community. In politics he is a Demo-unmarried when seventy-six years old; Thomas; Samuel, a huckster, of Mt. Aetna, Berks county, where he died at the age of seventy-one years, m. Eliza Fisher.

David Dieffenbach was born in Bethel township in 1823, and early in life learned the carpenter's trade, later engaging in coach making. He married Mary Rollman, daughter of Peter Rollman, and she bore him the following eleven children: (1) Henrietta m. Watson High, resides in W. Lebanon, and has had eleven children, seven of whom are living; (2) Emma m. Henry Hiester and died in Orwigsburg, Schuylkill county, aged fifty-nine years, leaving four children; (3) Thomas m. Emma Weidman and has two boys and one girl; (4) Kate m. Adam Reinold, resides in Freystown, and has five children; (5) Peter; (6) Frank, who resides in Reading, m. Agnes Miller, and they have one child; (7) Sophia m. John Miller, resides in Fritztown and has three children; (8) David, who resides in Washington, Kans., m. Amanda Schriffer; (9) Amelia m. Abraham Yost, resides on a farm near Hiester's Mill, Berks county, and has five children; (10) Mary m. George Hartman, resides near Freystown, and has six children; and (11) Ida died young.

Peter Dieffenbach was educated in the public schools of his native locality, and at the same time acquired a fair knowledge of coach building by assisting his father. He subsequently learned the trade of blacksmith with John Miller of Fredericksburg, after which he worked in other places, still continuing his trade. He then embarked in the business on his own account being now engaged thereat on the old homestead at Cross Creek Mills, Pa. Mr. Dieffenbach was married to Miss Caroline Kerscher, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Kreitzer) Kerscher, and to this union the following six children were born: (1) Minnie m. Harvey Yungst, resides in Elizabethtown, Lancaster county, and has two boys,—Roy Eugene and Earl Davis; (2) Agnes m. Jacob Miller, a creamer, and resides near Freystown, having three children,—Carrie, Harry and Stella; (3) Wallace, who works with his father, m. a daughter of John A. Krick, resides at Meckville, and has two children, Peter and George; (4) Pierce, who resides at home and follows coach building, m. Lizzie Darkes, daughter of Ephraim and Amanda (Bressler) Darkes, and they have had one child, a daughter, Helen; (5) Davis is single and lives at home with his parents; and (6) Herbert died in his fourth year.

Mr. Dieffenbach has always been a stanch supporter of the principles of the great Democratic party, in the ranks of which he has been very active in Bethel township. He has served in numerous minor offices, but has never aspired higher. He is active in the work of Klopp's Union Church, in which he has held the offices of deacon and elder. Mr. Dieffenbach is well known in his community, where he has the respect and esteem of all.

HORNBERGER. The Hornberger family of Berks and surrounding counties had its origin in Johann Carl (Charles) and his son Conrad Hornberger, who emigrated from Switzerland. The Pennsylvania Archives give the date of their landing at Philadelphia as Sept. 5, 1730. When (I) Carl Hornberger left his native land and sailed for the New World on the ship "Alexandria Ann," he was accompanied by his wife, Anna Eva, and at least two sons, the one Conrad, and another who died enroute and was buried at sea. This emigrant family brought with them a Bible, in which was kept the family register, but unfortunately this precious book fell into the possession of a later family of Hornbergers who moved to Illinois, and who, not appreciating its priceless value, permitted it to become the plaything of children, and its destruction followed as a matter of course. In 1759 Johann Carl Hornberger paid a federal tax of £9 in Brecknock township, Berks county. His will is on record in the Berks county court-house, and was probated in 1786, the year of his death. In it he mentions that he himself was old in years; and refers to these children: Conrad, George Frederick (whose place of settlement is unknown), Maria Eva, and John Jacob (who settled in Lancaster county).

(II) Conrad Hornberger, son of Johann Carl, was born in the Old World, and as stated accompanied his parents to Pennsylvania. He was a blacksmith by trade, and made his home in Brecknock township near Gouglersville, where he owned a tract of upward of three hundred acres of land. This tract in later years became the property of his son, Conrad, Jr. His wife was Catharine Huffert. He died in 1796, and in that year his will was probated. In this document he mentions children: David; Conrad; Carl; Margaret; Catharine; Magdalena; and Mary.

(III) Conrad Hornberger, Jr., son of Conrad, was a farmer and distiller in Brecknock township, owning his father's estate, which consisted originally of about three hundred acres, and which in time was divided into three tracts and shared among three sons. A. S. Deisher, of Reading, now owns 197 acres of it. Conrad Hornberger was born Oct. 6, 1771, and died June 20, 1851, aged nearly eighty years, and is buried at Gouglersville, Berks county. He married Elizabeth Mosser, born Dec. 25, 1779, who died on her birthday seventy-six years later. Their children were: (1) Isaac (born Jan. 22, 1802, died aged fifty seven years, fifteen days), a farmer on a part of the homestead, married Hannah Ruth. (2) William H. is mentioned below. (3) John (born Dec. 19, 1805, died April 15, 1887), who also owned part of the homestead, m. Hannah Grant (1816-1885). (4) Kate m. George Marks (son of George Marks, Sr.), who was a laborer in Cumru township. (5) Joseph M. (born March 18, 1812, died Aug. 18, 1894, aged eighty-two years, five months) m. (first) Cassie (or Catharine) Spatz, by whom he had eleven children, (second) Mary Burns (born Nov. 27, 1827, daughter of Jacob Burns, died Oct. 5, 1868, aged forty years, ten months, eight days), by whom he had one son, and (third) Barbara Warner, daughter of Joseph. (6) Elizabeth m. Joseph Hemmig, of Cumru township. (7) Conrad, born Oct. 6, 1809, died Dec. 7, 1899, aged ninety years, two months, one day. He was a well-known man, at one time conducting the "Leopard Hotel," at Baumstown, Pa., and later the "Angelica Hotel." He m. Bertha Hemmig (1807-1875, daughter of David and Catharine Hemmig), and they had a large family—Catherine, James (born March 12, 1855), Mary, Elizabeth, Hannah, Emma, Maggie, Rufus, Sebastian and John. (8) Catherine m. Nathan Miller. (9) Susanna m. Jeremiah Moore. (10) Emanuel died unmarried when aged about fifty years. He was an invalid. (11) Richard (born Sept. 16, 1816, died April 21, 1892, aged seventy-five years, seven months, five days) m. Polly Grill (1828-1885), was a farmer and lived on part of the old homestead. He served as school director and was well-known in his community. (12) Mary m. John Brendel, who moved by team to Mifflin county, Pennsylvania.

(IV) William H. Hornberger, son of Conrad, Jr., was born Feb. 4, 1804, in Brecknock township. He died Dec. 1, 1887, aged eighty-three years, nine months, twenty-seven days. He was an able horseman, and always had a fine team of well-kept horses, in which he took a deep interest. At the age of fourteen years he began driving a six-horse team, drawing a big Conestoga wagon. At this time there were no canals or railroads, and he made frequent trips to Philadelphia, taking down flour and bringing back merchandise and freight for the settlers of Cumru and the people of Reading. During these trips he would feed and stable his team under the clear sky. He had oil blankets with which he covered his horses, and often on winter mornings they stood in deep snow that came up to their bellies. Mr. Hornberger would sleep on or under the wagon, rolled up in blankets, with a revolver in each hand, for robberies and murders were frequent, and on the return trip he had upon his person from $500 to $2,500 in money. He was never robbed and never lost a cent, but he always was on his guard, and because of his strength and great courage was much feared by the robbers. Several times upon his arrival home during the winter, he had to be lifted from his saddle horse, his legs and feet being so stiff that his sister Elizabeth (Mrs. Hemmig) soaked his frozen boots and stockings from his feet with hot water before he could walk. In 1824 he hauled the first lumber from Marietta, Lancaster county, for the construction of the county almshouse. Mr. Hornberger was not only a famous teamster, but also one of the best farmers of the county, and was widely known. He possessed considerable property, owning the tract of land in Cumru township, now belonging to Harry Frey, as well as other land.

In his later life, while in the field plowing, Almighty God in a wonderful way manifested Himself to him. He was a member of the Evangelical Church of Mohnsville, and an ardent Christian until his death. He was bitterly opposed to the use of tobacco and spirituous liquors, and was a model man in every way, and was very much esteemed. His death was a loss to the community, where he was regarded as a valuable and good man. In politics he was a Republican, and he served as supervisor of his township.

William H. Hornberger married Nellie Deeds, born April 3, 1806, daughter of Henry W. and Mary (Warner) Deeds, of Cumru township. She died Jan. 1, 1888, aged eighty-one years, eight months, twenty-eight days. She bore him the following children: Harriet m. Reuben Gring. Cyrus D. is mentioned below. Joseph D. is mentioned below. William, who was a farmer in Cumru, m. Amanda Hemmig. Ellen m. Joseph Swartz. Mary, born June 11, 1846, m. Samuel K. Miller, of Mohnton, Pa. Catharine m. Henry Trout.

(V) Cyrus D. Hornberger, son of William H., was born in Cumru township, Berks county, July 14, 1832, and since March, 1906, has lived retired in Reading. His youth was passed on the farm, and he learned the gun-barrel manufacturing business from his uncle, Henry W. Deeds of Cumru. This vocation he followed for three years, and then went to the wheelwright trade, which he followed at Mohnton for thirty years. He worked at carpentering for some two years, and then began farming on his sixty-three acre tract at Mohnton. In 1879 he built the present house on this land, and the following year, 1880, he erected the barn. He farmed eight years, and then, building a comfortable brick house at Mohnton, moved there, and made it his home until his removal to Reading. From 1874 to 1889 he carried on hat manufacturing in a factory he had erected the former year. In 1866 he built a grist-mill, developed the water-power, and after operating it a few years sold it to Reuben Gring; and he also erected the water-power of the Globe Hat Works, now the property of his son, Aaron S.

Mr. Hornberger was a prominent man in his day, and it can truly be said that the world was benefited by his useful life. He was a man of progress and enterprise. He owned considerable property which was covered with timber when he obtained it. This he cut down, cleared the soil of rocks and stumps, and laid out the land in building lots, which he sold; and he donated land to the Reading & Southwestern Street Railway Company as an inducement to build their line to his town—the only man to do so. He still owns property in Cumru, and four dwellings and a building in Mohnton, of which town he was one of the founders, the other surviving founder being Samuel K. Mohn. The town was named in honor of Mr. Mohn's father and himself.

On Oct. 1, 1854, Mr. Hornberger married Caroline Spatz, born Dec. 8, 1833, daughter of John and Mary (Heberling) Spatz, of Cumru. Six children were born of this union, namely: Milton S., who died in 1886, is mentioned farther on; Joanna, who m. the late James Westley, now resides at No. 420 North Twelfth street, Reading; Josephus S. is mentioned below; Aaron S.; Cyrus lives at Toledo, Ohio; and Emma died in 1886, aged fourteen years.

(VI) Milton S. Hornberger, son of Cyrus D., was born May 3, 1856, and he died March 2, 1886, in the faith of the Evangelical Church, of which he was an official member. For a number of years he was a surveyor at Mohnton, and he also served in the capacity of engineer in the Hornberger & Co. hat factory. He was known as a man of integrity and honesty. In 1882 he married Emma German, born April 30, 1857, daughter of George and Kate (Dietrich) German, natives of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, and three children were born of this union: Mabel, a seamstress at Mohnton; Harry G.; and Milton G., a hat finisher.

(VII) Harry G. Hornberger, an enterprising young business man of Mohnton, Pa., where he is extensively engaged in contracting and building, was born Nov. 12, 1884, in Mohnton, Pa., a son of Milton S. and Emma (German) Hornberger, and grandson of Cyrus D. Hornberger, mention of whom is made fully elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. Hornberger was educated in the schools of his native township, and also took a complete architectural course in the International Correspondence School of Scranton, Pa. When seventeen years of age he went to learn the carpenter's trade with Jacob F. Westley, of Mohnton, Pa., and at the time of Mr. Westley's death, Feb. 7, 1906, Mr. Hornberger became his successor. He has continued the business to the present time, employing on an average six skilled mechanics, and among the buildings erected by him may be mentioned: the large Mohnton Knitting Mills; Hendel's Hat Factory (remodeled); the Fritztown Knitting Mills; the residence of Oswin F. Kroyer, of Edison; the Albert H. Tobias double building, dwelling and cigar factory, at Edison; the Mt. Pleasant public school in Cumru, and a number of others. Mr. Hornberger is a man of enterprise and progressive ideas, and is succeeding through his business ability, his integrity, and his willingness to live up to the letter of each contract. In politics he is an independent voter. Fraternally he is connected with Washington Camp, P. O. S. of A., and with Hillside Camp, No. 8020, Modern Woodmen of America, both of Mohnton, Pennsylvania.

(VI) Josephus S. Hornberger, son of Cyrus D., proprietor of a lake and park at Mohnton, and a well-known clothier at Reading, Pa., was born Jan. 11, 1861. He spent his boyhood days upon the farm, and attended the local schools of this township, which he left when sixteen years old to learn carpentering from his father. He followed that trade for a few years. In 1881 he learned the hatter's trade, at which he was engaged until about 1886, when he commenced farming on his father's place, which came into his possession in later years. When he farmed he also did general hauling for the business men of Mohnton. In 1889 he sold his farm stock and moved to Mohnton, engaging in the ice business, which he conducted successfully for ten years. He served the trade not only at Mohnton, but also at Reading, continuing there until 1899, when he leased his plant to the Reading Cold Storage Ice Company.

In 1901 Mr. Hornberger purchased the good will, fixtures and stock of the Morris Weil Clothing House, located at No. 642 Penn street, Reading, one of the oldest and best-known clothing houses of the city. He then formed a partnership with his son, Alvin M., under the firm name of J. S. Hornberger & Co., and they enjoy in a large measure the patronage of the people of Berks and surrounding counties. They carry a large line of up-to-date goods.

Recently Mr. Hornberger purchased a tract of woodland, cut the wood, and used it in the construction of a lake at Mohnton, which covers an area of six and one-half acres. This lake and the adjoining park make one of the pleasure resorts of the district. Mr. Hornberger has several steel rowboats and one naphtha launch upon the lake, all of which are in constant use during the summer. On Nov. 29, 1906, his boat house was destroyed by fire and a launch which cost him $700 was burned. He has since replaced it. Mr. Hornberger is a stockholder in the Merchants & Traders Oil Company, of Ohio. He is president of the J. S. Hornberger Wholesale Ice Company, and is at present busily engaged in building six large ice houses, with concrete abutments, for the use of this concern, which disposes of about fifteen thousand tons of ice annually and is steadily adding to its trade. Besides his handsome residence Br. Hornberger owns twelve other dwellings in his town, and the sixty-two and a half acres of farm land which belonged to his father. He undoubtedly inherits his love for fine horses, and one of his prize possessions is "Hilker," a pacing horse with a record of 2:15 made at "Three Mile House" in 1906. He is a Republican in politics, and socially is a member of Tent No. 426, K. O. T. M., of Reading, the largest Tent in the State. He and his family are members of the Salem Evangelical Association of his town.

On Aug. 23, 1881, Mr. Hornberger was married to Kate G. Mosser, daughter of Nicholas and Sallie (Grill) Mosser, and they have one son and one daughter, namely: (1) Alvin M., who is a graduate of the township high school and the Schissler Business College (class of 1900), Norristown, Pa., is a member of the firm of J. S. Hornberger & Co. He m. Mame E. Johnson, daughter of J. M. Johnson, contractor of water works, of Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pa., and they reside at No. 243 South Twelfth street, Reading. Mrs. Alvin M. Hornberger is a graduate of Freeburg Musical College, class of 1897, and is an accomplished musician and a talented vocalist. (2) Charlotte E. is an accomplished musician, having been a pupil of the late Professor Berg, of Reading, and also of Professor Unger. She traveled with the Tolson Stock Company, under the leadership of the well-known Mrs. Reber of Philadelphia. She is now the wife of James A. G. Vierling, of Reading, who is a foreman at the Reading Railway Locomotive Shops.

The J. S. Hornberger family mansion, completed in the summer of 1908, is a beautiful variegated glass cement residence at the corner of Lake and Front streets, Mohnton, and is known as Lakeside, since it overlooks the large artificial lake constructed by Mr. Hornberger. It is the most attractive home in Berks county, and the only one of its kind in Pennsylvania. It is built of solid cement, porch floors, columns, etc., all being of cement. The porch columns are two feet in diameter and very massive in appearance. At a short distance the outside walls resemble tile work. This effect was produced by pressing small pieces of stained glass into the cement before it hardened. It was Mr. Hornberger's own idea. There are entrances at the front, in the rear, and on either side. This home is very conveniently arranged, the rooms are large, and everything about the place tends to promote the idea of comfort. It is lighted by electricity throughout. Cement figures and a large fountain ornament the yard. Mr. Hornberger is at present busily engaged in erecting a handsome mansion for his son Alvin, who will occupy it as soon as it is finished.

(V) Joseph D. Hornberger, former steward of the Berks county almshouse, and the oldest and best-known auctioneer in the county, was born in the Hornberger homestead in Cumru township, where he now resides, Sept. 23, 1834. He is a son of William H. and Nellie (Deeds) Hornberger, mention of whose family and ancestry is made above.

Mr. Hornberger attended the old pay schools in vogue in his boyhood, acquiring a good business education. He worked upon his father's farm until he was twenty-two years old, and then began farming on his father-in-law's farm, in Cumru township, near Flying Hill. He began poor, buying his farm stock on credit, but no obligations were ever more sacredly kept than his—when his notes became due they were promptly met. This 145-acre farm he cultivated for seven years. In 1859 the barn on this property was totally destroyed by fire, incurring a loss to Mr. Hornberger of about three thousand dollars. His entire farm stock, including fifteen cows, chickens, grain, thirty-five tons of hay and farm implements, were consumed in the devouring flames, and Mr. and Mrs. Hornberger had to begin life anew. He then moved to the "Three Mile House," conducting that hotel for three years, when he took to farming again, on the old Evans's estate, now owned by the Levans. Six years later he sold all of his fine stock, and the sale, held in the spring, was the largest one ever held in the county up to that date. People attended from far and wide, and his stock brought Mr. Hornberger almost ten thousand dollars. He now moved to Shillington, where he erected three large brick dwellings on Lancaster avenue, occupying one of them until he moved upon the Kurtz farm and into the "Kurtz House," where he lived four years. In 1876 he moved to the "Five Mile House," which hotel he greatly remodeled and also built shedding, and while there enjoyed an extensive patronage. In 1882 he moved back to the "Three Mile House," living there until 1885, when he was elected steward of the Berks county almshouse. He continued to fill that office for a period of seven years, during which time he did much for the county home. He enjoys the reputation to this day of having been the best steward Berks county ever had and the county is indebted to him for having brought the 500-acre farm up to its present high standard of fertility and productiveness. Under his management the fences were torn out, the fields made larger, and the value and beauty of the property increased in many ways. Mr. Hornberger was a great favorite with the inmates of the home. He is a man of sunshiny disposition and possesses many other attractive characteristics, among which are frankness, honesty, promptness, kindness and good common sense.

In the fall of 1892 Mr. Hornberger and Mr. John C. Potteiger bought out William D. Althouse, proprietor of the "William Penn Hotel" and the well-known horse bazaar of West Philadelphia. In 1893 Mr. Hornberger sold out his interest in the enterprise to his partner, and the following year erected the house at Brookside now owned by Capt. Schall, where he lived until 1899. In 1900, by request, he became the proprietor of "Carsonia Inn," building up its trade, but he finally moved back to Cumru township, settling upon a farm adjacent to the Hornberger homestead, where he is now engaged in farming and crying sales.

Mr. Hornberger is a very remarkable man in many ways. He has wonderful vital powers, and few men have had a more interesting career. He has been both successful and unsuccessful, having been a success in making money and unsuccessful in holding it. The losses he has suffered, however, have been in no way due to negligence or lack of ability on his part, but to such mischances of fortune as would have dampened the enterprise of a less indomitable spirit. As a horse and cattle dealer he lost many animals by death. He lost nearly twenty thousand dollars in bailing and indorsing for people, and thirty thousand dollars would not cover what he lost by others' lack of responsibility, the death of cattle and horses, and the destruction of his barn and loss of his farm stock.

In 1852, when eighteen years old, he began crying sales, a business which he has followed now for more than half a century. In this profession Mr. Hornberger has met with remarkable success, and has no equal in his section of the county. His lung power is wonderful, and his voice is powerful and can be heard far away. He has cried sales throughout eastern Pennsylvania, and has sold more farm stock, household goods, cattle and horses than any other two men in Berks county. The value of the goods he has disposed of amounts to millions of dollars.

In politics Mr. Hornberger is a Republican and cast his first vote in 1856 for Fremont for President. In religious matters he is a free thinker, and believes in right living, because right is right and God is God.

On Dec. 24, 1857, Mr. Hornberger was married to Anna Louisa S. Yost, daughter of Nicholas and Susanna (Seidel) Yost, and granddaughter of Nicholas Yost. To Mr. and Mrs. Hornberger were born two sons and one daughter, namely: (1) Douglas Y., born Nov. 26, 1858, died June 5, 1901. He married Katie Huyett, and they had two children, Hattie and Mabel. (2) S. Ellen married Wellington Zacharies, a butcher of Fleetwood, and they have one daughter, Gertrude H. L. (3) Howard Y., born April 15, 1864, is a speculator in horses, and is an all around horseman, an excellent trainer and driver, and has raced in the Grand Circle. He is an able, intelligent man, an auctioneer of note, and has cried sales throughout eastern Pennsylvania, frequently assisting his father, from whom he learned the profession when a young man.

(IV) Joseph M. Hornberger, son of Conrad, Jr., born March 18, 1812, died Aug. 18, 1894, aged eighty-two years, five months. He was an agriculturist by occupation, and owned the old homestead of seventy-five acres. For many years he served as supervisor, and was a very well known man in his day. He married (first) Catharine (or Cassie) Spatz, daughter of John Spatz, Sr., and they had eleven children, namely: Urias S., of Reinhold's Station, Pa.; Margaret, m. to Augustus Mayers, a merchant in Hardin county, Iowa; Elizabeth, m. to Leo J. Hess, of Reading; Catharine, m. to John Y. Weidner, postmaster of Mohnton; Joseph S., of Mohnton; Ephraim, who died young; Hannah, m. to Peter Schwagerl, Custom House clerk of New York; Susan, m. to George Yocom, of Reading; and John, Edward M. and Frank, who died young. Joseph M. Hornberger m. (second) Mary Burns, born Nov. 27, 1827, daughter of Jacob Burns, died Oct. 5, 1868, aged forty years, ten months, eight days. To this union was born one son, William, of Reading. He m. (third) Barbara Warner, daughter of Joseph. By the third marriage there were no children.

(V) Joseph S. Hornberger, son of Joseph M., was born on the old homestead in Cumru township, Feb. 10, 1851, and was given the advantages of the township schools. At the age of eighteen he learned the hatter's trade with J. K. Ruth, of near Mohnton, which he follows to the present time. From 1896 to 1901 he was a partner in the firm of the Globe Hat Company, which went out of existence in the latter year. In politics he is a Republican, and he and his family are active members of Salem Evangelical Church of Mohnton, of which he was an officer for a number of years. On Jan. 30, 1875, Mr. Hornberger was married to Amanda R. Regar, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Rehrer) Regar, and to this union has been born one son, Charles B. Mr. Hornberger is a man who has always stood high in the estimation of his fellow townsmen, and he has many friends.

(VI) Charles B. Hornberger, son of Joseph S., and one of the well-known citizens of Cumru township, where he is driving Route No. 1, Rural Free Delivery, of Mohnton, was born Dec. 10, 1876, at Adamstown, Lancaster county. He received a good education in the public schools, afterward attending Prof. D. B. Brunner's Business College. He then engaged in the milk business, being the pioneer in the town in that line. This he sold out to Samuel Westley, and began work in the Globe Hat factory. Here he worked for five years, and then spent four years in the employ of J. H. Spatz & Co. On May 15, 1905, after passing a difficult civil service examination, Mr. Hornberger began driving a twenty-four mile Rural Free Delivery route, which takes in the southern part of Cumru township, and this he has continued to the present time. He and his father reside together in a fine brick residence at the northwest corner of Church and Summit streets, in the borough of Mohnton. He is a Republican in politics, and fraternally is connected with Camp No. 211, P. O. S. of A., and the K. G. E., both of Mohnton. He and his wife attend the Evangelical Church.

Mr. Hornberger was married to Miss Grace Hyman, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Patton) Hyman, of Churchtown, Lancaster county, and two children have been born to this union: Evelyn U. and Charles C.

BENJAMIN F. GREENAWALD, owner of Windsor Castle, the only hotel and store stand in Windsor township, Berks Co., Pa., was born Sept. 13, 1858, on his father's farm in the township where he now lives, and where he has spent his entire life.

The ancestor of the Greenawald family in America, Jacob Greenawald, was a German Palatinate and came to America in the ship "Lydia," Sept. 29, 1741, being then eighteen years of age and unmarried. He had a son, Peter, the great-grandfather of Benjamin F. This Peter had at least two sons: Henry, the grandfather of Benjamin, and John, who settled in Albany township, near the Pinnacle, and had issue: Joseph, Abraham, Jacob, Amos, Samuel, Dinah, Leah and Lessena.

Henry Greenawalt, grandfather of Benjamin F., was an extensive farmer and tanner in Greenwich township, owning the large farm now in the possession of Samuel Baver. He was a well known man of his day and was in comfortable circumstances when he died. He was married to a Miss Bower, who bore him six children: Charles m. Polly Dietrich; Polly m. Jacob Nagel; Henry; Samuel for many years was proprietor of the Lenhartsville Hotel; Jacob lived at Ashland, Pa.; and George settled at Schuylkill Haven, where many Greenawalts live to this day.

Henry Greenawald was born March 21, 1825, and died aged sixty-two years. He was a laborer and owned a small tract of land in Windsor township, where he spent his life, being buried at St. Paul's Church. He was married to Elizabeth Zettelmayer, daughter of George Michael and Elizabeth Zettelmayer. These children were born to them: Isabella m. Charles Frey; Emma m. James Nunnamacher; Benjamin F.; Katie m. John Zimmerman; Mary and Lizzie, who died young; Ida m. John Graver; Lena m. William Herman; Annie m. William Thomas; Wilson m. Cora Ruff; and Jacob, Charles and Alberta, who died young.

Benjamin F. Greenawald obtained a limited education in the common schools, and worked upon the farm until he was of age. He then worked in the stone and slate quarries and ore mines for seven years, and in 1886 engaged in the butchering business, which he has profitably followed ever since. In 1887 he bought a small farm of twenty-two acres, on which he conducted his business, and in 1899 purchased the farm, hotel and store of Windsor Castle, which was for many years the property of Mahlon Sellers. Mr. Greenawald paid $7,600 for the property when the old buildings were still standing, the old frame and log hotel having stood for considerably over a century. In 1900 the old stand was replaced by a modern, three-story brick building, 70x40 feet, with suitable rear buildings. The hotel, one of the most imposing structures in the county, contains a good number of rooms, has all of the modern improvements and is well adapted for the accommodation of summer boarders. For the past several years boarders from near and far have spent their vacations here, not far from the well known Crystal Cave and the historical "Hecksa Dans" (The Witches Dancing Hall). This place is in a field and is about twenty feet in diameter. No vegetation grows upon it and old settlers say that witches used to gather there at night and ride around on broom-sticks. Lights were often seen there at all hours of the night. On the site of the old historical Windsor Castle Hotel, Mr. Greenawald has erected a two and one-half story double frame dwelling house, one half being occupied by his family and the other tenanted. He has otherwise much improved the place. Windsor Castle is famous in history. It is an old German settlement and many interesting incidents are related about it. During the operation of the old Windsor furnace, considerable trading was done here, and stories relating to pow-wowing, witchcraft and ghosts center around this place. It is situated near the Blue Mountains, surrounded by God's purest atmosphere. The store stand is one of the oldest and best in northern Berks county. Mr. Greenawald is a Democrat in politics, and he and his family worship at St. Paul's Church, belonging to the Lutheran denomination.

On May 20, 1887, Mr. Greenawald was united in marriage with Rufena Yaeger, daughter of Daniel and Lovina (Reber) Yaeger, and to this union there were born children as follows: Harvey, Charles, George, Minnie, Mamie, Benjamin, Annie, Lizzie and Irwin.

JOHN ALBERT SUNDAY, a well known and respected citizen of Hamburg, Berks county, Pa., who is extensively engaged in dealing in horses and cattle, was born May 12, 1845, in Windsor township, son of John and Margaret (Nice) Sunday.

The progenitor of this well known Berks county family is said to have been Hans Adam Sontag, who emigrated from Switzerland, his native land, to America on the ship "Snow Molly," which arrived at the port of Philadelphia Oct. 26, 1741; soon thereafter he settled in Philadelphia county in that section from which Berks county was organized in 1752. From records we learn that he had at least two sons: (1) Christopher, born April 9, 1753, died Dec. 13, 1825. He married Anna Christina Bacharsin, born April 19, 1753, and died Sept. 7, 1825. They had sons, Jacob Heinrich, John and George. They were members of Dunkel's Church in Greenwich in 1808. (2) Nicholas Sontag, the other son of the ancestor of whom we have record, was a taxable in Greenwich township in 1768. He had three sons, John, Jurick (George) and Martin. The last was born Feb. 19, 1784, and died Jan. 13, 1857. He married Christina Schaeffer (1787-1874), and they had one son, Heinrich, born in 1825, who died in 1874 and is buried at Hamburg. In early life he lived in Greenwich township, and later returned to Windsor, where he owned six hundred acres of land, in addition to ten residences in Hamburg. John Sunday married Hannah Heinly, daughter of David and Sabina Heinly, and to them were born children as follows: Sallie m. John Schwoyer; Hannah m. Andrew Kaller; Mary m. Godfrey Seidel; Elizabeth m. Daniel Kline; and John, the father of John Albert.

John Sunday, the only son of John, was born Jan. 13, 1813, and died in Hamburg, Sept. 11, 1894. In early life he was an extensive farmer in Windsor township, but in later life removed to Hamburg, where he lived retired for a long period prior to his death. In politics a Democrat, he was stanch in the support of the principles of his party, serving the borough of Hamburg as school director, councilman and as burgess in 1867-68 and 1874-75. He was a prominent member of St. John's Lutheran Church, in which for many years he served as deacon. Mr. Sunday married Margaret Nice, who was born in 1824 and died in 1894, daughter of Dr. Benjamin R. Nice of Hamburg, and to this union there were born these children: Cecelia, born in 1844, died in 1852; John Albert; Clementine, born in 1848, died in 1852; Benjamin Bradford, born in 1854, died in 1890; Brugler; and Nevada m. B. Frank Beam.

John Albert Sunday was about five years old when his father removed to Hamburg, and there he attended school until his seventeenth year, some of his teachers being Benjamin Sheeder, Rev. Benjamin D. Zweizig and R. G. Unger. He obtained a good education, and had learned the butcher trade, when, in October, 1861, he enlisted as a member of the 96th Regt., Pa. Vol. Inf., his term of enlistment being three years. During the first two years of his service he participated in a number of battles, his first engagement being West Point, Va., on the York river, where the enemy was repulsed. Later he was a participant in the battles of Gaines Hill; the Seven Days fight; Newport News; South Mountain, where the Confederate forces were charged and forced to retreat up the mountain; Antietam; Fredericksburg, where he was with the forces that took the heights; Gettysburg, where he was in the charge on Little Round Top; and Rappahannock Station, after which latter engagement his command marched south to Brandy Station. While out foraging in this vicinity, Mr. Sunday and two companions, Jacob Hoover and James Keasey, were captured by Mosby's Guerillas and taken to Richmond. Mr. Sunday was confined for one night in Libby Prison, two months at Pemberton and seven weeks on Belle Isle. At the end of this time he was transferred to Andersonville, where he was detailed as a butcher to kill cattle for the prisoners. Here he was foreman of twenty butchers, and assisted in killing from forty to 125 cattle daily. These men were granted liberties under penalty of death, and Mr. Sunday was shown much courtesy, especially by a farmer named Williams. After about two months, Mr. Sunday with two companions, William Gannon and Robert Commons, made his escape. Early in October these three men started on their journey for liberty. They had very little food, but managed to get enough to sustain them by begging from colored people at night, and thus for eleven days and eleven nights they journeyed through an unknown country, with nothing to guide them but the stars and sun. Finally they reached the Union army southwest of Atlanta. At Atlanta they reported personally to General Sherman, who gave them transportation East to their command and thence to their homes. Mr. Sunday was finally mustered out at Philadelphia and received his honorable discharge. These three comrades, after being separated for twenty-five years, met and had a glad reunion at Chicago, during the World's Fair, and have ever since kept up a correspondence.

After the war Mr. Sunday worked for a season for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, and then clerked in a store at Freystown for two years, after which he returned to Hamburg and worked at his trade for Jesse Wagner. In 1868 he went into business for himself, having his shop and slaughtering house at Third and Walnut streets, and continued in business there for three years. In 1871 he started in the horse and cattle business, which he has followed ever since, also operating the Reading Railroad "Road Farm" southwest of Hamburg and his own farm in Tilden township.

Mr. Sunday is a Democrat in politics and has always been active in the ranks of his party, serving two terms as burgess and two terms on the school board. He has frequently been delegate to county conventions, and has ever been influential in the councils of his party. He is a member of Vaux Lodge, No. 406, F. & A. M., of his town. He and his family are members of the Reformed faith, and attend the First Reformed Church, Hamburg, Mr. Sunday serving as trustee thereof for two terms, as well as being a member of the building committee which had in charge the erection of the present beautiful and substantial church edifice.

On July 14, 1866, Mr. John Albert Sunday and Miss Anna M. Shollenberger, daughter of Abraham and Louisa (Lindenmouth) Shollenberger, were united in marriage. To Mr. and Mrs. Sunday have been born these children: Margaret m. Reuben Nies, of Hamburg; Curtis F., a well-known live stock dealer of Hamburg, m. Sallie Moll; Laura, deceased, m. William Yeager, of Hamburg; Clara, m. William Genzel; and Harry, deceased, m. Grace Maurer.

SAMUEL S. HEBNER, a well-known resident of Windsor township, who is living retired on the old Hebner homestead, was born Feb. 8, 1838, on this farm, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Steiger) Hebner, and grandson of Christian Hebner, the first of the name to settle in Windsor township.

When Samuel S. Hebner was a youth attending school in an old stone building that stood opposite the St. John's Church in Hamburg, the teacher convinced him that his name, if changed to Hepner, would be more easily pronounced. The boy therefore substituted the "p" for the "b", and persuaded his father also to adopt it, so that on the death of the grandfather, the tombstone cutter spelled the name Hepner. In later years, however, Samuel S. recognized the error, and has gone back to the old German way of spelling the name.

Christian Hebner was born Sept. 16, 1775, and died May 25, 1856. He married Anna Maria Hoffman, born Sept. 5, 1781, who died Nov. 9, 1861, and to them were born these children: William m. Hannah Steiger; Jacob; Samuel m. Sally Borkey; and Eliza m. Samuel Hamscher. Christian Hebner was a farmer all of his life, and a most highly esteemed and prominent citizen of his district.

Jacob Hebner was born March 28, 1814, and died March 2, 1890, having spent all of his life in Windsor township. When a youth he was employed on the farm, later learning the trade of stone mason, at which he worked for the railroad company for about forty years, building the breastworks of the large Blue Mountain dam, which has stood the storms and freshets of more than a quarter of a century. He was an excellent mechanic and a man of very good judgment. In politics he was a Democrat, and served his district as school director. In 1837 Mr. Hebner was married to Elizabeth Steiger (or Stoyer), daughter of Samuel, and to this union there were born Samuel S., Jacob, Alfred, Christian, Henry, and Joseph, who is a prominent man of Hamburg, Pa. Jacob, Alfred, Christian and Henry all died of cholera morbus within a period of six weeks. The mother of these children, who was born Oct. 25, 1817, died aged eighty years, five months, twenty-eight days.

Samuel S. Hebner worked on the farm of his father until twenty-three years old, and then for a time hired out to other farmers of the district. In the spring of 1863 he began tending the Five Locks, below Hamburg, remaining there for five years, when he began operations on his father's farm. In later years he purchased this property, which consists of ninety-five acres of good land. On it he built, in 1890, a substantial Swiss barn 40 x 76 feet, to replace a smaller barn built by his grandfather in 1814. Mr. Hebner also owns another tract of eighty acres, known as the Major Miller farm, this property being tenanted. The old homestead, on which Mr. Hebner resides, is now tenanted by his son-in-law, Melvin R. Merkel. Mr. Hebner and his family are members of Zion's Union Church. Politically he is independent.

Mr. Hebner was married to Hettie Behler, daughter of Jacob and Addie (Croll) Behler, and to this union there were born two daughters: Lillie L., born in Topeka, Kans., Sept. 27, 1880, married Irwin Schlenker, and they have three children,—Hettie A., Ralph E. and Samuel I.; and Lizzie S., born Dec. 16, 1883, married Melvin R. Merkel, by whom she has had three children,—Samuel W. and George Kermit, both of whom died in infancy, and Adam.

Mr. Hebner is fond of travel, and in 1880 he and his wife took a trip through the West, visiting various places of interest, and remaining one and one-half years. In his latter years Mr. Hebner has done much reading, and his library is an extensive one. He is a pleasing conversationalist, and can recollect many interesting reminiscences of earlier days in the township. He has a number of valuable old heirlooms of the family, one of these being the table knife of his grandfather, which he uses daily. At the time of his daughters' marriages he presented each with a twenty-dollar gold piece, a complete line of household goods, and a farm stock worth $1,300. He is highly esteemed in his community, and may be recorded among the good, substantial residents of Berks county.

LAFAYETTE MILLER. Of the numerous Pennsylvania German families of Berks county, none is larger than that of Miller, a worthy representative of which is found in the person of Lafayette Miller of Windsor township. Mr. Miller was born March 31, 1836, on his father's farm, son of Thomas and Catherine (Noecker) Miller, natives of this county.

Three brothers, George, Jacob and John Miller, settled in Windsor township prior to the establishment of the county in 1752.

George Miller, of Windsor township, the grandfather of Lafayette, was a farmer and owned the large property now in the possession of Dr. Allen J. Fink, of Hamburg. He was a Lutheran in his religious belief. George Miller married Margaret Seip, and to them there were born these children: David, John, Solomon, Mrs. Sassaman, Joseph (1799-1857), Thomas (father of Lafayette) and William. John Miller, the second son, was born in Windsor, April 6, 1793, and died Aug. 5, 1827. In 1818 he married Christina, daughter of Joseph Borky, and they had three daughters: Anna Maria m. (first) Benjamin Mayer, and (second) Samuel Meck; Catherine m. Henry Leidenmuth; and Eliza m. Nathan Hatzfield.

Thomas Miller, son of George and Margaret (Seip), was born in Windsor township, June 18, 1800, and his death occurred on his farm, March 15, 1845. He was buried at St. Paul's Church, of which he and his family were Lutheran members. He was a stone mason by trade, which he followed for many years, but in 1837 purchased the farm of 100 acres which is now owned by his son Lafayette. Until his death he followed agricultural pursuits, his widow carrying on the farm thereafter until her death, Oct. 25, 1889, in her eighty-first year. In 1828 Thomas Miller was married to Catherine Noecker, daughter of John Noecker, and to them were born three sons and one daughter: Annabella m. (first) Daniel Egolf, deceased, and (second) Samuel Lessig; Paul m. Maria Becker; Lafayette; and Charles m. Caroline Becker.

Lafayette Miller attended the old pay school immediately back of St. Paul's Church in his township, his teachers being old learned Germans whose salary was made up by contributions from the inhabitants of the community, who also boarded the pedagogues. Mr. Miller also attended the free schools the first year of their establishment. He was reared on his father's farm, and the vocation of agriculturalist has been his occupation all of his life. His present property consists of 148 acres of good land, in a high state of cultivation, it being the original Miller homestead. The nice frame residence on this farm was built by Mr. Miller in 1898 and he has also built the wagon shed and greatly remodelled the new Swiss barn, which was put up by his father. This is a fine up-to-date property in every respect, and its attractive appearance is frequently commented upon by travelers on the State Road. Mr. Miller has another good farm of seventy-five acres in Windsor township, which is tenanted, and a tract of twelve acres on which is located an excellent dwelling house.

Mr. Miller is very highly esteemed in his community as an honest, upright man and public spirited citizen. He is a Democrat in politics and has served his district as school director and supervisor. He and his wife are consistent members of St. Paul's Union Church, of Windsor township, of which he has been a trustee for twenty years and to which he has always contributed liberally.

Mr. Miller was married to Harriet Reinhart, born Oct. 21, 1833, daughter of Benjamin and Lucenia (Billig) Reinhart, and to this union there have been born four children: Catherine m. David Smith, and lives in Missouri; Mary m. Scott W. Fisher, a manufacturer of Hamburg; Marguerite m. Joseph Mervine; and Thomas, born April 26, 1870, died August 25, 1889.

HENRY J. SCHMICK of Hamburg was born near Dreibelbis, in Windsor township, Berks county, son of Elias H. and Esther (Strasser) Schmick.

Andraes Schmick, the progenitor of the family in Berks county, who came from Plainfield, Warren Co., N. J., had three children: Christian; John, who settled in the vicinity of Sunbury, Pa., a wealthy landowner; and Mary, who married a Mr. Wampole, and whose descendants now reside in Reading.

Christian Schmick, of this family, was a farmer and cabinet maker of Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, having formerly been located in Maxatawny. In 1830 he located in Upper Bern, and there purchased twenty-one acres of land, later, in 1841, securing another tract, making a total of eighty acres, this now being owned by Jeremiah A. Bansher. He married Catherine Seaman, and they had these children: Katie m. William Fegley; Benneville m. Hannah Eisenhaur; and Elias. Benneville lived on a small tract of his own in Maxatawny township, about one mile west of New Smithville. He had six children: Alfred, Giles, Addison, Simon, Matilda and Sarah.

Elias Schmick, son of Christian, was born July 23, 1820, in Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, and died March 20, 1901. He resided in Tilden township, along the railroad, and owned a small farm, his winter occupation being butchering among the farmers. He married Lydia Kahler, who died in 1896, aged seventy-three years, and they had these children: Addison E.; S. Matilda m. Edwin C. Mayer; J. Henry, m. Katie Diener; Kate m. Michael Hartman; and Elias H.

Elias H. Schmick, father of Henry J., who is in the employ of his son in the broom manufacturing business, was born June 3, 1842, in Perry township, Berks county, and now resides in Hamburg. He was married in 1865 to Esther Strasser, daughter of Jonas and Katie (Rissmiller) Strasser, and they have these children: Henry J.; Kate m. Jacob Casper; Harriet m. Richard Fox; Wilson m. Gertie Matz; and George m. Lizzie Mengel.

Henry J. Schmick attended public school for but a short time, commencing work when still a lad, in the brick yards, where he remained three years. In 1882 he began working in the Hamburg Rolling Mills, continuing there for some years, when he engaged with the Pottstown Rolling Mills, being in this concern's employ until his twentieth year. At this time he went to work for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad as brakeman, and later as fireman, and while thus employed he conceived the idea of the patent fish plate, which was patented and was adopted by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Co., who are using it at this time. In 1897, when but twenty-eight years old, he became president of the Allentown & Kutztown Trolley road, but three years later resigned in favor of his attorney. He remained on the board of directors for one year longer, when he sold out his interests for a large sum, and organized the Kutztown & Fleetwood Trolley Company, of which he became president, remaining at the head of this road until its sale to the Allentown & Kutztown Company. Since this time Mr. Schmick has devoted all of his attention to his inventions. He has invented various valuable and useful machines, railroad joints, car couplers, and the "radio," a hoisting device, which was patented in 1905 and is now being manufactured in Reading. He occupies a conspicuous place among the financiers of his section of the country. He has risen from a common laborer to one whose business dealings have brought him into contact with such men as the Goulds and Depew of New York, and his business dealings have been such as to win the respect and esteem of those with whom he has been associated. He resides with his family in Hamburg.

In 1889 Mr. Schmick was married to Molly Epler, and they have these children: Minnie, Elias, Bessie, Mabel and Harry, the latter of whom died in his ninth year.

JAMES M. SAVAGE, a well known business man of Hamburg, Berks county, Pa., who is senior member of the milling firm of Savage Brothers, was born Aug. 10, 1870, in Tilden township, son of James and Fayetta (Kauffman) Savage.

John Sauvage, a French Huguenot, was born in Alsace-Lorraine in 1698, and is the American progenitor of the Savage family in Berks county. In 1738, when forty years old, he emigrated to the New World on the good ship "Winter Galley," and it is said that soon after landing in his adopted country he settled in Berks county, Pa., where his descendants live to this day. His grandsons, Joseph and Johannes Savage, lived in Upper Bern township. Joseph Savage, grandfather of James M., was born probably in what is now Upper Bern township May 13, 1794, and there he died March 26, 1873. He was a farmer in Upper Bern township where he owned his own farm. In 1815 he married Magdalena Stahl, who was born in 1796 and died in 1855. They were members of St. Michael's Church and are buried in the cemetery of that church. In the father's will, in which are mentioned Wm. A. Ludwig and William K. Haag as executors, children as follows are mentioned: (1) John, a blacksmith at Shartlesville, was born in 1817 and died in 1886. He married Ellen Schlappig and they had three children: Franklin S.; Mary Ann, and Sarah Ellen. (2) Joseph, born in 1820, died in 1890. He owned and cultivated a 120-acre farm in North Heidelberg. He married Christian Clauser, and their children were: Albert, Matilda, Emeline and Allen. (3) Charles, born in 1823, died in 1893. He married Lydia Marburger. (4) James is mentioned below. (5) Mary Ann (married William Schlappig). (6) Sarah (married Jared Daubert). (7) Mary Magdalena (married Charles Fisher). (8) William is said to have gone to Michigan where he married and then went further west.

James Savage, father of James M., was born in Upper Bern township, Nov. 30, 1831, and died July 11, 1903, in his seventy-second year. He followed the trade of millwright for some years and for over twenty-five years conducted a farm which he owned in Upper Bern township. He married Fayetta Kauffman, born Oct. 20, 1826, who survives her husband and resides in Hamburg. Mr. and Mrs. Savage had these children: James M.; Charles K. married Sallie Stump; John K., who is in business with his brother James, was married in 1897 to Ellen Moyer and they had three children, William and two who died in infancy; William married Georgie Cooper; Francis married Rosie Renninger; Matilda (married Mahlon Spangler); Fayetta (married S. F. Riegel); Caroline (married George Seaman); and Sallie (married Thomas Meck).

James M. Savage was educated in the local schools of the place of his nativity, and when a young man learned the milling trade with Moses B. Seaman, then proprietor of the Union Roller Mill at Hamburg, remaining with that gentleman for a period of six years. After working at Shoemakersville and Yocom's for some time, and at Reading for eight years, in 1901 he and his brother John K. formed a partnership under the firm name of Savage Brothers and leased the Union Roller Mill (formerly the old Shomo mill) Hamburg, which they have been conducting ever since. The firm carries a large stock, and manufactures a large and fine line of flour, which is in great demand in this section, and consequently finds a ready market. The firm is one of the successful business enterprises of Hamburg. In 1906 it suffered a heavy loss, during the historic flood which caused a $75,000 damage to Hamburg.

Mr. Savage married Ella Adam, daughter of Alfred and Esther (Hollenbach) Adam, farming people of Perry township, and to this union there were born two daughters and one son, Virgil, Mabel and Evan.

JACOB DUSER, JR., former councilman from the Ninth ward of Reading, who holds an important position with the Reading Hardware Company, was born in Tresckow, Carbon county, Pa., son of Jacob and Susan (Huster) Duser, of Reading.

The parents of Jacob Duser, Jr., were of Wendelheim, Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, and emigrated to this country in their youth, settling at Hazleton, Pa. They were married on July 8, 1849, shortly after their arrival in this country, by Rev. Father Salmon, of Hazleton. They lived in the coal regions for the next nineteen years, Mr. Duser becoming a foreman, and in 1868 located in Reading, where they continued their residence. Until 1884 Mr. Duser was employed at the Philadelphia & Reading foundry, but since that time has been employed with the Reading Hardware Company.

On Sept. 14, 1899, the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding was celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. Duser, it having been postponed until that date because some of the children could not be present on July 8. On the morning of Sept. 14th, at 7:30, the solemn wedding vows were renewed in St. Paul's Catholic Church, mass being celebrated by Rev. Father Bornemann, who referred to the fact that this was only the third time in the history of St. Paul's Church that mass had been celebrated in commemoration of fifty years of marriage. All day Mr. and Mrs. Duser received congratulations on the happy occasion at their home, and in the evening the reception took place, each of their twenty-two grandchildren reciting a poem and presenting the grandparents with a gift. Music was furnished by a string orchestra, and a supper followed. The presents to the couple almost filled a room.

On the occasion of Mr. Duser's seventy-eighth birthday, an extended review appeared in the newspapers of Reading, of which the following is a part:

"Surrounded by his sons, daughters, grandchildren and friends, Jacob Duser, Sr., had every reason to feel happy on Sunday, the seventy-eighth anniversary of his birth The big reunion was held at the home of Common Councilman Jacob Duser, Jr., and Mrs. Sarah Wright, son and daughter of the old gentleman, with whom he makes his home. On Saturday afternoon the first of the party to arrive came in a special car from Brooklyn, N. Y. The delegation numbered seventeen persons, and included nephews and nieces from that city. It was met at the depot by Common Councilman Duser and a party of friends, and their arrival at the home meant the beginning of the festivities of which there was a continual round until Monday morning, when they took their departure.

"In the evening Common Councilman Duser tendered a reception and dance to his many cousins and friends in Jackson's hall, Ninth and Douglass streets. The hall had been prettily adorned for the occasion with potted plants and cut flowers, and the affair was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Early on Sunday morning the festivities incident to the celebration of Mr. Duser Sr.'s birthday were begun. The entire first floor of the Duser home had been decked out for the occasion, every room being gay with bunting of the national colors and bright blossoms, while here and there were grouped potted exotics. The big event of the day was an elaborate dinner at noon. The aged host, in whose honor the festivities were held, graced the head of the table and recounted bits of family history and events in his long career.

"In the evening Mr. Duser was presented with a beautiful ebony cane with a gold handle, the gift of Brooklyn relatives. This was the signal for other surprises. Grandchildren, at a given signal, walked up one by one, before the aged man, and, with original recitations in the German language, presented him with gifts. Too full for utterance, the aged grandfather delegated his son, Common Councilman Duser, to respond for him. With the singing of songs, German and English, the former chiefly of the happy folk-lore type, the balance of the evening was whirled away. Each participant in the day's festivities wore a badge, which consisted of a celluloid button, bearing an excellent likeness of the aged man. From this was appended a bit of blue silk ribbon on which, in silver letters, were printed words setting forth the occasion. The attendants received as a souvenir of the event, a photograph of Mr. Duser, set in a pretty gold-plated mantle frame.

"Six children—one son and five daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Duser, of whom the following still live, and of whom all but one—Mrs. Barbara Seitz, were present yesterday: Jacob Duser, Jr.; Mrs. Barbara Seitz, of Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. A. P. Ehly, of Minneapolis, Kans.; Mrs. Susan Huster and Mrs. Sarah Wright, of this city."

Jacob Duser, Jr., attended the schools of his native place, and on locating in Reading entered the Parochial school. When twelve years of age he was employed at sorting castings in the hardware store of Jones & Oaks. In 1879 he was employed as assistant foreman by the Reading Hardware Co., in the following year engaging with the Penn Hardware Company, as inspector of egg beaters. On June 16, 1881, he was elected to his present position, that of foreman of the pulley department, having charge of from twenty-five to thirty hands. During the years of 1898 and 1901 Mr. Duser made trips through the West in the interest of the business, and while there was enabled to visit his relatives in Kansas.

Mr. Duser has taken an active part in politics, having served as councilman of the Ninth ward from 1904, to 1908, and has held various minor offices in his ward. He is connected with the Maennerchor Society, being on the Governing board of this organization, and is also connected with the Knights of St. John. Mr. Duser's religious belief makes him a member of St. Paul's Catholic Church.

JOHN A. BOYER, who for a number of years was engaged in agricultural pursuits in Windsor township, was born June 24, 1850, son of John Jacob and Magdalena (Baer) Boyer.

John Jacob Boyer and his wife Magdalena (Baer) had four children, viz.: John A.; Franklin m. Victoria Jacoby, deceased; Ellen has been twice married, her first husband having been Harry Seidel; Emma, unmarried lives at home.

John A. Boyer was educated in the public schools of his native township, and was reared to farm work. When twenty-six years of age he married Mary S. Adam, daughter of Jacob and Lovina (Smith) Adam, and six children were born to this union: Laura m. George Smith; Mamie (m. John B. Mogel); Mary L. (m. Irvin Baer); Herbert A.; Matthias J. and Cora Agnes.

Mrs. Boyer is a descendant of the well known and long established Adam family in Berks county. Anthony Adam, the first ancestor of the family in America, was a French Huguenot, and came to this country on the ship "Snow Molly," landing at Philadelphia, Oct. 26, 1741. He was born in 1716. Anthony Adam was a taxable resident in Albany township in 1752. The name of his wife is unknown, but he had four sons, Abraham, Anthony, Bernhard and Peter.

Peter Adam, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Boyer, became a resident of Windsor township. He was born Oct. 1, 1765, and died July 1, 1849, aged eighty-three years and nine months. On March 11, 1788, he married Catharine Hauseknecht, and they were the parents of ten children, namely: Jacob; Anthony; Peter; Abraham; John; William; George; Betzy; Hannah and Polly.

Jacob Adam, grandfather of Mrs. Boyer, was born in Windsor township, Oct. 18, 1789, and died Dec. 22, 1866. His wife was Polly Gardner, born July 16, 1793, and died Aug. 7, 1874. To them were born: Hannah; William; Heinrich; Jacob; Peter; Benjamin; Isaac; Betzy; Polly; Lazarus; Simon; Catharine and Lydia.

Jacob Adam, father of Mrs. Boyer, was born in Windsor township, Jan. 21, 1816, and died Aug. 10, 1894. He obtained a good education in the pay schools of his day, and when a young man learned the trade of a carpenter, which he followed the greater part of his life. In 1852 he moved into Perry township, where he lived upon his farm of 137 acres, which he conducted with his children, also working at his trade. He was a school director, church official of Zion's Union Church, of Perry township, and was an esteemed man. Jacob Adam married Lovina Smith, a daughter of Michael Smith, born Sept. 29, 1822, and she died Dec. 27, 1905. They had five children as follows: Alfred S., a successful farmer at Perryville, and whose land joins that of his brother Jacob S.; Jacob S., an extended mention of whom will be found elsewhere in this publication; Samuel, who died single aged twenty-seven years, and is buried in Zion's Church cemetery; Michael, who died Jan. 24, 1905, aged fifty-five years, four months and nine days; and Mary S., who was married to John Boyer, deceased.

HENRY S. RHEIN, for many years engaged in the undertaking business, was born March 30, 1824, in Oley township, Berks county, and died July 30, 1907. He was the son of Henry and Margaret (Shearer) Rhein.

David Rhein, the founder of the family in America, emigrated to this country from the Palatinate of Germany, and, settling in the town of Reading, became the first undertaker of that place. He was a cabinet maker by trade, and manufactured the coffins used in his business, continuing therein until his death, about 1812. Mr. Rhein married Appeline Moyer, a native of Myerstown, and among their children were: Daniel, who married Susan Reber; Mrs. Hartz; Henry, the grandfather of Henry S. In religious matters David Rhein and his wife were connected with the Reformed Church. In politics he was at first an old-line Whig, and later became a Republican.

Henry Rhein continued in the business founded by his father, having learned the trade of cabinet-maker, and followed it all of his life, also gaining some little reputation as a manufacturer of blacksmith's bellows. He married Susan Ebling, and to them were born: Daniel; Henry; Peter and Elizabeth. They were members of the Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Rhein was a Republican. Henry Rhein, father of Henry S., was, like his father and grandfather, a cabinet-maker, and followed that occupation all of his active life. He was very successful in his business enterprises, and at the time of his death owned much valuable real estate. He married Margaret Shearer, and to them were born a large family of children, Henry S. and Mrs. Rebecca S. Miller being the only survivors.

Henry S. Rhein received his education in the schools of Reading, and when a young man learned the trade of cabinet-maker, which he followed for many years, later turning his attention to mercantile pursuits. He was also the leading undertaker of the city, and conducted the first funeral at the Charles Evans cemetery, the body being that of James Norton's first wife. Mr. Rhein, in speaking of the early days, said: "The only records of funerals kept in those days were those who did not pay." Mr. Rhein became very successful in his numerous business ventures, and in 1896 retired from business, owning much valuable real estate in the city, as well as considerable farming property. Mr. Rhein was married to Emma Stauffer, daughter of Solomon Stauffer, and one child, Mary, was born to this union.

Fraternally Mr. Rhein was connected with the I. O. O. F., and also with the encampment. He belonged to the Reformed Church, which he attended regularly and supported liberally. In politics he was a Democrat.

CHARLES A. FOLK, who was living retired in Fleetwood up to the time of his death, Jan. 12, 1907, was born in Richmond township, Berks county, Pa., Feb. 22, 1837. He was descended from George Folk, the first of the family in America, through Jacob and Jacob, Jr.

George Folk was a German by birth, and came to Philadelphia in 1754, with a company of some 145 other passengers. He made his permanent home in Richmond township, Berks county, where his name appears on the first tax list of the place, made in 1768.

Jacob Folk continued to reside where his father had settled, and was a farmer and stone mason by trade. His children were: Jacob, Jr.; Solomon, of Reading; Samuel, of Maxatawny township; John, living near Hamburg, Pa.; Mrs. Jacob Heinly; and Mrs. Daniel Hoch.

Jacob Folk (2) was born July 17, 1797, and died Jan. 25, 1871. He married Miss Lydia Aldenderfer, who was born March 2, 1802, and died Jan. 9, 1875, and they had children as follows: Benjamin, born in 1825, who died in 1889; Jacob, born in 1826; Joseph, born in 1827, who died in 1883; Sarah, who married (first) Peter Rothenberger, and (second) Christian Ruth, of Austin, Kan.; William, born in 1831; John, born in 1834; Charles A.; Hettie, born in 1838, who married Joel Gehret, and died in 1864; Mary, Mrs. Benjamin Hafer; Benneville, born in 1842, who died in 1866; Moses, born in 1843, who died in 1890; and Diana, born in 1845, who died in 1901, and who was the wife of William Mell.

Charles A. Folk chose carpentry as his trade and for the greater part of his life worked in that line. For a long time he was a coach maker, and during a period of twenty years was employed by Schaeffer, Merkel & Company, implement dealers in Fleetwood, part of the time as their principal pattern maker. In 1900 he retired, and having disposed of his property, made his home in Fleetwood with his step-son Oscar Koller, at whose home he died. Mr. Folk was always a good citizen, endeavoring to promote the public good, and for six years sat in the council of Fleetwood, elected on the Democratic ticket.

Charles A. Folk and Miss Sophia Moyer were joined in wedlock, and their happy married life continued till the death of Mrs. Folk in 1890. Both united with the Lutheran Church in Fleetwood. They had no children. Mr. Folk married a second time. Mr. Folk's life was useful and upright, and he stood as an example to those around him.

HENRY L. MACHEMER, of Bern township, a successful merchant and farmer, was born in Lower Heidelberg township, June 13, 1852, and is a son of David Machemer.

Jacob Machemer, the grandfather, lived in Lower Heidelberg township, about a mile northeast of Brownsville. He was born Jan. 18, 1783, and died Sept. 27, 1863, aged eighty years, seven months and nine days. He owned a small farm, now known as the Jonathan Reber estate, in Lower Heidelberg township, but he died at Tuckerton in Muhlenberg township, and is buried at Bern Church. He was twice married, and among his children were: Michael, who died in Heidelberg township; Ephraim, who died at Sinking Spring in 1907; Jacob, who died young; Elizabeth, who married Barnhart Hettinger; David; and Caroline (Rhoads), who died at Tuckerton in 1907.

David Machemer was born in Lower Heidelberg township. All of his life he followed farming, owning a small farm which he cultivated. He died in June, 1875, aged fifty-four years. He is buried at Bern Church, of which he was a member. He married Mary Lambert (died in September, 1879, aged fifty-one years), daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Tobias) Lambert. Their children were: John, who has traveled through all the States in the Union, and has spent considerable time among the Indians, manufactures and sells patent medicines, and is now in the West (he enlisted when sixteen years of age and served three years in the Civil war); Sarah (deceased, married Henry Hartman); Henry L.; James, who lives in West Reading; Mary Ann; David; Charles; Reuben and George, who died young of diphtheria less than two years apart; Clara (who died in 1909, married William Reedy of Reading); Rosa E. (widow of Charles Smith, and resides in Reading) and Joseph who was killed in a boiler explosion in 1888.

Henry L. Machemer attended the public schools of Lower Heidelberg township, working among the farmers until he attained his majority. After this he worked by the day until 1886 when he bought the old John Savage home, which at one time was operated as a hotel, and for the building of which when a boy of sixteen he helped to haul lumber. Connected with this pleasant home Mr. Machemer owns twenty acres of good land, and once a week he carries his produce to the Reading market. He also operates a mercantile business, which he established in 1902, and has built up to its present proportions.

Mr. Machemer married Mary Savage, daughter of John and Ellen (Koller) Savage of Bern township, and one son, Howard, was born to them, but he died when five years old. Mr. Machemer is a member of Bern Reformed Church. In politics he is a Democrat. Among his other interests he has made considerable research in the matter of Indian relics, and has a fine collection of 500 arrow heads which he has gathered in Bern township, and he is regarded as an authority in all kindred lines. Successful, genial and a hard worker, Mr. Machemer holds the position of honor which he has fairly won in his community.

FRANKLIN A. BHAER, a retired farmer of Shoemakersville, Berks county, was born on the old Jacob Bhaer homestead, one mile north of Shoemakersville, Jan. 2, 1865, son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Lesher) Baer.

The immigrant of the Baer family in this country was Hans (Johannes) Baer, of Weisenburg township, Lehigh county, who emigrated from Zweibrucken, Germany, arriving at Philadelphia, Sept. 30, 1743. His son John, who had settled on the old Bhaer home soon after the Revolutionary war, died there about 1825. He married Catherine Reiser, and they had these children: John; John Jacob; Elizabeth, who married a Mr. Schneck, lived in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county; Maria, who married Henry Becker; Bevy, who married John Seltzer; Katherine, who married Jacob Phillips; Susan, who married Jacob Startzel; Magdalena, who married John Reber; Margaret, who married Jacob Reber; and Lizzie, who married John Breininger.

John Jacob Baer (Hons Jocob), who lived on the old David Bhaer farm, the original Baer homestead of Windsor township consisting of over 300 acres of fine land, was married to Kate Fink, daughter of John Fink, and had these children: Jacob; Kate, who married John Balthaser; John, who married (first) Betsy Balthaser, and (second) Betsy Zettelmoyer; Susannah, who married Henry Engel, was born in 1821 and lives with her daughters on the old homestead, and at her advanced age is possessed of excellent health and a splendid memory; Mollie, who married Jacob Boyer; and David, who married Sarah Miller.

Jacob Baer, father of Franklin A., lived on the old Bhaer homestead in Perry township, his farm consisting of 380 acres of land. He built the house and barn on the premises and otherwise in many ways improved the property. He was a Democrat and a straight voter. He was connected with the Reformed Church, holding membership in the Union Church not far from his home. He married Elizabeth Lesher, and to them there were born children as follows: Elias, born in 1846, married Minna Strasser; Katie, born in 1848, married Daniel Lenhart; Henry, born in 1851, married Lizzie Lenhart; William, born in 1854 married Nora Tobias; Hettie married Seth Kline; Solomon married Lizzie Krick; Jacob married Amanda Jacoby; Daniel died single; and Franklin A.

Franklin A. Bhaer obtained his education in the Heckman's school in his native township, and at the age of fourteen years lost his father, thereafter assisting his mother in the management of the farm until twenty-five years of age. In 1890 he began farming for himself, first on the old homestead, but two years later removed to his own farm, situated on the Pottsville turnpike, immediately west of his father's property. Here he remained for two years, when he removed to Shoemakersville, where he now resides, being employed by the Schuylkill Valley Clay Manufacturing Company.

On Jan. 5, 1889, Mr. Bhaer was married to Lillie E. Heckman, daughter of Ephraim and Catherine (Braucher) Heckman, and they have a son Van Buren E. J., who has shown remarkable mechanical talent.

WILLIAM G. SHERADIN, a well known citizen of Hamburg, Pa., who is extensively engaged in the manufacture of brick, was born Oct. 21, 1848, in West Brunswick township, Schuylkill county, Pa., son of Charles and Elizabeth (Geiger) Sheradin.

Jacob Sheradin, grandfather of William G., was one of the best known agriculturists of his day in Longswamp township, owning land where the Topton depot is now located. He married a Miss De Long, and to them there were born children as follows: Reuben; Mrs. Joseph Albright; and Charles, the father of William G. Charles Sheradin, who was born in 1817, was for some years a farmer of Longswamp township, Berks county, but later in life removed to West Brunswick township, Schuylkill county, where he died in 1868. He married Elizabeth Geiger, and to them were born these children: Mary, who married David Fahl; Daniel, who married Katie Wagner of Schuylkill Haven, Pa.; and William G.

William G. Sheradin attended the district schools of his native locality, obtaining a good general education, and worked on his father's farm until his eighteenth year, when, in 1866, he came to Hamburg and learned the trade of cabinet maker with the late Peter Burkey, with whom he remained his full apprenticeship of two and one-half years. He then went to Reading and engaged with William Kline at cabinet making until 1870, in which year he started out for himself, and successfully conducted a cabinet making business for four years at No. 108 South Fourth street. In the latter year he engaged in the brick manufacturing business in which he has continued ever since; his present yard, where he employs about fifty hands, and manufactures on an average of 4,000,000 bricks per year, being located in West Hamburg. The firm of Tobias & Sheradin, which was founded five years ago, manufacture the red clay brick, and their product finds a ready sale throughout Schuylkill and Luzerne counties. Mr. Sheradin is one of the progressive business men of the borough, and is always found in the foremost ranks of any movement for the benefit of the community.

In politics Mr. Sheradin is a Republican, and for six years was a borough councilman, one year of which time he was president of that executive body. He has been a member of the Union Fire Company for thirty-five years, and has held various offices in that organization, of which he has been president for the past five years. He and his family are members of the First Reformed Church, of which he was a deacon for twelve years, and trustee for nine years. He has always been a pillar of the church, and he was one of the liberal contributors towards the erection of the present beautiful edifice.

Mr. Sheradin has been twice married, (first) on Nov. 20, 1869, to Mary Tobias, daughter of John and Vinetta (Schappell) Tobias, to which union there were born three children: William M., who died in 1877, in his fourth year; Annetta, who married Joseph Helder of Reading, died Dec. 24, 1904, and was buried on her twenty-sixth birthday; and Charles R., born Aug. 10, 1885, is single, and resides at home. Mr. Sheradin was married (second) to Miss Annie Laurie Nies, daughter of Daniel K. and Florenda (Dressler) Nies.

ROTHERMEL. The Rothermels of Berks county, Pa., trace their ancestry directly to one John Rothermel, born in Wachbach, a Dutch province, in 1688. In 1708 he married Sybilla Zimmerman, of the same province, and after the birth of six children, emigrated to America, his cause for leaving being the unsettled political conditions of his native country and a desire for the greater freedom of the New World. In company with a large number of other emigrants from that country, he set sail for America with his wife and children. He died, however, on the journey to the new country, in 1730, but his wife and children arrived safely in Philadelphia, Aug. 29, 1730, locating in Berks county (then Philadelphia county) the following year. The six children were: Anna Maria; Lawrence; Paul; Peter; John and Christian. Of these Anna Maria, born in February, 1712, married Peter Peterolf in 1729, and located in Macungie township (now in Lehigh county), where he died Aug. 15, 1784, and his wife a few years later. Lawrence located in Windsor township, Berks county, in 1738, and in 1746 married a Miss Kuhns; they had two children, Leonard and Maria, the latter marrying John C. Romig. Paul located in Maiden-creek township in 1737, and married Catherine Maurer in 1747; they had children: Peter; Leonard; Paul; John; Jacob and Barbara. Peter, the fourth child born to his parents, and the great-grandfather of John H. Rothermel, is mentioned below. John, born in Wachbach, Jan. 21, 1722, purchased a twenty-five acre tract of land adjoining the estate of his brother Lawrence in 1747, and there he resided until his death in 1785; he married Mary Sigfred, by whom he had four children, Abraham; Jacob; Daniel and John. Christian, the remaining member of the family, in 1772 purchased 250 acres of land along Maiden-creek; he was the father of six children: Margaret; Sybilla; Magdalena; Amanda; Peter and John.

Peter Rothermel, great-grandfather of John H. Rothermel, was an extensive land owner in Berks county. In 1737 he became the owner of 100 acres and in 1743 purchased an additional 100 acres, meantime acquiring 250 acres more in 1738. All of his lands lay along Maxatawny Creek. He married and was the father of a number of children, some of whom went west and were the founders of homes in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. The children were: Daniel, Peter, Margaret and Abraham.

Peter Rothermel, son of Peter, was born on the old homestead on Maxatawny Creek Sept. 1, 1773, and there resided, throughout his life engaged in farming. He died Feb. 1, 1856, aged eighty-three years. He was married Feb. 11, 1795, to Magdalena Iager, and fourteen children were born of this union: Maria; Catherine; Daniel; Susanna; Peter; Sarah; Anna; Esther; Jacob; John; Hannah; Elizabeth; Sybilla and Abraham.

John Rothermel was born April 8, 1812, in Richmond township, Berks county, where he was reared on a farm and educated in the public schools, such as they were in his day. After residing there for some years, he removed to Maiden-creek township, and located on a farm, following agricultural pursuits until his death. In political matters he was a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party. He died in August, 1890. Mr. Rothermel married Louisa Hoover, who was born Dec. 11, 1827, in Cumru township, Berks county, and children as follows came to this union: William, born July 2, 1848; Peter, Feb. 20, 1850; Katie (deceased), Oct. 4, 1851; Israel H.; born April 26, 1853, died Aug. 7, 1903; John H., March 7, 1856, present representative in Congress from Berks county; Moses, Aug. 11, 1858; Cyrus and Mary, twins, March 13, 1861; Lydia, July 16, 1862; Esther, Oct. 17, 1863; Wilson H., May 4, 1866; Annie, Nov. 4, 1867; Alice, July 2, 1870; and Joseph M., May 18, 1872.

John H. Rothermel, of Reading, elected to represent the Thirteenth District—comprising Berks and Lehigh counties—in the LXth and LXIst Congress, has been a leading attorney of Pennsylvania for many years. He is one of Berks county's native sons, having been born March 7, 1856, in Richmond township, and his ancestors for over a century and a half have been prominently identified with the professional and industrial history of this county. His parents, John and Louisa (Hoover) Rothermel, were farming people of Maiden-creek township, this county, and John H. Rothermel was reared on the farm. He received his early education in the local public schools and Prof. Brunner's Scientific Academy, at Reading, Pa., and taught in the public schools of his native county for several years, being also engaged for about two years in Brunner's Academy. He took up the study of the law and was admitted to the Bar in 1881. Since then he has been actively engaged in the practice of his profession in the higher and lower courts, both State and Federal.

For twenty-five years Mr. Rothermel has given special attention to the trial of cases, and as a trial lawyer has been identified with the most important litigation in his section, amongst others the notable case of the Commonwealth versus Samuel Greason, which won Mr. Rothermel national reputation. The death warrant was read to the defendant ten times, and as many times he was snatched from the gallows by his lawyer. In the meantime Mr. Rothermel secured the passage of a law (Act of April 22, 1903) which empowered the Supreme court to authorize the reopening of the case. After the enactment of this law the Supreme court directed the lower court to reopen the case, and then the real trouble began, every move made by the defendant being beset with serious difficulties. The longer the case progressed the more intricate it became, until finally a new trial was obtained, and on June 16, 1905, the defendant was acquitted. This introduced a new feature in the criminal administration of justice and is the only proceeding of its kind in the history of Pennsylvania, a record of which is in the office of the Supreme court and will be a guide and precedent for all cases in the future. This was the most noted of the various homicide cases defended by Mr. Rothermel, many of which had attracted widespread attention, and the comprehensive knowledge of the law he displayed in its conduct won him so many friends in Berks county that he received the nomination for Congress against four formidable competitors. But though naturally gratified at the support he was given in his own county at the election which followed, nothing could have been more flattering than the large majority he polled in Lehigh county, which with Berks makes up the Thirteenth District. He was elected with a majority of 5,600. Mr. Rothermel's service in the LXth Congress was his first experience in public office, and he signally distinguished himself therein by securing the passage of a bill appropriating a substantial sum for the enlargement of the Federal building in Reading, Pa., and in being a conscientious and painstaking official. His prompt and cheerful compliance with requests of his constituents has made him a most popular Congressman. At the Federal Capitol he is regarded with high honor and esteem. He ran for a Common Pleas judgeship in 1899, but was defeated, although he received promising support at the primaries. In 1891, upon the death of Judge Schwartz, he was prominently mentioned as the latter's successor, and his candidacy was strongly urged by way of indorsements by the county Bar, but Judge Bland obtained the appointment. At the following general election he was importuned by his many friends to become a candidate for the nomination for that office, but declined out of regard for Judge Bland, who was appointed by the Governor. In his political affiliations Mr. Rothermel is an unswerving supporter of the Democratic party.

On March 8, 1883, Mr. Rothermel was married to Sarah Zimmerman and they have one son, Ralph Z., born Aug. 7, 1884.

SAMUEL H. LENHART, a prosperous and influential merchant at West Leesport for fifty years until his death in 1909, was born at Lenhartsville, Berks county, March 20, 1832. He was educated in the local schools until he was fourteen years old, assisting his father on the farm during this time, when he decided to learn the trade of tailor. He first worked in the shop of a tailor in Albany township for a time; then continued his apprenticeship with a tailor at Allentown, having walked to that place, upwards of thirty miles. After serving his apprenticeship, he went to Philadelphia to follow his trade, and while doing so for several years attended night school. He then returned to Lenhartsville, and while working for his father on the farm and also selling produce at Hamburg, secured a position as clerk in the general store of William D. Shomo, at the place named. The preciseness and strictness of Mr. Shomo in business affairs were remarkable, and left a deep impression on the young clerk's mind which he never forgot, and afterward practiced to his own great advantage. He remained there only a year and then upon the invitation of his brothers, Benjamin and Solomon Lenhart, (who were carrying on a store in Richmond township) he went into their store and continued with them until 1854, the last several years having been in Leesport, to which place they had removed. With this experience in the mercantile business, he went to Fremont, Ohio, and secured employment in a large dry goods establishment. After remaining there several years, his health failed and he returned to Leesport, Pa., where he resumed his place in his brother's store. In a short time, his ambition to engage in business for himself asserted itself, and accordingly, in 1858, he formed a partnership with his brother Benjamin. After carrying on business together for a short time in West Leesport (where the Lenhart store now is), a cousin, Daniel W. Lenhart, took his brother's place and they traded for four years, when Mr. Lenhart became the sole owner of the establishment. From that time until his death, April 19, 1909, he carried on the general store business with increasing success. His stock was among the largest of the general stores in the country districts, and his trade extended into the surrounding townships for many miles. During this time he also conducted an extensive trade in lumber, coal and grain. As his sons grew into manhood, he fitted them for a business life, and as they reached their majority he gave them an interest as partner; his son Henry in 1885, his son Samuel in 1893, and his son Charles in 1904. Naturally upon his decease, these three sons became his successors; and this well-established stand for a period of fifty years, has been carried on since his death under the firm name of S. H. Lenhart's Sons.

Mr. Lenhart was always thoroughly interested in the local affairs of West Leesport and gave them his encouragement and support. Industrial matters received much of his attention, for by them he endeavored to develop the importance of the place. He identified himself at an early age with the Reformed Church, and during his entire life at West Leesport he was actively engaged in religious work, both as a teacher and superintendent in the Sunday-school, and as deacon, trustee, or elder in the Church at Leesport. He advocated the common-school system with great earnestness, appreciating the importance of education in the community. When the Odd Fellows and American Mechanics came to establish societies there, he united with them and continued his membership until he died. He provided a hall on the third floor of his storebuilding and their meetings have been held in it. He was also a member of the Daughters of Rebekah, and of the Daughters of Liberty. He was enlisted in the Civil war, having responded to the call for troops to repel the invasion of the Rebel army into Pennsylvania in July, 1863, and served as one of the sergeants of Company G, commanded by Captain Samuel A. Haines, of the Forty-second Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, which was composed of companies from Berks county; and he was a member of Keim Post, No. 76, G. A. R., at Reading.

Mr. Lenhart took great interest in farming operations and in the development of choice fruits. He owned and managed two fine farms, one of 140 acres in Centre township, a short distance above West Leesport, and the other of 173 acres in Ontelaunee township, east of Leesport, which is commonly known as the "Gernant Homestead." He encouraged the formation of the borough of West Leesport in 1902, and in the organization of the government served as one of the first town council; and he officiated as the second burgess for the term from 1905 to 1908.

Mr. Lenhart assisted in organizing the Penn National Bank at Reading in 1883, and served as a director from that time until his decease, a continuous period of twenty-six years. He was identified actively as a director with the Manatawny Fire and Storm Insurance Company, the Leesport Building Association, the Althouse Bridge Company (operating the toll bridge at Leesport until it was made free) and the Orchard Milling Company at Pottsville. All these various affairs, in connection with his large and constantly increasing store business, evidence the superiority of his character and attainments; and during the entire period of his business career he enjoyed the unqualified confidence and respect of the community.

As mentioned above, since Mr. Lenhart's decease in 1909, the business has been carried on by his three sons under the name of S. H. Lenhart's Sons, and they are pursuing the course of their father to merit the continued patronage and respect of the community.

Henry Grant Lenhart, the eldest son and senior partner, was born at West Leesport in 1865; educated in the local schools and the Normal Schools at Kutztown and West Chester; married Caroline Groff Brobst (daughter of Dr. Edward Brobst, a practicing physician at West Leesport for fifty years) and they have two daughters, Emily G. and Helen S., and a son John, another son (Edward Samuel) having died in infancy.

Samuel Kauffman Lenhart was born at West Leesport in 1875. He was educated in the local schools, Keystone State Normal School, and Inter-State Business College, Reading. He married Elizabeth Gauker (daughter of James H. Gauker, of West Leesport) and they have a son Samuel G.

Charles Hayman Lenhart, the junior partner, was born at West-Leesport in 1884; was educated in the local schools, Reading Classical Academy, and Inter-State Business College, and then identified himself with the business affairs of his father, being a partner since 1904.

In 1864, Mr. Lenhart was married to Sarah Kauffman, daughter of John L. Kauffman, for years a prominent dealer in grain, etc., at West Leesport. Nine children were born of this union: Henry Grant; Samuel Kauffman; Charles Hayman; Sarah L. (m. Edgar Breneiser); Anna L. (m. Harry E. Hartman); and four who died (John M. died in 1890, aged twenty-four years, Emily in 1892, aged seventeen years, and Katie and Mary in infancy).

Mr. Lenhart's father was Samuel Lenhart, of Lenhartsville, who was brought up on the homestead farm and carried on farming until his death in 1869, aged seventy-one years. He was highly esteemed in that section of the county for his upright character. He was married to Lydia Hayman of Lehigh county, and they had thirteen children: Benjamin; Solomon; James; Samuel H.; John; Lewis; Lydia (m. David Schlenker); Elizabeth (m. Charles S. Kerns); Amelia (m. Philip Snyder); Maria (m. Henry Miller); Ellen; and two who died in infancy. The Lenhart family in Berks county originated in Germany, and the first ancestor here was Jacob Lenhart, who was born Nov. 18, 1736, at Zwei-Brücken, in the Pfalz, and emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1760, landing at Philadelphia. He settled in Greenwich township, Berks county, on a farm in the vicinity of the present site of Lenhartsville, and there he died Aug. 3, 1793, leaving four sons, Sebastian, Henry, Jonathan, and Philip. The second son was brought up a farmer and ultimately owned a farm of 250 acres. The formation of a village began in his time and it took the name of Lenhartsville. He died in 1836, leaving eight sons: Benjamin; Frederick; Henry; Samuel; John; Daniel; Isaac and Reuben, and two daughters. The fourth son, Samuel, was the grandfather of the three partners who constitute the firm of S. H. Lenhart's Sons.

THEODORE TROUP, a pioneer business man of the Ninth Ward of Reading, Pa., and the owner of much real estate in the city, was born Jan. 6, 1837, in Franklin county, Pa., son of John and grandson of Jacob Troup.

Jacob Troup and his wife were pioneers of Franklin county where both died, their children being: John; David; Martin; George; Anthony; Samuel; Mary and Susan. Of this family, John Troup became a blacksmith, a trade which he followed throughout his life, his death occurring in 1844 from falling against his anvil. John Troup married Miss Mary Kirchhoff, daughter of Jacob and Susan (Bishop) Kirchhoff, early residents of Berks county, and she died at the home of her son, Theodore, in Reading, Dec. 1, 1885. Their children were: Theodore; Lambert; Martha; Susan and Joanna.

Theodore Troup attended the public schools of Clear Springs, Franklin county, and came to Berks county in 1845. He was first employed on a farm in Exeter township, but later learned the trade of blacksmith, which he followed for two years in the county. He came to Reading in 1857 and for twenty-seven years was employed at his trade at the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad shops. He engaged in the grocery business in 1886, at Eleventh and Elm streets, where he has since continued with much success, at first handling a line of dry goods, which he has replaced with a full and first-class stock of notions, in addition to an excellent collection of staple and fancy groceries. Mr. Troup's building, which he erected himself, is 20 x 80 and is fitted out with the latest modern improvements. His business foresight, and courteous manner in dealing with customers has gained for Mr. Troup the good-will of the people of his community, and as a result his trade is correspondingly large. In addition to his grocery business, Mr. Troup has dealt extensively in real estate and owns six properties in the Ninth Ward, two each in the First and Thirteenth and one in the Second and two in the Twelfth Ward.

Mr. Troup married Catherine Seidel, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Deysher) Seidel, and one son has been born to this union: Howard J., who married Laura Steinel, and is engaged in business with his father. Mr. Troup is a Democrat in politics, and has often been offered public positions, which he has not allowed himself to be prevailed upon to accept. In religious matters he is a Lutheran, and he is fraternally connected with the Chandler Lodge No. 227, F. & A. M.

CHARLES M. HOLLENBACH, a carpenter in Reading, residing at No. 1032 Walnut street, was born in Centre township, Berks county, Aug. 25, 1867, and belonged to a family which for several generations, had made its home in this county.

Daniel Hollenbach, grandfather of Charles M., was a native of Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, and spent most of his life there engaged in work as a blacksmith. A few years before his death he moved to Penn township and lived there in retirement until he passed away at the age of seventy-three in 1886. His wife, Luzetta Wert, had died some years previously, at the age of sixty years, survived by four children, viz.: John W.; William (deceased); Sarah, who lives in Reading, unmarried; and Lizzie.

John W. Hollenbach, born on his father's place, received his education in the Upper Bern schools, and on attaining manhood made carpentry his trade. In 1868 he moved his family to Reading and there worked as a carpenter till 1877, when he turned his attention to farming instead and settled in Penn township. He passed away in 1891, near Bernville, at the age of fifty-five years. He married Catherine Phillips, of Reading, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Troutman) Phillips, of Centre township. To this union were born five children, three of whom are living, namely: James, an undertaker in Bernville, who died in 1906, aged forty-five years; Elmira (m. Levi Lamm, of Reading); and Charles M.

Charles M. Hollenbach passed his boyhood in Reading and was educated in the public schools there, but when his father moved into Penn township, the son went also and assisted in operating the farm for a while. He then decided to adopt his father's trade and went to Philadelphia to learn carpentry, returning five years later to locate in Reading. At first he worked for others, then was in business for himself for two years and afterward again took a place under another. He has been in the contracting and building business in Reading since 1902, and erected a number of substantial dwellings in different sections of the city.

In 1891 Mr. Hollenbach married Amelia Wagner. She was a daughter of William B. and Catharine (Webber) Wagner, of Upper Bern township. They have had four children: James, who is a member of the class of 1910, Reading High School, Charles, Warren and Amelia. In politics Mr. Hollenbach always supports the Democratic party. He and his family are members of the Lutheran Church, of which he is a deacon. He is connected by the ties of fraternal obligation with the Knights of Malta.

Mr. Hollenbach is a self made man. He was tax-collector of the 16th Ward, in 1908.

JACOB KNABB STERRETT, one of the publishers of the Berks and Schuylkill Journal from 1865 to 1884, was born in Union township, Berks county, May 1, 1827. His father, David Sterrett, was a native of Cumberland county, Pa., and died in Berks county in 1833. Previous to his location in this county he had traveled extensively throughout the United States, and had compiled a dictionary of the Chippewa language. He was married to Margaret Knabb, a sister of Jacob Knabb.

When thirteen years of age Jacob K. Sterrett entered the printing-office of Knabb & Getz (who then published the Reading Gazette), as an apprentice to learn the printer's trade, and continued in this office till 1845, when he entered the office of the Berks and Schuylkill Journal. After being in this office twenty years he became one of the proprietors of the Journal. He continued his business connections with the firm of J. Knabb & Co., publishers of the Journal and Times, till December, 1881, when, on account of ill health, he transferred his interest to his son William. He died Nov. 2, 1884.

Mr. Sterrett was a superior printer and an enterprising journalist. During his connection with the Journal and Times he occasionally contributed articles of rare interest. He was particularly fond of local reminiscences, and by the aid of a strong memory and a facile pen published a series of historical sketches, relating to the early days of Reading. He was a great reader, and became familiar with the standard literature of his time. He was partial to the works of Moore, Poe, Irving and Cooper. His nature was of a most genial kind, which won him many friends, and though positive in his convictions he created no enmities.

In the early days of the St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, Mr. Sterrett was one of its vestrymen; and when the Reading Musical Society was in its active existence, previous to 1860, he was a prominent member. He always resided in Berks county. For several months, about the beginning of the year 1853, he was in South Carolina, engaged as a journeyman printer on the legislative proceedings of that State. Mr. Sterrett was an active Republican and took an earnest part in the management of the Republican party. He frequently represented his district in local, State, and national conventions—having been a delegate to the National Republican Convention which assembled at Cincinnati and nominated Rutherford B. Hayes. He acted as a jury commissioner of the county for the years 1881 and 1882. During the Civil war he enlisted twice,—first in Captain Bickley's company, which served in the emergency of 1862, and then in 1863, in Captain Rhoads' company, 42nd Regt. Pa. V. M. For some years before the Civil war, he took an active part in the military affairs of the county, having been a member of the Ringgold Light Artillery.

In 1855 Mr. Sterrett married Anna M. Arnold, daughter of John Arnold, a dentist of Reading. They had three surviving children:—William (m. to Laura V. Yeager, of Birdsboro), Henry (m. to Anna Weitzel, of Reading), and Ellen Knabb (who died at the age of twenty-five years).

REV. JOHN WILLIAM EARLY, of Reading, was born near Palmyra, Lebanon county, Pa., Sept. 3, 1835, son of William and Leah (Dutweiler) Early. He is a direct descendant of John Early, who arrived in Philadelphia from Germany, in 1750. His ancestors were intimately connected with the history of Lebanon county. Graduating from Gettysburg in 1857, the Rev. Mr. Early was ordained to the Lutheran ministry June 7, 1860, in St. Paul's Church, Philadelphia, and is now one of the oldest and most widely known clergymen of that denomination. He has served parishes in Lancaster, Snyder, Dauphin, Montour and Lycoming counties. Since retiring from the active ministry he has devoted much of his time to church and biographical history, on which subjects he is an authority. In 1861, he married Jane Margaret, daughter of Rev. Lewis G. and Leah (Schaefer) Eggers, the former one of the Lutheran church pioneers of western Berks. They have six living children, all of Reading.

Lewis G. Early, the eldest, was born in Lancaster county May 20, 1862. He married Annie Estella, daughter of George W. and Ellen (Sheridan) Bechtel, of Reading, and they have two children, George William and Anretta Margaret. Mr. Early learned the printer's trade in his youth at Danville, Pa., and coming to Reading about 1882 worked as a compositor in the Eagle office and Owen's book and job office for a number of years, when he became city editor of the Reading Herald, which position he filled for ten years. He has been night editor of the Reading Times since 1898. He was one of the founders of the Reading Press Club and the International League of Press Clubs, serving as president of the former organization for sixteen years and as secretary of the latter for five years.

MARTIN LUTHER EARLY, the second son, was born Aug. 3, 1865. He is a carpenter by trade and has had charge of many important building operations in Reading. He married Maggie E. Garman, of Trevorton, Pa., and they have seven children: Paul Frederick (m. to Catherine Yeager, of Reading); Jennie E., Ella M., John William, Jr., Leah E., Charles G., and Robert C.

JOHN HENRY EARLY, the third son, was born Nov. 26, 1871. After learning the printer's trade, he served as a reporter on the Reading Herald and the Reading Times for a number of years. He is now assistant city editor of the latter newspaper. He married S. Emma Eisenhower, of Reading.

DAVID FREDERICK EARLY, the fourth son, born March 22, 1874, is a machinist, with automobile building as a specialty. He married Margaret H. Hiester, of Reading, and they have one child Albert Hiester Early.

HENRIETTA C. EARLY, the elder daughter, married Harry W. Grim, of Millersville, Pa., and they have two children, William George and Ralph Early. They live at Reading.

LYDIA J. EARLY, the younger daughter, lives with her parents at Reading.

CAPT. PRINCE REDINGTON STETSON, youngest son of Charles A. Stetson who was for forty years (from 1837 to 1877) proprietor of the well-known "Astor House" in New York City, was born in the city mentioned June 5, 1839, and there educated. He entered the regular army by appointment as first lieutenant of the 15th United States Infantry May 14, 1861, and served with the regiment in Kentucky until January, 1863, when he was appointed chief of ordnance on the staff of Maj. Gen. D. N. Couch, Department of the Susquehanna, in Pennsylvania, with headquarters at Harrisburg. While stationed there, he organized and mustered into service the 167th Regiment of Pennsylvania Volunteers at Reading. Upon rejoining his regiment at Chattanooga, Tenn., he was detached by Special Order, Army of the Cumberland, as Aide de Camp on the staff of Maj. Gen. Joseph Hooker, and he served as his personal aide until he resigned in December, 1865. While in the service he participated in the battles of New Hope Church, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Utoy Station and Atlanta.

In 1863 Captain Stetson was married to Rebecca Hiester Eckert, daughter of Isaac Eckert (president of the Farmers' Bank at Reading from 1836 to 1873, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this publication). To this marriage were born two children, Edward Eckert, and Alice Develin (m. to Charles B. Knapp of New York City and died Feb. 26, 1907).

Upon his location at Reading, after resigning from the regular army, Captain Stetson identified himself with Christ Protestant Episcopal Church and served as a vestryman for upward of forty years; also as treasurer of the Diocese of Bethlehem and Central Pennsylvania; manager and treasurer of the Reading Hospital for upward of twenty-five years; also as a trustee of Charles Evans Cemetery since 1900 (having succeeded Geo. B. Eckert upon his decease).

Captain Stetson took an active interest in the management of the Leesport Iron Company, as treasurer of the company for a number of years until the plant was sold. During the administration of President Harrison he officiated as postmaster of Reading from 1889 to 1893, having developed the office to a very high standard, for which he received congratulatory letters from Postmaster General Wanamaker. He is a member of the Loyal Legion, the Union Veteran Legion of Reading, and Keim Post No. 76, G. A. R., of Reading.

Captain Stetson is a lineal descendant of Cornet Robert Stetson, who raised the Plymouth Troop of Horse in Plymouth county, Mass., in 1658, the first company in that early settlement; and a great grandson of Capt. Prince Stetson, whose company was in the 23d Regt. U. S. Regular Army in the Revolution, commanded by Col. John Bailey.

GEORGE W. FREYBERGER, a teacher in Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, was born in that township Aug. 19, 1861, son of George and Amelia (Schmehl) Freyberger, and grandson of George and Catharine (Bitting) Freyberger.

Family tradition states that Jacob Freyberger, a native of Switzerland, was the ancestor of those of the name in Berks county, and that after coming to the New World he located in Bern township, Berks county. The Pennsylvania Archives record that one Jacob Freyberger emigrated to America and landed at Philadelphia Oct. 10, 1754, having crossed the ocean on the ship "Peggy." The Federal census report of 1790 shows "Widow" Freyberger, of Bern township, as the head of a family consisting in that year of two sons above sixteen years of age, two sons under sixteen years of age, and three daughters. This probably was the widow of Jacob Freyberger. The Federal census report of 1790 also records the names of Jacob and John Freyberger, the former having a family of two sons, less than sixteen years old, and five daughters. John was married but had no issue. The ancestor, Jacob Freyberger, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and served in Capt. Jacob Soder's Fifth Company, being one of his two Court Martial men of the Company May 17, 1777. [Penn's Archives, Fifth Series, page 192.] In 1777 Jacob Freyberger was a resident of Bern township, Berks county.

George Freyberger, grandfather of George W., was of Maiden-creek township. He died in 1836, and is buried at Schwartzwald Church of which he was a member. He was a carpenter and undertaker, and lived in Exeter a number of years before he died. His wife was Catharine Bitting, daughter of Daniel Bitting, of Exeter township. She died during the seventies, when past seventy years of age. Of their five children, all born in Exeter, one daughter died small. The others were: Daniel, who lived on the homestead in Exeter; Mary, m. to John Lutz, of Exeter; Catharine, m. to Reuben Nagel, of Exeter; and George, born in 1827. George Freyberger (born in 1827) says that his grandfather lived in Maiden-creek township, and that among his children was a daughter Eve who was the wife of Michael Huntzinger, the grandfather of the Rev. Mr. Huntzinger, of Reading. In 1790 John Christian Freyberger and William Freyberger lived in Heidelberg township, Berks county; and John Freyberger lived in Brunswick and Manheim townships in what is now Schuylkill (then Berks) county. The latter had one son above sixteen years of age, and one son under sixteen years of age, and one daughter. His relationship, if any, to the Bern township family is not known.

George Freyberger, son of George and father of George W., was born in Exeter township Feb. 7, 1827. When a young man, he learned the tailor's trade in Amity township, and this he followed some twenty years in Exeter and Ruscombmanor townships. He located in Ruscombmanor township in 1855, and there has since made his home. Here he followed the tailor's trade until after the Civil war. For five years he worked at the Oley Furnace, and late in the sixties he took to farming, and continued until 1896, when he retired. Since 1903, he has lived with his son George W. He was married Aug. 14, 1853, to Amelia Schmehl, daughter of Jacob and Barbara (Breidigam) Schmehl, of Ruscombmanor township. She was born Oct. 31, 1829, and since 1903 has been totally blind. To George and Amelia Freyberger were born four children of whom a son, Irwin, died aged twenty-seven days. Those living are: Jacob S. who married Harriet Hill, and lives in Ruscombmanor township; George W.; and Thomas J., who married Sallie Endy, and lives in Ruscombmanor township.

George W. Freyberger was reared to farm life, and worked for his parents until he was of age. He obtained his early education in the common schools of his district. He attended the Oley Academy under Prof. Henry Schadler, now a minister of the Reformed faith and located at Allentown. Mr. Freyberger was licensed to teach in the public schools by Prof. D. S. Keck, then County Superintendent, in 1881, and taught his first and second terms at Schmehls School. The past twenty-six terms he has taught the Links School of Ruscombmanor township. He is one of the efficient teachers of the county. After teaching several terms, Mr. Freyberger was given a professional certificate and later he received a State Teacher's Permanent Certificate. He now lives in his own home, where he has a tract of twenty-one acres.

Mr. Freyberger is a member of Ringgold Council No. 23, O. U. A. M., of Friedensburg; and Castle No. 119, K. G. E., of Friedensburg, of the latter of which he is a charter member, and has been an official since its organization in 1886. He is the District Grand Chief of District No. 6 of Berks county, and is active in the interest of the lodge. In politics he is a Republican, has been a delegate to a number of county conventions, and is now the Republican committeeman for his township. He belongs to Spies's Lutheran Church, which he has served as deacon and elder, the former office nine years, and the latter six years.

Mr. Freyberger was married in 1889 to Rosa Guinther, daughter of L. F. and Sarah (Bortz) Guinther, of Reading. Their children are: Edna, Wayne and Earl.

FRANCIS ROLAND, Jr., the secretary of the Reading School District, who has his office in the high school building, is a son of Francis and Anna Eliza (Yeager) Roland.

Francis Roland, Sr., was born in Reading in 1816, and died in 1897. He was in the hatting business in Reading for sixty years, was clerk of Quarter Sessions for Berks county for a term, and also served as director of the poor. He married Anna Eliza Yeager, who was descended from an old American family, some of her ancestors being soldiers in the Revolutionary war, and her mother received a pension as the widow of a soldier who had served in the war with Mexico. To them were born five sons and two daughters: Lucien, who was a soldier in the Civil war, died in 1886, aged forty-three years; one daughter died in infancy; George W.; Henry Y.; Emma Catharine; Frederick, who is in the real estate business and served as director of the poor; and Francis, Jr. The mother of these children died in 1900, aged seventy-nine years.

Francis Roland, Jr., was born Feb. 13, 1853, and received his education in the public schools of Reading. His first occupation was that of telegrapher for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, remaining in this service for almost twenty years. In 1890 he became secretary of the Reading School District, a position he has held to the present.

Mr. Roland married Rebecca Spencer, daughter of Osborn Spencer, deceased, of Allentown, who was at one time superintendent of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Two children were born to this union: Spencer Brown, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, class of 1903, was admitted to practice in the courts of Berks county in 1904; C. Frederick is a salesman in one of the leading mercantile establishments of Reading.

Mr. Roland belongs to the Royal Arcanum and to the Sons of America. He is a member of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

ANDREW J. LEVENGOOD, who was president of the Penn Planing Mill Company, of Reading, Pa., was born March 14, 1866, at Hazleton, Pa., son of William Y. and Margaret (Corbett) Levengood.

William Y. Levengood was "boss" carpenter for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad. He was a soldier in the Civil war, and died in 1898, aged sixty-two. His wife died in 1896, aged sixty. They had the following children: Emma (m. Howard Heller); Hettie (m. Forrest Melhouse); Edith (m. Harry They); Frank, deceased; Andrew J.; Amelia (m. Joseph Engel); John, an engineer in the Pottstown Iron Company's plant. The family belong to the Reformed Church.

Andrew J. Levengood received his education in the schools of Pottstown, where his parents had removed, from Hazleton, when he was one year old, and his first work after leaving school was the learning of the carpenter's trade with his father. He then entered the employ of the Fisher Planing Mill, where he learned all the details of mill work and in 1892 located in Reading, finding employment at the Shunk Planing mill. He continued with that company until it went into liquidation, when the Penn Planing Mill Company became its successor and Mr. Levengood was made president, Harry Shunk, vice-president; and Conrad B. High, secretary and treasurer. The new company has been very successful under President Levengood's able management, their orders being far ahead of the work turned out. The mill has the reputation of doing the finest class of work and the company enjoys some of Reading's best trade, although their operations are not confined to the city alone, but extend to the smaller towns and cities in the surrounding country. The mill has been operating on this site for sixty-three years. Mr. Levengood retired from this company to enter the real estate and building business. Mr. Levengood was married in 1888 to Elizabeth S. Fryer, daughter of William and Sarah Fryer. They are members of St. Paul's Memorial Reformed Church of which he is at present acting as deacon. Mr. Levengood is very prominent in fraternal circles, being a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., Excelsior Chapter, R. A. M.; Reading Commandery, K. T.; and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Lodge of Perfection, 14°, Reading; Philadelphia Consistory, 32d degree; Manatawny Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 214; and Mt. Penn Encampment of Reading.

Mr. and Mrs. Levengood are survivors of the Honda wreck of May 10, 1907, and did excellent service in helping to alleviate the sufferings of the less fortunate and also in assisting in the removal of the bodies from Santa Barbara to Reading.

DANIEL RUTH, for many years a leading business man in the city of Reading, Pennsylvania, was born April 13, 1822, and died January 11, 1908. He was the son of Benjamin and Susan (Rothermel) Ruth.

The parents of Daniel Ruth were both natives of Berks county, Pa. His father resided in Cumru township, now Spring township (where Daniel was born) along the beautiful Cacoosing Creek, and his mother was a daughter of Peter and Magdalena Iaeger Rothermel, of Richmond township. Benjamin Ruth was a farmer by calling. His life was brought to an untimely close when he was twenty-one years of age. His widow was left with three children, namely: Henry, Daniel and Mary, who married Charles Reinert. Mrs. Ruth afterwards married Samuel Gross, and eight children were born to them, viz.: George Washington; Peter; Catharine; Louisa; Samuel; Jacob; Susan and Charles, of whom only one, Jacob, now (1909) survives.

Daniel Ruth was brought up partly under the care of his uncle, Daniel Rothermel, until he reached the age of sixteen, and up to that time he attended the district schools of Berks county. When he had reached a proper age to learn a trade, he decided upon cabinet making and served his apprenticeship under Jacob Kuntzman. After working in that line six years, he went to Reading, Pa., and was there for three years, in the employ of the Johnson Foundry, engaged in building coal cars. He then took a position with Jacob Doughty, a manufacturer of agricultural implements. He had marked business aptitude, and in his various enterprises succeeded so well that in 1898 he retired from active business, occupying himself in looking after his property interests.

In 1842 Mr. Ruth was married to his first wife, Miss Hannah Ely, who was born in Lebanon county, Pennsylvania. They enjoyed only thirteen years of wedded life, Mrs. Ruth dying in 1855, leaving four children: George, Margaret Elizabeth (who married William M. Wells, March 10, 1867), John and Henry. April 22, 1866, Mr. Ruth married his second wife, whose maiden name was Amanda Garrett, who, with her daughter Susan, their only child, survives him.

Mr. Ruth was a member of the Reformed Church. In politics he was a Democrat. He was also one who risked his life for his country during the Civil War, having been mustered, December 11, 1862, into Company B, under Captain Charles Melcher, 167th Pennsylvania Regiment, Colonel Charles A. Knoderer, commanding.

GEORGE S. KERCHER (deceased) was proprietor of a bakery establishment in Reading, at No. 930 Douglass street. His start in life was made without means and the success he attained was due wholly to his own energy. He was born July 4, 1870, in Huntingdon county, Pa., son of Charles H. and Amanda (Sterner) Kercher.

Benjamin Kercher, his grandfather, was a respected citizen and lifelong agriculturist of Longswamp township, Berks county, where he owned a valuable farm. He was married to Hettie Fisher, and they had two children: Charles H. and Mary, the latter of whom died at the age of two years. He died in 1872, and his wife in 1846.

Charles H. Kercher was born in Longswamp township, in 1840, and was educated in the schools of that locality, and then learned the carpenter's trade. In 1879 he removed to Reading, and was engaged at carpenter work until 1903, when he retired, assisting his son at times in the bakery. He was married in 1865 to Amanda Sterner, daughter of David and Angelina (Leiby) Sterner, and they had nine children, five of whom survive: Albert (who married Emma Reeser), Horatio (who married Katie Mayberry), Naomi (who married Alvin Weand), Sallie (who married Frank Stout), and Milton S. In religious belief the family is connected with the Lutheran Church. Mr. Kercher was a soldier in the Civil war, being a member of Company K, 151st Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, commanded by Captain James W. Weida. He received his honorable discharge July 30, 1863, at Harrisburg, Pa. He is a member of G. A. R. Post No. 16, Reading.

George S. Kercher was three years of age when his parents removed to Reading, and here he received his education in the common schools. Until seventeen years of age, he worked at farm labor, and then he was apprenticed to the baker's trade, serving a term of four years. Later he went west, where he remained until 1891; then returned to accept a position with a Mrs. Fox, who conducted a bakery on Buttonwood street. After working six years for her, he embarked in business for himself at No. 1026 Oley street, and later removed to Green street. In 1906 he erected a modern baking establishment, and employed twenty-three people (eleven of whom were bakers), his business requiring nine delivery wagons. He made a specialty of catering at weddings, banquets, etc.

Mr. Kercher was married to Lilah Carl, and to them was born a daughter, named Edna. They attended the Lutheran Church. Fraternally he was connected with Camp No. 552, P. O. S. of A.; Camp No. 17, Patriotic Order of Americans; German American Association; Northeastern Republican League; and the Royal Arcanum. In politics he was a Republican. He died July 19, 1908.

JOHN L. J. KNOLL. Among the successful young men in Reading, who are developing business careers, is John L. J. Knoll, a member of the wholesale grocery firm of Delp & Co. Mr. Knoll is a native of Jefferson township, where he was born August 5, 1867, on the homestead known familiarly as the "Wenrich" farm.

Great-grandfather Knoll was born in Host, Germany. Tradition gives him three sons, John Jacob, George and David. He came to America in the early part of the nineteenth century. Grandfather John Jacob married and had six children: John L., mentioned below; Harrison, who remained single, and drifting to the far west, died about 1893; Eva (married John Miller of Jefferson township), and three others who died in infancy.

John L. Knoll married Amanda Wenrich, a daughter of Paul and Salome (Leiss) Wenrich, and they had nine children as follows: Rebecca R. (married James Wentzel, deceased in March of 1890); James Isaac, went west in 1877 and married a western girl; Arabella (became Mrs. Thomas Field, her husband being the son of Elias Field, of North Heidelberg township); Ida (married Cornelius Trostle); Miranda (married Monroe Geiss, son of Harrison Geiss, who lived near Bernville, in Penn township); Albert, whose wife was Kate Reich, daughter of John Reich, of Bernville, Pa.; Sallie (married Dr. J. H. Horne, son of Charles Horne, of Heidelberg); John J., married Susan Donkel, daughter of Aaron Donkel, of Lehigh county, and later moved to Reading, where he died January 1, 1900; Elmer Charles, married Maggie Noll, daughter of William Noll, of Robesonia, who was killed on the railroad, when the daughter was very young.

John L. Knoll, the father of this family, was a tiller of the soil the major portion of his life, retiring from active work in 1897, and now resides with his son Albert. During the earlier part of his manhood, he was employed in the family of a Mr. Reed. He assisted in the widening of the Union Canal, furnishing stone for the construction of the different locks. Mr. Knoll's farming operations were carried on in connection with this work, and he had the reputation of being one of the best farmers in the community.

John L. J. Knoll attended the public schools of his home district, and for a time was in the Bernville high school. The year prior to his majority, he worked for his father. In February of 1888, he accepted a position as clerk in the store of A. M. Klopp, of North Heidelberg. He severed his connection with that house in 1890, the year which marked his first coming to Reading. His first business in Reading was the settling up of a small estate for James Wentzel, a brother-in-law. In May of that year he accepted a position with Charles L. Van Reed, who conducted a paper business on the west side of South Fifth street, near where the Metropolitan Electric Light Company now has its offices. He continued in this position for several months, and then connected himself with the business in which he is now a leading factor.

Starting at the bottom of the ladder, he became a teamster for G. H. Delp & Company, one of the large wholesale (and retail) grocery houses of the city. For some eight years he continued to do outside work, and then was given a position on the inside, which position gradually merged into that of a salesman. In July of 1905 a reorganization of the firm took place. The old firm consisted of G. H. Delp and George W. Leiss. The new partnership which was now formed, continued G. H. Delp as a member and added three new ones, the names being J. L. J. Knoll, William H. Reeser, and Edward M. Herbein. The old firm name of Delp & Company was retained. Doing business at Nos. 12 and 14 South Eighth street, the firm immediately took on new life, and in the four years in which it has been doing business, has shown a marked degree of success. It is fair to say here that the change in this firm and its subsequent success is largely due to the ability displayed by Mr. Knoll in the years of his salesmanship. The private brands of goods which are kept on the market by the advice and direction of Mr. Knoll is one of the features which has added greatly to the success of the firm. Only a wholesale business has been conducted since the reorganization of the firm, the retail business having been taken over by the retiring partner, who conducts it under the firm name of George W. Leiss & Company, at the old stand known as the "Henry Kerper Estate."

Although having the reputation of giving close attention to business Mr. Knoll enjoys the social and religious amenities of life. He is connected with the Reformed Church, being a communicant member at North Heidelberg, where he was confirmed. He also belongs to several of the better fraternal bodies: Isaac Hiester Lodge F. & A. M., No. 660; Progressive Lodge No. 470, I. O. O. F., of which he is a Past Grand, and was Trustee for a number of years; Reading Council of the Royal Arcanum, in which latter he has filled several important offices. The wholesale firm of which he is a member has membership with the Central Wholesalers' Association, of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania, New Jersey, & Delaware Association, and also the National Wholesale Grocers' Association.

The married life of Mr. Knoll began May 17, 1897, with his union with Margaret S. Donkle, daughter of Aaron and Margaret (Graeff) Donkle. They have one child, Loraine Margaret, born November 16, 1905.

WILLIAM HERBERT ERMENTROUT, manager of the mill department of Bright & Company's Hardware Store, Reading, Pa., was born in that city Sept. 28, 1858, son of William C. and Elenora (Leize) Ermentrout.

The early home of the Ermentrout family was in Nassau, and the line can be traced in the old country back to the days of the dark ages. The early home of the first American emigrant of the name was in the Palatinate, whence in 1739 he, John Ermentrout, emigrated to the New World, and located in Berks county, Pennsylvania.

Christopher Ermentrout, son of the emigrant John, was born Feb. 8, 1754, in Berks county, and passed his entire life engaged in farming.

John Ermentrout, son of Christopher, was born in Berks county April 27, 1777, and farmed and manufactured hats until about twenty years before his death, when he retired in comfortable circumstances. He was a member of the Reformed Church, and in politics was a firm believer in the principles of Thomas Jefferson. His home was in the vicinity of Womelsdorf.

William Ermentrout, son of John, was born Dec. 12, 1799, and died Jan. 21, 1880. For many years he was engaged in mercantile business at Reading, and he was very prominent in public affairs in that city, serving as a member of the board of control of its public schools, as school treasurer and as county treasurer. He was the father of: John S.; Daniel; James N.; William C.; Benjamin F.; Philip M.; Joseph C. and Samuel C.

William C. Ermentrout, son of William, was born Sept. 29, 1829, and died Jan. 17, 1887. He was a substantial citizen of Reading, and lived retired a number of years. For many years he was the leader of the Reading Ringgold Band, writing most of their music in his day. He was a gifted musician, thoroughly understanding harmony and composition. His home was at No. 141 North Fifth Street. He married Elenora Leize, daughter of Adam Leize for whom the bridge known as Leize's bridge was named. To William Ermentrout and his wife were born: Gertrude (m. G. Benton Beaver, of Reading); W. Herbert; and Miriam, Alice and Eugene, who died young.

William Herbert Ermentrout received his education in the public schools, going as far as the high school, after which he was a student in Palatinate College at Myerstown for four years. At the age of eighteen he entered the machine shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and served his full apprenticeship, after which he had charge of the engines for three years. When he left the company it was to engage in the machine business for himself, and in this he continued until 1897, when he sold out to Boyer & Brother. In that year he began to work for Davis, Printz & Company, and turned shells for the government until the close of the Spanish-American war. In the fall of 1898 Mr. Ermentrout entered the service of the Bright & Company hardware store, as manager of the mill department, and this responsible position he has since filled with credit.

Socially Mr. Ermentrout is a member of Mount Penn Council, Royal Arcanum, of Reading, and a member of the Board of Trade. He and his family are members of St. Paul's Reformed Church, and he and his wife take an active part in the Sunday-school, Mrs. Ermentrout having been the treasurer and Mr. Ermentrout the librarian for many years.

In November, 1884, Mr. Ermentrout married Miss Laura Shoemaker, daughter of Dr. Charles and Marietta (Wertz) Shoemaker, and they have one son, Charles B., who graduated from the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania in the class of 1909. The family home is at No. 514 Elm street, Reading.

CHARLES STRUNK HILL, wholesale merchant in woolen goods, at Philadelphia, was born at Pricetown, Ruscombmanor township, Berks county, Jan. 17, 1857, a son of Abraham De Turck Hill.

Abraham DeT. Hill was born in 1823, in Ruscombmanor township, where he followed agricultural pursuits until his death in 1903. He married Margaret Guldin Strunk, daughter of Jacob Strunk, of Amity township, who died in 1866, aged thirty-eight years. They had ten children, as follows: Samuel J. m. (first) Caroline Heffner and (second) Mrs. Kate Weston; Anna M. m. Peter L. Glase; Mary A. m. Charles H. Howell; Hannah Louisa m. Jacob Hoch; Charles S.; Sarah Elizabeth m. Adam Busch; John C. resides at Easton, Pa.; Clara A. m. W. H. Rodenbaugh, of Philadelphia; George W.; and Emma R. m. W. C. Motteran, of Philadelphia.

Charles Strunk Hill was educated in the township school and in the Oley Academy, and taught six terms, one in Ruscombmanor and five in Oley township. He was then employed at the Oley Furnace for seven years, during the last five being manager of the works. In 1884 he went to Philadelphia and after working for the Pinkerton Detective Agency and the wholesale firm of Brenniser, Schwenk & Company, dealers in woolen goods, for two years, he started for himself as a wholesale dealer in woolen goods, continuing in the same business until the present time, having developed a trade that reaches through the Middle and Eastern States. His brother-in-law, Edgar J. Lutz, was admitted as a partner in 1906 and the firm style since then has been Chas. S. Hill & Company.

In 1889, Mr. Hill was married to Emma Lutz, daughter of John A. Lutz, and they have two sons, Charles and Richard John.

John A. Lutz emigrated from Germany to New York in the forties and after remaining there for a few years he went to California, where he was engaged as a gold miner until 1865. He then settled at Philadelphia, where he has since been interested in a shoe business.

DANIEL R. WERT, a general farmer in Bern township, was born in Centre township, Berks Co., Pa., June 21, 1860, a son of Daniel S. and Kate (Rubright) Wert.

The first of the Wert family on record in Berks county was Jacob Wert. In 1774, when his will was registered in the general office at Reading, Pa., in Will Book No. 2, page 164, he was described as a yeoman in Albany township. His wife's name was Anna Margaretha. The names of his children are not given in the will. In 1879, in Bethel, one John Wert died and his will is on record in Will Book No. 13, page 702. He had no issue. He had a brother Daniel and one named Joseph. Provision in the will was made for John and Daniel, children of Joseph Wert. Another item in the will states: "If Daniel (my brother) shall die before I, then his share shall go to his two sons, Henry and Daniel, they being sons of his second wife."

Wilhelm Wert, grandfather of Daniel R., was born at Blue Mountain Church, in upper Berks county. In 1829 he moved with his family to Centre township and settled on the farm now owned by Levi Dietrich, which his wife had inherited from her father, Heinrich Smith. There the Wert family lived until they died. The wife, Susanna (Smith) Wert, lived to the age of ninety-six years. After her death the farm was sold to Levi F. Dietrich and it is still considered one of the best farms in Centre township. The children of William Wert and wife were: Elizabeth m. Daniel Hoak; Adam, who died young; Lizzie m. Daniel Hollenbach; and Daniel S.

Daniel S. Wert, father of Daniel R. was born in Tulpehocken township, Berks county, Dec. 30, 1822, and died Dec. 18, 1899, aged seventy-six years, eleven months and nineteen days. During the final three years of his life he lived with his son. By trade he was a carpenter and this he followed for some years and then turned his efforts to farming and continued for twenty years on the home farm in Centre township. After the sale of that farm he came to Bern township, where he owned his house with six acres of land, and lived there retired until he went to the home of his son, when the infirmities of age overcame him. He was a member of Belleman's Church, of the Lutheran faith, and his remains rest there. He married Kate Rubright, daughter of Jonathan Rubright. She was born June 24, 1824, and died in Bern township, Apr. 30, 1891, aged sixty-four years; she was also buried at Belleman's Church. They had five children, namely: Sarah, who died unmarried; John, who died young; Susanna, who married Henry Berkey, of Centre township; Rebecca, who married Henry Weissner, deceased; and Daniel R.

Daniel R. Wert has been engaged in farming ever since he was old enough to manage farm utensils. He attended the district schools and assisted his father until he had reached his majority, after which he worked for neighboring farmers through Centre and Bern townships and worked one year in Oley township for Ammon Good. In 1900 he began farming for himself on a tract of twenty-three acres which he bought in that year, already owning six acres which he had bought in 1895. In 1903 he built a substantial barn, in 1905 a comfortable residence, and new outbuildings in 1907. All his buildings are in excellent condition and of modern construction. His farm is productive and he takes produce to the Reading market every week.

On Sept. 17, 1887, he married Lillie Shearer, daughter of Aaron Y. and Emma (Heister) Shearer and a granddaughter of Samuel T. and Catherine (Yergy) Shearer. Mr. and Mrs. Wert have two children: Howard S. and Ella K. The former married Stella M. Kech and they have one daughter, Lillie H. The latter resides at Reading, where she is employed as a seamstress.

In politics, Mr. Wert is a Democrat. With his family he belongs to Epler's Lutheran Church, in which he served six years as a deacon and since 1907 has been an elder.

LEVI L. FRITCH, a highly respected resident of Longswamp, belongs to that progressive class of citizens to which is due so much of the substantial growth and strength of the American nation.

Johannes Frietsch, great-grandfather of Levi L., was born in Hesse Darmstadt, June 14, 1744. He was one of the five hundred passengers on the ship "Hero," Ralph Forster, captain, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes. They landed in America Oct. 27, 1764, and on this same day he qualified, as recorded in the Pennsylvania Archives (2nd Series) Vol. 17, Page 466 (Johannes Frietsch). He was married to a Miss Maria Palsgrafin, June 30, 1769, and they had the following children: John, born in 1771, in Longswamp township; Elizabeth, Nov. 23, 1772, in Maxatawny township; Jacob, Aug. 24, 1779, in Maxatawny township; John Henry, Aug. 30, 1781; John George, in Longswamp township, Oct. 10, 1787. Johannes Frietsch died Sept. 13, 1823, aged seventy-nine years, two months and twenty-nine days.

John George Fritsch (as his name was spelled), grandfather of Levi L., was born Oct. 10, 1787, at 10 P. M. He was a miller by occupation, and resided at the old mill in what is known as Long's dale or valley, in Longswamp township, near the present home of our subject. This has always been regarded as the family homestead and it is now owned and occupied by Frank Fritsch. He died at Kutztown in 1863. His wife was Miss Nancy Long, who bore him seven children as follows: Nathan m. Mary Dry; George m. Miss Mathias; John m. Miss Glassmoyer; Levi is mentioned below; Annie m. Reuben Howerter; Esther m. Aaron Long; and Lydia remained single.

Levi Fritch, son of George and father of Levi L., who born and reared at the old mill. He learned the trade of millwright, which he followed all his active life. He was an expert workman, and was strictly honest, winning a high reputation for first class workmanship, and he built all the mills, with a very few exceptions, erected in eastern Berks county, and in part of Montgomery county. In 1857 he bought the old Jacob Fritch property, where his son, Levi L., now resides. The same year he erected a fine brick house, and two years later a modern barn. Shortly after this he gave up his work and passed the remainder of his life in retirement, enjoying the rest that comes from a comfortable competency won by steady work and wise investment. He died Oct. 25, 1892, at the age of seventy-four years. His remains were laid to rest in the Mertztown Church cemetery. His wife, who was Miss Sarah Long, daughter of Daniel Long and sister of Drs. M. S. and Augustus Long (both deceased), is still living, making her home with her son Levi L. She is a sister of Mrs. Acker, of Reading, and of Mrs. Haas of Topton, the others of her family being deceased. To Levi and Sarah (Long) Fritch were born the following children: Tilghman, a merchant of Mertztown, m. Miss Esther Fegley, daughter of Sol. Fegley; Manoah, of Philadelphia, m. Mary Weiler; and Levi L.

Levi L. Fritch was born on the homestead where he now resides, April 25, 1858. His education was acquired in the local schools, the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, and Brunner's Business College, Reading. For a long time he clerked in the store of his brother, and for a time was a partner in the same, but for the past eighteen years he has given his attention to the lumber business, manufacturing barrel staves, for which there is a ready demand.

In 1880 Mr. Fritch was married to Miss Sallie Miller, daughter of Nathan Miller, of Mertztown. This union has been blessed with six daughters, as follows: Clara S., a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, and for eight years a successful public school teacher, m. Frank Lawrence, of St. Louis, Mo. Lillian F., a graduate of the Keystone State Normal School, and for five years a teacher, m. Winfield Hertzell, and now resides in Denver, Colo. Jennie B., also a graduate of the Keystone State Normal, who taught school for five years in Lehigh county, m. Rev. Charles A. Butz, of Myerstown, Lebanon county. Ella N., who like her sisters graduated from the Keystone State Normal, is now engaged in teaching in Lower Macungie township, Lehigh county. Melrose M. is a student in the Bloomsburg Normal School. Helen A. is attending the Longswamp high school under Prof. Kemp. The family are all members of the Mertztown Lutheran Church. In his political principles Mr. Fritch is a stanch Republican, but he has never aspired to the honors and responsibilities of official position. He has a fine reputation as a business man, is very popular with those who know him, and is much esteemed throughout Berks county.

WILLIAM YOCUM, who died at Stouchsburg March 26, 1905, was living retired after many years engaged in farming. He was born in Cumru township, Jan. 29, 1830, son of George Yocum.

The name Yocum is quite common in the lower end of Berks county. Late in the seventeenth century a colony of Swedes settled at Wissahickon, near Philadelphia. In 1701 a number of these Swedes, including three Yocum brothers, located along the eastern bank of the Schuylkill, near Douglassville, Berks county. Surveys of land were made for these settlers Oct. 21, 1701, and patents issued between 1704 and 1705. The name is variously spelled in the early records, being Jocum, Yocomb, Yokham, Yocom and Yocum.

Nicholas Yocum (Yocom), the founder of the Cumru branch of the family, was born in Oley township, Sept. 3, 1776. As a young man he went to Lancaster county, and learned to make gun-barrels. When ready to begin for himself, he chose Cumru township, Berks county, as his location, bought the old Seidel forge, and there prepared his own iron for the manufacture of his gun-barrels. He followed this calling many years with great profit, but he was of so generous and sympathetic a disposition that he was remembered for his benefactions rather than his wealth, and many were the men in financial straits whom he helped. In person he was tall, powerful and of commanding presence. He died April 23, 1857, aged eighty years, seven months, twenty days. His wife, Catherine (Lorah) Yocum, whom he married March 14, 1801, was born Oct. 3, 1783, and she died Feb. 13, 1851. They had four children: George, born 1803; Daniel, 1805, who married Miss Catharine Thompson, and died in 1864; Moses; and Samuel, who married a Miss Spohn, and settled at Sinking Spring.

George Yocum, son of Nicholas, was born in Cumru township Oct. 3, 1803. He was an iron worker by trade, and he and his father bought the old Spohn estate in Lower Heidelberg township, consisting of 101 acres of the best land in the county. Here he engaged in farming until his son Benjamin took charge, and he then retired to Sinking Spring, where he died Aug. 17, 1881. He is buried in the cemetery at Sinking Spring. He married Catharine Hemmig, who was born Dec. 23, 1805, daughter of John and Susanna Hemmig. She died April 21, 1874. Their children were: William, a farmer near Stouchsburg, is now deceased; Aaron, a flour merchant in Reading, m. (first) Hannah and (second) Kate Heffer; Sarah m. Frederick Graeff; Amanda died unmarried; Amos, a shoemaker and farmer, m. Isabella Miller (1843-1885); Benjamin, born Nov. 7, 1836, now lives retired at Sinking Spring; Lizzie m. Aaron Fox, a butcher at Sinking Spring; Anna m. Reuben Beecher, formerly at Wernersville.

William Yocum grew to manhood in his native place, there in the local school receiving his education. He first learned the milling business and for some years was in Kissinger's Mill, but he afterwards went to farming, a vocation he followed with unfailing success until his retirement. He passed the last fifteen years of his life in Stouchsburg, and there in the old home his two daughters, Misses Clara and Valeria, still reside.

On Oct. 21, 1851, at Reading, Mr. Yocum married Mary M. Potteiger, born Jan. 2, 1830, died May 17, 1905, daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Minnich) Potteiger. Their children were: Clara E.; James W. (deceased), member of the firm of Yocum Brothers, largest cigar manufacturers in Berks county; Ellen M., deceased; William H., in partnership with his brother, James W., many years; Valeria; and George J. Mr. and Mrs. Yocum died just six weeks apart, and both are buried in the family plot in the Charles Evans cemetery, Reading. They were members of the Lutheran Church, in which Mr. Yocum held office many years. In politics he was a firm believer in Republican principles.

ISAAC RUTH, one of the supervisors of Lower Heidelberg township, and a son of Francis Ruth, was born in the vicinity of Denver, Lancaster county, Sept. 23, 1841, and was there educated and trained to farming. When he was sixteen years old, he went to Cumberland county, found employment with a farmer near Shippensburg, and while assisting his employer in stock raising and farming operations, obtained an English education. He remained two years, and then returning home, accompanied his father to Heidelberg township, Berks county, where the latter had purchased a large farm. After assisting his father three years, he married and moved to Reading, where he was employed as a teamster at the Krick Grist Mill, situated along the Canal, near the Lebanon Valley Railroad. He continued at this employment three years, and then assisted Rick Brothers in putting up their foundry, working for them in all two years. He next engaged in the manufacture of hand-made building brick, with his plant in Ricktown, along Schuylkill avenue. He had been engaged in this business for about thirteen years, when he was appointed highway commissioner for the Western District of Reading, and he sold out his business. He served as commissioner eight years, and then engaged in farming along the Tulpehocken Creek, in Bern township, and at building operations with the West Reading Building Association for several years. After 1893 he engaged in farming on his forty-acre farm in Lower Heidelberg township, one-half mile west of Sinking Spring. He sold this farm in the spring of 1907, and a year later moved into his own residence at No. 141 North Front street, Reading, where he has since lived retired. Under the new Road Law, which became operative in 1906, he was elected one of the road commissioners of Lower Heidelberg, and he is now filling his first term. He is a stanch Democrat.

In 1862 Mr. Ruth married Mary Holl, daughter of Peter and Catharine (Spatz) Holl, of Lower Heidelberg township. She died in 1872, aged thirty years. The children born of this union were: Susanna Elizabeth m. Franklin Eidell; Emma Amanda m. Nicholas Kauffman; Francis H. m. Cora Wagner; and a son died young. In 1876 Mr. Ruth married (second) Amanda Moyer, daughter of William Moyer, of Spring township, and four children have been born of this union: Sallie Ann, William Isaac, Eva Magdalena, and a son that died in infancy.

OLIVER H. SANDER was born Dec. 2, 1853, in Rockland township, Berks county, a son of William and Sarah (Henry) Sander.

Heinrich Sander, the great-grandfather of Oliver H. Sander, was born in Germany and came to America when a young man, in the latter part of the eighteenth century. He married Elizabeth Kutz, sister of Solomon Kutz, who was a prominent man in his day. They had issue as follows: Charles, Jacob, Samuel, John, William, Isaac, Daniel, Henry and Jonathan.

Jacob Sander, blacksmith and farmer at Kutztown, the paternal grandfather, was born in 1807, and died in the seventieth year of his age. His wife was Lydia Old, daughter of Gabriel Old, and they had issue as follows: Henry, who died unmarried; Augustus; William; Susanna and Sarah, twins; David; Daniel, who lived and died at Annapolis, Md., leaving a large family; Jonathan, of Reading; Isaac; and George, of Youngstown, Ohio.

William Sander, father of Oliver H., was a blacksmith by trade, learning it in boyhood and following it all his active life. During part of this time he and his son Oliver were partners. He was born Feb. 21, 1833, at Kutztown, on the Sander homestead, near the United Evangelical Church, on Main street. He married Sarah Henry, daughter of Jonathan and Susanna (Reichert) Henry, and they had children: Oliver H.; Lewis D., who died aged four years; Cyrus W.; Lillie, who married Rev. William Bieber, of Hellertown, Pa.; Emma, who married Charles Leiby, of Warwick, N. Y.; William R., who married Mamie Kline; Elmer; Laura and Charles F.

Oliver H. Sander was four years of age when his father settled at Kutztown and this place has been his home ever since. He was educated in the local schools and the Fairview Seminary, which was then under the supervision of Prof. H. R. Nicks. This institution in later years became the Keystone State Normal School.

When Mr. Sander was sixteen years of age he learned the blacksmith trade, which he has successfully followed ever since and he is considered a very expert workman. Politically he is a strong Democrat and wields considerable influence in local and county politics. His first political office was that of deputy burgess of Kutztown, which office he held for three years. His next was that of councilman and the duties were performed with fidelity to the public. On numerous occasions he has been sent as a delegate to state and county conventions. In November, 1902, he was elected a county commissioner and went into office in January, 1903.

On Dec. 6, 1879, he married Catherine Oswald, daughter of Benjamin and Hannah (Smith) Oswald. The former was a soldier in the Civil war but never returned and his name stands on the records of the Federal Government as "not accounted for." Mr. and Mrs. Sanders have two children, Maggie V. and Linda C. Both these young ladies are successful teachers. The former graduated from the Keystone State Normal School in 1898 and the latter in 1903.

JAMES A. DUNDORE, a prosperous farmer now living in retirement in Heidelberg township, was born on the old Dundore homestead in that same township, June 25, 1846, son of William and Sarah (Ernst) Dundore.

William Dundore was born in 1812, and died in October, 1885. For many years he was a farmer, and after his retiring from active work he made his home in Womelsdorf, where he died. He owned the old family homestead, and was in very comfortable circumstances. He was a member of Zion's Church, Womelsdorf, for years, and served it as an official, and now sleeps his last sleep in the churchyard. He married Sarah Ernst, born in 1810, deceased in 1886, daughter of Joseph Ernst, who married a Miss Boyer. Their children were: Lovina m. John Dengler, a farmer of North Heidelberg; Jonathan E., of North Heidelberg; John, a farmer in Heidelberg who died in March, 1906; William E., a retired farmer residing at Perry, Iowa; Sarah m. William Klee, of Womelsdorf; and James A.

James A. Dundore attended the public schools, and later the Womelsdorf Academy, obtaining a good education. He was early trained to the duties pertaining to farming, and at the age of eighteen he learned the painter's trade. This he followed for eighteen years in Womelsdorf, Marion township, and Stouchsburg. In 1885 he began farming on the old Dundore homestead, of 102 acres, of rich arable soil, and he improved it with new outbuildings, etc. This was his home until the spring of 1900, when he retired, buying a tract of twenty-three acres adjoining, to which he removed, and where he now lives. In politics Mr. Dundore is a Democrat, and he has served his neighbors as school director and as supervisor. He and his family are Reformed members of Zion's Union Church, at Womelsdorf, in which for the past sixteen years he has been an official.

Mr. Dundore has been twice married. In 1870 he wedded Isabella Leiss, who was born in 1850, and who died in 1885, daughter of Isaac Leiss. Six children were born to this union, namely: Martha T., who died in infancy; Sallie m. Elkanah Ruth, of Wernersville; Miss Ida M., at home; William I., a hosiery manufacturer at Womelsdorf, m. Esther Wenrich; Viella m. Charles Snyder, a farmer at Heidelberg; and Agnes m. Charles Oxenreider, a motorman on the Reading-Womelsdorf trolley line.

HARRY C. WEBER, who is a member of the Select Council from the Tenth ward of the city, was born in Reading, June 15, 1867, son of Julius and Anna (Kretz) Weber, the former a native of Switzerland and the latter of France.

Julius Weber, Sr., born May 11, 1826, in Zurich, Switzerland, came to America in 1847 and settled first in New York City, where he remained some years, being interested in the manufacture of wash-boards, which later he introduced in the city of Zurich, Switzerland. Returning to America, Mr. Weber located in Philadelphia, where he opened a gymnasium, but later came to Reading, where he engaged as the pioneer badge manufacturer, his business becoming the largest of its kind in this section of the State. He also opened a gymnasium at his home at Perkiomen and Chestnut streets, there teaching such men as Judge Ermentrout, Judge Endlich, the Eckerts and other of Reading's leading citizens. Mr. Weber was a powerfully built man and a wonderful athlete. His death occurred Aug. 4, 1896, in his seventy-first year, his wife, Anna Kretz Weber, born Dec. 25, 1836, in Rochefort, France, passed away May 29, 1905, aged sixty-eight years. They were the parents of fifteen children, and of these seven still survive: Herman G.; Walter S.; Harry C.; James A.; Daniel; Hattie and Maud. In religious belief Mr. Weber was connected with the Reformed Church, while his wife was a Catholic. He was fraternally connected with Harmonie Maennerchor, and was also a member of Keim Post No. 76, G. A. R., being a veteran of the Civil war. In politics Mr. Weber was a Democrat.

General Shangranun, whose portrait may be found in the capitol at Washington, D. C., was an uncle of Mrs. Anna (Kretz) Weber. Her brother Charles Kretz was one of the pioneer hat manufacturers of the county, and another brother, Major Herman Kretz, was superintendent of the United States mint at Philadelphia; he was appointed May 7, 1895, by President Cleveland who was a warm personal friend. Major Kretz also served as chief clerk of the United States treasury department. At one time he was cashier and paymaster of the Texas and Pacific Railroad.

The ancestors of Mrs. Weber enjoyed the friendship of the first Napoleon.

Harry C. Weber was educated in the high schools of Reading, and afterward entered the badge works of his father. Later he went to New York, Boston and Philadelphia, learning steel plate and copper printing, hot press work, stamping and embossing, and, returning to Reading, engaged in work at the plant, where he has continued to the present time. The three brothers, Harry C., James A. and Daniel, conduct the business as the Reading Ribbon and Badge Company.

Mr. Weber is a magician of some note and has entertained many large audiences in the Eastern States, being a personal friend of Kellar, as he was of Hermann the Great. He is a member of the American Magicians of New York City, the Knights of Friendship, Consultory No. 3, and the Sons of Veterans. He is very popular throughout the city and is one of Reading's best citizens. Mr. Weber is a Democrat in political matters, and in 1905 was elected to complete the unexpired term of Edward Taenzer of the Tenth ward, in the select council, being elected in 1906 for a term of four years, his popularity being shown by his majority, 365, the largest in the history of the ward. He takes an active part in the interests of his constituents, and makes a capable official. He is the owner of considerable property in the city.

ALBERT J. CRESSMAN, M. D., deceased, was born at Reading, Pa., May 15, 1856, and died at his home in that city, June 6, 1891. He belonged to one of the leading families of Berks county, and extended mention of the same will be found in another part of this work.

Dr. Cressman was educated in the Reading schools, and was a graduate of the High School. After a period of study in the elements of medicine with Dr. D. L. Beaver, he entered the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, where he was graduated in the class of 1877. He then returned to Reading and entered upon his successful career of medical practice. He was a member of the Pathological Society of Berks county, and was one of the visiting physicians to St. Joseph's Hospital, at Reading.

On May 9, 1881, Dr. Cressman was united in marriage to Mary E. Heckel, daughter of the late Dr. Charles A.

Heckel, of Chester county. They had one son, J. Albert, a talented, ambitious young man, who was born April 1, 1884, was graduated at the Reading Classical school June 12, 1903, and at the Bliss Electrical School at Washington, D. C., June 6, 1906. He resides with his mother at the family home at No. 426 North Ninth street.

Dr. Cressman was a worthy member of the First Presbyterian Church at Reading. He was noted for his professional skill and his personal high character. He was a Republican in politics. Mrs. Albert J. Cressman was a descendant of James Everhart who was an extensive owner of coal lands now operated by the Lehigh Valley Railroad and other companies.

JOHN EGE, M. D., a practising physician at Reading since 1880, was born at Dettingen, in Wurtemberg, Germany, Feb. 13, 1854. After going to the local schools until he was fourteen years old, he studied the higher branches in advanced schools in that vicinity, and attended medical lectures for two years, when he emigrated to America in 1880. He landed at New York, and shortly afterward proceeded to Reading. After practising at Reading as a physician for a year, he attended medical lectures for two years in the Hahnemann College, at Philadelphia, and was graduated in 1883. He then directed his attention particularly to surgery and established a private hospital in connection with his office. Much of his time was given to the treatment of Consumption, and in 1887 he read a special paper on the subject before a medical convention at Washington, D. C.

In 1889 Dr. Ege visited the Paris Exposition, after which he traveled through Switzerland to Berlin, where he took a special course on bacteriology and other branches of medical practice. During the last six years he has given special attention to the application of radium in the treatment of diseases, more particularly of a cancerous nature, and he has been very successful, having cured a number of remarkable cases. He possesses several radium tubes. One of them has the extraordinary strength of 1,800,000 activity, only six similar tubes being in America.

In 1883, Dr. Ege married Paulina Wonnberger (daughter of Prof. Carl Wonnberger, teacher of music, of Reading), by whom he has had five children: Olga (died in infancy); Carl (pharmacist, m. Stella Bower); Rhea (graduate of Girls' High School and now a teacher in a public school at Reading); Otto (student of interior decoration, attending the School of Industrial Arts of the Pennsylvania Museum at Philadelphia); and Waldo (attending the Reading Boys' High School).

ERNEST J. POOLE, of Reading, superintendent of the Carpenter Steel Works, was born in Butler, N. J., son of Judson and Julia (Decken) Poole.

Judson Poole, who was a blacksmith by trade, later became a machinist and served as master mechanic in a large plant at Sterling, N. Y. In his later years, however, he again took up blacksmithing in Paterson, N. J. He married Julia Decken, whose father owned valuable iron ore mines in New Jersey, the property still being in the possession of the family. To Mr. and Mrs. Poole were born two sons: George N., in the United States Navy, stationed at China, and Ernest J.; and four daughters.

After receiving his education in the public schools of his native locality, Mr. Ernest J. Poole learned the blacksmith's trade with his father, and later became a machinist. He became a foreman in an old established works, and later accepted the position of master mechanic with the Spalding & Jennings Company, of Jersey City, N. J., which company was absorbed by the trust in 1900. Mr. Poole then came to Reading, and was made superintendent of the Carpenter Steel Works, this company, which has 900 men in its employ, manufacturing high grade steel tools, automobile parts, etc. It is one of the largest industries of Reading, and under Mr. Poole's able superintendency the business has assumed large proportions. Mr. Poole is a man of decided executive ability, a skilled mechanic, and one who is capable of managing the great force of employees, with whom he is very popular. He is a member of Reading Lodge No. 547, F. & A. M.; Foresters of America, at Jersey City; and the Royal Arcanum.

In 1891 Mr. Poole was married to Catherine Nist, and to them were born three children: Lillian M., Florence L. and Ernest J., Jr.

PAUL H. BLACHMAN, of Reading, Pa., engaged in the manufacture of cigars at No. 116 North Ninth street, was born at Görlitz, Germany, Oct. 18, 1844, son of Wilhelm Blachman, an extensive cloth manufacturer of that country. Of Wilhelm Blachman's large family of children, but two survive, William, employed at Cramp's shipyards in Philadelphia, but at one time located in Reading; and Paul H.

Paul H. Blachman received his education in the schools of his native country, and prior to coming to the United States, was engaged in bookkeeping. Mr. Blachman came to America when twenty-three years old, landing at New York June 14, 1867, having made the journey in the "Cimbria." He came direct to Reading, where his brother was then residing, but owing to the unsettled times on account of the Civil war, he was unable to secure work as a bookkeeper. In 1867, within six weeks time, Mr. Blachman learned the cigar maker's trade when he engaged in manufacturing of cigars, having continued that occupation to the present time. In 1876 he located at Ninth and Elm streets, on the present site of the Covenant Methodist Church, and lived there for about seventeen years, but his place of business is now situated at No. 116 North Ninth street, where he has resided since 1900.

In 1875 Mr. Blachman married Clara Louise Hamel, daughter of Henry Hamel, of Saxony, Germany, and to this union have been born: Arno Paul, a very talented musician, now traveling all over the Western Hemisphere; Emily Emma m. to Herman Schlatter, of Philadelphia; and Miss Helen, at home. Mr. Blachman is a member of Teutonia Lodge No. 367, F. & A. M., having joined that fraternity in 1888, and he has served as secretary since 1889. He and his wife are consistent attendants of St. John's Lutheran Church. Mrs. Blachman conducts a very complete wax floral store at her residence, a business in which she has been successfully engaged since 1895. Mr. and Mrs. Blachman are widely known in their community, and are respected for their simple and upright lives.

HENRY S. MACHEMER, a prominent citizen of Reading and Berks county, is a native of Perry township, born Feb. 3, 1856. He is the youngest son of the late John and Sarah (Snyder) Machemer.

John Machemer was born in Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, Berks county, about 1816, and died in 1867, in his fifty-second year. He and his wife are buried at Gernands Church, of which they were members, belonging to the Reformed congregation. He was a blacksmith, and followed his trade near Mohrsville for many years, in addition to cultivating his farm of about fifty acres. He was a Democrat, and influential in his district, serving as supervisor for some years. When twenty-two years of age he married Sarah Snyder, whose parents lived on a farm adjoining the Machemer homestead. Mrs. Machemer died in August, 1881, aged sixty-three years. They had eight children as follows: Frank, who lived near Hamburg, died May 26, 1909, in his seventy-eighth year. Isaac S., who has been station agent at Bern Station for many years, was formerly the merchant at Berne. John, of Reading, was a policeman of Reading for many years and is now in the restaurant business. Peter, of Mohrsville, is a lock-tender on the Schuylkill Canal. Henry S. is mentioned below. Mary married John Bealer, and both are deceased. There were two daughters, between Isaac and John, who died a year apart, one when eleven years old.

Henry S. Machemer spent his boyhood on his father's farm, and received his early education in the public schools subsequently attending select schools. At the age of eighteen years he secured a position with I. H. Rahn and his brother, Isaac S. Machemer, who were then in the mercantile business at Leesport under the firm name of Rahn & Machemer, and with them he remained five years, was employed by Samuel Sunday, their successor, and afterward by Willitts Bros., at the same place. He finally became a partner in the firm of Willitts, Dauber & Company, and when it was dissolved became a salesman with Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart, Reading, in the cloth and cassimere department. Subsequently he connected himself as salesman with the firm of Hall, Shenk & Company, which has since become Glase, Hall & Company, wholesale dealers in foreign and domestic dry goods, Philadelphia, and later he was employed as traveling salesman by William C. Hendricks & Company, of Trenton, N. J., manufacturers and importers of queensware. In 1886 he became a traveling salesman for Lippincott & Company, wholesale grocers and tea dealers, Philadelphia, by which firm he has been employed up to this time, living at Leesport, Ontelaunee and West Leesport, and locating in Reading in 1899. He resides at No. 438 North Ninth street. He has visited nearly every district in Berks and adjoining counties twice a month for the past twenty-five years, and enjoys a large personal acquaintance.

Mr. Machemer has always taken an active interest in Democratic politics, casting his first vote for Samuel J. Tilden for President, and has never missed a primary or general election since. He has been elected delegate to county conventions a number of times; was committeeman of Ontelaunee for a number of years, and served as school director of that township until he moved to West Leesport. His home has been in the Eleventh ward since his removal to Reading, and he has taken the same interest in politics here as in his former home. In 1907, as candidate for the office of county controller, he received a large vote.

Mr. Machemer is a charter member of Camp No. 165, P. O. S. of A., of Leesport; a charter member of the Knights of the Golden Eagle Castle at the same place; and is a member of the Northeastern Democratic Association of Reading.

On Aug. 4, 1877, Mr. Machemer married Ida Stamm, daughter of James T. and Henrietta (Steach) Stamm, of Womelsdorf, Berks county, and granddaughter of John Stamm, who lived near Bern Church. James T. Stamm was a school teacher in Berks county for forty-five successive years. He and his wife are buried at Womelsdorf, where they last resided. To Mr. and Mrs. Machemer have been born three children: Claude J., who for many years was employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Company as a clerk, died April 20, 1908, in his thirtieth year (he married Clara Gass, and they had two children, Henrietta and Grace); Harry L. is employed in the shipping department of the W. H. Luden Candy Manufacturing Company, at Reading; Clarence S. is employed as a cutter at the Curtis E. Jones Company's factory, Reading.

HENRY HOFFMASTER, formerly a resident of Reading, Pa., now living retired, was born Dec. 14, 1833, in Exeter township, Berks county, son of Isaac and Elizabeth (Lott) Hoffmaster.

Isaac Hoffmaster was engaged as a laborer throughout his life and also drove teams between Pittsburg and Reading and Philadelphia and Reading during the days of the stage-coach. He died in 1869, aged sixty-nine years, while his wife passed away in 1882, when seventy-seven years of age. They were the parents of these children: Daniel, who died in infancy; Lewis; James; Mary; Henry; and Susan. In religious belief the father was a Lutheran, while the mother was a member of the German Reformed Church. They are both buried in Aulenbach county. In political matters he was a Democrat. Mr. Hoffmaster had brothers, George; Christian; John and Samuel; and a sister, Kate, who died unmarried.

Henry Hoffmaster was educated in the schools of Exeter township, Spring township and Reading, and when a young man learned the milling business. On account of the confinement attached to the milling trade, Mr. Hoffmaster was obliged to abandon it, and for three years was engaged in boat-building. In 1861 he became employed on the Schuylkill Canal, first as carpenter and later as engineer of a tug-boat, working on the canal altogether forty-three years until 1904, when he retired.

Mr. Hoffmaster was married in 1856 to Caroline Knauer, and to this union there have been born six children: Clara, deceased; an infant, twin of Clara, deceased; Laura, deceased; Charles Henry, deceased; George, deceased; and Ida K., a school teacher of Reading. Mr. Hoffmaster is a Republican in politics. He was a member of Salome Lodge, I. O. O. F. until its disbandment, and was a member of the Brotherhood of the Union. He was also connected with the Keystone Hook and Ladder Company, and was very active therein in his younger days.

JACOB P. and FRANK A. DEISHER, prosperous farmers of Maxatawny township, Berks county, Pa., and sons of Jacob and Caroline Deisher, are members of an old and distinguished family of Berks county, mentioned in full in sketch of Henry K. Deisher, elsewhere.

Jacob Deisher, who was of the fourth generation of this family in America, was a son of Peter and Elizabeth (Dunkel) Deisher, and was born in Maxatawny township Feb. 3, 1834. He devoted his life to farming in his native township, and owned the farm now belonging to his son, Frank A. There he died May 15, 1874, aged forty years, three months and twelve days. In his religious faith he was a Lutheran, belonging to Zion's Church, of Maxatawny, in which he held the office of deacon. He was buried in the Deisher family lot at Maxatawny Zion's Church. He married Caroline Butz, born Aug. 22, 1835, daughter of Reuben and Henrietta (Drescher) Butz, and she now lives with her son Jacob P. Six children were born to this union: Marietta m. Edward S. Kutz (mentioned elsewhere); Frank A.; Jacob P.; Ida and Caroline S., both unmarried; and Rev. George R., of Jonestown, Lebanon county.

Jacob P. Deisher, son of Jacob and Caroline, and now a prosperous farmer at Five Points, in Maxatawny township, was born there Nov. 5, 1864. He attended the district school until he was sixteen years of age, and was reared under the careful guidance of his parents. When but nineteen years of age he and his brother Frank A. commenced farming for themselves, on the farm now owned by Frank A., and the two were partners on the homestead for nine years. In 1895 he came to his present fine farm at Five Points. For nearly one hundred years this farm belonged to the Fishers. Mr. Deisher purchased it from Mrs. S. A. Butz one year before his removal there. It consists of 133 acres, and in 1908 Mr. Deisher built a new Swiss barn 50x92 feet, and he has made numerous other improvements that have added to the value of the place. His soil is particularly well adapted to the growing of wheat. He pays no little attention to poultry and fine stock. In politics Mr. Deisher is a Democrat, and in religion belongs to Maxatawny Zion's Lutheran Church, in which he was for five years deacon. He is highly respected in the community.

Frank A. Deisher, son of Jacob and Caroline, and a prosperous farmer near Topton, was born on his present farm Jan. 4, 1863. The township schools afforded him his educational advantages, and he was early trained to farming, to which he has so far devoted his time. At the age of twenty-one he began farming the hometsead, where he still continues, having 135 acres of the most fertile land in the county, all under a good cultivation. He has seven head of horses and twenty-eight of cattle, and has all the latest improved farm machinery. In politics he is a Democrat, and for six years served as school director. In December, 1892, Mr. Deisher married Mary Guldin, daughter of Garion and Sarah (Derr) Guldin, of Maxatawny, and their children are: Irene V.; Jacob G.; Frank A.; Homer G.; Beulah M.; Florence M.; Ralph J. and Harold G. Mr. Deisher has been quite successful in all his undertakings, his stock dealing proving particularly remunerative, and he is very popular throughout the township.

MARTIN M. FLICKINGER, a prosperous cattle dealer of Reading, Pa., was born Dec. 9, 1859, at Terrehill, Lancaster county, Pa., a son of Christian and Elizabeth (Mengel) Flickinger.

Christian Flickinger is now a retired resident of Denver, Pa. For many years he was a raiser of horses and cattle. In 1851, when the gold fever was at its height in California, he went, by way of the lower route to the gold fields and met with excellent success. He was the father of ten children as follows: Amelia; Elinor; Henry and John, all deceased, Martin M.; Catherine (m. Isaac Mohn); Emma (m. Prof. Amos Cline, a tobacco merchant at Terrehill, Lancaster county); Mary (m. Isaias B. Lutz, a prominent merchant at Reading; Elizabeth (m. Frank Fasig, with the Reading Hardware Company); and Valeria (m. E. B. Renninger, of Denver, Pa.).

Although the father of our subject is now eighty-six years of age he is as active as a man of but sixty years. He casts a straight Republican vote in every election; is a member of the Mennonite body. The mother of our subject was first identified with the First Reformed Church and later with the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Martin M. Flickinger was educated in the schools of Lancaster county, and when a boy drove cattle and handled horses for his father, and later entered into business for himself at Adamstown, subsequently at Denver, and still later at the Three Mile House at Shillington. In 1892 he engaged in handling stock at the Reading stockyards, and he now does an extensive business at Lancaster, where he also has an office. He is a very able business man, and an experienced cattle man.

On Dec. 18, 1881, Mr. Flickinger was married to Mary Bowers, the only child of Lewis and Lydia (Oswald) Bowers, and they had ten children, as follows: Alice married E. McLain Watters, of Akron, Ohio, assistant manager at Philadelphia for a Pittsburg firm; Florence; William (deceased); Martin J. m. Helen L. Dudley, is now at Lancaster where he assists his father to manage his interests; Charles (deceased); Paul; Mary Emma; Catherine and Beulah. The mother of these children died April 2, 1898, aged thirty-six years. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. On Dec. 30, 1905, he married (second) Miss Mary Grim.

In politics Mr. Flickinger is a Republican. He belongs to Reading Lodge, No. 115, B. P. O. Elks.

WALLACE M. ANSPACH, a resident of Upper Tulpehocken township, where he is engaged in teaching and is also serving as justice of the peace, was born in Tulpehocken township, this county, Sept. 3, 1878.

William Anspach, his grandfather, lived in upper Berks county and followed farming in Tulpehocken township for some years, later moving to Bethel township, where his death occurred. He is buried at Rehrersburg, in Tulpehocken township, at the Union Church. He served as a Union soldier during the Civil war. His wife was Sarah Hoy, and they had one son, Oscar.

Oscar Anspach was engaged as a clerk, and did day's work at Mt. Etna and Schubert, Berks county, at which latter place his widow still resides. Her maiden name was Maria Schock, and to them were born two children, Wallace M. and Normand, the latter now living on the homestead.

Wallace M. Anspach attended public school in his home township and the subscription school at Strausstown. He began teaching in 1895, and has followed that profession ever since, with eminent success, for he is heartily interested in his work. In 1901 he was elected justice of the peace, and still holds that office, for the duties of which he is well fitted. Mr. Anspach is one of the well known young men of upper Berks county, and in the pursuit of his vocation and social connections has made a wide acquaintanceship and formed numerous friendships. He is a member of the P. O. S. of A. and the I. O. O. F., has served as financial secretary of the former, and was a member of the building committee which had in charge the erection of the fine new Odd Fellows hall, also serving as financial secretary of that body. He is a member of the Citizens Band at Strausstown. In religious matters Mr. Anspach is identified with the Reformed denomination, and he is a prominent member of and worker in the Zion's Blue Mountain Union Church. He served on the building committee at the time the present edifice was erected, in 1904, was secretary, and is at present a trustee of the church and has served as secretary of the church council since 1902.

In 1897 Mr. Anspach married Miss Mary Smith, daughter of Harry Smith. Three children have been born to them, Walter (deceased), Roger and Paul.

BAER-BARR. The Baer family of Pennsylvania has an interesting history. It is of German origin. The name is common both in Europe and America and the colonial records show that over forty immigrants of the name came to America prior to 1750. Those of the family of Eastern Pennsylvania have their origin in three distinct branches or families; those of John, Melchior and Christophel, or Stoffel, as he was familiarly called. These three men of the name of Baer, with other immigrants, crossed the ocean in the ship "Phoenix," and landed at Philadelphia, Sept. 30, 1743. Their descendants are many, as the family is prolific. The name in German was spelled Bär and is variously written in different sections at the present day: Baer, Baehr, Bahr, Bair, Bare, Bear and Barr. The larger number of the family in Berks and Lehigh counties claim John, or Hans, Baer as their American ancestor.

(I) John Baer, after landing at Philadelphia, settled for a few years at Germantown, but prior to 1750, he settled in Weisenburg township, now Lehigh county, and the Kerschner farm of the present was his old property. His name is on the Ziegel's Church record in 1750, as one of the builders of the first church. Hans Baer had four children, namely: John, Adam, Jacob and Barbara. The latter married Henry Fetler and they lived at Allentown. The sons all married and their descendants are among the substantial citizens of their various communities. John Baer moved to Windsor township and his descendants live in Hamburg, Perry and Bern townships. Adam Baer settled a few miles northwest of the old Hans Baer home, reared twelve children. Jacob Baer obtained the old farm and acquired other land, owning over 500 acres, and was able to give each of his six sons a farm, the names of four being: Jacob, of Weisenburg township; Daniel, also of that township, has sixteen children; Henry, of Luzerne county, Pa.; and John Adam, of Maxatawny township. Adam Baer had also six daughters.

(II) John Baer, Hans Baer's oldest son, was the great-grandfather of Moses W. Baer, of Bern township.

(III) Abraham Baer, son of John and grandfather of Moses W., was born July 6, 1790, and died Jan. 25, 1855, aged over sixty-four years. He married Rachel Miller, born Dec. 18, 1792, who died Dec. 6, 1861, aged almost sixty-nine years. They had four sons and three daughters, as follows: Abraham; John; Isaac; Joseph; Mrs. Albright; Sarah (m. Jared Snyder); all of Bern township, and a daughter who lived and died in Philadelphia. Abraham Baer came to Bern from Windsor township and acquired a farm of sixty acres.

(IV) Joseph Baer, father of Moses W., moved from Bern to Heidelberg township in 1857, and there owned and cultivated a farm of 160 acres. He was born in Bern township, April 17, 1820, and died in Heidelberg township, Nov. 29, 1871, aged fifty-one years, seven months and twelve days. He was a worthy member of the Bern Reformed Church, and was buried in its shadow. His life had been one of industry, and he was able to leave a large estate to his family. He was married July 13, 1844, to Polly Maria Wert, daughter of Daniel Wert of Upper Bern township, and they had the following children: Catherine (deceased, m. Henry Rice); Lavina (m. Henry Rill, of Heidelberg); Adam died young; Joseph resided in Penn township; Mahlon resided at Reading; Moses W. and Aaron were twins, the latter residing in Berkley; Mary (m. Morris Althouse of Temple); Seleca (m. the late John Pauch of Reading); Sallie (m. Benjamin Kline); Henry died aged six years.

(V) MOSES W. BAER was born in Bern township, Berks county, Pa., June 11, 1854, and was sixteen years of age when his father died. He had been reared to agricultural pursuits and continued to work as a farmer, beginning for himself in the spring of 1890, on the Frank Unger farm in Centre township, where he lived two years. From there he went to Lower Heidelberg township, settling on the William Kalbach farm, which he operated for six years. Later he moved to the William Mervine farm near Shoemakersville, and engaged there in farming for six years, and in the spring of 1904 he came to his present place. This farm is the property of the widow of Harrison Kalbach, and contains forty-five acres of excellent land which, under Mr. Baer's careful management, proves wonderfully productive. He owns valuable stock having fine horses and cattle and modern farm implements and machinery. He is one of this section's most progressive farmers.

On Sept. 13, 1875, Mr. Baer was married to Ellen Dunkelberger, daughter of John and Polly (Zimmerman) Dunkelberger, of Centreport. Her grandfather was John Dunkelberger and her mother's father was Daniel Zimmerman. Mr. and Mrs. Baer have four sons, namely: Charles, a painter; William, a carpenter; Irwin, a painter; and John, who is a cigar-maker, all of Reading.

In his political opinions Mr. Baer is a Democrat. The family belong to the Bern Reformed Church.

(IV) Abraham Baer, the father of Abraham G. Barr seems to have changed to the former spelling. He was born in Bern township, April 25, 1824, and died April 30, 1905. He was buried at Bern Church, of which he had latterly served as elder. In early life he had been a member of Epler's Church. As a young man he had followed fence making (which was a recognized trade then), in both Berks and Lehigh counties, but later he bought and operated a farm of seventy acres located near Bern Church. His property now belongs to Mrs. Jacob Weivel, and the house is still left as Mr. Baer remodeled it. In person Mr. Baer was of pleasing appearance, of medium height and well built, with black hair. He married Sarah, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Himmelberger) Gicker, and granddaughter of Daniel and Catherine Gicker, pioneer settlers. Mrs. Baer's father lived from 1801 to 1872, and her mother from 1805 to 1874. Sixteen children were born to Abraham and Sarah Baer as follows: John, of Philadelphia; Sarah Barr (m. Henry Brossman and died in 1907, aged fifty-seven); Reuben, of Womelsdorf; Frank, of Iowa; James, of West Leesport, Pa.; Amelia (deceased, m. Henry Dickenson, of Brecknock township); Henrietta (deceased, m. Amandon Bender, of Mount Pleasant); Ellen (m. Henry Stoudt); Abraham G.; Isabella, unmarried; Samuel, a farmer of Bern township; Maria, unmarried; George, a farmer in Bern township; Emma, who died aged twelve years; and Milton, who lived only eleven months.

(V) ABRAHAM G. BARR, a prosperous farmer located near Leisz' bridge, in Bern township, was born in this township, Oct. 19, 1860, a son of Abraham Baer, or Barr, as the name may be spelled. Abraham G. Barr was reared on a farm, but when twenty-one years of age he learned the carpenter trade from Hiram Hartman, of Alsace township, and followed it for about three years, working for a year and nine months with his instructor, and the rest of the time at Reading. He followed fence-making for about three years, and is considered a good mechanic. In 1888 he began farming in Bern township, taking the Henry H. Jackson farm of sixty-five acres and there Mr. Barr lived for fifteen years. From there he moved to the Daniel Rothenberger farm in Bern township, one-half mile above Leisz bridge, which contains seventy-six acres and 127 rods. It is a fertile farm, and is improved with excellent buildings. In 1906 Mr. Barr built a wagon shed, 24x36 feet in dimensions, doing all the carpenter work himself and making a very good job. He has four horses and twelve head of cattle. Once a week he attends the street market at Reading.

On Nov. 4, 1882, Mr. Barr was married to Miss Maria Kramer, daughter of Daniel F. and Lavina (Lash) Kramer of Bern township, and they have one son, Harvey M. The latter married Rosa Geshwindt and they have a little daughter whom they have named Annie. Harvey assists his father in farming and resides at home.

In politics Mr. Barr is a Democrat, and he has held local office. He is a member of the Reformed congregation, while Mrs. Barr and their son are Lutherans. Both attend services at Epler's Union Church.

DR. ISAAC B. YEAKEL, who is engaged in the practice of his profession at Bally, was born in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, Pa., July 6, 1840, a member of a family already residing in Pennsylvania for more than a hundred years.

David Yeakel came to Pennsylvania with the little band of Schwenkfelders in 1734. He was on the sick list when he arrived at Philadelphia, and no record of his death and no mention of his wife can be found. He was accompanied by six sons and two daughters, namely: Christopher; Abraham; Balthaser; Jeremias; Hans Heinrich; Casper; Susanna (who married George Weigner) and Rosina.

Christopher Yeakel, son of David, married, May 30, 1751, Rosina, widow of Christopher Seipt, and daughter of Balthaser Hoffman. She died June 14, 1788, aged seventy years, and he died July 1, 1800. Their children were: Jacob, born Jan. 9, 1753; and Salome, born Oct. 24, 1762.

Jacob Yeakel, son of Christopher, was born Jan. 9, 1753. He became a farmer in Upper Hanover township, Montgomery county, where he died Feb. 17, 1819. He married, May 7, 1778, Susanna Schultz, daughter of Christopher Schultz, and she died June 28, 1829, aged seventy years. Their children were: Magdalena, born 1779, died 1828; Rosina, born July 4, 1780; Daniel, born 1781, died same year; Regina, born 1782, died 1783; Christopher; Andrew, born June 7, 1786; Carl, born June 21, 1788; Christina, born March 30, 1780; and Sarah, born Feb. 8, 1795.

Christopher Yeakel, son of Jacob, born Sept. 4, 1784, lived on the farm in Upper Hanover township now owned by his son Joseph B. On May 10, 1810, he married Elizabeth Yeakel, daughter of Casper Yeakel, and she died Feb. 27, 1864. He passed away March 25, 1874. They were the parents of six children: Abigail, born Oct. 9, 1811; Samuel, Jan. 27, 1813; Reuben, Aug. 3, 1816; Joel, Nov. 18, 1817; Deborah, March 24, 1821; and Joseph B., Dec. 10, 1823.

Samuel Yeakel, son of Christopher, was born in Upper Hanover township Jan. 27, 1813, died in 1842, on his farm, and is buried at Schwenkfelder's Meeting house at Kraussdale, of which he was a member. He was a farmer. He married Hannah Bertolet, daughter of Daniel and Maria (Griesemer) Bertolet, of Oley township, Berks county. She died in February, 1867, aged fifty years, and is buried at the side of her second husband, John Guldin, at Friedensburg. The only son born to Samuel and Hannah Yeakel was Dr. Isaac B.

Dr. Isaac B. Yeakel received his early education in the public schools and in Oley Academy, the latter in charge of Professors Jacob H. Major and I. B. Hankey. He then taught school for seven terms—three in Oley, and four in Upper Milford township, Lehigh county. Determining to enter the professional world, he began the study of medicine with Dr. P. G. Bertolett, at Friedensburg, later attending the University of Pennsylvania, whence he was graduated as an M. D. in 1866. He located for practice in what is now Bally, and has continued there to the present time, winning a large and lucrative practice that extended over a radius of twelve miles in the country. For seven years he rode in a high sulky through summer rains and winter snows, the sulky being a slight improvement over the horse back riding of Colonial days. The Doctor has witnessed many changes in his community, and has taken part in many of the movements tending toward progress. He is a tall man, five feet, ten and one-half inches in height, and in his early days had jet black hair.

In his political faith the Doctor is a true Republican, and he served for nine years as a director of Schultzville Independent school, being secretary of the board during the entire time. He was local chairman of the party in Washington township for many years. Until 1888 he was a member of the Knights of Pythias at East Greenville. He and his family are members of the Niantic Reformed Church, and he has served as elder, deacon and trustee, always taking a great interest in religious affairs.

On Oct. 16, 1866, Dr. Yeakel was married to Maria K. Wieand, daughter of Charles and Susan (Krauss) Wieand, of Upper Milford township, Lehigh county. Four children, two sons and two daughters, were born to them: C. Frederick, a contractor and builder at Denver, Colo.; Hannah B., for seven years a public school teacher, and now living in Philadelphia; Susan, who married Frank Shreiber, of Shimerville, Lehigh county, and died in 1902; and Asher C., who married Lizzie Bender, of Reading, and died in 1900, aged twenty-six years.

SAMUEL B. HARBOLD, of Birdsboro, has thoroughly mastered his trade and is successfully engaged as a harness maker; he handles a full line of harness, collars, whips, robes, blankets, etc., and has a substantial place among the business men of the town. He was born in Amity township, Berks county, March 20, 1874, son of Daniel and Ellen (Bartz) Harbold.

Daniel Harbold, the father, died in 1901, aged fifty-four years. He was a native of Amity township, and passed his years principally at farming. In public affairs he always took a keen interest, and as a faithful Republican worked hard for the success of his party. For six years he served acceptably as constable, and he also filled the office of tax collector. He was a member of the Reformed church, as was also his wife. He married Ellen Bartz, and they became the parents of six children, as follows: Annie; Minnie, who became the wife of John Livingood; Samuel B.; Horace; Katie, at home; and one that died in infancy unnamed. Samuel Harbold, father of Daniel and grandfather of Samuel B., was a farmer all his life.

Samuel B. Harbold passed his youth upon the home farm. He attended the district schools until he was seventeen, thus acquiring a good practical education, and his time out of school was spent in assisting his father. Upon leaving school he went to Pottstown and learned the trade of harness making, and he remained in that town until the fall of 1896. The following year he came to Birdsboro, and established his present flourishing business.

In 1898 Mr. Harbold married Miss Rebecca Miller, of Douglassville. They are members of the Lutheran church. Both Mr. Harbold and his wife are popular socially, and their home is always open to their many friends.

GEORGE RICHARD HOFFMAN, of Perry township, one of the younger farmers in that region, comes of a family that for generations has tilled the soil of Pennsylvania and has given to the State many of her most substantial citizens. The tradition of the family, which various records seem to bear out, is that this branch is descended from

(I) Jacob Hoffman, who came from Germany and settled in Greenwich township prior to 1756, in which year his name is found upon the tax list of that district.

(II) George Hoffman, presumably the son of Jacob, was a lifelong farmer, and prior to the Revolution settled in Windsor township, on the farm which is still owned by one of his descendants, Jacob D. Hoffman. His wife bore the name of Hannah.

(III) Michael Hoffman son of George, was born Nov. 28, 1786, and died Jan. 10, 1874, in his eighty-eighth year. He occupied the Hoffman homestead and became a man of note in the region. In the early days he was in the habit of making frequent trips to Philadelphia with a six-horse team for general merchandise, not only supporting his own family, but also meeting the demands of the neighborhood to a large extent, thus carrying on in an informal way the business of a merchant. Like all the succeeding members of the family, he was an uncompromising Democrat, and active in party work. In 1857 he was elected an assemblyman, with a compensation of seventy-five cents a day. Those were in truth the days of the simple life, and Mr. Hoffman traveled to Harrisburg on horseback and carried his food with him from home. Religiously he was a devout Christian, and neither he nor his family was often absent from the church services.

Michael Hoffman married Miss Catherine Schappell, whose parents, Everhart and Catherine Schappell, came from Germany. Mrs. Hoffman was born in 1780, and reached her seventy-eighth year. She was the mother of five sons, George, Samuel, Charles, Michael and Benjamin.

(IV) Samuel Hoffman was one of the prominent men of his day and locality. For more than thirty years he held the office of justice of the peace, and was surveyor of Berks county from 1848 to 1850. He was a man of great activity and enterprise, was progressive in spirit, and his life was one of real service to the community in which his lot was cast. He owned several farms in Windsor township and made his home upon one of them. Mr. Hoffman died in 1879, while his wife, whose maiden name was Hannah Dunkel, survived him several years. Both are buried in Zion's Churchyard. Their family consisted of Elizabeth, David, Hannah, Jacob D., Esther and Caroline.

(V) Jacob D. Hoffman was born in Perry township, April 26, 1846, and still makes his home in that section. After finishing the local schools, he attended Freeland Seminary and then the select school kept by Prof. Charles N. Schaeffer in Reading. He began his business life as a merchant, establishing himself in Reading in 1865 with Richard Dunkel as a partner, the firm name being Dunkel & Hoffman. Later he went into farming on a tract of 180 acres in Windsor township, which he bought for $97.25 an acre, and sold two years later at an advance of $7.75 per acre. Some time after he purchased his father's homestead and operated it for eight years, moving from there to another farm in the vicinity, which he had purchased. This is good farming property and consists of 166 acres. Mr. Hoffman has amassed considerable means and at one time was a large land owner, possessing 440 acres. Both in business enterprises and in politics he is influential in his section and has held responsible positions. He has been auditor of his district for many years, elected on the Democratic ticket, and also a school director, and at present is a director of the Farmers' Assistance and Mutual Fire Insurance Company, in all of which capacities he has shown himself most efficient and has won general confidence.

Twice married, Mr. Hoffman's first wife was Mary Ann, daughter of George Sunday. There were four children by this union, namely: Charles L., deceased; George R.; Anna; and Catherine, deceased. By the second wife, who was Catherine Schappell, there have been two children, Jacob C. and one who died in infancy.

(VI) George R. Hoffman was born in Perry township, July 14, 1867, and until he was eighteen attended the public schools. Always helpful about his father's farm, he gave his entire time to assisting him until 1888. In that year the son attained his majority and began working for himself on a farm belonging to his father and not far from the homestead. This place, consisting of 137 acres, he bought later and has lived there ever since. It has rich soil, is highly cultivated and has buildings which are always kept in good condition, the whole place reflecting the greatest credit upon its owner. There is fine spring water on the farm, which has been piped into the house and which also runs into a large trough in front of the barn, for supplying the horses and cattle. Mr. Hoffman uses only the most modern implements and has also a gasoline engine for use in threshing, sawing wood and furnishing power for the gristmill in which he grinds all his own grain. He is an upright and industrious man, successful in his work and respected in the community where he lives. He is a Democrat politically, and while not particularly active in that line, is one who keeps himself well informed on all topics of public importance.

The partner of Mr. Hoffman's domestic life was Miss Lizzie Stetzler, to whom he was married June 12, 1886. She was a daughter of Joel and Lizzie (Gruber) Stetzler, and a granddaughter of John Stetzler. Two sons and a daughter have been born to this union, as follows: Milton J., Jan. 21, 1887; Mary M., Sept. 10, 1888; and Wilson J., Jan. 12, 1890. The family are all Lutherans in religious belief, and members of Zion's Church.

AMANDON M. MILLER, owner of a fine farm of 150 acres, situated in the northern part of Marion township, is a leading citizen of his section, and is now serving as a member of the board of supervisors of his township. Mr. Miller was born Oct. 8, 1860, in Marion township, son of Jared and Rebecca (Mogel) Miller.

Daniel Miller, the grandfather of Amandon M., was a resident of Tulpehocken (now Jefferson) township, where he died at the age of seventy years. He was a stone and brick mason and passed his entire active life at that trade. He married Elizabeth Shade, and they were the parents of three children: Joseph, who died in Pottsville, Schuylkill county, Pa., in 1907; Daniel, who spent his life in Jefferson township; and Jared S.

Jared S. Miller, father of Amandon M., was born March 27, 1838, and in early life learned the stone and brick mason's trade with his father. He also engaged extensively in agriculture. In addition to this for the past forty-five years he has been a veterinary surgeon, and in this line he enjoys a large patronage. He is the owner of two tracts of land, one of ninety-eight acres and the other of thirteen acres, but he now makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Charles P. Holzman, at Schaefferstown, Jefferson township. Mr. Miller married Rebecca Mogel, daughter of Samuel Mogel, and they were the parents of these children: Amandon M.; Calvin A., of Fleetwood; Ellen, who married Charles P. Holzman; and James, who died at the age of six years. The mother of this family died April 18, 1906.

Amandon M. Miller attended the schools of Jefferson township and was reared to agricultural pursuits, remaining at home until he was twenty-two years of age. At that age he embarked in farming on his own account on his father's farm. He remained there for nine years, and at the end of that time, in 1891, went to his father-in-law's farm of 150 acres, which is situated in the northern part of Marion township.

Mr. Miller married Emma K. Killmer, daughter of Edward L. and Rebecca (Filbert) Killmer, and they have become the parents of these children: Katie, who married Frank Blatt, of Marion township; Edward J., a telegraph operator, who lives at home; Samuel, who died at the age of five years; Lizzie and Mabel, both at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller and their family are well known in their section of Berks county. He is a member of Christ Lutheran (Tulpehocken) Church of Marion township, and Mrs. Miller is a member of Trinity Church of Jackson township, Lebanon county. He has served as deacon and elder in his church, and is now a member of the cemetery committee. In politics he is a Democrat, and has served as county delegate from Jefferson and Marion townships, and at the present time is a member of the board of supervisors of Marion township. Fraternally he is connected with Golden Rule Lodge, No. 159, I. O. O. F., Womelsdorf.

BENJAMIN OSWALD, who since 1905 has been engaged in the hotel business at Birdsboro as proprietor of the "Mansion House," so familiar to the traveler in this part of the country, was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, in 1843, son of Samuel and Sarah (Adams) Oswald, and grandson of Peter Oswald.

Peter Oswald was an early resident of Berks county, and was engaged as a farmer and stone mason.

Samuel Oswald was a son of Peter; he attended the subscription schools of the county in his youth, and between times assisted his father. At an early age he started out for himself, following farming in the vicinity of Molltown. He also became the owner of a farm in Lehigh county, and he made the cultivation of the soil his life work. He was quick to see what was practical in new methods of farming, and eagerly adopted those suitable to his needs. Prosperity smiled upon him, and he was able to retire some few years before his death, which occurred in 1880. He married Sarah Adams, and they became the parents of these children: Frederick, of Lehigh county; John, deceased; Susannah, who married Moses Reignald; Daniel; Samuel; Sarah, who married Samuel Weidenheimer; William, who makes his home in Lehigh county; and Benjamin. They were Lutherans in religious belief.

Benjamin Oswald lived the life of a farmer's son until he was twenty-three years of age. The district schools afforded him his educational advantages, and the home farm his practical training. When he began life for himself, on leaving home, he engaged in the coal, feed and lumber business at Chapman's Station for four years. He then rented a farm, which he cultivated for three years, when he had an advantageous offer and sold out. His next venture was as superintendent of an iron ore bank at Kline's Corners, in Longswamp township, and here he remained ten years. At the end of that time he resumed farming, and for the eleven succeeding years he carried it on with no little success, but sold out to engage in the feed business at Alburtis. His restless spirit looked for new worlds to conquer, and he then opened a hotel at Pottstown, also farming a tract of 254 acres of land for two years. In November, 1905, he came to Birdsboro, and opened the "Mansion House," a well known and first class hostelry, of thirty-three rooms, all fitted in an up-to-date manner. He has an excellent cuisine, and his table is sure to give satisfaction. He also handles a full line of imported and domestic cigars and liquors.

Mr. Oswald married Catharine Peters, and they have had eight children, five of whom are living: Clara, who married Harry Ebe; Herman; Mabel married a Mr. Case; Solomon P.; Laura, who married Willis Quigley. They attend the Lutheran Church. Mr. Oswald is a member of the F. O. E. Lodge at Reading.

GRANT HARTMAN, a prosperous farmer of Bern township, Berks county, was born in Millcreek township, Lebanon county, Pa., Dec. 24, 1872, a son of Joseph and Leah (Lauck) Hartman, and comes of an old Berks county family.

Joseph Hartman was born along the Northkill in the vicinity above Bernville, in 1833, and when quite young his parents moved to Millbach, Lebanon county. There he was married to Leah Lauck who was born in 1839, and is still living, as is Mr. Hartman. He became a farmer in Millcreek, where he resided until he was about thirty-eight, and then moved to Stouchsburg, Berks county, and worked on David Deckert's farm two years. In about 1873, he bought a farm at Reinholds Station, where he resided three years, then purchased a farm of eighty-three acres at State Hill, Berks county, and resided there eighteen years. Selling his farm he moved to Klopp's Store, North Heidelberg, where he lives retired. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hartman are: Kate; Ellen; Lucy (widow of George Pinyard, and lives at Philadelphia); Lizzie, married John Ensinger of Walter's Park; Leah, married Davies Behney of Robesonia; Harrison, a farmer of Bern township, Centerville; George, of Millersburg; Grant and Joseph L. Joseph L. was born Oct. 3, 1870, at Stouchsburg, was educated in the public schools, and graduated from the Keystone State Normal School, class of 1902. He taught school in Berks county ten terms. On Dec. 27 and 28, 1907, he took a civil service examination and was appointed school teacher in the Philippine Islands, Aug. 4, 1908, where he is now located.

Grant Hartman was educated in the public schools and at the Keystone Normal School, and was licensed to teach by Prof. William M. Zechman, then county superintendent of Berks county. Although qualified to do so, Mr. Hartman never taught school. In 1893 he married Lizzie K. Hiester, daughter of Harrison Hiester, of Bern township, and three years thereafter he commenced farming in Bern township on Benneville Binkley's farm. There he continued five years, and then purchased a farm of thirty-one acres near Leinbach's hotel, in Bern township, where they have since resided. This farm was purchased of the Jacob Balthaser estate. Mr. and Mrs. Hartman have four children, namely: Myrtle, Naomi, Verna and Nora. Mr. and Mrs. Hartman are highly respected in the neighborhood and their pleasant home is the scene of many gatherings, their friends appreciating their wholesome hospitality which is bestowed upon the stranger as well as acquaintances.

HENRY BITLER, whose death occurred on his farm in Robeson township, Dec. 2, 1902, was for many years engaged in agricultural pursuits in that locality, where he was well known and highly esteemed. He was born on the farm now occupied by his son, John Bitler, near Beckersville, Oct. 22, 1833, son of Daniel and Eva Bitler.

Daniel Bitler, Sr., grandfather of Henry, was born in Robeson township, where in after years he became the owner of the now well known Robeson Dairy Farm of 214 acres. He was a Methodist in religion and a Whig in politics. Of his children are John (m. Susan Bixler, and had two children, Mary and Elizabeth); Jacob (m. Margaret Wamsher, and had two children, now deceased); Daniel; Elisha (m. Ellen Wolf, and had eight children, Samuel, Sarah A., Eliza, David, Elias, Ellen, William H. and one that died young); David never married; Michael (m. Elizabeth Kachel, and had one child, Elizabeth); Henry (m. Mary A. Kennedy, and had two children, George W. and Mary); Charles (m. Christian Geiger, and had one child, Elizabeth); Polly (m. Silas Yocom); and Abigail (m. Eli Dickinson).

Daniel Bitler, son of Daniel, Sr., married Eva Freese, and became the father of eleven children, as follows: Levi; John; Samuel; Henry; Michael; Mary; Hannah; Eva A.; Elizabeth; Christiana and Daniel.

Henry Bitler, son of Daniel, secured his education in the common schools of Robeson township, and was reared to farm pursuits. On reaching maturity he engaged in farming on his own account, purchasing a farm of fifty acres, a part of the old Jonathan Seidle estate, which he cultivated until his death. Dring the Civil war he enlisted in the Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, served his term and received his honorable discharge. Mr. Bitler was known as a man of sterling integrity, and was elected by his fellow townsmen to the office of school director. In politics he was a Republican, and his religious faith was that of the Lutheran Church.

Mr. Bitler married Rebecca M. Haws, daughter of Samuel Haws, and to this union were born two children: John H., who lives on the original homestead, m. Lillian McGowan, and has one son, Henry; and Mamie E., living on her father's farm, m. John Kurtz, and has one child, Christian M.

JOSEPH B. YEAKEL. Among the little band of religious people known as the Schwenkfelders, who came to America in 1734, was David Yeakel, who was on the sick list when the boat landed at Philadelphia. No record of his death can be found, nor does any mention of his wife appear. Apparently he was a widower, and he was accompanied by his six sons and two daughters: Christopher; Abraham; Balthaser; Jeremias; Hans Heinrich; Casper; Susanna (who married George Weigner) and Rosina.

Balthaser Yeakel, son of David, came over as above with his father in 1734. On Nov. 24, 1737, he married Barbara Warner, who died Feb. 25, 1808. He died Jan. 28, 1762. Their children were: Susanna (1739-1808), Anna, David (1744-1756), George (1746-1751), Casper and Rosina.

Casper Yeakel, son of Balthaser, was born in Pennsylvania Jan. 6, 1748, and he married, in 1775, Anna Yeakel, daughter of Christopher Yeakel. He died July 11, 1804, and his wife passed away May 11, 1837. Their children were: Balthaser (1777-1778), Maria, Jeremiah, Esther, Regina, Elizabeth, Susanna, Abraham, Benjamin (1793-1796) and Anna.

Jeremiah Yeakel, son of Casper, was born Aug. 11, 1781, and he lived to advanced old age. In 1806 he married (first) Lydia Krauss, daughter of Balthaser Krauss. She died Jan. 19, 1812, survived by her husband and two sons, Daniel (1807-1813) and Benjamin. Jeremiah Yeakel married (second) Sarah Kriebel, daughter of the Rev. Melchior Kriebel.

Benjamin Yeakel, son of Jeremiah, was born Aug. 9, 1810, and his death occurred at Allentown Jan. 12, 1871. He was a man of enterprising and inventive mind, and was financially successful. He built the first reaper in Pennsylvania, and this was used on the old Yeakel farm in Hereford township. It worked well, and its first practical test was witnessed by upwards of one hundred people. He was the owner of the farm now belonging to his son, Joseph B. In 1855 he moved from Hereford township to No. 319 Hamilton street, Allentown, where he built farm implements of all kinds and descriptions, employing about thirteen men in his shop in Hereford township, and a similar number in Allentown. He was a member of the Evangelical church, and is buried in the Union cemetery at Allentown, being the first man buried there. He married Catharine Elizabeth Brenner, who died Jan. 20, 1875. Their children were: Solomon, deceased; Lydia E., deceased; Susan, of Allentown; Daniel, born 1844, and died the same year; Joseph B., of Allentown; and Simon, of Allentown.

Joseph B. Yeakel, son of Benjamin and Catharine Elizabeth (Brenner) Yeakel, was born on the old family homestead in Hereford township Sept. 7, 1845. He attended the common schools of the neighborhood for a few winters, and in 1855 his parents moved to Allentown, in which town he completed his education. He worked in his father's machine shop some years, and in 1871 he went to White Hall township, Lehigh county, where for thirty-five years he operated a farm of fifty-eight acres. In the spring of 1905 he came to Allentown, now residing in his comfortable home at No. 1321 Linden street. He owns the old Yeakel homestead in Hereford and Upper Hanover township (Montgomery county), consisting of 153 acres. The house now standing was built in 1851 by Benjamin and Catharine Elizabeth Yeakel, and is one of the largest private residences in the county, a part of it being three stories in height and the rest four stories high. It contains twenty-one large rooms. The barn was built in 1816 by Mr. Yeakel's grandfather Jeremiah Yeakel. His farm of a little over fifty acres in Whitehall township, Lehigh county, was sold for $50,000.

Mr. Yeakel is greatly interested in church work, and is a foremost member of Grace United Evangelical Church, Allentown, being one of its liberal supporters. During the erection of the present building Mr. Yeakel subscribed $2,500, and also contributed $1,750 toward the pipe organ, Andrew Carnegie giving $1,000. He is regular in his worship, and is a member of the Sunday-school.

In 1894 Mr. Yeakel made an extended tour of the West, remaining one week each at Salt Lake City, Garden of the Gods, Pike's Peak and Denver, traveling in California, where he remained for two months, spending nine days in the territory of New Mexico, and also visiting old México. He had relatives in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Nebraska and Kansas. These he visited and he frequently referred to his pleasure in meeting his mother's half-sisters and brothers, Mary, Lydia, Caroline (of Holton, Kans.), Sarah Wiest (of Morris, Ill.), Solomon (of Fort Wayne, Ind.) and Jesse Wiest (of Bluffton, Ind.). His aunt Mary, who lived at Bluffton, Ind., aged seventy-five, died three weeks after his visit, his remembrance of her and her kindness during his visit being a source of great pleasure.

HIRAM C. BECHTEL, a resident of Washington township, Berks county, living near Eshbach Crossing, was born April 24, 1851, on the old farm of his grandfather, Gerhard S. Eshbach. He is a descendant of the old Bechtel family which came to America from the German Palatinate.

On Aug. 24, A. D. 1728, eighty Palatinates with their families, in all 205 persons, who shortly before, after a seventy days' voyage, had arrived with the ship "Mortonhouse," from Deal, Captain John Coultas, in the harbor of Philadelphia, appeared in the halls of justice in Philadelphia to render the oath of allegiance to the Crown of England, declaring it to be their intention to settle themselves in Pennsylvania. The company consisted of eighty men, and sixty-nine women over sixteen years of age, and fifty-six children. Among the names of the adults belonging to this company of immigrants we find the name of (I) George Bechtel, the presumable father of Isaac and Gerhard Bechtel, heading the list. Tradition tells us he came from Weinheim, Germany.

The large German family Bible of George Bechtel is yet in existence. The Bible came into the hands of Gerhard Bechtel and is now in the possession of one of his descendants. On the fly-leaf of the Bible is written this note in German:

"Diese Biebel ist gedruckt in Deutschland im Jahr 1720. Im Jahr 1730 ist sie George Bechtel von seinem Vater von Deutschland nach Amerika geschickt worden. Zwischen den Jahren 1750 und 1760 bekam sie Gerhard Bechtel."

In the course of time the early history of the family has been so much effaced and is so much obscured in the mists of the past that a clear conception and an unerring presentation of the facts are now wellnigh impossible. It would give us much satisfaction if our ancestors, from the time they immigrated into this country, had kept a record of their family and church affairs. On the list of immigrants who came in the same ship with George Bechtel we find the names of Noll, Baer, Roth, Stauffer, Latshaw, Dotterer, Huber, Heller, Brunner, all familiar names to us, and whose descendants in part reside with us here in Eastern Pennsylvania.

(II) Isaac Bechtel was a farmer and miller, and had his home in and near Bechtelsville, now in Washington township, Berks county, Pa. Bechtelsville was laid out by his son John S. Bechtel. Isaac Bechtel and his two wives are buried in the old Hereford Mennonite graveyard near Bally, Washington township, Berks county. His tombstone bears the following inscription:

Hier ruhen die gebeine

Isaac Bechtel was twice married, his first marriage being to Esther Stauffer (1757-1805), and his second to Barbara Bitz. There were no children by the latter union. By his first wife he had a family of fourteen: Jacob S., born Oct. 9, 1774 (married Anna W. Bechtel); Mary S., born Sept. 22, 1776 (married Abraham Eshbach); Elizabeth S., born Nov. 14, 1778 (married Peter Eshbach); Nancy S., born Nov. 2, 1780 (married Joseph Reif); Susan S., born Oct. 6, 1782 (married William Johnson); Catherine S., born Oct. 5, 1784 (married John Bahr); John S., born Feb. 21, 1786 (married Maria Hoch); George S., born Feb. 22, 1788 (married a Miss Barto); Sally S., born Dec. 25, 1789 (married Henry Sassaman); Isaac S., born Oct. 18, 1791 (married (first) Polly Sassaman and (second) Betzy Kehl); Polly S., born Aug. 30, 1793 (married Henry Oberholtzer); Abraham S., born July 20, 1795 (married (first) Nancy Bechtel and (second) Hettie Springer); Gerhard S., born May 3, 1797, is mentioned farther on; David S., born Sept. 14, 1799, died Feb. 28, 1800.

(III) Gerhard S. Bechtel, son of Isaac Bechtel, was born May 3, 1797, and died Oct. 8, 1881. By occupation he first learned the milling trade, and afterward was a carpenter, undertaker and farmer. As undertaker he had charge of hundreds of funerals in his time in the lower end of the county. He and his assistants made the coffins by hand as needed. For many years he was landlord of the "Washington Hotel" at Eshbach. He was a member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, and worshipped at St. Joseph's Church, commonly known as Hill Church, in Pike township, Berks county. He is buried in the family lot in the cemetery near the church. Gerhard S. Bechtel was three times married. By his first wife, Maria Erdman, he had four children: Lydia E., born April 2, 1818, died Aug. 2, 1852 (married John M. Stauffer, who was sheriff of Montgomery county from 1859 to 1862, and they had children, Elvina, Jacob B., Mary and Wesley B. Of these, Jacob B. was a soldier in the Civil war and is now a clerk in the adjutant-general's office at Harrisburg, Pa.); Mary E., born Oct. 23, 1821, died Feb. 19, 1878 (married Jesse B. Pennepacker, and had one child, Amos B.); Elizabeth E., born Aug. 4, 1826, died March 15, 1871, married George M. Eshbach, and had children, Mary, Henry, Amanda, Emma, Peter, Jeremiah, Diana, George, Lovina, Jesse and Kate B.; Levi E. is mentioned farther on.

By his second marriage, to Mary H. Fronheiser, Mr. Bechtel had one child, Jesse F. Bechtel, who is fully mentioned elsewhere in this work. To his third marriage, with Christian Gruber, were born three children, Abraham, Amanda and Catharine G., all of whom are deceased.

(IV) Levi E. Bechtel, son of Gerhard S. and Maria (Erdman) Bechtel, was born at Eshbach, Berks county, Dec. 24, 1823, and died Dec. 26, 1905, aged eighty-two years, two days. He is buried at Boyertown, Pa. He was a prosperous man, engaging in several lines of business besides farming, in which he was also successful. He bought an excellent 109-acre farm in Washington township, one mile east of Eshbach, from the William Stauffer estate, and there lived and farmed until 1898, when he retired to a tract which he had improved, along the Schultzville road. He built a stone house on this place in 1887 and occupied it until his death. Mr. Bechtel also owned a forty-one-acre place adjoining his large farm. He conducted undertaking establishments at Eshbach and Gablesville, and was also in the wood and lumber business, cutting down trees; he gave employment to about eight men in this line.

In 1850 Mr. Bechtel married Catharine Cleaver, daughter of Daniel and Susanna (Koch) Cleaver, and granddaughter of Isaac Cleaver. Mrs. Bechtel is now living near her son Hiram, on the Schultzville road, in Washington township. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bechtel: Hiram C.; Amos, who died young; Lovina (married Edward Stauffer, of Bechtelsville); Amanda (married John Fry, of Washington township); Sarah (married John Zuber, of Reading); Mary; Lizzie (married William Moyer, of Reading); Catharine, who died young; Olivia (married to Horace Heins, of Eshbach); Frank, of Philadelphia, where he is engaged as a mechanic (married Emma Renninger); and Edwin C., also a mechanic of Philadelphia, who married Mary Bechtel (not a near relative). Mr. Bechtel and his family were members of the Lutheran Church at Boyertown, of which he served as trustee for some years, being prominent in the church as he was in everything else which interested him.

(V) Hiram C. Bechtel began his education in the Oberholtzer public school, where he attended for two winters. His parents then moved to the Gerhard Bechtel farm at Gablesville, where the family lived for seven years, during which time Hiram C. Bechtel attended school in that neighborhood and went two terms to Isaac B. Hankey's Kallynean Academy, Boyertown. The Bechtels then moved to the adjoining farm, owned by Jacob Bechtel, and after a six years' residence at that place moved to the 109-acre farm in Washington township which Levi E. Bechtel purchased from the William Stauffer estate. When he was eighteen years old Hiram C. Bechtel commenced to learn the millwright's trade, serving his apprenticeship under Frederick Glaes. He was employed at such work for eight years, when he began farming on his father's forty-one-acre tract, cultivating that place for three years, at the end of which time he bought the Jacob Latshaw homestead, which is located on the Schultzville road, near Eshbach. The place consists of six acres of valuable land and a comfortable dwelling, which Mr. Bechtel remodeled in 1893. He has a very attractive home, nicely located.

Mr. Bechtel has worked at his trade for many years, having followed it for seventeen years in the employ of the Wolf Company, of Chambersburg, Pa., his work taking him into New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana. Since 1903 he has been building mills on his own account, commanding the greater share of the patronage in Macungie and the adjacent portions of Lehigh county.

On Jan. 24, 1874, Mr. Bechtel was married to Catharine Funk, daughter of Samuel and Judith (Conrath) Funk, of New Jerusalem, Berks county, and they are the parents of five children: Agnes F., wife of Harry B. Becker, of Fagleysville, Montgomery Co., Pa.; Amos F., unmarried, who follows millwrighting, traveling all over the United States; Annie F.; Alice F., married to Samuel H. Moser, son of Henry Z. Moser; and Ammon F., at home. This family are members of St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church at Boyertown. Mr. Bechtel is a Republican in politics, and in fraternal connection a member of Columbus Lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F., of Chambersburg.

JOEL M. LEIBELSPERGER, merchant and hotel proprietor of Moselem Springs, in Richmond township, Berks county, is one of the most prominent and influential citizens of this section. He is extensively engaged in the mercantile business, having one of the largest and best equipped general stores in the county; while the manner in which he conducts his hotel merits the approval of the respectable people of his community. Mr. Leibelsperger was born in Richmond township, March 30, 1852, son of Jacob D. and Hannah (Merkel) Leibelsperger.

The Leibelsperger family was planted in America by George Adam Leibelsperger, who emigrated to the New World from Germany.

Frederick Leibelsperger, son of George Adam, was a resident of Weisenburg, Lehigh county, Pennsylvania.

Solomon Leibelsperger, son of Frederick, was born in 1791, and died in 1883. He became one of the early settlers of Berks county, and was the owner of much land. A conscientious and just man, and one of public spirit and progress, he took great interest in church and educational matters. In appearance he was tall and of powerful frame, and he possessed great strength and endurance. His wisdom and judgment were recognized, and his advice was sought by men in all walks of life. He married Elizabeth Dunkel, daughter of Jacob Dunkel, and their married life extended over a period of fifty-three years. They were the parents of two sons: Jacob D.; and John D., who also lived in Richmond township.

Jacob D. Leibelsperger, son of Solomon and father of Joel M., was born in 1820, in Richmond township, and his death occurred at his home in 1893. He was the owner of 600 acres of the best land in his township. In 1842, he married Hannah Merkel, daughter of Jacob and Catharine (Kershner) Merkel, of Richmond township, and to their happy union were born the following children: Elizabeth, who died aged five years; Catharine (m. George S. Schaeffer); Amanda (m. August Schaeffer); Hannah (m. Elias Sunday); Joel M.; and John and William, who own the old homestead and are now living retired at Fleetwood, Pennsylvania.

Joel M. Leibelsperger spent his youthful days on his father's farm, and acquired his preliminary education in the district schools near his home. This was supplemented by two years' study in the Keystone State Normal School. In 1882 he entered upon his career as a hotel keeper, and the extensive patronage he enjoys from the traveling public well attests to the superiority of his accommodations and to the courtesy accorded his guests. He began his mercantile business in 1884, and has met with flattering success.

Moselem Springs owes much to Mr. Leibelsperger. He has ever been alive to the interests of his community, and was largely instrumental in making the village the business center of the wealthy agricultural section within a radius of five miles. He it was who built the creamery and the blacksmith shop, and he has constantly enlarged his store to meet the growing demands of the public. He is well read and he takes a deep interest in public education. His tastes do not run along the line of office holding, but at the earnest solicitation of the citizens he served as school director for three years, acting as secretary of the board, and for twenty-three years he has been treasurer of the board. For twenty-one years he has been treasurer of the township. In the spring of 1884 he was appointed postmaster of Moselem Springs, and still holds that office. Beside his store and hotel property Mr. Leibelsperger is the owner of a fine farm of 207 acres, which since 1885 has been tenated by Wilson M. Rahn. He looks after his business, and he wields much influence for good in the community. He is an official in St. Peter's Lutheran Church, in Richmond township, to which his ancestors also belonged. His life has been well-spent and useful, and he enjoys the commendation of the best people in the community. His good acts and many kindnesses will live long after him.

In 1872, Mr. Leibelsperger was united in marriage with Mary Ann Kindt, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Schaeffer) Kindt, of Richmond township. Nine children were born to them, all dying in infancy except the second, Sallie, who lived to the age of four years; and the eighth Adam, born in 1880, who is engaged in the local express business in Reading, and who married Katie Hill, daughter of Charles Hill, of Fleetwood, Pennsylvania.

BENJAMIN NICE, M. D. Among the leading medical practitioners of Berks county, Pa., was Dr. Benjamin Nice, of Hamburg borough, a native of that place, in which he spent his entire life. He was born Aug. 20, 1855, son of Dr. Franklin Benjamin and Elizabeth (Heffner) Nice, and died June 4, 1907.

Dr. Benjamin R. Nice, the progenitor of this family of physicians, in this section, was born April 12, 1794, and died July 14, 1862. He married Margaret, daughter of Henry and Martha Brugler, of New Jersey, in which state he had lived prior to his removal to Hamburg. Dr. Nice was one of the first medical practitioners in Upper Berks county, and his field was large, he continuing in active practice for something over forty years. He and his wife were the parents of these children: Margaret (m. John Sunday); Milton B., born in 1818, died in 1876, was thrice married; John (m. Louisa Harpt); Dr. Franklin Benjamin; Annie (m. Rev. Fred Koch); Dr. George (m. Angelina Bond); Angeline (m. Enoch Koller); and Walter (m. a Miss Beard).

Dr. Franklin Benjamin Nice, father of Dr. Benjamin, was born in 1830, and died June 29, 1905. He began practice in Hamburg, where he was born, in 1852, and successfully continued for a period of fifty-three years, his territory consisting of Hamburg and the township around the borough. He owned considerable real estate, consisting of lands and residence property, and at his death left a handsome fortune. In 1851 Dr. Nice married Elizabeth Heffner, daughter of John and Katie (Gehret) Heffner, and to this union were born two children: Dr. Benjamin; and Lizzie H., who lives with her mother in Hamburg.

Dr. Benjamin Nice's early education was obtained in the public schools of Hamburg, and he graduated from the Hamburg high school. In 1874 he graduated from the scientific course of Ursinus College, and in 1877 from Jefferson Medical College. In 1883 he was a graduate of the Polytechnic Medical College, New York City, and at once he began practice in his native town, where he continued with great success until his decease. A close and careful student, a skilled surgeon, steady-handed, the Doctor won the confidence of the people of the town in the very beginning, and his practice was large and remunerative.

In 1878 Dr. Nice was married to Etta Mickley, who bore him one son, Dr. Frank M., now deceased. Dr. Nice married (second) Ada Derr, daughter of Benneville and Adeline (Wolff) Derr. To this union was born a son.

DERR. Mrs. Nice is a great-granddaughter of John Derr, born April 11, 1774, who died May 24, 1827, aged fifty-three years, one month, thirteen days. His will, made May 18, 1827, was probated Aug. 6th, of the same year, and is on record in Will Book 6, p. 103. The witnesses were John Beiteman and William Smith. John Derr's children were: Israel, Elias and Hannah.

Israel Derr, son of John, was born Jan. 27, 1805, and died Dec. 16, 1861, aged fifty-six years, ten months, nineteen days. His wife, Amelia, was born May 1, 1804, and died June 22, 1875, aged seventy-one years, one month, twenty-one days. Their children were: Amelia, born 1827, married Thomas Samuels, and died in 1856; Benneville, born 1829, died 1880; and Dennes Israel, born 1830, died 1835.

Benneville Derr, son of Israel, born 1829, married Adeline Wolff, and died in 1880. Their daughter, Ada, married Dr. Nice.

MADEIRA. The Madeira or Madery family is one of the old and honored ones to which the city of Reading is indebted for much of its early and subsequent prosperity, made up as it has been of men of sterling worth and sound commercial perceptions. The ancestor of the family in Berks county was Sebastian Madery, who died at Reading in 1775. The exact number of children is not known, but the following are on record: (1) Michael, a soldier in the war of the Revolution, died in 1823. (2) Casper, a soldier in Capt. Will's Company in the Revolution in 1777, with his brother Michael, was a hatter by trade, living on South Ninth street, Reading. He died in 1839, a member of Trinity Lutheran Church. His wife, whose maiden name was Fisher, bore him children as follows: William, 1796-1882 (who married (first) Elizabeth Briner, had two children—Peter, born May 16, 1825, and Franklin; and (second) Catharine Stahl, and had five children—Eliza; Phoebe; Robert; James Rankin and Henry, the last named killed in the battle of Fair Oaks); Henry, who lived and died in Brooklyn, N. Y., the father of three sons and one daughter; Betzey, who married Frederick Jennings; Mrs. Nachtreib; and Mrs. William Wilson. (3) Samuel settled in Windsor, Berks county, and died in 1832. He married Elizabeth Shepp, daughter of Daniel Shepp, and had children: Catharine, William, Sarah, Daniel, John Hafer (April 17, 1801—July 26, 1881, married Margaret Rahn, 1803-1877), Matilda, Susanna, Peggy, Michael, Samuel and Eliza. (4) Nicholas is mentioned below.

Nicholas Madeira, son of Sebastian, was born in the borough of Reading, and subsequently acquired about 300 acres of land in the northern part of the town, adjoining and partly embraced in the Charles Evans cemetery. He served as a soldier in 1782. He was twice married. By his first wife, Margaretha Yeich, of Centre township, he had one son, Nicholas. He married (second) Rebecca Reeser, and they had children, Angelia, William, James and Ellen.

Nicholas Madeira, son of Nicholas and Margaretha, became a successful farmer in Maiden-creek township, and for fifteen years prior to his death in June, 1884, he lived retired. He married Anna Keller, daughter of George and Polly (Spaydt) Keller, the former of Ruscombmanor and the latter of Rockland township. To this union were born: James; Levi; Mary, wife of Samuel Fox, a farmer of Muhlenberg township; Angelina, wife of August Bierman, of Allentown, Pa.; Eliza, widow of Aaron Leinbach, of Reading; Nicholas, a farmer and drover of Muhlenberg township; Edwin, a painter, of Mahanoy City; Samuel, a tinsmith at Blandon; Franklin, of Blandon; Susanna; Lewis; and Clara, wife of Daniel Dunkel, of Hamburg.

Levi Madeira, the well known stove and tinware merchant of Fleetwood, Pa., was born Sept. 4, 1838, in Maiden-creek township, son of Nicholas Madeira. He received but a scant education. At the age of five years he went to live with the Gring family of Muhlenberg township, and in 1853 after continuing there for ten years, returned home to assist his father. After remaining two years under the parental roof he learned the trade of tinsmith with Henry Bennethum, at the corner of Fifth and Canal streets. He served an apprenticeship of two and one-half years and then began traveling through Berks, Lehigh, Schuylkill and Carbon counties, repairing tinware. During the fall of 1858 he worked for John Wagonhorst, and then returned to Henry Bennethum for six months. At the end of that time he went to work at Macungie, Lehigh county, remaining for two years, and in 1862 went to Allentown. In 1863 Mr. Madeira went to Washington, N. J., where he worked for Jacob and Joseph Johnson until 1865, when he began work for the government in the military road and quartermaster's departments, and after the close of the war settled in Fleetwood. On July 28, 1865, he purchased the fixtures of William Moyer, the stove and tinware dealer, and at once he began to prosper. He has continued successfully in this business to the present time, carrying a full line of stoves, tinware and pumps. In politics Mr. Madeira is an uncompromising Republican. He is a large property owner, and besides his store building on Main street, owns a large brick residence, in which he lives; a fine farm of 101 acres in Maiden-creek township; an excellent farm of eighty-six acres near the Pumping Station in Ontelaunee township; a tract of five acres upon which is situated a tenant house, at Walnuttown, Richmond; a tenant house near Blandon, four valuable dwellings near Blandon; and one tenant house in Fleetwood.

On May 20, 1871, Mr. Madeira married Miss Ella R. Deysher, daughter of Gideon and Sybilla (Rothermel) Deysher, of Walnuttown, Richmond township, and to this union were born these children: Annie S., wife of Jacob R. Dunkel, of Blandon; Lee D., a silk manufacturer at Hamburg; and Sallie E., who is employed in her brother's silk mill as forelady. Mr. Madeira's family are members of the Reformed Church.

Lee Deysher Madeira, son of Levi, and one of the leading business men of Hamburg, where he is engaged as a silk manufacturer, was born at Fleetwood, Sept. 15, 1877. He was educated in the public schools of Hamburg and later attended the Keystone State Normal School, and the Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) Business College, graduating at the latter institution in 1896. He then accepted a position with the Pennsylvania Silk Company, as bookkeeper, and remained with that firm for six years, in the meantime becoming well acquainted with the methods of conducting the business. His ability was recognized by the company and he was made superintendent of the mills at Carlisle belonging to this firm, where he continued for six months or until 1902, when he came to Hamburg and promoted the Hamburg Silk Company, of which he is manager. This company has a paid up capital of $25,000. The interests are divided into four equal shares among the following well known business men: Thomas F. Mabery, President; Henry J. Diener, vice president; Lee D. Madeira, secretary; and Irwin A. Diener, treasurer. The firm manufactures a superior quality of silk which is shipped to New York, and is disposed of through a commission house. Mr. Madeira is also operating a silk mill for Thomas Mabery which is situated at Binghamton, New York.

REV. ANSON WILLIAM LINDENMUTH, pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Congregation, comprising the Amityville-Friedensburg parish, is one of the younger of the successful ministers of his faith in this part of the State. He was born in Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, near Hamburg, Berks county, May 30, 1874, son of Joseph and Sarah (Kauffman) Lindenmuth.

The Lindenmuth family has long resided in Berks county, and its members have been characterized by industry and honesty, conscientious fidelity to duty, and untiring labor in religious and public life.

(I) Michael Lindenmuth came from the German Palatinate to America, qualifying at Philadelphia, Sept. 22, 1752. Soon thereafter it appears that he located in Windsor township, Berks county. In 1790 he settled in that part of Bern township, now Tilden. In the Pennsylvania Archives his name is given as Johan Michael, and on his tombstone it is John Michael, while in the Federal Government records of the Revolutionary war he is referred to as Colonel Michael. He was a leading figure in Berks county in the struggle for independence. On May 6, 1780, he addressed a letter to the council in reference to the murder of some of the inhabitants beyond the Blue Mountain, and the moving of certain families to the Little Schuylkill. He asked for arms from the stores at Reading for self defense. On the 10th, President Reed replied, stating that he had directed Colonel Morgan to supply the necessary arms. Michael Lindenmuth was Colonel of the 4th Battalion of Berks county militia. By the following action of the Supreme Executive Council, Dec. 31, 1778, it would appear that Col. Michael Lindenmuth and his Battalion were in active service outside of the county: "Ordered that the Secretary write to the Lieutenant of Berks County to call upon Colonel Lindenmuth or his Lieutenant-Colonel, stationed last summer at Fort Jenkins, in Northumberland, for five rifles taken fom one Webb, charged with disaffection." In the Stoever records of marriage in western Berks county is found that on June 17, 1760, Michael Lindenmuth married Maria Eva Noecker. In the will of Martin Noecker (see Pennsylvania Historical Society, Book 365, Page 521) is this item: "To the children of Michael and Magdalena Lindenmuth, the children of my deceased daughter Eve, deceased wife of Michael Lindenmuth," whence it would appear that Magdalena was his second wife. In the will of Margaret, widow of Eberhart Geschwind, of Bern township, is this reference: "I give and bequeath unto my daughter Catharine, wife of Michael Lindenmuth," who apparently was the third wife of Michael Lindenmuth. The number of his children is not known, but by his wife Catharine he had a son John Jacob, mentioned below. In a diary left by Colonel Michael Lindenmuth (but subsequently destroyed by his children) it was stated that the Government owed him a large sum of money which he had advanced the commissary department, and for the services of himself and men. While enroute to Washington for settlement he died at Baltimore. The delay in the settlement had ruined him financially.

(II) John Jacob Lindenmuth was born Aug. 24, 1766, and died Sept. 17, 1839. His wife, Catharine, was born Nov. 22, 1768, and died April 17, 1852, and both are buried at Hamburg. His tombstone inscription says he was the father of sixteen children. Among these were: John; Thomas, who moved West; George, who was killed in the stone quarry at Bern Station; and Samuel, who died in 1870, at his home in Stouchsburg, the father of Sarah, Catharine, Mary, Lydia, Samuel (who had a daughter Agnes), Nathaniel, Elizabeth and John.

(III) John Lindenmuth, son of John Jacob and Catharine, was born in the vicinity of Hamburg, Aug. 6, 1788, and died Sept. 3, 1852, and is buried at St. Michael's Church. He was employed at farm labor in what is now Tilden township. He married Catharine Osenbach (born Dec. 16, 1792, died Sept. 15, 1877) and their children were: John, Joseph, Emanuel, Levi, Hettie, who married Benneville Miller; Elizabeth, who married George Hinkel; Matilda, of Hamburg, widow of Isaac Ketner; Sarah, who married Daniel Althouse, and lives in Mohrsville; and Sallie and Jacob, who both died in infancy.

(IV) Joseph Lindenmuth, son of John and Catharine (Osenbach), was born in Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, Feb. 7, 1825, and died upon his farm in the same township, June 25, 1904. By trade he was a shoemaker and he followed that as an occupation until 1892, after which he devoted his entire time to farming, which he had followed before on a small scale in connection with his trade. He lived first near St. Michael's Church, and then moved to a place one mile north of Wagner's Hotel. After 1892 he lived on his farm of 114 acres near St. Michael's Church. He was prosperous, and well-known in his township. Mr. Lindenmuth was twice married. By his first wife, Caroline Marbarger (1830-1855), he had a son who died when a child. He married (second) Sarah Kauffmann, daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Rentschler) Kauffmann, of Tilden township. Their children were: Elmira (m. Samuel Winters, of Kutztown); Mary Matilda (m. Henry W. Horning, of Reading); Amelia (m. Eusebius Miller, of Shoemakersville); Franklin K., of Tilden township; Alma Fayetta (m. George Stoudt, of Shartlesville); Rev. Anson William; and Katie, who died in infancy.

(V) Rev. Anson W. Lindenmuth passed his early days on his father's farm, being there trained in the lessons of industry and integrity that have been such factors in the success of his later years. In the public schools he early showed his love of learning, and before he was fifteen had passed an examination for a teacher's certificate. At the age of seventeen he was granted a certificate to teach, and was elected to Fisher's school, at Bern Station. The following term he taught Miller's school, and then Dunkel's, all in the same township, after which he went to Lancaster county, and taught two terms. In the spring of 1894, he enrolled at the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, but the following winter again engaged in teaching. In the spring of 1895 he again entered the Normal, and was admitted to the senior class, graduating in the spring of 1896. For two terms after his graduation he taught at Pleasant Hill, Lancaster county. During the last year he spent in teaching in Lancaster county, he studied Greek and Latin under the Rev. A. W. Leibensperger, now associate pastor of Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church, Lebanon. This completed his preparation for college, and in the fall of 1898 he entered Muhlenberg College, graduating with first honors in 1902, and being duly assigned the valedictory oration. He won the Amos Ettinger honor medal—a gold star containing the monogram of Muhlenberg College, pendant from a bar inscribed "Amos Ettinger Honor." The Professor of German presented him with a thirty-volume set of the German classics for his meritorious work in that department.

In the fall of 1902 Mr. Lindenmuth entered the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, and graduated June 13, 1905. During the spring of 1903 he was absent on leave to act as teacher of Latin and Greek in the Keystone State Normal School. His ordination took place in Holy Trinity Church, Lancaster, June 19, 1905.

In June, 1904, a year before his graduation from the Theological Seminary, he became supply pastor and instructor of the catechetical class of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church at Amityville, supplying all the pulpits in the parish. This led to his election to the parish March 11, 1905. He accepted the unanimous call, and took charge on June 25th following.

On June 17, 1896, the Rev. Mr. Lindenmuth was married to Lizzie S. Moll, daughter of the late Daniel Moll, former owner of the Strausstown Carriage Works. Four children have come to bless this union, one of whom, Ruth, has entered into rest. The others are: Marian, Luther Moll and Anson W., Jr. Both the Rev. Mr. Lindenmuth and his wife are popular in the parish, where their devotion to the people and their sincerity and truth are well known.

URIAS M. SCHUCKER, a well-known resident of Richmond township, resides in one of the handsome residences of the locality, which is beautifully situated in the midst of a well cultivated farm, about four miles northwest of Kutztown, Pa. Mr. Schucker was born April 22, 1854, on the Schucker homestead not far from where he now resides.

John Schucker, the great-grandfather of Urias, owned a farm of 120 acres in Richmond township. He married Elizabeth Stoudt and they had children as follows: John, Samuel, Jacob, David, Rebecca and Catherine. Of this family Jacob, born in 1799, was a resident of Richmond township, and the owner of a small tract of land on the Eastern Road, two miles east of Kutztown, Pa. He married Polly Ressler, born in 1802, who died in 1876, his death having occurred in 1858, and they were the parents of nine children, namely: John, who died in early youth; Samuel; Reuben; Jacob; William; Adam; Mary, who died at the age of twenty-three years; Orlando, and Joel.

Samuel Schucker, father of U. M., who died in 1904, was a carpenter by trade. He married Susannah Merkel, daughter of Peter Merkel, and they became the parents of: Urias; Cyrus; Alfred; Samuel; Louisa, who married Christian Luppold, a merchant of Reading, Pa.; Clara, who married John Bartlet, of Blandon, Pa.; Peter; Maurice, and Sarah and Lucy who are single and live on the old homestead of 130 acres of fertile and productive land.

Urias M. Schucker was educated in the public schools of his native township, and since attaining his majority has been engaged in agricultural pursuits, his fine farm of forty-seven acres being one of the most fertile in the township. Furnished with modern, substantial buildings and the latest and most improved farming machinery, it is a model of neatness and order. Mr. Schucker has the esteem of the entire community. A Democrat in politics, he takes a good citizen's interest in elections, but has never desired office for himself, preferring to devote his time and attention to his farm. He and his wife are members of the Reformed Church, which she attends in Perry township (Zion's Church), and he at St. John's Church, Kutztown.

Mr. Schucker was married (first) Oct. 11, 1877, to Amanda Wanner, and she died the same year without issue. Mr. Schucker's second marriage was to Carolina Keim, widow of Abraham Reber, by whom she had one son,—John Reber, of Reading. Mrs. Schucker was born Jan. 11, 1854, daughter of John Keim, of Richmond township, and who was born in Perry township, Sept. 5, 1824. His education was somewhat limited, as the free schools were not then established as they are at present. When eighteen years of age he went to learn the trade of shoemaker, which he followed for thirteen years. On Sept. 9, 1845, he married Lovina Becker, daughter of John Becker, and to them were born: Jerry, Emma, Caroline, Isabella, John and Alfred.

JAMES H. HEIN. This enterprising young agriculturist of Berks county, Pa., who is extensively engaged in cultivating the soil of Mengels Dale, Perry township, was born Feb. 8, 1881, in Windsor township, son of Francis and Lydia (Wessner) Hein.

Jesse Hein, grandfather of James H., was a shoemaker by trade, and was reared in Albany township, but later removed to Windsor township, living in the vicinity of St. Paul's Church, of which he was a member. He married a Miss Smith, and they were the parents of twelve children. Francis Hein, father of James H., was a tenant farmer in Greenwich township, and for many years lived in the neighborhood of Klinesville, Berks county. He married Lydia Wessner, and to this union were born children as follows: Agnes, William, Albert, James, Cora, Annie, Oscar, Lydia and Gertie.

James H. Hein received his education in the common schools of Perry township, which he attended until seventeen years of age, and was reared on the farm, at the age of twenty-one years learning the blacksmith trade from his brother Albert of Lenhartsville, Pa., for whom he worked two years. After marriage he located on the present farm of 196 acres received by his wife as an inheritance, and here has continued successfully to the present time. The land is fertile and well cultivated and is improved with good substantial buildings. Mr. Hein is honest and industrious, and is considered one of the representative young farmers of Perry township. He and his wife attend Zion's Reformed Church.

Mr. Hein married October 22, 1904, Miss Mary M. Mengel, daughter of James and Harriet (Strausser) Mengel, and to this union one daughter has been born,—Mabel Harriet. Mrs. Hein was one of a family of five children, the others being: Lessouri, who died in infancy; Marguerite, who married Sassaman Schappell; Violetta, the wife of James Stitzel, and Miss Minnie I., who lives with her sister, Mrs. Hein.

WILLIAM R. KEIM, one of the successful fruit growers of Douglass township, Berks county, comes of a family that has given able and useful citizens to the Commonwealth.

The early home of the Keim family was in the Rhine country in Germany. Some 687 years before the birth of the American emigrant of the family lived one Gottschalk Keim, the direct ancestor of Ludwig Hercourt Keim, an officer in the "Thirty Years War," serving under Bernhard von Weimer, and born near Speier, about 1598. In 1638 he participated in the storming and capture of Briesbach, and he died after 1662.

George Keim, son of Ludwig Hercourt, was born about 1623, and was a merchant. George Keim and a Joseph Keim are recorded as living at Speier in 1690.

Johann Keim, son of George, was born about 1647.

Johannes Keim, son of Johann, was born near Speier about 1675. He was ruined in the French invasion of the Palatinate (1688-1697), and visited the New World (Pennsylvania) on a prospecting tour in 1698. He returned to Germany about 1701, and was there married in 1706. The next year (1707) he returned to Pennsylvania and located at Germantown, where he remained until the following year, when he settled in the wilderness on the Manatawny, in Oley township, Berks county. His first child was born at Oley in 1708. The earliest autograph manuscript relating to the Keims in America (so far as is known) consists of two much faded, time-worn and broken sheets of paper in German script by the hand of Johannes (Hans) Keim. It must have been written about 1732, as it ends with that year, and it was evidently drawn up for the benefit of the fourth child and third son, Johannes Nicholas Keim, who gave it to his son John. This record is now held by the family of the late Daniel May Keim, of Bristol, Mr. Keim having obtained it from his brother, Hon. George M. Keim, a zealous collector of data pertaining to the family history. The text of the paper is as follows:

"Ich Johannes Keim hab mich verheiratat in dem jahr 1706, viertzen tag von Michels.

"Katarina, born on Michels Day 1708. (Later in another hand writing has been added '1793, den 8 Mai begraben.')

"Und in dem jahr, 1711, vier Wochten von Ostern ist mein sohn Johannes zur welt geboren.

"Stephen, born March 28, 1717.

"Hantz Nickel, April 2, 1719.

"Elizabet, February, 1723.

"Jacob, October, 1724.

"Und in dem jahr 1731 den ersten tag in dem jahr 1731 habe ich meine zweihe frau zur ehe genommen.

"Und in dem jahr 1732 den 27 Aprill is meiner sohn Henrig zur welt geboren."

All these children were born on the Manatawny Creek, near its headwaters, in what was known as Oley in later years, in Berks county, but then in Philadelphia county. It was about a half mile from the present village of Pleasantville, and fifteen miles southeast of Reading. The Christian name of the second wife, as given in the will, was Maria Elizabeth. The will of Johannes Keim refers to "All my six children from my first wife." In another part of the same document concerning bequests to his second wife he provides "My wife, charged with ten small children." (Will probated at Reading, Jan. 1, 1754). It is therefore established beyond question that he had sixteen children. Through a "release of John Keim to George Keim, etc., April 29, 1762" the names of the following children of the second marriage are obtained: Heinrich; George; Conrad; Maria (m. Jacob Yoder); Barbara (m. Michael Witman); and Susanna (m. Frederick Huft)—"Heirs and representatives of John Keim, late of Oley in the County of Berks and Province of Pennsylvania deceased." The signatures to all papers where the names are spelled "Kihm" in the text are clearly Keim in German or English script.

George Keim, grandson of Johannes and grandfather of William R., was born April 10, 1776, and died July 11, 1859. He owned a large farm near Pikeville, now the property of Moses Eberhart (the Eberharts and Keims are intermarried). In 1805 Mr. Keim married Susanna Mensch, born April 10, 1780, and died Aug. 24, 1865, after fifty-four years of wedded life. Both Mr. and Mrs. Keim are buried in a private burial ground on their farm, located in the orchard back of the barn. Of their ten children nine were living at the time the mother died, at which time there were also forty-seven grand-children and two great-grandchildren. The nine were: John, William, Israel, George, Joel M., Benneville, Susanna, Elizabeth and Sally Ann. George Keim had a sister Susanna, 1775-1846, who married George Oyster, 1762-1848.

Joel M. Keim, son of George, was born in Pike township, Berks county, and died in Douglass township, aged eighty-four years. He was a tanner in his earlier life, and was employed at different places, but later he took up farming, and lived many years in Pike township. The last six years of his life he passed in Douglass township at the home of his son William R. His farm of seventy-eight acres in Pike township is known as the Keim farm. In politics he was a Democrat, and efficiently filled the offices of school director and supervisor in Pike township for a number of years. Both he and his wife are buried at Hill Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. He married Catharine Rohrbach, who was born in District township, daughter of Daniel Rohrbach. She is still living, now aged eighty-nine years, and makes her home with her daughter-in-law at Hill Church. Their children were: James, a farmer in Pike township; Augustus, deceased, a farmer in Douglass township; Samuel, unmarried, and living with William R.; William R.; and Katie, who died aged about seventeen years.

William R. Keim was born near Lobachsville, in Pike township, Jan. 29, 1858, and was educated in the schools of his native township. His practical training for life's affairs he acquired on the home farm. At the age of seventeen he learned the tinsmith's trade, but never followed it to any extent. He began farming for himself in 1880, continuing for six years, and in addition he attended the Philadelphia markets once or twice a week. From 1886 to 1889 he worked as a molder in the Colebrookdale foundry. Since the spring of 1890 he has been farming. For nine years he was a tenant farmer on different farms in Douglass township. In the spring of 1899 he moved to his present tract, located in the extreme northeast end of Douglass township. It consists of sixty-four acres, and is known as the John Mauger farm, though originally a part of the Behr estate for one hundred years, Mrs. Mauger having been born a Behr. Mr. Keim is a pomologist, taking great interest in fruit growing, and has about 1800 peach trees, 600 now (1909) being in bearing condition. He also has 140 apple trees that he planted in 1900. His farm is in an excellent state of cultivation, and he has a reputation for thorough understanding of his work.

In politics Mr. Keim is a Democrat, and he has been active in his party's interest. He served as supervisor of Douglass township for six years, and is very influential in Lower Berks county. He and his family are Lutheran members of the church at Lobachsville.

On April 28, 1884, Mr. Keim married Emma, daughter of Thomas and Catharine (Weidner) Weider, the former of whom was a "Herrenhooter" from Bethlehem, belonging to the Moravian Church. (His son Thomas was a farmer in Spring township). Two sons and one daughter have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Keim, namely: Milton W., a bookkeeper in the service of the Bell Telephone Company, Philadelphia, is married to a Miss Hare, of Nova Scotia; Edwin W. is a merchant at Gilbertsville; and Emma C. is at home.

GEORGE S. WEIDENHAMMER, a well-known and prosperous farmer, living about three-quarters of a mile north of Moselem Springs, on the old Leibelsperger homestead, was born Oct. 18, 1851, on the original Weidenhammer homestead, about the same distance north of Moselem Springs on the Easton road.

The progenitor of the Weidenhammer family in this country was Johannes Weidenhammer, born Nov. 14, 1726, in Germany. He was married to Margaret Magdalena Eblinger in 1750, and died Aug. 3, 1804, in his seventy-eighth year and the fifty-fourth year of his marriage, his wife, who was born in 1729, passing away in April, 1812, when eighty-three years old. They were survived by five sons and four daughters, twenty-seven grandchildren and forty-eight great-grandchildren. Of the children of Johannes, George was born July 17, 1761, and died May 5, 1807, his remains, like those of the numerous other members of this family, being interred in Moselem Lutheran cemetery. He was married to Catherine Heberacker, and among their children was John, the grandfather of George S.

John Weidenhammer was a foremost citizen of Richmond township, owning 325 acres of the best land in the locality. He was a true friend of the poor, having at the time of his death about a dozen tenant houses on his farm in which lived the needy whom he helped to support both as an individual and as an overseer of the poor of Berks county, no man ever serving an office more acceptably. His funeral, which was a large one, was largely attended by the people of the community, especially by those to whom he had been a lifelong friend and benefactor. Mr. Weidenhammer married Sarah Ganser, and to this union were born: George, of Richmond township; Reuben; Kate, who married John Adam; Jacob, a farmer of Richmond township, and later of Reading; Adam, who for many years conducted the store and hotel at Moselem Springs; Susan, who married John Gehret; Annie, the wife of Benneville Kline; and John, who made his home with his brother Reuben, died single.

Reuben Weidenhammer, born Sept. 2, 1816, who died July 7, 1887, was an extensive farmer of Richmond township, operating on the old Weidenhammer homestead.

He was a man of influence in his community and was greatly esteemed and respected by all with whom he came into contact. In politics he was one of the first to embrace the principles of the Republican party in Berks county, was a delegate to numerous conventions, and served the township in most of its public offices. He and his family were consistent members of the Moselem Lutheran Church. Mr. Weidenhammer married Hannah Smith, daughter of John Smith of Ruscombmanor township, and these children were born to this union: James, a retired grain and lumber merchant, and owner of the original Weidenhammer homestead, resides at Kutztown; Matilda, deceased; Sarah, the wife of Reuben Sell, a well to do farmer of Richmond township; George S.; Mary, wife of Cyranius Kutz, deceased; Amos, the well-known merchant at Farmington, in Maxatawny township; Ellen, the wife of Frank Seidel, of Reading; and Lizzie, who is single and lives with her sister, Mrs. Sell.

George S. Weidenhammer lived at home until thirty-seven years of age, having received his education in the public schools of his native township and in the Kutztown Normal School which he attended for several sessions when John S. Ermentrout was principal, having for a schoolmate Frank K. Flood, of Reading. He was married Dec. 2, 1872, to Sarah M. Stoudt, daughter of Joel and Eliza (Rickenbach) Stoudt of Ontelaunee township, and to this union were born children as follows: Laura; John and Linnie, twins, both died in infancy; Lizzie M., who also died in infancy; Carrie, who married William Prizer, a railroad man of Reading; Sallie, the wife of William Schlegel, a machinist of Fleetwood; Oliver, the husband of Rosie Shalters of Moselem; Jennie, who married John Bieber, a moulder of Reading; Mattie F., the wife of Charles Bast, a farmer of near Kutztown; Ruth B.; Charlotte M.; Solon, and Susannah May, at home with their parents.

After his marriage Mr. Weidenhammer removed to his present farm, where he has since resided, extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits. He is a stanch supporter of the Republican party, and has been elected by his fellow citizens to be a delegate to many conventions, and to other positions of trust and honor. He and his children are members of Moselem Lutheran Church, while his wife belongs to the Reformed denomination. Mr. Weidenhammer is much esteemed in his community, where all of his life has been spent.

JEFFERSON T. GOOD, a prominent business man of the borough of Womelsdorf, Berks county, Pa., of which he is serving as a councilman, was born March 19, 1871, near Mount Joy, Lancaster county, son of Jefferson T. and Catherine (Kaylor) Good.

Jacob G. Good, the grandfather of Jefferson T. Jr., was born in Rapho township, where he spent his life in carpentering and farming, and where he died in the house in which he had commenced housekeeping and which he had built, at the age of sixty-seven years in 1888. He owned a small farm of forty acres, and was highly esteemed in his community. Mr. Good was buried at Mt. Joy cemetery, Bishop Jacob Brubaker of the Mennonite Church preaching his funeral sermon. He was for many years a school director, also holding other township offices, and in his death the community lost an intelligent, valuable citizen. Mr. Good married Catherine Gantz, and to this union there were born six children: Jefferson T., Sr.; Monroe, of Allentown; Aaron, of Elizabethtown; Almira, who married James Hamilton of Lebanon; Henry, of Ida Grove, Ia.; and Albert C., who died at Ida Grove, Ia., at the age of twenty-seven years.

Jefferson T. Good, Sr., was born in 1842 in Rapho township, Lancaster county, where he died Nov. 20, 1870, having been engaged in school-teaching for five terms at the time of his death. Mr. Good was buried at Mount Joy cemetery. He was a useful and exemplary citizen, and had hosts of friends throughout his community. Mr. Good married Catherine Kaylor, born in 1840, who now resides at Bainbridge, Lancaster county, being well preserved in body and mind, and has been again married, her husband being James Rutherford. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Good: Lizzie, who married Wesley Hauseal, of Bainbridge, a quarryman; and Jefferson T., Jr.

Jefferson T. Good was educated in the schools of Rapho township and the Mount Joy High school, which he left at the age of seventeen years, and then spent three years in work upon the farm. In 1891 he learned the baking trade at Middletown, Dauphin county, with C. H. Baker, with whom he continued for five years, and in 1896 located in Womelsdorf, where he established himself in the baking business, which he has carried on very successfully to the present time. Mr. Good employs seven assistants, two teams and a commissioned wagon, and his cakes, pretzels, bread and pastry find a ready sale throughout the surrounding country. His plant is furnished with the latest improved machinery, and measures are taken to insure strict cleanliness and purity.

Mr. Good is a stanch Republican, and in 1905 his fellow citizens honored him by electing him to the office of borough councilman, and he was council president for one year. Since Jan. 1, 1906, he has served as one of the county registers of vital statistics, to which position he was appointed by Health Commissioner of Pennsylvania Dixon. Fraternally Mr. Good is connected with Elizabethtown Lodge No. 128, I. O. O. F. He and his family are Lutheran members of St. Peter's Church, of Middletown, Pa.

On May 21, 1898, Mr. Good was united in marriage with Emma Fallstrom, daughter of Charles and Christina (Lawson) Fallstrom, of Middletown.

CLOYD W. BORDNER, liveryman and horse dealer of Womelsdorf, Berks county, was born Sept. 27, 1874, in Mount Aetna, this county, son of Isaac Bordner, a prominent citizen of that locality.

Mr. Bordner received a liberal education in the public schools of his native district, attending until he was twenty years old. He was trained to assist in his father's general store at Mount Aetna, and continued to work for his father until he was twenty-five years old. In 1900 he removed to Womelsdorf to engage in the buying and selling of horses, a line of enterprise which he has since followed successfully. Mr. Bordner handles over a thousand head a year, purchasing his horses throughout the Western States, where he goes from twelve to fifteen times a year. During 1906 (his banner year thus far) he shipped seventeen car-loads in to Womelsdorf, where he disposes of them at the Sale & Exchange House (at the "Seltzer Hotel"). He has frequent public sales, and is widely known as a reputable dealer. He also ships to Reading, Philadelphia and New York City. In connection with this branch of the business Mr. Bordner conducts a livery business of growing proportions, and his standing in both branches is unquestioned.

On Dec. 24, 1889, Mr. Bordner married Miss Minnie Smaltz, daughter of John and Sarah (Mays) Smaltz, and granddaughter of John and Theresa (Spatz) Smaltz; the grandfather farmed on the Smaltz homestead in Richland, Lebanon county, Pa. Mrs. Bordner has been well educated, having attended the public schools of Marion township, Berks county, and later Palatinate College, at Myerstown, Pa. She is fond of horses and has excellent judgment in that line, proving of considerable help to her husband in his business transactions. Mr. and Mrs. Bordner have traveled extensively. They are Reformed members of Zion's Union Church of Womelsdorf. In political opinion he is a Democrat.

JOHN Y. WEIDNER, of Mohnton, Pa., was born Aug. 3, 1846, at Sinking Spring, Berks county, son of Obadiah and Hannah (Yocum) Weidner.

Obadiah Weidner was born Feb. 17, 1817, in Rockland township, and died in Boyertown, in the thirty-third year of his age. For some years he lived near Sinking Spring, and later removed to the village, where he conducted a restaurant. On Feb. 1, 1842, he was married to Hannah Yocum, born Aug. 21, 1821, who died Sept. 2, 1897, daughter of Nicholas and Catherine (Seidel) Yocum, and to them were born these children: Anna Eliza, born Oct. 11, 1842, died single; Catherine, born Nov. 8, 1844, married John Marks, of Cumru township; and John Y.

John Y. Weidner attended the Cumru township schools, which he left at the age of eighteen years, obtaining a fair business education. In 1865 he located in Mohnton, where he has resided to the present time, with the exception of four years when he farmed the Yocum property and dealt in ice. On first locating in Mohnton, Mr. Weidner engaged in the mercantile business at the northeast corner of Church street and Wyomissing avenue, but after three years purchased the house now owned by his son-in-law, Martin D. Grill, where he remained for four years. Mr. Weidner was the first man to handle Angelica ice, starting at the old forge. In 1882, after returning to Mohnton, he built a large ice-house, 40x50 feet, and engaged extensively in the ice business, which he successfully continued until 1900, when he leased his plant to the Reading Cold Storage Company. For some years after returning to Mohnton, Mr. Weidner conducted a general feed store with his mercantile business, and in 1901 engaged in the sawmill business, his mill being on the Wyomissing creek at Mohnton, where he employs six men and does a very flourishing business.

Mr. Weidner has been as prominent in public life as he has been in the business world. He is well known as an unswerving Republican, was assessor of his township in 1884, 1885 and 1886, and in the latter year he was elected tax assessor of Cumru township, a most responsible position. This he filled for a full term of three years with entire satisfaction to all concerned. In 1896 Mr. Weidner was appointed postmaster of Mohnton by President McKinley, and has since been twice reappointed. He was first appointed under President Harrison, but owing to the controversy between Postmaster-General John Wanamaker and the Republican organization of Pennsylvania he was not commissioned until President McKinley's administration. Mr. Weidner and his family are members of Zion's U. E. Church of Mohnton.

On Feb. 8, 1866, Mr. Weidner was married to Catherine Hornberger, daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Spatz) Hornberger, born May 23, 1846, and to this union there were born: Emma, born Nov. 15, 1867, died in her second year; Maggie, born Oct. 10, 1869, who is a mute, is intelligent, beautiful and is much interested in her church; Lizzie H., born Oct. 1, 1872, married Hiram J. Bigony, a well-known business man of Mohnton, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume; Hannah R., born Aug. 27, 1875, married Martin D. Grill, a school teacher of Cumru township; and Kate A., born May 21, 1883, married Charles S. Richwein, also a school teacher of the township.

ADAM F. MOYER, one of Lower Heidelberg's most highly esteemed citizens, who is now living retired at Wernersville, Pa., is a veteran of the Civil war, throughout which he served bravely and faithfully. He was born Nov. 22, 1838, son of Jacob and Catharine (Fox) Moyer.

Daniel Moyer, grandfather of Adam F., was a resident of Spring township, Berks county, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits. He had a family of seven sons: Henry; Jacob; Daniel; Isaac; William; Abraham; and John.

Jacob Moyer, father of Adam F., was born in Alsace township, Berks county, but spent all of his life in Spring township, where he died in April, 1877, after a long and useful life there. He is buried at Hain's Church. Mr. Moyer married Catharine Fox, and to this union there were born the following children: Sarah; Henry; Adam F.; Isaac; Jacob; Wallace; and Solomon.

Adam F. Moyer attended the schools of Lower Heidelberg and Spring townships, after leaving which he engaged in farm work. While thus engaged, the Civil war broke out, and on July 30, 1861, he enlisted from Berks county, and was mustered into the United States service at Reading, Pa., in Company L, 1st Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, to serve three years under Captain J. A. Hoffeditz and Colonel George D. Bayard. He shared the fortunes of the regiment in the battles of Drainsville, Dec. 20, 1861; Swashburg, June 12, 1861; Woodstock, June 2, 1861; Harrisonburg, June 6, 1862; Rapidan, July 7, 1862, where he was injured by his horse falling upon him, breaking his right arm, the horse having been shot from under him. At another time he was slightly wounded, but remained with his regiment all the time, and engaged at Cedar Mountain, Aug. 9, 1862; Beverly Ford, Aug. 1, 1862; Thoroughfare Gap, Aug. 20, 1862; Bull Run, Aug. 30, 1862; Fredericksburg, Dec. 13, 1862; Brandy Station, June 9, 1863; Beverly Ford, June 9, 1863; Gettysburg, July 1-3, 1863; Shepherdstown, July 16, 1863; Rappahannock, Aug. 13, 1863; Mine Kern, Nov. 7, 1863; and New Hope Church, Nov. 28, 1863. He was discharged Dec. 31, 1863, at Warrington, Va., and re-enlisted as a veteran in the same company and regiment under Capt. H. Gaul and Col. D. Gardner, to serve three years or during the war, and was engaged at Todd's Tavern, May 8, 1864; Ashland, May 11-30, 1864; Yellow Tavern, May 11, 1864; St. Mary's Church, June 22, 1864; Fredilliam Station, June 11, 1864; Hawes Shop, June 2, 1864; Reams Station, June 22-29, 1864; Petersburg, July 30, 1864; Lee's Mills, July 30, 1864; Cradle Hill, August 14, 1864; Weldon Rock, Dec. 7-11, 1864. He was honorably discharged Aug. 7, 1865, at Louisville, Ky., at the close of the war.

After the completion of his service in the army, Mr. Moyer again engaged in farm work, but subsequently entered the employ of the Reading Iron Works, working in their blast furnace for sixteen years. In 1900 he located in Wernersville, where he now lives retired. In politics he is a faithful Republican, and in religion he is a member of Hain's Church.

On Aug. 11, 1866, Mr. Moyer married Annie Troup, daughter of John and Mary (Kerschoff) Troup, and to this union there were born three children: Sallie E., Katie and Alvin, the last two of whom died young. Sallie E. married George Goodwin, of Reading, and to them four children have been born: Florence, who married Edward Griswite; Hammon C., Howard D. and Edward A.

CYRUS BOONE, a well known farmer, and a veteran of the Civil war, was born in Bern township, Sept. 27, 1843, a son of John and Elizabeth (Meck) Boone, and a grandson of John Boone.

(I) John Boone, Sr., was a resident of Bern township, who had four children: John, Daniel, William and Susan, who married D. Spayd, for many years proprietor of the "Dry Road" hotel.

(II) John Boone, Jr., was born in Bern township where he was a farmer on his father's land, and later among the farmers of the township after he was left an orphan. In 1850 he went to Reading and engaged in the Bushongs distillery, continuing with them for many years. Later he was connected with a stone quarry, but the last six years of his life, he was retired from active business. His death occurred on South street, and he is buried at the Charles Evans cemetery at Reading. The children born to himself and wife were: Sylvia, deceased; William, deceased; Cyrus; Eliza, deceased; Henry, deceased; Jonathan of Philadelphia; Albert of 10th street, Reading; Sarah of Reading, and John who died in infancy.

(III) Cyrus Boone attended the public schools of Reading, but when only nine he began boating on the canal and thus continued until 1861, when, August 8th, he enlisted in Company G, 6th Cavalry, Captain Clymer commanding, and he served until Dec. 31, 1863, when he re-enlisted at Mitchell Station, Va., Jan. 1, 1864, for three years, in a company of the 2nd Battalion, Veteran Reserve Corps, and was honorably discharged Dec. 15, 1864, on account of disability. Mr. Boone was wounded May 7, 1864, in the Battle of the Wilderness. He received two wounds, part of his left side being shot away. He lost a rib and a portion of his elbow, but he retained his arm, although the surgeons wanted to amputate it. When he recovered sufficiently, Mr. Boone went back to his canal boat life, and thus continued for six years when he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania & Reading Railroad foundries and worked in them in several departments, until April 11, 1894, when he bought the Jacob Lando tract of four acres in Bern township. On this he erected a house, and has since made it his home. Naturally Mr. Boone is an enthusiastic G. A. R. man and belongs to Post No. 16 of Reading. He is also a member of the Keystone Hook and Ladder Co. In politics he is an independent, voting for the man he thinks best fitted for the office regardless of his party affiliations. He and his family are members of the Reformed church, in which they are active.

Mr. Boone married Mary A. Yerger, a daughter of William and Catherine (Rothwell) Yerger, and their children are: Minnie E., deceased; John H., deceased; Mary A., married William Seltzer of Heidelberg township; Kate, married Irwin Speas of Heidelberg township; William W. of Reading; Laura M., married John Drey; Rosa I., deceased.

ABRAHAM BOYER, proprietor of the Green Terrace Hotel, situated in Lower Heidelberg township, one mile south of Wernersville, was born Nov. 22, 1859, in Lower Heidelberg township, son of Moses and Elizabeth (Wineholt) Boyer.

Abraham Boyer, the grandfather of Abraham, who established the famous hotel now conducted by his grandson, was well-known by the traveling public of this section, and made a reputation for his house that has been kept to the present time. He was married to Katie Strunk, and to them the following children were born: Matilda, Elizabeth, Annie and Moses. Moses Boyer became proprietor of the hotel after his father's death, and conducted it until within several years of his own demise, when he retired from active pursuits. His death occurred in 1899, in his seventy-second year. Moses Boyer was married to Elizabeth Wineholt, who still survives and makes her home in Lower Heidelberg township, near the Green Terrace Hotel. Five children were born to her and her husband: Jerome, Wellington, Violet, Lemon and Abraham. Moses Boyer served in the Civil war and while fighting for his country, contracted an illness from which he never fully recovered.

Abraham Boyer attended the schools of his native township, after leaving which he learned the painting and paper hanging trade, which he followed for a period of twenty-two years. Subsequently, however, at the time of his father's retirement in 1897 he took charge of the hotel, but soon thereafter removed to Reinhold's Station, where he remained two years, at the end of which time he located in his present place of business. He has twenty large, well-lighted and well-heated rooms, and his cuisine is of the best. In connection with his hotel he has a large livery, and in every respect conducts a modern, up-to-date establishment.

In 1880 Mr. Boyer was married to Amanda Stief, daughter of Henry and Sarah (Reid) Stief, of Lower Heidelberg township, and they have had these children: Katie; Henry, who resides at Wernersville and is an operator at Myerstown, married Alice Abling; and Jerome, a cigar maker of Lancaster county, married Lillie Kocherias.

Mr. Boyer is an independent voter, and his religious belief is that of the Reformed Church. Fraternally he is connected with Reading Lodge No. 66, F. O. E., and the Sons of Veterans, also of Reading. For thirty-two years he has been prominent in musical circles of his community and is now leader of the Sinking Spring Band, and assistant leader of the band at Fritztown.

F. L. R. MATTERN, M. D., was born Dec. 16, 1879, son of William and Sarah (Freehafer) Mattern, both natives of Schuylkill county.

William Mattern early in life became connected with the iron business, and has remained in that kind of work ever since. He is now the superintendent of the York Sheet Mill, of the Susquehanna Iron and Steel Company, and is considered an expert in his line. He and his wife had a family of four children, namely: Alice, deceased; Harry, vice-president and assistant manager of the Lebanon Chair Works; Edward, who died in infancy; and Dr. F. L. R. Mr. Mattern is prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity, while in religious faith he is a Methodist, and in politics a good Republican.

Dr. F. L. R. Mattern received his early education in the public schools of Columbia, Lancaster county, and was for one year at the Franklin and Marshall College, in Lancaster. His professional training was obtained in the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, from which he was graduated in 1903. After receiving his degree he secured the appointment of resident physician for one year in the Reading Hospital, and on July 1, 1904, he opened his office in Reading. With his thorough preparation and hospital experience, Dr. Mattern unites a pleasing personality that inspires confidence and in his five years of practice he has been unusually successful. His ability is recognized not only in his constantly increasing clientele, but also among his fellow practitioners. He is a member of the Reading Medical Association, and is a keen student in his profession, with a mind ever open to new and helpful ideas. The Doctor belongs to the Greek letter fraternities, Alpha Kappa Kappa and the Phi Kappa Psi.

COL. JOHN DIETRICH. Living the quiet, retired life of an American gentleman, surrounded by all that contributes to comfort and enjoyment, ample means and appreciative friends, there resides in Berks county a man into whose life has been crowded many thrilling experiences and remarkable happenings. This is Colonel John Dietrich, who was born March 15, 1821, at Belvidere, Warren county, New Jersey, a son of John and Elizabeth (McGill) Dietrich.

The Dietrich family is of German extraction and there are strong reasons for believing that in it there was a royal strain. It was established in America by Johan Jacob Dietrich, born in Germany, who crossed the Atlantic in the good ship "Minerva," and landed at Philadelphia, Oct. 10, 1768.

John Dietrich, son of Johan Jacob, and father of the distinguished subject of this biography, was born March 20, 1772, and died Jan. 18, 1844, his birth taking place in eastern Pennsylvania and his death at Belvidere, N. J. At this place he had lived many years and here owned considerable property. His remains rest in the Dietrich lot in the Belvidere cemetery, where numerous other Dietrichs sleep their last sleep. On Sept. 14, 1802, he was married to Elizabeth McGill, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., born Oct. 13, 1782, and died April 2, 1866. Their children were: Jacob, born in 1804, died in youth; William and Abraham, twins—William died in 1872, at Normal, Ill., and is buried at Bloomington, and Abraham died in infancy; Sarah S., born in 1806, died in 1873; Annie Maria, born in 1808, died in 1891, at Oskaloosa, Ia.; Martin, born in 1810, died in 1876, at Plainfield, N. J., and is buried in the Dietrich lot; Susanna, born in 1814, died in 1861; George, born in 1816, died in 1900, at Seattle, Wash., and was buried at Bloomington, Ill.; Caroline, born in 1818, died in 1824; and John, the youngest member of the family.

Colonel Dietrich obtained his education in the schools of his native place and later enjoyed academic advantages, his father having been instrumental in securing an academy for the town. In 1839, when eighteen years of age, in company with his elder brother, Martin, he started for the West and from this point may be traced his connection with men and events which have made our country rich in historic annals. The young travelers were bound for Bloomington, Ill., where their brother George had been a pioneer in the hardware business. After an eventful journey, at that time it could have been nothing else, made on foot, horseback, stage and boat, they arrived at their destination. John was taken in as a partner in the hardware business and soon became a man of importance ducted a restaurant. On Feb. 1, 1842, he was married to Hannah Yocum, born Aug. 21, 1821, who died Sept. 2, 1897, daughter of Nicholas and Catherine (Seidel) Yocum, and to them were born these children: Anna Eliza, born Oct. 11, 1842, died single; Catherine, born Nov. 8, 1844, married John Marks, of Cumru township; and John Y.

John Y. Weidner attended the Cumru township schools, which he left at the age of eighteen years, obtaining a fair business education. In 1896 Mr. Weidner was appointed postmaster of Mohnton by President McKinley, and has since been twice reappointed. He was first appointed under President Harrison, but owing to the controversy between Postmaster-General John Wanamaker and the Republican organization of Pennsylvania he was not commissioned until President McKinley's administration. Mr. Weidner and his family are members of Zion's U. E. Church of Mohnton.

On Feb. 8, 1866, Mr. Weidner was married to Catherine Hornberger, daughter of Joseph and Catherine (Spatz) Hornberger, born May 23, 1846, and to this union there were born: Emma, born Nov. 15, 1867, died in her second year; Maggie, born Oct. 10, 1869, who is a mute, is intelligent, beautiful and is much interested in her church; Lizzie H., born Oct. 1, 1872, married Hiram J. Bigony, a well-known business man of Mohnton, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume; Hannah R., born Aug. 27, 1875, married Martin D. He is a member of the Reading Medical Association, and is a keen student in his profession, with a mind ever open to new and helpful ideas. The Doctor belongs to the Greek letter fraternities, Alpha Kappa Kappa and the Phi Kappa Psi.

COL. JOHN DIETRICH. Living the quiet, retired life of an American gentleman, surrounded by all that contributes to comfort and enjoyment, ample means and appreciative friends, there resides in Berks county a man into whose life has been crowded many thrilling experiences and remarkable happenings. This is Colonel John Dietrich, who was born March 15, 1821, at Belvidere, Warren county, New Jersey, a son of John and Elizabeth (McGill) Dietrich.

The Dietrich family is of German extraction and there are strong reasons for believing that in it there was a royal strain. It was established in America by Johan Jacob Dietrich, born in Germany, who crossed the Atlantic in the good ship "Minerva," and landed at Philadelphia, Oct. 10, 1768.

John Dietrich, son of Johan Jacob, and father of the distinguished subject of this biography, was born March 20, 1772, and died Jan. 18, 1844, his birth taking place in eastern Pennsylvania and his death at Belvidere, N. J. At this place he had lived many years and here owned considerable property. His remains rest in the Dietrich lot in the Belvidere cemetery, where numerous other Dietrichs sleep their last sleep. On Sept. 14, 1802, he was married to Elizabeth McGill, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., born Oct. 13, 1782, and died April 2, 1866. Their children were: Jacob, born in 1804, died in youth; William and Abraham, twins—William died in 1872, at Normal, Ill., and is buried at Bloomington, and Abraham died in infancy; Sarah S., born in 1806, died in 1873; Annie Maria, born in 1808, died in 1891, at Oskaloosa, Ia.; Martin, born in 1810, died in 1876, at Plainfield, N. J., and is buried in the Dietrich lot; Susanna, born in 1814, died in 1861; George, born in 1816, died in 1900, at Seattle, Wash., and was buried at Bloomington, Ill.; Caroline, born in 1818, died in 1824; and John, the youngest member of the family.

Colonel Dietrich obtained his education in the schools of his native place and later enjoyed academic advantages, his father having been instrumental in securing an academy for the town. In 1839, when eighteen years of age, in company with his elder brother, Martin, he started for the West and from this point may be traced his connection with men and events which have made our country rich in historic annals. The young travelers were bound for Bloomington, Ill., where their brother George had been a pioneer in the hardware business. After an eventful journey, at that time it could have been nothing else, made on foot, horseback, stage and boat, they arrived at their destination. John was taken in as a partner in the hardware business and soon became a man of importance both in business and in local politics. This may be the proper place to introduce the acquaintance with a poor, practicing young attorney of that part of Illinois, Abraham Lincoln. Colonel Dietrich knew him well; in fact, in 1842, he accompanied him to the Presbyterian church where Lincoln made his first public speech. He was with him again when he made his memorable speech years later, at Gettysburg. On many occasions Colonel Dietrich, in after life, when grave cares pressed on both men, had occasion to realize the confidence placed in him by the great Lincoln. A notable occasion was when he was summoned to assist in the consideration of matters which the President, War Secretary Stanton and General Grant were arranging for the great war conference.

Returning in our biography to earlier years, Mr. Dietrich, then a young merchant, was making his purchases in New York, in 1849, when he learned of the wonderful discovery of gold in California. He completed his purchases and attended to the shipping of the goods to Bloomington, but the spirit of adventure had seized upon him and instead of returning to his brother and the quiet round of village duty, he shipped aboard the steamer "Falcon," which was then getting under way, and sailed to the Isthmus of Panama. How interesting must the great engineering schemes of the present day appear to our venerable subject, for he crossed the famous isthmus on foot. On the Pacific side he embarked on the steamer "Oregon," for San Francisco, where he arrived April 1, 1849. It was the second ship load of gold-seekers entering the Golden Gate. On April 15th he dug the first gold on Sutter's American river, and he still has in his possession a ring made of this initial gold. He remained in California for two years and seven months and in this period he sold gold bullion equal to over $10,000. He then returned to his old business connections at Bloomington and continued for some years in the hardware business, but subsequently sold out his interests to his brother and went to Chicago, where he became the senior member of the firm of Dietrich & Wells, dealers in stoves, tin and American and foreign hardware.

Colonel Dietrich has always been intensely American in his sentiments, loyal and true to every American principle, and at all times ready to defend his convictions. In the prime of life he had the fortune to be connected with some of the most stirring events of the Nation and even before this period he was closely concerned in what is an important part of the history of Illinois. He was an Abolitionist from the days of his maturity and, with his brother George, Elijah and Owen Lovejoy and Abraham Brockaw, held many a secret meeting to discuss the abolition of slavery and to consider legislation on the subject. These meetings were necessarily secret on account of the tone of prevailing public sentiment in this region at that time, and they were held in the wheelwright shop of Abraham Brockaw, which was reached through a private door from the Dietrich Brothers' hardware store. When General Gridley, of Black Hawk war fame, learned of what he termed these treasonable meetings, he put himself at the head of a furious mob. Illinois annals tell well the story of the death of Elijah Lovejoy, and the serious injury suffered by another member of the party. This was the last secret meeting held, the others were held openly. And then came the Civil war.

Upon the outbreak of war, Colonel Dietrich became very active in behalf of the Union forces. On July 3, 1863, at the request of General Grant, who was his personal friend, he went to Vicksburg, Miss., and for a time he was in the Quartermaster's Department, and it was during this period that occurred an episode which very clearly sets forth the personal bravery of the soldier.

He was surprised on one occasion by a squad of Texan scouts, headed by Captain Cobb of the Confederate army, and, covered with pistols, a demand was made upon him to surrender and reveal the movements of the army with which he was connected. History tells the story thus:

Col. Dietrich, drawing himself up to his full soldierly height, exclaimed: "Men, you don't suppose that you can intimidate me! God Almighty never made the man or set of men who ever did or ever will intimidate me. I am just as ready to die now as at any other time. I am entirely in your power and you can carry your threat into execution."

Captain Cobb thereupon ordered his men to put up their pistols, saying: "It would be too bad to kill such a man."

Later Col. Dietrich became the colonel of the First Mississippi regiment, which was composed of Unionists, and he saw active service in the defense of Vicksburg and Meriden and participated in eleven engagements, the most important of these being Champion Hills. On many occasions he was commended for his bravery. After the general surrender he was placed in charge of captured and abandoned property at Vicksburg, Miss., and was the special assistant treasury agent. This was a most responsible office and he supervised the sale of over $2,000,000. worth of cotton alone. After Col. Dietrich had completed his services at this point, he was summoned to Washington to receive the personal thanks of the Secretary of the Treasury, Hon. George S. Boutwell, who became a lifelong friend.

Later Col. Dietrich engaged in the carriage building business at Mobile, Ala., and he sold the first phaeton buggy that was ever bought in that state, receiving for the same the sum of $550. His subsequent life until retirement was almost altogether an official one. In 1870 he was offered the position of surveyor of customs at Velasco, Tex., a city forty miles south of Galveston, and the port for the Galveston District. When his friend, President Grant, learned of the Colonel's acceptance of this office, he gave orders that he be supplied with a fine yacht and two sailors to command. This office he held for seven years. Subsequently, on a visit to Washington, he was urged by Secretary Richardson of the Treasury Department, to return to Velasco and resume his former duties at an increased salary, but he begged to be relieved and recommended his friend, Mr. Brougham, who was appointed to the office.

After a very short period of private life he received a personal communication from Postmaster-General Creswell, who requested him to call upon him on official business at an early period, and when he answered the request in person was ushered into the Postmaster-General's office. The latter was in an adjoining room in conference with two statesmen, but when told of Col. Dietrich's presence, he excused himself to his other visitors and warmly greeted our subject. His words were: "Col. Dietrich, you have been highly recommended at Cabinet meeting as the proper man for postmaster at Calvert, Texas, which is an important office on the Texas Central Railroad. The Government needs your services there. We want you to go down and straighten the affairs of that office. We had three incompetent and dishonest officials in succession. We shall allow you an additional salary of $1,000., and an assistant." After the Colonel had considered the matter for a time and found that his brother George was willing to serve as assistant, he accepted this undeniably flattering offer. U. S. Supreme Court Judge David Davis and his brother became his bondsmen to the amount of $50,000. After serving as postmaster at Calvert for two years he resigned the office, his brother George succeeding him. He then retired to the city of Plainfield, N. J., where he lived for some twenty-five years, but now makes his home in Berks county, Pa.

Colonel Dietrich was married (first) in 1851, to Anna B. Baker, of Concord, N. H., and to them was born one daughter, Annie, who became the wife of Fred Brown, a railroad magnate of New England. Mrs. Dietrich died in 1862. In 1876 he was married (second) to Margaret Hand, widow of Aaron Laing, a lovely woman and a Quakeress in religious belief. She died in 1901. She was possessed of large means and bequeathed to relatives, personal friends and to the Quaker societies and public institutions, about $50,000.

Col. Dietrich is a very interesting personality and this incomplete sketch but poorly conveys a faithful picture of one who has taken part in so many mighty public events. He has friends in every State of the Union and has visited every country in the Western Hemisphere. In his early days he was a great hunter and fisherman and his tales of sports contain much that is very interesting. He is greatly interested in the completion of an organization called the Dietrich Family Association, who contemplate publishing a complete Dietrich history of the family in America.

CYRUS G. SPEARS, a venerable citizen of Reading, Pa., who is now living retired at No. 1604 Perkiomen avenue, was born at Robesonia, Berks Co., Pa., Nov. 15, 1827, son of William and Susan (Gibson) Spears.

John Spears, the grandfather of Cyrus G., was a native of England, from which country as a young man he came to America with two brothers, landing at Philadelphia. John Spears settled in Heidelberg township and for many years worked at the Robesonia iron furnace. His brother Charles settled in Virginia, between Harrisonburg and New Market, in the Shenandoah Valley, where he reared a family, descendants of which reside there to this day. The other brother was lost, and no trace of his whereabouts was ever known. John Spears had three children: Peter, John and William, of whom Peter and John settled in Schuylkill county.

William Spears, father of Cyrus G., was born in Heidelberg township, Berks county, in the neighborhood of Robesonia, and died in the early '60s, when past middle age, being buried at St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, where his wife, Susan (Gibson) Spears, was also buried. William Spears was a farmer and millwright by occupation, and for many years was also engaged in carpenter work at the Charming Forge. He and his wife had these children: Amelia, who married George Zellers; Alfred, formerly of Robesonia and later of Hamburg; Mahlon, of Windsor Castle; Cyrus G.; Edward, a tailor of Reading; Elizabeth, who died unmarried; Emma, who died young; and Mary, who married Andrew Helms, formerly of Reading and now of Philadelphia.

Cyrus G. Spears is a stone mason by trade, which occupation he followed in early life, later taking up as a vocation boating on the old Union Canal, which was abandoned in the '70s, after which he worked for the Reading Railway Company, the family living in the company's oil house on North Ninth street. Prior to this time he had worked at the depot, and he was also employed at the watch tower at Seventh and Penn streets for some years, but in 1900 he retired from active life, and is now enjoying the fruits of his early labor in comfortable rest. Considering his age, Mr. Spears is very well preserved both in body and mind, and he is in possession of all of his faculties. Formerly, he and his family were members of the First Baptist Church of Reading, but since 1900 the family have been attendants of St. Barnabas Episcopal Church.

In 1853 Mr. Spears was married to Mary Reber, daughter of John and Catherine (Koch) Reber of Heidelberg township. Five children were born to this union: Emily C., who died aged fifteen years; Ida M., who has devoted her life to the care of her aged father, is a single lady and has the esteem and love of the entire community; Agnes R., widow of Thomas Ellis, a boiler maker of Pottstown who died in 1889; John, who married Millie Orchie, resides at Shillington and has two sons, Charles and Earl; and Charles, who died aged four years, one month after the death of his sister Emily, both deaths being caused by scarlet fever. Rev. Charles A. Pauli performed the burial ceremony, and this was the occasion of his last sermon, his own death occurring soon thereafter.

SECHLER. The early history of the Sechler family in America is somewhat traditional, but it is known that individuals of that name came from Switzerland and located in Lynn township, Lehigh county, about the middle of the eighteenth century. The first definite knowledge appears about 1775, when the names of Andrew, Frederic, and Adam Sechler begin to appear in church and county records, these three undoubtedly being brothers. In 1829 a Frederich Sechler died in Lynn township. His will is on record at Allentown, and Jacob Sechler was executor. This same gentleman had officiated as executor of the will of Joseph Sechler, the date being 1823. Of the three brothers referred to Andrew Sechler was the great grandfather of Levi, of this review. He lived in Lynn township, and both he and his wife are recorded as members of Jacksonville Church. A grandchild, Mary Bolich, born in 1823, and still living, is authority for the statement that Andrew Sechler died in 1830, and that both grandparents are buried in the Jacksonville churchyard. His will is on record at Allentown, his sons, Henry and Jacob, signing it as executors. The maiden name of his wife was Bankes, and she bore the following children: Henry; Jacob; Frederick; Joseph; Andrew; Elizabeth, who married a Mr. Sheetz; and several other children, whose names are not of record, scattered throughout the West. Note is made here of the will of an Andreas Sechler and his wife Elizabeth, on record at Allentown, which mentions the name of David Irwin as a son-in-law. Among other children this couple had John, John Andreas and Joseph.

Grandfather Joseph Sechler was a farmer in Lynn township, of which he was a native. His birth date is recorded as May 16, 1781, his death August 4, 1858, the span of his life thus being seventy-seven years, two months, eighteen days. He was a man of influence and property during his life, owning two fine farms, and being connected with the progressive movements of his day. His wife's name was Maria Fusselman, her birth being recorded as May 4, 1796, death April 3, 1842, age fifty-one years, ten months, and eleven days. They were members of the Reformed congregation at Jacksonville, where they lie buried. Their children were twelve in number as follows: Levi had nine children; Rudolph had five children; Leah married David Leiser; Joel; Catharine married Levi Donat; Joseph had eleven children; Jacob had four children; James; Mary married William Bolich, was born 1823, and still living; Benjamin; Rebecca married Daniel Kistler; Sarah married Benjamin Leininger.

Joel Sechler, the father of Levi, also was born in Lynn township, August 13, 1817. He lived to the age of seventy-seven years, five months, dying in Albany township January 14, 1895, and was buried at New Bethel Church. He was a successful farmer and a man of keen judgment, which he exercised in the buying and selling of different farm tracts. For periods during his lifetime he owned the "Jefferson Snyder" farm, the "Jacob Kunkel" property, the "Albert Bailey" tract, and the farm now in possession of his son Levi. He seems to have been interested in education and good government generally, serving as school director, and in some of the minor offices of the township. Mary Lutz, daughter of Henry Lutz, was his wife, and they had thirteen children: Sarah, widow of Jacob Kunkel; Levi; Elias, Amanda, and Rebecca, who died early in life; Mary m. Amandus Long; Hannah became the wife of William S. Dietrich, of Wetherly, Pa.; Malinda m. Albert Faust; Caroline m. Henry S. Dietrich; Catharine became the wife of Louis S. Bailey; Ellen, deceased, wife of Jefferson Snyder; Emma m. Albert S. Bailey; Jane, the wife of Albert C. Braucher. The mother of this family was born Christmas Day, 1820, and died March 29, 1905, aged eighty-four years, three months, and four days.

LEVI SECHLER is a native of Lynn township, his birth occurring August 24, 1842. He received a common school education and served his parents on the farm until his twenty-fourth year, when he set up an establishment of his own. During this period he also secured a license to teach from Prof. John S. Ermentrout, then county superintendent, and taught the New Bethel School, No. 3, two four-month terms, at the munificent salary of $22 per month. Mr. Sechler then began farming for himself in the spring of 1867, on the same farm which his son now operates. He continued farming operations until the spring of 1899, when he retired in favor of his son, William.

Another event which happened in his twenty-fourth year was his marriage to Catharine, daughter of Daniel and Maria (Petry) Kunkel, the latter couple long deceased. Mrs. Sechler was born June 18, 1847, lived fifty-seven years, seven months, and twenty-two days, and died Feb. 10, 1905, burial being at New Bethel cemetery. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sechler are: Sarah m. Lewis M. Lutz; Samuel; Rosa became the wife of Jonas T. Altenderfer; Amanda m. Walter F. Lutz; William, referred to later; Jane m. Wm. Emore; John died in infancy; Katie, unmarried; Mahlon m. Phelephe Long; Edgar m. Nora Keller; Minnie lives at home.

WILLIAM SECHLER, fifth child of Levi, was born on the homestead in Albany township on the 6th day of September, 1874, and was reared to farm life, serving his parents until of age. In the spring of 1899 he closed his apprenticeship and began farming in connection with his father, on the home property. At the present time he is the possessor of four head of horses, and a herd of eleven cattle. The land is "potato land," and William uses an average of ten acres per year for that indispensable commodity. In 1893 he was married to Mary Bolich, daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Kunkel) Bolich, late of Albany. To them have come four bright children: Elmer; Lena; George Calvin, died in infancy; and an infant son.

Levi Sechler and family are members of New Bethel Corner Church, Reformed congregation, of which Levi Sechler has been Deacon, Elder, and secretary for a number of years. Levi Sechler is a Democrat, and was auditor of the district for fifteen years when he declined re-nomination.

The property which Levi Sechler owns consists of 130 acres of good farm land and 100 acres of woodland. This farm is situated just across from the New Bethel Church. The large brick residence was constructed by Mr. Sechler in 1878. The barn is older than Mr. Sechler's ownership, having been built in 1838, when they built barns both for wear and capacity.

The Sechlers are fitting representatives of their Swiss ancestry, and are regarded as good and practical citizens, progressive and intelligent, and favoring everything which will be of marked benefit in promoting the best interests and upbuilding of the county.

JOSEPH B. MACHEMER, blacksmith and carriage builder of Sinking Spring, Berks county, was born May 20, 1868, at the place where he still resides, son of Ephraim Machemer.

Joseph Machemer, his grandfather, was born Jan. 18, 1783, in Lower Heidelberg township, about a mile northeast of Brownsville, and died Sept. 27, 1863, aged eighty years, eight months, nine days. He owned a small farm, now the Jonathan Reber estate, in Lower Heidelberg township, but he died at Tuckerton, in Muhlenberg township, and is buried at Bern Church. Among his children were: Michael, who died in Heidelberg township; Ephraim; Jacob, who died young; Elizabeth, who married Barnhart Hittinger; and David.

Ephraim Machemer, father of Joseph B., born Oct. 1, 1823, died at Sinking Spring Dec. 3, 1906, aged eighty-three years, two months, two days. He was a carpenter, and during the many years he followed that trade he built the old Penn street bridge. He lived at Sinking Spring, where he died, and is buried at St. John's Church. He was a Reformed member of that church. In politics he was a Democrat. He was twice married, first to Mary Huntzinger, and they had children as follows: Edward, Adam, James (deceased), Catharine (deceased), Leanda (deceased) and Sarah. For his second wife Mr. Machemer married Rebecca S. Boltz by whom he had these children: George (deceased), Ephraim (deceased), Henry (deceased), Joseph B., Jacob B., Lizzie (deceased) and Rebecca.

Joseph B. Machemer was only twelve years old when he commenced to earn his own living. He worked in the ore mines for over three years, and then learned the blacksmith's trade from M. D. Ruth, of Sinking Spring, in whose employ he remained three and a quarter years. After that he spent two years at Wernersville, the second in the employ of H. L. Fiant, and then went to Brownsville, in Heidelberg township, working for S. Blimline exclusively as a coach blacksmith. In 1892 he engaged in partnership with George M. Hain, under the firm name of Hain & Machemer, which continued for three years, doing business at Sinking Spring. On Dec. 9, 1895, Mr. Machemer purchased his partner's interest in the coach and blacksmith business, and he has since carried it on alone. He is a successful business man, honest and upright, and held in the highest esteem by his fellow-townsmen. His product consists of fine carriages of all kinds, business wagons, market wagons, etc., and his work is reliable in every respect. His establishment is large and up-to-date, and he also has a fine residence in the borough. Mr. Machemer has proved his public spirit in various ways, took an active part in the incorporation of the village into a borough, and has served as treasurer of the township. He is a Democrat in political sentiment. He is widely known in fraternal circles, holding membership in Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M., of Womelsdorf; Reading Royal Arch Chapter; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., Reading; Sinking Spring Lodge, No. 660, I. O. O. F.; the Knights of Friendship; P. O. S. of A. at Sinking Spring; and Wyanet Tribe, No. 301, I. O. R. M., Reading. He is a Lutheran member of St. John's Church at Sinking Spring.

Mr. Machemer married, April 29, 1893, Annie V. Grill, daughter of Henry Grill, a well-known citizen and at present tax collector of Sinking Spring. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Machemer, namely: Harry E., Florence M., Esther M. and Arthur F.

MORRIS WEIL, born in the city of Reading, Pa., June 9, 1862, son of Solomon and Rosa (Levy) Weil.

Solomon Weil, the father of Morris, was a merchant in the city of Reading. He was an orthodox Hebrew, and took great pride in his race and in the affairs of Temple Oheb Sholem, of which he was one of the principal founders and supporters. He was born in 1830, at Oberlust, Bavaria, and died in the city of Reading, Pa., Dec. 9, 1900, aged seventy years. Being ambitious and courageous, and perceiving the great opportunities offered by this country, he emigrated to America when but twenty years of age. From the beginning of his career until the time of his death he was actively identified with the business of this city. He was at different times engaged in various lines of business, but the greater portion of his life was spent in the clothing business on Penn Square, between Fifth and Sixth streets, in the city of Reading. He was married to Rosa Levy, born at Bozebach, near Kaiserslautern, on the Rhine. From this union sprang these children, namely: Jacob, died in 1896, aged thirty-eight years; Abraham, died in 1892, aged twenty-four years; two that died in early infancy; Benjamin, a jeweler located in Philadelphia; Joseph, a pharmacist, formerly located at No. 67 Wall street, New York City, now engaged in brokerage and general promotion; Henrietta, wife of Levi Weitzenkorn, merchant, residing at No. 534 Centre avenue, Reading; Ella, wife of Henry Fein, wholesale jeweler, No. 49 Maiden Lane, New York City; and Morris, the subject of this biography.

Morris Weil was educated in the public schools. He began his business life under the eye of his father, learning the art of cutting, in the clothing store of Mr. Weil Sr. Having mastered this trade, he sought a location in which to start in business for himself, but after being a salesman in Greenville, Mich., Shenandoah, Shamokin and Harrisburg, Pa., he returned to Reading. He next spent five years as a traveling salesman of trousers, covering Pennsylvania, for his brother Jacob. Quitting the road, he established himself in the retail clothing business, in the year 1889, at No. 642 Penn street, Reading. This business proved profitable from the start, and at the end of thirteen years he retired, selling his business to J. S. Hornberger on Feb. 11, 1902.

Being of an observing turn of mind, he had for years been familiarizing himself with the values of real estate in this city. Upon retiring from business, finding himself without any regular occupation, he began the buying of real estate for speculative purposes. He rapidly increased his holdings, and he is now, while living at his ease in a semi-retired manner, in constant touch with the men and conditions that effect the real estate market. His judgment is valued, and his foresight and ability are recognized by all the men in this branch of business.

Mr. Weil is unmarried, a member of Temple Oheb Sholem, a charter-member of Reading Aerie, No. 66, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, one of the founders of the Eagles' Mountain Home, and a member of numerous other social and charitable organizations. In politics he is an independent voter.

CHARLES E. STANGIER, ex-county commissioner of Berks county, Pa., formerly engaged in the hardware business at No. 1400 North Tenth street, Reading, was born Oct. 13, 1855, at Mertztown, Longswamp township, Berks county, son of Lawrence and Elizabeth Stangier.

Lawrence Stangier was born in 1819, in Bavaria, Germany. In 1852 he came to America, and after living in Philadelphia for several years, became acquainted with a farmer of Longswamp township, who had been in the habit of marketing his products by team to Philadelphia. At the request of this gentleman Mr. Stangier removed to Longswamp township and labored on his farm for two years, after which he went to Washington township, and there worked in the ore mines until his retirement. He died in 1901, at the ripe old age of eighty-eight years, and was buried in the Catholic cemetery at Bally, in Washington township. Lawrence and Elizabeth Stangier had six children, as follows: John, born in 1852, was a tinsmith at Bechtelsville, and died in 1899; Charles E.; William, former tax-collector of Reading; Amelia, m. to Samuel Swoyer of Bally, Pa.; David, of Reading; and Mary, who is unmarried and resides at Bally.

At the age of nineteen years Charles E. Stangier began to learn the tinsmith trade with Joseph Diehl of Washington township, in whose employ he served as an apprentice and journeyman for a period of eight years and six months; later he engaged in business for himself at Bechtelsville. He carried a full line of stoves and tinware and conducted his business successfully for sixteen years, when, in 1896, he sold out to his brother David, and removed to Reading to assume charge of the office of county commissioner, to which he had been elected in November of that year. This office he continued to hold for three years, serving with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of all concerned; helping to reduce the county's debt, erecting six bridges and working in various other matters for the benefit of his community. While still a resident of Bechtelsville, he and his brother John were the leading spirits in the movement to incorporate the town into a borough, and after its accomplishment he was made one of its first councilmen, and was school director and treasurer of the board for three years. In 1902 Mr. Stangier engaged in business at No. 1400 North Tenth street, where he carried on business for several years, dealing in tinware, hardware, stoves, paints, etc.

In 1884 Mr. Stangier was married to Malinda Bechtel, whose father was a butcher of Bechtelsville, Pa., and to them were born two children: Annie and Lawrence. Mr. Stangier is a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of Reading. His first wife died, and he was again married in 1908.

JOHN FINK, who for many years was engaged as a carpenter and builder in Reading, was an old and honored resident of that city. He was born Dec. 26, 1819, in Ephrata, Lancaster county, Pa., son of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Kutz) Fink, natives of that county.

Benjamin Fink was a carpenter by trade, and that occupation he followed practically all his life, also carrying on a blacksmith shop at Ephrata, as well as a hotel. About 1826 he located in Reading, becoming the proprietor of a hotel on Fourth street and one in the west part of the town. Mr. Fink was twice married, his first wife being Elizabeth Kutz, who died in 1851, aged fifty-four years. She was the mother of: Andrew J., Reuben, John, Daniel, Catherine (m. James Haas); Mary (m. James Hottenstein); and Emma (m. a Snyder). Mr. Fink was married (second) to Miss Rebecca Obold, and to this union was born one child, Rebecca, who married James Kerst. In religious belief the family was Lutheran. Mr. Fink was politically a Democrat.

John Fink received his education in the schools of Reading and later learned the carpenter trade with his father, working thereat as journeyman for some years, when he started in business on his own account. In 1842 he opened a shop which is now used as a storeroom in the rear of his residence No. 208 South Fifth street, where he resided until his death, Dec. 12, 1908. He was in partnership with Nathan M. Eisenhower, until 1884, when Amos Huyett was admitted to the firm, this continuing until 1894, when Mr. Fink retired from the company. Fink & Company were the most extensive builders and contractors in the city of Reading, where they erected many handsome and substantial structures, among them the Court House building, the Reading Cotton Factory in 1850, the Hotel Penn in the same year, Stichter Block, the Bausman Church and St. Paul's Church of Reading, as well as many residences in and around Reading. Mr. Fink had a widespread reputation for building, and at one time employed as many as seventy-eight men. He was very active in his later years, and attended to many duties besides taking care of eleven properties.

Mr. Fink was first married to Angeline Eisenhower, and to them were born children as follows: Henry J., William A., Sarah A. E. and Ellen F., the last named having been a teacher for twenty-one years. Mr. Finks' second marriage was to Mary E. Drenkel. There were no children of the second marriage. Mr. Fink was a member of St. James Lutheran Church. He was a Republican in politics, and in 1844 was a member of the Militia, later belonging to Anna Ross Post. Among the many handsome church structures erected by Mr. Fink were those at Allegheny and Schwartzwald, as well as St. James Lutheran Church at Reading. Mr. Fink's death occurred Dec. 12, 1908. He is buried in the Charles Evans cemetery.

GEORGE M. AMMON, former proprietor of the "American House," Reading, was born Sept. 20, 1855, near Churchtown, Lancaster county, Pa. He comes from sturdy Holland-Dutch ancestry, Johannes Ammon, the first of the family in this country, having come from Holland in 1730, settling in Geigertown, Berks county. Johannes Ammon "sold himself" (as it was then known) to the Colony for $96.00, to take up a section of land. One of the early Ammons was the groom at the first marriage ceremony performed in the Old Swedes Church at Philadelphia, May 21, 1798. Another party of Ammons settled in Pequea Valley, in Lancaster county, and the Ammons, the Styers, the Swishers and the Yohns have all influential relationships. On his grandmother's side George M. Ammon's ancestry came from Wittenberg, Germany, while the ancestry of his mother came from England.

George M. Ammon's father, George, was a son of John Ammon, and was a farmer, miller and stockdealer. He died March 2, 1865. He married Mary Elizabeth Gable, daughter of Peter Gable, a farmer of Pequea Valley, and seven of their fifteen children are yet living. Among the children were: William, a farmer of York county, Pa.; Sarah, the wife of Samuel Styer, of Lancaster; Peter G. comes next in the order of birth; Catherine, the wife of Levi Beck, of Ephrata, Lancaster county; Ellen, wife of Samuel Rigg, general manager of the traction lines of Reading; Cyrus, a traveling salesman for, and dealer in, Ephrata Spring water and in lumber; George Martin, proprietor of the "American House," Reading; and Susan, who was the wife of Robert E. Eberher, a farmer of Chester county. Mrs. Ammon, the mother of these children, died April 18, 1857.

George Martin Ammon was educated in the schools of the district, and as a young man worked on the farm. He later engaged successively in cabinet-making, undertaking and carpentering, but in 1889 he began the hotel business, having been first at Terre Hill; then proprietor of the "City Hotel" (Reading) for five years, and on April 1, 1900, became proprietor of the "American House" at Reading, which he conducted for five years when he was succeeded by his son David and son-in-law Edwin Kershner, present proprietors.

On Dec. 16, 1880, Mr. Ammon married Miss Henrietta Ludwig, daughter of Henry Ludwig, a carpenter of Churchtown. One son and one daughter were born to this union: David S., a graduate of the Reading high school (m. Charlotte Homan); and Fanny S., (m. Edwin Kershner. They have a son, George Ammon). Mr. Ammon belongs to the Odd Fellows and the Eagles. The family are members of the Lutheran Church. Since his retirement from the hotel business Mr. Ammon is giving his attention to his splendid farms in Cumru township. This land is delightfully situated and commands a fine view of Reading.

ALVIN J. SHARTLE, general secretary of the Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor Union, the largest union of Christian Endeavor societies in the world, was born Dec. 5, 1867, at Hamburg, Pa., a son of Jacob and Maggie (Xander) Shartle.

Jacob Shartle, a son of Jacob, who was a son of George, was born July 28, 1845, at Womelsdorf, Pa. He attended the public schools through boyhood, and when the Civil war was precipitated, although but seventeen years of age, he enlisted as a musician, in the Ninetieth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and served until the discontinuance of regimental musicians by order of the Federal Government, in 1862. After the close of his military service he learned the trade of saddler at Womelsdorf, which he followed there, and later at Hamburg and Harrisburg, Pa. He was a good and reliable workman, and continued with one Harrisburg firm for twenty-four years, their most trusted employe. During his residence at Hamburg, in 1878, he served as a member of Company E, 4th Regiment Pennsylvania National Guards, for three years. He was a member of the Reformed Church. His death took place at Harrisburg, Pa., April 13, 1904, and his burial was at Middletown, Pa. He was married twice. His first marriage was to Maggie Xander, who died Dec. 25, 1872, aged twenty-six years. She was a musician, being a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music, a daughter of George Alexander and Mary (Bausher) Xander, of Hamburg, Pa., and an active member of the Lutheran Church. By this marriage four children were born: Alvin J., Eugene, Kate and Annie. In 1880, he was married a second time to Adeline Beard, of Womelsdorf, who survives and with her four sons, Paul, Roy, Abraham, and Dewey, at Harrisburg. Howard and Mark, being sons with this second union also, are both deceased.

Alvin J. Shartle obtained his early educational training in the public schools of Hamburg, his later intellectual training consisted in a technical course; a special course with the Sheldon School of Chicago, and under private tutors he prepared for religious work, specializing along the lines of Interdenominational Young People's Work. Being a poor boy Mr. Shartle was obliged at an early age to learn the moulder's trade at Hamburg, where he labored for nine years.

Becoming discontent with his work at Hamburg, and with a desire for a larger field of usefulness, he came to Reading in April, 1893, and this city has been his home ever since. His removal from Hamburg to Reading was the beginning of his real development. Although holding many responsible positions he continued his night studies and persisted in church work, which was the ultimate aim of his ambition. For nine years he was a foreman with the American Bicycle Company; then he became manager of the American Match Company, Riverside, Reading, after which he became associated with the Daniel F. Ancona Real Estate and Fire Insurance Agency; and following this he became connected with the Inter-State Commercial College, Reading, as its representative and has shown great ability, tact, business judgment and foresight in advancing the prosperity of this institution.

On April 18, 1884, Mr. Shartle was married to Sarah A. Nies, a daughter of Daniel and Florence (Dressler) Nies, of Hamburg, and they have one daughter Florence M. The latter received her education in the public schools of Reading, and is also a graduate of Inter-State Commercial College, Reading. She subsequently married Stewart E. Printz, a chemist in business at Philadelphia. They have one son, Stanley V.

Mr. Shartle is an active member and elder of St. Stephen's Reformed church, Reading. He was president of the Christian Endeavor society for three years, and for four years was financial secretary of this congregation. He is assistant superintendent of the large Sunday-school and teacher of the Adult Bible Class, also a member of the Reformed Sunday-school Superintendents Association. In 1901 Mr. Shartle was elected president of the Berks County Christian Endeavor Union, serving as such for four years, and during that period through his efficient leadership the status of this union was raised to a high standard. He is a director of the Montrose Bible Conference Association, of which the celebrated evangelist, Rev. Reuben E. Torrey, D. D., is president; a life member of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, Boston, Mass.; editor of "The Secretary's Bulletin" which is the official organ of the Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor Union, and also a contributor to various religious publications.

On July 19, 1906, at Altoona, Pa., Mr. Shartle was elected State Secretary of the Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor Union, in which capacity he attracted national attention in church work. July 9, 1908, in State Convention at Reading, Mr. Shartle was elected General Secretary of the Pennsylvania Christian Endeavor Union, a union of 4,700 young people's societies, with a membership 290,000, the largest union of Christian Endeavor societies in the world. Following his election to this latter office Mr. Shartle resigned his position with Inter-State Commercial College in order to devote all his time to religious work.

It has been conceded that there is no layman in church work better known today, in the State, than Mr. Shartle, having visited every county in the State, and spoken to audiences in all the cities and large towns of Pennsylvania, and a number of other States, he has in connection with his publications, acquired a national reputation in Young People's Work. He is a strong, forcible speaker, a lucid writer, and a man with great executive ability. The "Christian Endeavor World," the official organ of International Christian Endeavor work, say of Mr. Shartle: "As general secretary of the great Pennsylvania State Union, the largest in the country, he has already made a remarkable record. He is a master of detail and method, and makes every move count in the accomplishment of his purpose. A sturdy Pennsylvania Dutchman, he is showing the grit and grace that will place the Keystone State at the front."

MAIDEN CREEK HOSIERY COMPANY. Among the large and successful enterprises of Temple, Pa., may be mentioned the Maiden Creek Hosiery Company, which, starting from a humble beginning, under a capable management has grown to large proportions.

The company was founded in 1901, by Judge Stitzel, and was carried on by him until incorporated, when Frank Seidel became president, S. R. Rothermel secretary and treasurer, and George D. Stitzel vice-president, these gentlemen, with Charles Dunkel and M. R. Mengel, composing the board of directors. The business was incorporated to carry on a general knitting business in the manufacture of infants' and men's hosiery, and did a successful business until 1903, when the stock was liquidated and purchased by a new company, Frank Seidel at this time becoming president; Claude L. Seidel, secretary, James F. Seidel, treasurer; and Robert L. Seidel, vice-president. These gentlemen are all directors and all stockholders, and under their management the company has prospered greatly, now turning out 1,200 dozen hosiery weekly, in high grade goods, which find a ready sale throughout the country. They employ on an average forty to fifty hands and the plant, formerly located at Maiden creek, was removed to Temple in 1906, a suitable factory being found here to handle the growing business. In 1907, the treasurer, James F. Seidel, died, and his stock was purchased by Mahlon L. Seidel, the third brother, and Robert L. Seidel was elected treasurer, and Mahlon L. Seidel vice-president.

Claude L. Seidel, the secretary and business manager of this concern, is a man of practical experience as a hosieryman. He was born in Berks county in 1874, and from the age of twenty-one years has been engaged in the manufacture of this commodity, having been an operator at the Reading Knitting Mills, and for five years was in the gentlemen's furnishing department of Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart, Reading.

Mr. Seidel married Emma Ulrich, a native of Lancaster county, and they have two children, Elsie and George. Mr. and Mrs. Seidel belong to the United Evangelical Church. He is independent in politics.

DANIEL NICHOLAS BERTOLETTE, M. D., of Reading, Pa., a medical officer in the naval service of the United States since 1873, was born near Friedensburg, in Oley township, Berks county, Jan. 22, 1851. When he was three years of age his parents moved to Reading, where he attended the public schools, graduating from the high school in the class of 1866, and delivering the valedictory address upon that occasion. After graduating he was employed by Douglas & Connard, brass-founders of Reading, and he remained with them over three years, when he commenced the active study of medicine with Dr. Charles H. Hunter, of Reading, as his preceptor. Dr. Hunter dying in June, 1870, this course of medical studies was continued under Dr. Samuel L. Kurtz, also of Reading. After attending the usual course of lectures at the Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, he received the degree of Doctor of Medicine from that institution in March, 1872.

Immediately after graduating Dr. Bertolette took a competitive examination, and obtained an appointment as resident physician at the Philadelphia (Blockley) Hospital, where he served with distinction the full term of fifteen months; and then, after passing successfully the required examinations, he was appointed, June 23, 1873, an assistant surgeon in the United States Navy, and he has continued in that service until the present time, passing through its various grades as assistant surgeon from 1873 to 1876; passed assistant surgeon from 1876 to 1888; surgeon from 1888 to 1900; medical inspector from 1890 to April 5, 1905, when he was commissioned a medical director, the highest grade of his corps.

Since entering the navy, Dr. Bertolette has been stationed as follows: The U. S. Naval Hospital at Norfolk, Va.; the U. S. Ship "Worcester," flagship of the North Atlantic Squadron; the U. S. S. "Constellation," practice cruise of naval cadets; the U. S. S. "Minnesota," Port-Admiral's flagship in New York Harbor; the U. S. Naval Hospital at Brooklyn, N. Y.; officiating as lecturer on surgery at the advanced school for naval medical officers; the U. S. S. "Wyoming," in European Station; the U. S. S. "Trenton," flagship in European Station; the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.; the U. S. S. "Dale," practice cruise of cadets; the U. S. S. "Dolphin;" the U. S. S. "Tennessee," flagship in North Atlantic Station; the U. S. S. "Thetis," on special duty in Behring Sea and the Arctic Ocean; the U. S. Receiving Ship "Franklin," at Norfolk, Va.; Naval Hospital at Philadelphia; special commissioner by appointment of President Harrison, under Department of State, to carry to the Presidents of Uruguay, Paraguay, and the Argentine Republic, the official invitation to take part in the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893, and later detailed to assist in the entertainment of foreigners of distinction at that Exposition; Delegate to the meeting of Association of Military Surgeons at Chicago in 1893; the U. S. S. "Atlanta"; the U. S. S. "Minneapolis," in European Station and incidentally a member of the commission to attend the Coronation of the Czar, Nicholas II., of Russia, at Moscow in 1896; member of board for examination of officers for promotion, at Washington, D. C.; member of board for examination of candidates for admission to Naval Medical Corps; member of retiring board; medical officer of barracks at Marine Headquarters at Washington, D. C.; delegate to represent the medical department of the U. S. Navy at the Thirteenth International Medical Congress at Paris, and the Tenth International Congress of Hygiene and Demography at the same place, in 1900; U. S. S. "New York," flagship of Asiatic Squadron, as surgeon of the Fleet; member of various boards at Washington, D. C.; medical director in command of the U. S. Naval Medical Supply Depot at Brooklyn, N. Y.; and now in command of the U. S. Naval Hospital at Washington, D. C.

During the extended services mentioned, Dr. Bertolette has visited nearly every quarter of the globe. The U. S. S. "Thetis," to which he was attached, made an extended excursion into the great ice fields of Alaska, north of Point Barrow, during which the abandoned whaling ship "Jane Gray" was found in the ice floe, and recovered and returned to its owners. While fulfilling his mission to the Republics of Uruguay, Paraguay and the Argentine Republic, he traveled extensively in those countries, visiting the governors of all the various provinces. He also visited the Falls of the Iguassu in Brazil, larger than Niagara but so difficult of access that very few persons have ever seen them. While attached to the Asiatic Squadron, he visited Peking, China, and was received in audience by the Dowager Empress of China, Tsi-An, at the palace within the forbidden city; and then he also visited the famous Summer palace. In Japan, he was present at the unveiling of the memorial which commemorates the landing of Commodore Perry and the opening of the country to the world; and he attended the Emperor's chrysanthemum party at the palace in Tokio and traveled extensively through that country. These several positions, promotions and services evidence the distinction of Dr. Bertolette's successful and honorable career in connection with the national government, covering a period of thirty-six years.

Besides being identified with numerous social and scientific societies in different parts of the country, he is an active member of the world-renowned National Geographic Society at Washington, D. C.; and he was one of the founders of the Reading Academy of Natural Sciences, and the Historic Society of Berks County.

Dr. Bertolette's father was Isaac Bertolette. He was born in Oley in 1810, moved to Reading in 1854, where he was engaged in manufacturing until his decease in 1882. He married (first) Elizabeth Cleaver, a daughter of Jonathan Cleaver of Oley, by whom he had four children: Rebecca, Jonathan (who was a surgeon in the Naval service of the United States), Maria and Keturah; and upon his wife's decease in 1849, he married (second) Christiana Griesemer, a daughter of Jacob Griesemer and Mary Hunter his wife, of Oley, by whom he had two children: Dr. Daniel, and Anna (who died in 1880). The Doctor's mother died in 1905, at the advanced age of eighty-five years.

His grandfather was Daniel Bertolet, of Oley, a prominent and very successful farmer born in 1781, and died in 1868. He married Maria Griesemer, daughter of Stephen, of Oley, by whom he had nine children: Abraham, Samuel, Maria (m. Moses Miller), Daniel, Isaac, Esther (m. Joel Levan), Jacob, Hannah (m. John Guldin) and Dr. Peter G. (prominent in the Civil war).

His great-grandfather was also named Daniel. He was born in 1741, and died in 1797. He married Maria Yoder, daughter of John, of Oley, and they had eight children, four growing to maturity: Daniel, Catherine (m. Jonathan Grim), Charlotte (m. Jacob Yoder) and Esther (m. Jacob Kerst).

His great-great-grandfather was Abraham Bertolet, born in 1712 and died in 1766. He married Esther DeTurk, who was born in 1710, and died in 1798. They had six children: Daniel, Samuel, John, Maria (m. Daniel Hoch), Elizabeth (m. John DeTurk) and Esther (m. George Yoder).

And his great-great-great-grandfather was Jean Bertolet, the immigrant who settled in Oley in 1726, and died in 1754. He was married to Susanna de Harcourt (Hericourt in 1711, and by her had six children: Abraham, Maria (m. Stephen Barnett), John, Esther (m. Dr. George de Benneville), Susanna (m. Jacob Fry), and Frederick. He was a native of Bern, in Switzerland. On account of religious persecution, he removed to Selz, in Alsace, about twenty-seven miles northeast of Strassburg, where he was engaged in farming for about fourteen years. He then emigrated with his wife and five children to Pennsylvania. His wife was the daughter of Jean de Harcourt (or Hericourt), a prominent citizen of Mühlhausen, in Lower Alsace, of the French nobility.

HON. HOWARD GLANCY McGOWAN. In every community, great or small, there are found men who by reason of personal attributes, enterprising spirit and natural ability, have risen above their fellows in business, social or public life. Berks county, Pa., has many examples, and one of these is the Hon. Howard Glancy McGowan, ex-representative to the State Legislature, and a leading agriculturist of Robeson township. Mr. McGowan was born in Union township, Berks county, Sept. 8, 1858, son of John and Elizabeth (Geiger) McGowan.

John McGowan, grandfather of Howard G., was a native of the North of Ireland, whence he came to America in 1790, settling at once on a farm in Berks county. There he and his wife both died in the faith of the Presbyterian Church. Three children were born to them: Nathaniel, William and John. Mr. McGowan was a Democrat in politics.

John McGowan, father of Howard G., was born in Union township, in 1807, on the farm where he lived all his life, dying in 1887, in the eightieth year of his age. He spent his life engaged in agricultural pursuits, leaving at his death a valuable estate, which was divided among all of his children. Mr. McGowan married Elizabeth Geiger, daughter of George Geiger, and she died in 1893, when eighty years old, the mother of children as follows: George G.; John; William G.; James; Allison F.; Howard Glancy; Mary (m. Levi Geiger); Sarah (m. John P. Haws); Catherine (m. Herman U. Geiger); Elizabeth V. (m. N. N. Specher); Emily (died young) and Harriet B. (m. E. M. Zerr). In religious belief the family were Methodists, and Mr. McGowan donated the ground on which St. Paul's Church now stands, then known as the old Forrest Church. He was a Democrat in politics, was county commissioner in 1867, school director, assessor and tax collector. Fraternally he was connected with Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., of Reading.

Howard G. McGowan was educated in the schools of Union township, and the Reading high school, after leaving which he entered the hardware store of his brother William G., of the firm known as the McGowan & Miltimore, hardware merchants, in Reading, remaining there seven years. Mr. McGowan then accepted a position with the Adams Express Company where he continued three years, and in 1880 he purchased the old Bitler homestead in Robeson township, a tract of 111 acres of land which he is still cultivating. He has made many improvements, and devotes his attention to fruit and berry growing, having raised as many as 100 bushels of strawberries, in addition to 800 baskets of peaches, apples and pears in a single season. He keeps a dairy of thoroughbred Jersey cattle, and is a successful agriculturist in every way. Mr. McGowan is a member of the Pennsylvania State Board of Agriculture, a director of the Farmers' Institute of Berks county; chairman of the board of managers of the Farmers' Institute, a position which he had held for ten years; and for twenty-five years has been a member of the Berks County Agricultural Association, and an annual exhibitor, for twenty-five years, winning the first prize for corn, potatoes, apples, pears, etc.

In 1879 Mr. McGowan married Amanda E. Geiger, daughter of Herman and Maria S. Geiger, and two children were born to this union: Howard A., who died in 1881, at the age of six months; and H. Preston, born March 17, 1895. Mr. McGowan is a Democrat in politics, and has been assessor, tax collector, etc., in his district. In 1906 he was elected a member of the State Legislature, and served on the committees on Agriculture, Law and Order, Public Health and Sanitation, Constitutional Reform, and other committees. During the session of 1907 his activity in the interest of his constituents attracted more than ordinary attention. During the session he was appointed to attend the National Good Roads Congress at Pittsburg, Pa.; chosen on the Appropriation Committee and to fill many other important positions. He presented many bills to the Legislature, investigated the Vinegar law in the interests of the farmers of the State, and subsequently had printed a circular letter relative to this work, which was distributed to farmers throughout the State. He succeeded in having an Act passed in the interest of shippers of milk and cream in cans and other vessels over railroads, and through this law all milk cans and other vessels must be thoroughly cleaned by the receiver of milk before being returned to the shipper. The sanitary effect of this law is appreciated by the residents of cities and towns, and the law is as well of much assistance to farmers in keeping the vessels clean. Mr. McGowan spoke in support of many measures and through his activity in the House and Senate several bills became laws much to the benefit of the farmers in whose interest Mr. McGowan was working. In recent years (two years in succession) Governor E. T. Stuart appointed Mr. McGowan a delegate to the National Farmers' Congress, which was held in Richmond, Va., and Madison, Wis., respectively.

Fraternally Mr. McGowan is a member of the P. O. S. of A., being a charter member of Camp No. 388, of Geigertown; and Neversink Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Birdsboro. He is a member of St. Paul's M. E. Church, where he is serving as secretary of the board of trustees, steward and Sunday-school treasurer, and he was at one time the Sunday-school organist, and at present is serving as chorister in the church.

BEN AUSTRIAN was born Nov. 22, 1870, in the city of Reading, a son of Raphael and Fanny Elizabeth (Dreifoss) Austrian.

The Austrian family is of German extraction. Raphael Austrian, a well-known manufacturer of Reading, died in 1897, aged fifty-six years. The mother of our subject, still surviving, is a daughter of Bernard Dreifoss, whose wife was a member of the Drexel family of Philadelphia. The family consisted of five sons and one daughter, namely: Aaron and Claude, who died in early childhood; Joseph, a manufacturer in New York City; Julian, a publisher, in New York; Adrienne, at home; and Ben, the artist.

Ben Austrian was educated in the schools of Reading, and from childhood evinced artistic ability although the surrounding circumstances prevented his devoting himself to developing this talent for a number of years.

After leaving school he entered his father's store as a salesman for two years and then went on the road for a Williamsport firm for three years, later engaging for two years with his father in business, being a traveling representative of the house. It was at the close of this period that Mr. Austrian gave way to his natural inclinations and opened a studio. Although the pupil of no noted master of the brush nor graduate of any celebrated school of painting, Mr. Austrian has given to the world some of the finest artistic works now exhibited by American artists. The stamp of individuality is upon them, in fact they are distinctively "Austrian." Among the paintings to which this name is appended are his colossal paintings mentioned below: "Temptations," exhibited in Reading, Williamsport and New York; "After the Race," adorning a wall in the "Hotel Netherlands," New York; "A Day's Hunt," painted in 1898 and exhibited in Earle's Art Gallery, at Philadelphia, and hundreds of smaller canvasses. The latter painting brought Mr. Austrian to the front as an artist, his critics calling attention to his fidelity to nature as well as to the poetic quality of his work and other admirable features. In the fall of 1900, "A Golden Harvest" was given to the public and was exhibited at Earle's, and this painting of wonderful beauty added fresh laurels.

In October, 1901, an even more ambitious effort was produced and exhibited first in Reading and later at Green's in Philadelphia, entitled "The South Wind," a painting showing the trophies of the hunt, a masterly effort and a great success.

In 1902 Mr. Austrian opened a studio in Paris, where his work was subjected to a severe and captious public, but the encouragement was so general and commendation so universal, that Mr. Austrian put his pictures on exhibition in the galleries of Henry Graves & Co., London, where immediate and full recognition was awarded and generous praise given. The royal family, together with many distinguished members of the aristocracy and others eminent in the world of art, letters and society, were in frequent attendance and he was dubbed the "Landseer of Chickens." His "Golden Harvest" was secured by the Walker Art Museum of Liverpool, one of the leading galleries of Europe. "His Majesty, the King," his latest work, exhibited in Reading, Lancaster and elsewhere, was purchased by Mr. Mahlon W. Newton, of Philadelphia, a connoisseur, who has a fine collection of well-known paintings. Mr. Austrian's painting "A Day's Hunt," brought for its author a high price, its gratified owner being Mr. J. H. Sternbergh.

Ben Austrian sends pictures to the galleries of Berlin, Munich, London and San Francisco and exhibits in many of the eastern cities. He has a charming summer studio in the Neversink Mountains, a quaint cabin owned by the descendants of Daniel Boone, which bears the name of "Clovelly," and here his summers are spent painting the glories of Nature in every mood. His winter studio is situated on Perkiomen avenue, Reading.

FRANCIS F. SEIDEL, who has been engaged in the undertaking business for the past thirty-four years, conducting the largest mortuary in Berks county, was born Feb. 23, 1858, in Bern township, Berks county, son of Elias and Caroline (Faust) Seidel.

Daniel Seidel, the grandfather of Francis F., was born in Berks county, his ancestors having been residents of the northern part of the State, where they were engaged in agricultural pursuits. Daniel Seidel purchased 450 acres of wild, heavily timbered land, a part of which he cleared, and there spent the remainder of his life in farming, respected and esteemed for his many sterling qualities. He was a prominent man in his community, was a faithful Democrat in politics, and was elected to serve his township as a member of the school board. He was greatly interested in educational movements, giving cheerfully not only of his time, but of his property on which to erect a school building. Mr. Seidel married a lady of English birth and to them were born these children: Bernville, Michael, Elias, Elizabeth, Lovina, Lacy and Mary.

Elias Seidel, the youngest son, father of Francis F., was born in Bern township, and his death occurred on the old homestead at the age of twenty-five years, on which place he had spent all of his time after leaving school. He and his wife, who bore the maiden name of Caroline Faust, had two children, Francis F. and Elias, the latter of whom died July 8, 1890, aged thirty years.

Francis F. Seidel secured his education in the public schools of his native town, after leaving which he worked three years for E. S. Miller, and then served an apprenticeship of three years to the undertaker's trade, becoming foreman in Mr. Miller's undertaking establishment, a position he held for about ten years. On April 1, 1888, Mr. Seidel embarked in the business on his own account in Reading, and this has been his occupation ever since. He has established one of the largest trades in Berks county, and has been the originator of many good innovations in the business, including the funeral car, high hats and capes, and the grave lining, the latter of which has become universal throughout the county. During his first year of business Mr. Seidel had charge of fifty-two funerals, and his business has increased since that time to large proportions, and he conducts between 650 and 700 funerals a year. On March 9, 1888, Mr. Seidel graduated from the Oriental School of Embalming, from Clask's School of Embalming in 1893; and from the school of embalming at Harrisburg, Pa., in 1894, and he has also taken lectures on contagious diseases. He was the first to advertise embalming in Reading, and has inaugurated a system of bookkeeping of his own which is considered one of the best in existence. To date Mr. Seidel has buried about 9,000 bodies, and he now employs seven assistants. He owns a fine farm in Spring township, above Sinking Spring, known as the Montello Farm.

On July 24, 1883, Mr. Seidel was united in marriage with Miss Amelia Hartman, and to them were born children: Estella E., born April 24, 1884, died Nov. 5, 1887; Herbert A., born Sept. 21, 1885 (is a member of St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M.; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; and Vigilance Lodge No. 194, I. O. O. F.) is now assisting his father; Calvin E., born Oct. 21, 1887, is studying architecture and had prepared for Pennsylvania University (is a member of Isaac Hiester Lodge, No. 660, F. & A. M.); and Florence May, born Sept. 2, 1888, is a member of the class of 1908, Girls' high school, Reading.

Mr. Seidel is much interested in the cause of education, and gives willingly of his time and substance to movements having as their object the advancement of this cause. He is a member of the Board of Trade. His fraternal connections are with Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T.; Philadelphia Consistory, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite Masons; a charter member of the Lodge of Perfection, Reading; and a member of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; and was for some years a trustee of the Masonic Association. He is also a charter member of Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F.; Perseverance Council No. 194, Jr. O. U. A. M., of which he is past councillor; past chief of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, No. 49; Juniata Tribe, No. 74, I. O. R. M.; Knights of Friendship; and Rebekah Degree Odd Fellows Lodge, No. 4. In all of his business dealings Mr. Seidel has been honest with his patrons, living strictly up to the word of every contract. He is one of Reading's good citizens, and as such is respected and esteemed by his fellow men.

BROSSMAN. The Brossman family is one of the oldest in Berks county, dating back to the early part of the eighteenth century. Francis (Frantz) Brossman, a German by birth, so tradition says, was one of the Schoharie county, N. Y., settlers, who came to Berks county between 1723 and 1728. When Berks county was organized in 1752, he was an inhabitant of Heidelberg township. The following year, 1753, he paid eighteen pounds tax, and in 1754 he paid twenty-two pounds tax. This shows him to have been a large landowner. His remains are undoubtedly buried at St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, which was the spiritual home of all those early pioneers.

John Adam Brossman, son of Francis, died upon his farm in Lower Heidelberg township at the age of sixty-seven years, and is buried at St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, of which he was an official member. He was a Lutheran in religious faith. His occupation was farming, and he owned a large tract of land. The old Brossman homestead is now embraced in Lower Heidelberg township, and while the original tract has been divided, it is still in the possession of members of the family. The part on which the first buildings were erected is now owned by Henry Brossman. In the beginning there were 150 acres in the home farm. John Adam Brossman married Catharine Leiss, and their children were: (1) John L., born in 1804, on the homestead, died there in 1887, after a life devoted to farming and milling. He married Catharine Hettinger, whose father was a native of Germany, and a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township. They had ten children: John, Nathan, Reuben, Henry, Mary, Catharine, Elizabeth, Rebecca, Ellen and one that died in infancy. (2) Adam L. (3) Daniel. (4) Eve married Henry Werner, of Lower Heidelberg. (5) Benjamin.

Adam L. Brossman, son of John Adam, was born in 1804 in Heidelberg township, and there passed his entire life dying in 1883. He was a farmer by occupation, the farm previously mentioned having been divided between him and his brother, and by industry he made an excellent living for himself and his family. He married (first) Elizabeth Bickel, by whom he had two children, William (buried at Hain's Church) and Priscilla (m. Caton Knorr, and is buried at St. Daniel's Church, Heidelberg.) By his second wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Bender, he had six children, namely: Adam Bender; John B., of Robesonia, m. to Louisa Stricker, who died and is buried at St. Daniel's Church; Thomas J., a farmer in Lower Heidelberg; James B., a builder at Reading; Sarah B., m. to Joseph W. Ernest, who died June 6, 1900, and is buried at St. Daniel's Church; and Elmira B., m. to Moses K. Balthaser, of Wernersville. Like his family generally Mr. Brossman was a Lutheran. He is buried at St. Daniel's church.

James B. Brossman, son of Adam L., now a prominent builder in Reading, was born in October, 1856, in North Heidelberg township. He was educated in the schools of the home neighborhood, and he remained on the farm assisting his father until he was twenty years of age. He then removed to Robesonia, this county, where he lived for about seven years. In 1896 he took up his residence in Reading, where he has since had his home and business interests. In 1892 he entered into partnership with his brother Adam in the building business, which they followed until 1903. During his career in Reading Mr. Brossman has been given a generous share of the business in his line, and he has put up a number of the most substantial residences which have been erected in the city during that period, his contracts for which have ranged in price from $1,800 to $5,000. He has been constantly widening the scope of his operations, and may justly be classed among the solid business men of his adopted city. In 1876 he married Ellen Kissling, and six children have been born to them, as follows: Calvin, Adam, Paul, Beulah (deceased), Nora and Bertha. Mr. Brossman clings to the traditions of his ancestors, being a Lutheran and a Democrat.

Adam Bender Brossman, now living retired in Reading, where he is highly esteemed, was born in North Heidelberg township, Oct. 7, 1845, son of Adam L. and Elizabeth (Bender) Brossman. He was educated in the common schools of Berks county, and attended the Keystone State Normal School and Prof. Brunner's business college, after which he taught school for several years. He was then appointed deputy warden of the Berks county prison, serving in that capacity for four years, and was then appointed to the position of warden which he filled for three years. In 1886 he removed to Robesonia, where he lived retired for two years. In 1888 he located in Reading, where he was engaged until 1902, building much of the section known as Richton. He was also engaged in other enterprises, being a director in the Schuylkill Valley Bank from its incorporation until 1906, when he retired from that position.

Mr. Brossman was married May 30, 1876, to Ellen R. Richards, daughter of Benjamin and Lovina Richards, and to this union has been born one daughter, Bessie L., who married June 18, 1906, George G. Kriedler, a bookkeeper of Reading.

Thomas J. Brossman, a successful farmer in Lower Heidelberg township, was born in North Heidelberg April 2, 1853, son of Adam L. and Elizabeth (Bender) Brossman. He was brought up to farming and for forty-six consecutive years lived upon the homestead farm, during all of this time not being away one week. In the spring of 1877 he began farming for himself, tenanting the old home farm for twenty-one years. In the spring of 1899 he came to Lower Heidelberg, and located on the well known Adam Dechert farm—a property which has been in the Dechert family for more than one hundred years. It consists of 181 acres of good land, all highly cultivated. Mr. Brossman is an excellent farmer, and has ten head of horses, thirty-two of cattle, and all the latest improved machinery. He has always met with success in his vocation. He owns the old homestead in North Heidelberg, which consists of ninety acres, which he purchased in 1885 for $7,000. In spite of his active work in caring for his farm, he has taken an interest in public affairs, and has been a delegate to county conventions, and was one of the delegates when Judge James N. Ermentrout was first nominated for the Bench. In politics he is a Democrat, and for ten years he served in North Heidelberg as a member of the school board, being a director at the time he moved from the township. Since he has lived in Lower Heidelberg he has served that township for six years as a member of the school board, has been treasurer and president, and generally proved himself most efficient, having the good of the schools at heart. He was instrumental in the establishing of the township high school at Wernersville, and in securing the increase in the salaries of the teachers from $35 to $50. Mr. Brossman is a member of St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, and is a Lutheran in belief. For three years he held the office of deacon. In 1877 he married Emma Althouse, daughter of Reuben and Matilda (Gruber) Althouse, farming people of Marion township. To this union have been born children as follows: seven sons and eight daughters: Solomon, a school teacher in Lower Heidelberg, m. to Clara Stoudt; Warren; Gertie, deceased; Charles; Thomas, deceased; Stella; Florence; Esther; Ellan, deceased; Ammon, deceased; Elsie; Frederick; William; Erma; and Marguerite.

Benjamin Brossman, son of John Adam Brossman, was born on the homestead, Aug. 31, 1810, and he died upon his farm in Lower Heidelberg at the ripe old age of eighty-eight years and two days. He was an intelligent citizen, and was frequently called upon to serve his fellow citizens in positions of honor and trust. He served as school director, supervisor, and frequently was a delegate to county conventions. He was captain in the State militia, a military organization of his day, and the sword he wore is now in the possession of his youngest son, Hillorius. Mr. Brossman was an exceedingly versatile man, his ability as a mechanic making him an expert cabinet maker, carpenter, cooper and blacksmith, and he understood tree grafting as few men did. He successfully grafted shellbarks, chestnuts, and all kinds of fruits, also budded peach trees. He made a number of musical instruments, including a piano, which his son Isaac W. now possesses, and he repaired musical instruments. In 1872 he erected the present house upon his farm. This reflects the skill of his workmanship, as all the doors, wainscoting, etc., were made by hand. In this house there may also be seen a bureau, beds, and an old fashioned grandfather's clock which he made in 1876. He and his family were members of St. Daniel's (Corner) Church, and the family lot is in the cemetery connected with this church. He married Catharine Werner, born April 15, 1815, daughter of Adam Werner, and she died Oct. 20, 1880. Their children were: Richard, deceased; Benjamin, of Reading; Emma, who married Henry Stoudt, and moved to Michigan, where she died; Isaac W.; Adam, a truck farmer in Lower Heidelberg; George, of Reading; Amelia, of Reading; Katie, who married Henry Yohe, of Reading; Levi, of Reading; and Hillorius.

Isaac W. Brossman, son of Benjamin, was born on his father's farm in Lower Heidelberg township Oct. 22, 1842. His early education was obtained in the public schools of his district, and later he attended the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, Pa. While a student in the latter institution he was one of the organizers of the now famous Philomathean Literary Society in 1862—a society dear to the hearts of thousands of alumni, and to this day a leading factor in the school's success. Mr. Brossman was its first secretary, and Dr. Samuel A. Baer, Ph. D., was its first president. Mr. Brossman was first licensed to teach in the public schools by Prof. John S. Ermentrout, then county superintendent. He never had an English book in his hands until he was thirteen years of age, yet he commenced teaching when he was twenty-one, teaching in the public schools nine terms, four consecutive terms being at Lincoln, in Lancaster county, and he met with success wherever he was located. He was a Lutheran, to which faith his family adhere, attending St. Daniel's (Corner) Church. Mr. Brossman was an intelligent and useful citizen, progressive in his ideas, and public-spirited in his work for the advancement of his town and the cause of education. On Nov. 1, 1888, he was united in marriage with Emma Schwartz, born May 22, 1861, in Exeter township, daughter of John Schwartz and granddaughter of Major John Schwartz (1793-1860). (The last named gentleman was elected a congressman in 1858 from Berks county as an independent Democrat.) To Mr. and Mrs. Brossman were born six children, namely: Edith Elizabeth, Ruth Emma, Mabel Eve, Esther Louisa, Paul Isaac and Martha Catharine.

CALVIN H. ADAM, of Fleetwood, Berks county, is a prosperous young business man of that borough. He is a member of the firm of Schlegel, Adam & Company, dealers in grain, flour, lumber, coal, etc., and is energetic and enterprising. He was born June 29, 1869, in Greenwich township, near Virginville.

Jacob Adam, the great-grandfather of Calvin H., was a farmer and owned a tract of land in Richmond township, which he afterward sold to his son, Jacob. This farm is located a few miles east of Virginville and is known as the original Adam homestead. He married Susan Kline, daughter of Benjamin Kline, and they became the parents of these children: Sally Ann; William; Betsy; Jacob; John; Susan; Philip and Polly. Of this family John was born in 1812, and died in 1861. He was a prosperous farmer, owning 150 acres of good land in Richmond township near Moselem Church. In addition to farming he followed the trade of carpenter. At the age of twenty years he married Catherine Weidenheimer, of Richmond township, and they had these children: Caroline (m. Daniel Sittler, of Oley, Pa.); John W., retired, living in Fleetwood; Annie, deceased (m. George F. Henry, station agent); Frank W., a farmer near Kutztown; Sarah, (m. V. S. Reinhart, a grocer of Kutztown); Susanna, who died aged twenty-one years; Hettie (m. Frank Adam, of Germanville, Lehigh county); Malinda (m. James Mertz, supervisor of Maxatawny township for many years, and also supervisor years ago in Ruscombmanor township); Ella, who died aged twenty years; Allen W., who has resided in St. Louis, Mo., since 1876; William W., station agent at Virginville; and Louisa, the wife of S. S. Schappel of Windsor township, a well known leader of the Democratic ranks in Berks county.

John W. Adam, father of Calvin H., followed farming in Richmond township for many years, and now lives retired in his brick residence on Main street, Fleetwood. In 1871 he began the milling business in Heinley's Mill near Virginville, Pa., where he continued for fifteen years, when he engaged in farming in Richmond township, and there spent the next twenty-one years of his life, retiring in 1902. In 1868 he married Esther D. Heinley, daughter of the late Samuel and Mary (Dreibelbis) Heinley, and their children were as follows: Calvin H.; Mary K., (m. Alfred Schaeffer, of near Fleetwood); Amelia E., (m. Titus H. Schaeffer, a stone cutter of Fleetwood); Ida H. (m. Samuel H. Hoch, a school teacher of Fleetwood); and John S., a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College. Mr. John W. Adam is a member of the Reformed Church of Fleetwood, and has served as deacon, trustee and elder. In politics he is a Democrat and seldom misses an election.

When fifteen years of age Calvin H. Adam went with his parents to Richmond township, settling on the road leading from Kutztown to Fleetwood. His educational career was begun in the public schools of his native township, and in the spring of 1865 he attended the Keystone State Normal School. He later attended the spring sessions of 1886, 1887 and in the fall of 1888 began teaching school at Moselem Church, in Richmond township. He continued teaching in the same township for seven years at Stone Lane school and in the spring of 1895 again entered the Normal school, graduating in 1896. He was one of the intellectually strong members of his class, which numbered 120 pupils, and upon his graduation the patrons of the Stone Lane school district made a request of the school board for Professor Adam's reappointment as their teacher. He again served them acceptably for two terms, after which he was elected to teach the grammar school of the borough of Fleetwood, continuing there for five successive terms. After leaving the schoolroom, Mr. Adam began his business career. The firm of Schlegel, Adam & Company was formed, which at once received the patronage of the public. In addition to the selling of grain, lumber and coal, this firm does contract work, and in 1905 built six houses in the borough of Fleetwood for themselves, besides erecting other buildings for different parties.

Calvin H. Adam served his borough in the following capacities: auditor for four years, and councilman since 1904, serving as secretary of that body; is one of the directors, and was instrumental in getting the automobile works located in Fleetwood; and also took a leading part in having the Down Tool Works come to this town. He is an active Democrat and wields influence in his community, being public-spirited and energetic. He is a regular member of the Reformed Church of Fleetwood, and is superintendent of the Sunday school. He belongs to the K. G. E., Castle No. 374, Knights of Pythias No. 167, and others. He is a member of the Board of Trade. Mr. Adam lives with his family on Franklin street, Fleetwood, in his own residence.

On March 6, 1897, Mr. Adam was married to Miss Emily D. Schlegel, daughter of Abraham and Annie (Deysher) Schlegel, and to this union have been born: Helen Marguerite, Pauline Marie (who died aged two years), and Mary.

DANIEL F. FREY, who is engaged in butchering in Amityville, Berks county, was born in Pike township, same county, Nov. 19, 1867, son of William F. Frey and grandson of Daniel B. Frey.

Daniel B. Frey, the grandfather, was born May 15, 1813, and died June 25, 1894. By occupation he was a butcher and farmer. He lived in Pike township many years, and in Oley township he cultivated the present farm of Morris Haas. He was a Reformed member of Oley Church, where he is buried. He was twice married. His first wife, Elizabeth Imbody, died young, and is buried at Hill Church. To this union were born William F.; Martin, 1843-1897, a butcher at Pleasantville; Henry, a soldier in the Civil war; David, who lived at the Swamp; and Mary, m. to Charles Fretz. Daniel B. Frey m. (second) Christina Clauser, sister to Elizabeth (Clauser) Flicker (wife of Solomon Flicker); she was born Aug. 17, 1803, and died Nov. 22, 1881. No children were born of this union.

William F. Frey, son of Daniel B., was born in Pike township Feb. 7, 1837. He was hired out among farmers in his young manhood, and for twenty-one years he and his wife lived with David Lobach in Pike township, working his farm, and here all their children, except Daniel and Jacob, were born. In 1899 Mr. Frey located about a half a mile north of Pleasantville, and is now employed there. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church at Lobachsville. In January, 1864, Mr. Frey married Lydia Ann Flicker, born Dec. 26, 1841, in Oley township, daughter of Solomon and Elizabeth (Clauser) Flicker (the former a tanner by trade, and granddaughter of Jacob Flicker. Fourteen children were born of this union, namely: Daniel F.; Jacob, of Reading; Irwin, unmarried; David, of Amityville; Charles, of Pike township; Annie (m. Henry Schaffer, of Boyertown); Katie (m. Nathan Folk, of Oley Line); Edwin, unmarried, who perished in the Boyertown opera house fire Jan. 13, 1908, aged thirty years; and six who died in infancy—Willie, Fred, Frank, Morris and twin daughters.

Daniel F. Frey lived with his parents until he was eight years old, and then went to live with his uncle Joseph Flicker, a brother of his mother. There he lived nine years, and was then for six years hired out among farmers in Oley township. In 1891 he learned the butchering trade from William R. Rhoads, of Amityville, and worked for him for seven years, when his employer sold out his stock, good will and property at Amityville to Mr. Frey. He has since then been engaged in business for himself, employing three men, and killing on an average of three and four steers a week besides hogs and calves. He ships to the Reading abattoir and during the summer runs three wagons in his district. He has the support of the good people of his district. He has a good home in Amityville, and eleven acres of ground, all of which he manages well.

On Sept. 30, 1893, Mr. Frey married Debbie Minninger, daughter of Lewis and Elizabeth (Koch) Minninger, of Earl township, where the former is engaged as a small farmer and stone mason. Mr. and Mrs. Frey have two children, namely: Minnie M. and W. Jennings. Mr. Frey is a Democrat in politics, but has had too much business of his own to manage to take an active interest in party work. He is a member of Camp No. 213, P. O. S. of A., of Amityville; and the I. O. O. F., of Birdsboro. He and his family are Reformed members of the Church at Amityville, of which for eight years he was a deacon.

JOHN STARK, who retired from business sixteen years previous to his death, which occurred Oct. 3, 1907, on the fifty-third anniversary of his marriage, was one of the oldest residents of his section of Reading. He was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, Feb. 25, 1827, son of Conrad Stark, who was engaged in the butchering business in Germany, and who died in that country.

John Stark was educated in the schools of his native place, and there learned the trade of a butcher under his father. On Oct. 25, 1852, he landed at New York City, where, however, he did not remain for any length of time, but made his way to Philadelphia. There he was employed at his trade for two years, at the end of which time he came to Reading, where he afterward made his home. He engaged in killing beef, sheep, hogs, etc., carrying on a general butchering business until 1888, and being very successful therein. In the latter year he embarked in the milk business, which he engaged in for one year, after which he lived retired. His home at No. 307 Lombard street, was situated at the foot of Mt. Penn, where he first built in 1855, and in 1898 he erected his new modern residence. Mr. Stark was the owner of sixteen acres of land at Butterworth and Greenwich streets, but sold this for building purposes. He owned six acres adjoining his home and that of Peter D. Wanner in the Ninth ward, the property being very desirable and is continually rising in value. Years ago, when Mr. Stark purchased this land, it was barren and uncultivated, but subsequently it became one of the finest parts of the city.

On Oct. 3, 1854, Mr. Stark married Miss Antenlieth, a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, who came to this country in young womanhood, and these children were born to them: Amelia, deceased; Louisa (m. Henry Frentzel, of Reading); Bertha Agnes (m. Charles Egner, of Reading); Mary (m. Jacob Dearolf, of Reading); Ida (m. Ambrose Dotterer); George, a well known butcher in Reading. Mr. Stark was a Democrat in politics, and served in the Select Council from the Ninth ward from 1877 to 1880. He was a member of St. Luke's German Lutheran Church. He was a man of sound convictions and good judgment, and was very highly respected. Mrs. Stark died June 25, 1908, and with her husband rests in Aulenbach cemetery.

REVEREND DANIEL WIEAND, deceased, for many years well known in Reading and vicinity as an earnest worker in the ranks of the United Evangelical Church, was born in Lehigh county, Pa., in 1815.

Mr. Wieand received his preliminary education in the common schools of his native city, was prepared for the ministry and ordained. He preached the Gospel for about thirty years, the cause of his retirement from the ministry being a severe throat trouble. During the years of his preaching, Mr. Wieand was well known throughout Berks county, having pastorates at Reading, Harrisburg, Milford, Adamstown and other places. From 1868 until a short time prior to his death, Mr. Wieand was engaged in broommaking. He died at his home in Reading, No. 225 North Eighth street, Jan. 21, 1888, aged seventy-three years, twenty-one days, and was buried at Charles Evans cemetery.

Mr. Wieand was first married to Judith Grabill, and to them were born children as follows: Elizabeth (m. Frank White); Rev. William, who was a minister in the United Evangelical Church, died in 1902; and Mary, single, at the Eighth street home. Mr. Wieand's second marriage was to Mrs. Matilda Renninger, widow of Josiah Renninger. Mrs. Wieand was born April 15, 1822, daughter of Henry and Lydia (Spang) Gilbert, well-known people of Colebrookdale township, Berks county, where Mrs. Wieand's youth was spent. Her first husband was a well known business man of Colebrookdale township, and to them were born children as follows: Emma (m. Henry Rehr); Rosa (m. Jacob Rehr); and James, who m. Katie Williams, is in the contracting and building business in Reading. There were no children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wieand. Mrs. Wieand died May 5, 1907, at the Eighth street home, Reading; she was very well known and highly esteemed in the community.

SAMUEL T. IAEGER, of Reading, Pa., whose place of business is situated on Douglass street, is a manufacturing pharmacist and druggist. Mr. Iaeger was born in 1831, in Greenwich township, Berks county, son of Rev. G. F. Iaeger, a native of Wurtemberg, Germany.

Samuel T. Iaeger was educated in the schools of Berks county, and in 1849 entered Yale preparatory college, which he attended for about one year, also attending Pennsylvania College for one year. After leaving the latter institution he clerked for Mr. Clymer, a dry goods merchant who conducted a store at Fifth and Penn streets, after leaving whom Mr. Iaeger worked as a book agent until 1863, then becoming a traveling salesman for a dry goods house of Philadelphia, for which he worked until 1866. Mr. Iaeger then engaged in the manufacturing of perfumery at No. 718 Market street, Philadelphia, but after a short time came to Reading, where he continued in the same business until 1880. He then engaged in the manufacture of proprietary medicines, receiving in 1887 a certificate from the State Pharmaceutical Board under the new law of 1885. Among his well known remedies may be mentioned "Iaeger's Lightning Liniament," "Cough Pectoral," and "Family medicine," and in the sale of these he travels throughout the surrounding country and as far as Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington.

In 1853 Mr. Iaeger was married (first) to Sarah Trump, and to this union there were born four children, all now deceased. Mr. Iaeger's second marriage, in 1863, was to Sarah Fox, daughter of George Fox, and five children were born to this union: Elizabeth; Sarah; Annie; Florence; Charles, m. Kate Sloan and has three children, William, Samuel and Sarah. Mr. Iaeger is a Lutheran in his religious belief and politically is a Republican. Formerly he belonged to several social orders.

WELLINGTON R. LEVAN, whose death occurred in Reading April 11, 1900, had retired from business some years prior to his decease. He was born in the city of Reading, April 11, 1835, son of Abraham and Justina (Wrightmyer) Le Van.

Abraham Le Van was born in Maxatawny township, Berks county, and received his education in the common schools. In early life he was an engineer but on removing to Reading engaged in the grain and feed business, in which he became very successful. He married Justina Wrightmyer, and they had five children: Wellington R.; Mary (m. George East); Ellen, single; Emma, deceased; and an infant.

Wellington R. Le Van was educated in the schools of Reading, and when a young man learned the machinist's trade, which he followed for thirty-five years in the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, for many years being foreman of one of the departments. About three years prior to his death he retired from active work. Mr. Le Van was married in 1862 to Miss Kate Leitzinger, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Moyer) Leitzinger. Mrs. Le Van was born on the site of her present property. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Le Van: Mary M. m. William From, lives at Sinking Spring, Berks county, and has four children.—Mayme m. Charles E. Stott and has one child, Ruth, the only great grand-child of Mrs. LeVan, Geraldine, J. Wellington and Dorothy; Anna L., who m. C. H. Loveland, a native of New York State, now a resident of Winchester, Ky., has two children, Nancy L., and Le Van H.

Mr. Le Van was a member of Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., and of the I. O. O. F. He was a consistent member of the First Reformed Church. A good husband, a kind and affectionate father, a public-spirited citizen and honest, Christian gentleman, Wellington Le Van was known and respected all over the community in which he spent so many years. He was one of Reading's representative men.

HENRY F. FIDLER, a prominent citizen of the borough of Womelsdorf, Berks county, where he is engaged in an extensive cigar manufacturing business, was born there July 31, 1854, son of Isaac and Mary (Mathew) Fidler, and is a member of the old and honored Fidler family of Berks county, the ancestor of which, Henry Fidler, was a taxable in Tulpehocken township in 1759, where he paid a Federal tax of twenty-pounds. He had a number of children, one of whom was the great-grandfather of Henry F. Fidler.

John (Johan) Adam Fidler, grandfather of Henry F., was a farmer in Heidelberg township. He married Anna Maria Moyer, who bore him seven children: Isaac; David; Daniel; Augustus; Levi; Mary, m. a Mr. Schaffer, of Harrisburg; and Adam M., born Dec. 24, 1826, m. Sophia Hall (1826-1903) and had children, Mary, Emma, Morgan, Sarah, an infant, Henry, Catharine, Thomas, Isabella, Ellen, Rebecca, John, Clara and David, all deceased except Mary, Sarah, Catharine, Rebecca and Clara.

Isaac Fidler, son of John Adam and father of Henry F., was born Nov. 25, 1808, in Heidelberg township, and his death occurred at Womelsdorf April 9, 1863. Mr. Fidler was a shoemaker by trade, but in later life he purchased a farm, which he was cultivating at the time of his death. Isaac Fidler married Mary Mathew, born Oct. 19, 1808, who died Sept. 14, 1884, and to this union there were born children as follows: Angelina, m. John Shaffer, proprietor of the old "General Taylor House," Reading, for many years; Franklin, who died at Mahanoy City, Pa., July 6, 1876; John, born Oct. 29, 1836, who died and was buried at Womelsdorf in 1880; Isaac, who died at Womelsdorf in 1906; Mary, who is unmarried and resides with her brother Henry F.; Sarah, m. William A. Sallada, of Womelsdorf; Rebecca, m. William Ziegler, of Reading, both now deceased; Henry F.; and Ella, who died in infancy.

Henry F. Fidler, son of Isaac, obtained his education in the township schools, and in 1870 learned the cigar making trade with J. H. Balsley, of his native town. He followed the trade as a workman until 1880, at which time he embarked in the business on his own account, and he carried on this enterprise with much success until June 2, 1902, when he was succeeded by his sons, Henry I. and Edgar G., and his nephew, John I. Fidler, who are doing a flourishing business under the firm name of H. F. Fidler & Company. In 1903 Mr. Fidler erected a brick factory, three and one-half stories in height, 30 x 75 feet, and here are employed ninety-three first class workmen, manufacturing high grade hand-made cigars, which have won a reputation all over the country, among them the following brands: "Peyton Randolph, perfecto;" "Peyton Randolph, club house;" "H. F. & Company, perfecto;" and "Otho H. Williams," all ten-cent grade; and "El Rocco," "Reia Mia," "The Fidler," "Amavilla," "Conewango," "Paulo" and "Betty Van Lew," in five-cent cigars.

Mr. Fidler is a self made man, and has proved his business ability. Quick to see an advantage, he is just as quick to grasp it, and his foresight and capacity have made him the man to be chosen as prime mover in various large business deals and enterprises. He was a promoter of the Womelsdorf Union Bank, and for six months served on the board of directors; has been an auditor and general director of the Pennsylvania Trust Company since 1902, this being one of the strongest financial institutions in the county; was one of the organizers of the Lebanon County Trust Company, and for one year was one of its directors, resigning with the privilege of appointing his own successor; has been for some time a director of the Union cemetery of Womelsdorf; was one of the promoters of the Robesonia Water Company, of which he became treasurer and a director; and is a director and treasurer of the Womelsdorf Water Company. Mr. Fidler owns the homesteads of his wife's and his own parents, the former the old Keener homestead consisting of 126 acres in Tulpehocken township, and the latter of 115 3-4 acres in Marion township. These properties have been put in the best of condition by Mr. Fidler. He makes his home on the main (High) street of Womelsdorf, where he has resided for more than half a century.

In politics Mr. Fidler is a Republican in national affairs, while on local questions he is independent of party ties. He served in the town council for three years. In his religious belief he is Reformed, and he attends Womelsdorf Union Church, in which he is a trustee.

On Oct. 9, 1875, Mr. Fidler was married to Miss Kate Keener, daughter of Henry and Wilhelmina Keener, farming and milling people of Tulpehocken township, and to this union there were born three children, namely: Harry I., who married Lizzie Miller, daughter of John H. Miller, of Wernersville, Pa.; Edgar C.; and a son who died in infancy.

WILLIAM E. JACKSON, who recently moved with his family from Cumru township to Philadelphia, was born Jan. 4, 1866, in Reading, Pa., son of Charles H. and Amanda H. (Bushy) Jackson.

Ephraim Jackson, Sr., the progenitor of this family in Berks county, was a resident of Robeson township prior to 1750, and it is traditional that he was a relative of President Andrew Jackson. He had two sons: John, the great-grandfather of William E.; and Ephraim, Jr. whose will was probated in 1807, in which were mentioned these children: Thomas, Mary and Joseph; Lydia (m. Enos Morris); Sarah (m. Innis Thornton); Rachel (m. Jesse Rogers); Hannah (m. Isaac Morris); Susanna; and Mary (m. Iddings Barkley).

Elias Jackson, the grandfather of William E., was one of the first foundrymen of Kutztown, and a pioneer of that business in eastern Pennsylvania. For many years he lived in Kutztown, where he became prosperous and influential, giving employment to many people. Mr. Jackson married a Miss Runyeon, and to them were born seven children: Frank, who resided at Kutztown; Charles H., the father of William E.; Andrew and Robert, who lost their lives during the Civil war; Amanda (m. Allen Fritch); Annie (m. David Kline); and John, m. Amelia Noll, by whom he had four children, Robert, Annie, Emma and John.

Charles H. Jackson was born Nov. 10, 1833, in Hereford township, Berks county, and died Dec. 3, 1900, at Kutztown. Until fourteen years of age he lived in Philadelphia, after which he came with his parents to Kutztown, and there learned the molding trade in his father's shop, where he worked until 1860. In this year he located in Reading, working at his trade in that city until his retirement, a few years prior to his demise, returning to Kutztown. Mr. Jackson was buried in the Aulenbach cemetery, Reading. In politics he was a Republican, and fraternally he was connected with the I. O. O. F., for many years. He married Amanda H. Bushy who was born March 2, 1837, and who died Sept. 3, 1885, daughter of Samuel Bushy. Thirteen children were born to them, namely: Mary A., who died in infancy; Annie, who died at the age of twelve years; Sallie, m. G. W. Snyder; Charles, m. Kate Young; Kate, m. H. W. Mohr; Frances, m. Llewellyn Shearer; William E.; George, who died in childhood; John, who was married; Samuel, m. Mary Miller; Robert, m. Rosa Kline; Emma, m. Harry W. Wagner; and Florence, who died single at the age of twenty-four years.

William E. Jackson was reared in Reading and secured a good common school education, completing the grammar grades when sixteen years of age. He learned the molding trade at the Adam Johnson foundry, Eighth and Chestnut streets, and with this firm he continued for more than ten years, after which he worked for one year with the Dixon Foundry Company, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and in 1898, he became associated with the Reading Stove Works as a molder. He was soon promoted to a foremanship, filling his position with ability for six years, and in 1906 he accepted a like position with the Abraham Cox Stove Company, of Philadelphia, a position in which he is now serving. Mr. Jackson is a skilled foundryman and has inherited much of his ability from his ancestors, who were early engaged in that business in this section.

In politics Mr. Jackson is a Republican. In 1905 he was elected a school director of Cumru township, and as such in various ways helped to advance the educational interests of the community. During his term in office in the capacity of school director the high school was advanced from a second grade to a first grade school, and janitors were employed in the graded school buildings. Mr. Jackson is a charter member of Washington Camp No. 329, P. O. S. of A., of Reading. He is a member of the Iron Molders Union of America, in the local branch of which he has held all the important offices; was one of the organizers of Local No. 208, of Dover, N. J.; and is also connected with the Foundry Foremen's Association of Philadelphia. He and his family are connected with the First Reformed Church of Reading.

On Jan. 15, 1887, Mr. Jackson was united in marriage with Miss Annie L. Moyer, daughter of Cyrus D. and Matilda (Armon) Moyer, the former of whom was a machinist of Reading. To Mr. and Mrs. Jackson five children have been born, as follows: Edna M., born in 1887; William M., Dec. 29, 1889; Leon R., July 14, 1893; Harold C., July 29, 1900; and Alfred I., April 3, 1903.

AMANDUS E. HENRY was born June 11, 1869, in West Penn township, Schuylkill county, son of Adam and Katie (Hoppes) Henry, and grandson of Philip Henry.

Adam Henry, the father, was born in 1850 in Carbon county. He removed to Schuylkill county and spent some years there, subsequently returning to Carbon county where the remainder of his life was spent. He followed the trade of a butcher and he died in 1882. He was buried at the Mahanoy Church, in West Penn township, Schuylkill county. He married Katie Hoppes, who survives him and makes her home with he son Michael. They had the following children: Amandus E.; Charles M.; Lizzie A., who is married and lives in Philadelphia; Emma, m. Robert Bell, of Philadelphia; and Michael, who is a farmer in Carbon county.

Amandus E. Henry was reared to farming, and until his twenty-fourth year hired out among the farmers of his district, but after his marriage he entered his father-in-law's employ as foreman and boss for a period of ten years. He then removed to his father-in-law's farm in Spring township. Mr. Henry is an excellent farmer, and to this fact the condition of his farm amply testifies. He does considerable dairying and ships his milk to the creamery at Sinking Spring. In his political belief Mr. Henry is a Democrat. He and his family worship at the Lutheran Church.

In 1893 Mr. Henry married Miss Clara K. Bittner, daughter of Daniel F. Bittner, who is mentioned elsewhere in this publication, and four children have been born to this union: Leon D., Helen S., Blanche E. and Raymond E.

LEWIS G. KRIEBEL, a miller in the eastern section of Hereford township, was born where he now resides, on the Israel Kriebel homestead, Oct. 2, 1868, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Griesemer) Kriebel.

(I) George Kriebel came to Pennsylvania in 1734, a member of a little band of Schwenkfelders who emigrated hither from Silesia, Germany. On Nov. 25, 1740, he married Susanna Kriebel, daughter of Balthaser and Regina (Yeakel) Kriebel, and they had two sons: George, born July 11, 1744; and Andrew, Sept. 17, 1748. George Kriebel died Sept. 2, 1778, and his wife Susanna, Sept. 14, 1775.

(II) George Kriebel, son of George and Susanna, born July 11, 1744, was killed by a stone falling on his head while he was cleaning out his well, Sept. 14, 1792.

He married Esther, daughter of George Wiegner, and she died Feb. 13, 1816. They had four children: Christopher, born Sept. 27, 1774, died June 2, 1779; George, born July 28, 1777, died May 28, 1779; Christopher (2), born Oct. 8, 1779; and Susanna, born Nov. 11, 1782, died Feb. 15, 1789.

(III) Christopher Kriebel, son of George and Esther, born Oct. 8, 1779, died Sept. 12, 1822. He married Regina, widow of Isaac Kriebel, and daughter of Rev. Melchoir Schultz, the ceremony taking place Nov. 12, 1807. She died Feb. 28, 1870. They had two children: Susanna, born Sept. 21, 1808, died May 27, 1875; and Bathsheba, born July 8, 1819.

(II) Andrew Kriebel, son of George the emigrant, married, May 6, 1771, Susanna, daughter of Abraham Yeakel. She died April 22, 1808, aged fifty-seven years, five months, fourteen days. He passed away April 17, 1830. They had nine children as follows: Rosanna, born 1773, married, 1818, Daniel Diehl, and died 1836; Abraham, born Sept. 27, 1774; Samuel, born June 13, 1776; George, born Oct. 2, 1778, died May 20, 1779; Regina, born June 25, 1780; David, born July 19, 1783; Sophia, born Nov. 1, 1785; Salome, born Dec. 9, 1787; and Israel, born Sept. 14, 1790.

(III) Abraham Kriebel, son of Andrew and Susanna, born Sept. 27, 1774, was a miller and owned the mill property now in the possession of William Kriebel, in Worcester township, Montgomery county. He died April 7, 1844. On June 4, 1801, he married Christina, daughter of Abraham Kriebel, and their children were: Sophia, born Nov. 23, 1802; Isaac, March 20, 1804; Maria, March 17, 1806; Sophia (2), April 17, 1810; Catharine, June 9, 1813; Anna, Feb. 20, 1818; and Sarah (1821-1848).

(III) Samuel Kriebel, son of Andrew and Susanna, born June 13, 1776, died Feb. 1, 1841. On Jan. 3, 1802, he married Christina, daughter of Melchoir Schultz, and she died April 21, 1819, the mother of Sarah, Susanna, Lydia, Elizabeth and William. He married (second) July 24, 1824, Catharine, daughter of Henry Leatherack, and to this union was born one daughter, Sophia.

(III) David Kriebel, son of Andrew and Susanna, born July 19, 1783, died July 1, 1842. On May 24, 1810, he married Rosina, daughter of David Schultz, and she died Dec. 27, 1817, the mother of three children: Anna, Mary and Philip. David Kriebel married (second) in 1819, Elizabeth Alderfer, who died Aug. 12, 1878. The children of the second marriage were: Henry, Susanna, Magdalena, Septimus, Barbara, Hannah and Elizabeth.

(III) Israel Kriebel, son of Andrew and Susanna, born Sept. 14, 1790, was a miller and lived near Chapel, in Hereford township, Berks county. He died June 14, 1860. On May 6, 1819, he married Sarah, daughter of Rev. John Schultz, and she died in March, 1859. They had thirteen children: Christina, born Oct. 12, 1820, died Oct. 10, 1864; John, born Feb. 4, 1822; Samuel, born Nov. 11, 1823, died June 16, 1825; Susanna, born Jan. 8, 1825; Elizabeth, born Aug. 10, 1826; Henry, March 25, 1828; Elias, Oct. 13, 1829; Regina, Oct. 7, 1831; Joseph, 1833 (died 1858); Andrew, Aug. 8, 1835; Anna, 1838 (died 1845); Sarah, 1841 (died 1845); and Mary, July 14, 1846.

(IV) Henry Kriebel, son of Israel, born March 25, 1828, in Washington township, Berks county, came with his parents to what is now Kriebel's Mill in Hereford when a small boy. He lived the remainder of his life there and died Nov. 10, 1893. As a young man he became a miller and he conducted the oil mill and grist mill until his death, assuming charge of the mill when his father died. At that time 125 acres of good land were connected with the mill property, and this was divided into two tracts after the death of Henry Kriebel in 1893, the mill and twenty-five acres going to the son, Lewis G., and the rest to another son, Calvin G. Henry Kriebel manufactured much linseed oil, employing five or six persons. The flax was hauled from Upper Berks and Lehigh counties in large conestoga wagons, with four horses. The oil was sold in the surrounding country and was used in the mixture of paints. The mill was operated by water power, being located on the north branch of the Perkiomen creek, and it was the last oil mill in the township. Mr. Kriebel was a member of the Schwenkfelder church and was buried at Washington Meeting House. He served the township as Republican committeeman for more than a quarter of a century. He was school director, assistant township assessor, auditor, and at one time was the candidate of his party for county treasurer. Mr. Kriebel was twice married. By his first wife, Mary Wiegner, he had three children of whom two died in infancy, and the other, a son, Prof. Howard W., is now the publisher of the Pennsylvania German, a widely circulated magazine published at East Greenville. Mr. Kriebel married (second) Elizabeth Griesemer, daughter of Gabriel Griesemer, and nine children were born of this union, namely: Dr. Elmer, located at Centre Point, Pa.; Lewis G.; Calvin G., who lives on a part of the homestead; Owen, who died in infancy; Regina, who married Horace Gery; Sallie, who married Adam Urffer; Andrew G., a butcher in Hereford township, who married Ellen Gery; Dr. Asher G., who married Bertha Heebner, and lives at Lynnville; and Henry G., of Alburtis.

(V) Lewis G. Kriebel, son of Henry, received his education in the public schools of his native township, and was only a boy when he learned the milling trade from his father. He worked for his father until he was twenty-one years old, and as his father died soon after he assumed charge of the mill, and since the spring of 1895 has been conducting it, enjoying a good trade. As stated above there is a twenty-five acre tract of land connected with the mill. The present brick house was built in 1845 by Israel Kriebel, and the stone house near the mill by Henry Kriebel. The present mill was built in 1837 by Israel Kriebel, and was formerly used for oil, but since 1894 this part has been abandoned, and it is now used wholly as a grist mill. Mr. Kriebel is a very successful young business man, and he takes a keen interest in whatever is going on about him. From 1895 to 1907 he kept two men busy crushing stone. In politics he is a Republican, and since the spring of 1908 he has been the committeeman of his township, and he has also served as inspector of his precinct, and census enumerator. He is a member of the Schwenkfelder Church. He belongs to Perkiomen Lodge, No. 595, F. & A. M., of East Greenville. Mr. Kriebel is a musician and he plays the clarionet in the East Greenville Band. During the ten years existence of the Hereford Band he was its leader.

On Dec. 24, 1888, Mr. Kriebel was married to Katie Bittenbender, daughter of John and Mary (Hallman) Bittenbender, of Siesholtzville, and the only child of this union, Florence, is now deceased.

GRANT E. ALLEMAN, one of the successful business men of Shoemakersville, Perry township, Berks county, Pa., who is carrying on an extensive coal business, was born May 13, 1866, at Akron, O., son of Peter and Magdalena (Yiengst) Alleman.

The founder of the family in America, Heinrich Ahleman, emigrated from Hamburg in 1795, landing at Philadelphia from the brig "Minerva," Dec. 15th of that year. His son, Henry, had ten children as follows: Henry; Leonard; Benjamin; Peter; John; Elizabeth; Catherine; Rosa; Maria and Susanna. Of these children Peter Alleman became the father of Grant E. He was reared to the occupation of a miller near Beele Grove, in Dauphin county, but resided for a number of years in Ohio, Illinois and Kansas, in which states he carried on his trade, later returning to Pennsylvania, continuing there until his death in 1899, in his fifty-eighth year. He married Magdalena Yiengst, daughter of Henry Yiengst, a blacksmith of Black Oak Hill, Lebanon county, four children being born to this union: Catherine, who married Joshua Haldeman, Grant E., and two boys who died in infancy. Mr. Alleman married (second) Sarah Long, daughter of George Long of Dauphin county, and nine children were born to this union, four of whom died young.

Grant E. Alleman was still an infant when his father removed to Illinois, and after remaining there for eight years located at Union Deposit, Pa., where young Alleman was educated until thirteen years of age. He then lived in the West for three years and on his return was engaged at store-keeping in Union Deposit, and also in butchering until twenty-four years of age. He then removed to Lebanon and there continued in butchering for nearly three years, the next three years being spent in Reading in the butchering and restaurant business.

In 1897 Mr. Alleman established himself in the coal washery enterprise at Palmyra, taking drift coal out of the bed of the Swatara river, washing it, and marketing it in three sizes. He remained at Palmyra three years, then locating at Shoemakersville, Berks county, to engage in the same business, and in this he has continued successfully to the present time. He established washeries also at Stoudt's Ferry and Port Clinton dam in the Schuylkill, and in 1904 produced 9,000 tons of coal and in 1905 12,000 tons, showing the result of his enterprise. Mr. Alleman also erected a machine-shop at Shoemakersville for preparing his boats and making repairs.

In 1886 Mr. Alleman was married to Lizzie Shakespeare, daughter of George W. Shakespeare of Dauphin county, and to them four children have been born: three sons who died in boyhood, and a daughter, Catherine.

NICHOLAS H. KIRK, a well-known resident of Perry township, who is superintendent of the Schuylkill Valley Clay Manufacturing Company, at Shoemakersville, was born in Philadelphia, Feb. 9, 1867, son of David E. Kirk, of that city.

William Haines Kirk of Chester county, who was the grandfather of Nicholas H., was born in 1811 and died in 1897. He was twice married, his first wife being a Miss Brown, by whom he had four children: David E.; Hannah, m. Anson Kimball; George, who died young; and Rufus, m. Sarah House. His second wife was Mary House, sister of his son's wife, and to them were born two children. David E. Kirk, of the above family, was born in Lower Nottingham township, Chester county, in 1836, and in 1865 removed to Philadelphia. He married Rachel House, of Chester county, and Nicholas H., above mentioned, was the only child of this union.

Nicholas H. Kirk was educated in the public schools, and after graduating from the senior class of the grammar school qualified himself for business by taking a course in the Crittenden Commercial College, then following bookkeeping for ten years. He also filled the position of manager for a cement and coal firm for eight years until 1900, when he located at Shoemakersville, Berks county, and at this place became superintendent of the Schuylkill Valley Clay Manufacturing Company, having successfully directed its operations to the present time. It is one of the largest industrial plants operated in the Schuylkill Valley above Reading. Mr. Kirk is held in high esteem by his fellow-townsmen and in 1903 was elected a school director of the township, but after a year was obliged to resign, his duties at the Clay works demanding all of his time and attention, for, as one of the directors of the Board, he takes an active part in the management of the enterprise.

Mr. Kirk was married to Annie E. Staples of Philadelphia in 1888, and three children were born to this union: Ethel, Edith and Edwin.

DR. JOHN D. RUPP, practicing physician at Shoemakersville, Perry township, Berks county, was born at Chapman's, in Lehigh county, Pa., Dec. 14, 1854, son of Benjamin and Mary Ann (Rauch) Rupp, and grandson of Jacob Rupp, the latter of whom emigrated to America on the ship "Crawford," landing at Philadelphia, Oct. 16, 1772.

Benjamin Rupp was born in 1800 at Chapman's, and was there reared to farming, a pursuit which he followed all of his life, his death occurring in 1862. His wife, who had been Mary Ann Rauch, daughter of John Rauch of Snyder county, was born in 1828 and died in 1901, and their children were: Harry, unmarried; Benjamin m. Esther McLean; Dr. John D.; Mary m. Wilson Hartzell, and Anna m. William Roth, the last two named being of Allentown.

Dr. John D. Rupp received his preliminary education in the public schools of his native town, and, having prepared himself for the study of medicine, attended New York Medical College, from which he was graduated in 1878. After traveling for a time, he located at the village of Molltown, in Richmond township, Berks county, in 1880 for the practice of his profession, and he remained there in active practice for twelve years, when he removed to Shoemakersville, where he has continued to the present time, with much success.

In 1880 Dr. Rupp was married to Alice Schlegel, daughter of Peter and Caroline (Hawkins) Schlegel of Fleetwood, granddaughter of Abraham Schlegel, and great granddaughter of Heinrich Schlegel, who was a son of the ancestor, Christian Schlegle, who emigrated to America prior to 1750. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Rupp: Harry, who married Annie Dries, a daughter of Cyrus Dries of Perry township; Mary; Blanche, and Laura.

WILLIAM I. FRICK, a resident of Douglass township, Berks county, who is in the Railway Mail Service, was born at Pottstown, Pa., and comes of a substantial family whose early home was in Wurtemberg, Germany.

William C. Frick, father of William I., was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, and was but two years of age when brought by his parents to America. The family located in Pottstown, Pa., and there William C. passed his youth and early manhood. After his marriage he moved to Barto, the terminus of the Colebrookdale branch of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad, on which he was baggage master for twenty-seven years. He began farming in 1894, owning a fine little farm of thirty-five acres. He died in 1908, aged fifty-nine years, six months, and is buried at Pottstown. He was a man of considerable intelligence, and was highly esteemed by the community in which he lived. In politics he was a Democrat, and he served as roadmaster under the new road law, in Douglass township, dying while in office. In his religious faith he was a New Mennonite, and was a member of that church at Bally and was active in the Sunday-school, in which he was a teacher. For many years he was president of the Christian Endeavor Association. His wife, Catharine (Shriner) Frick, is still living, and makes her home in Pottstown. They had eight children, namely: Albert, of Philadelphia; William I.; Morris, of Pottstown; Leroy, of Pottstown; Carrie, m. Edward Kieffer; Catharine and Mamie, unmarried; and Amy.

William I. Frick accompanied his parents to Barto in 1878, and there passed his boyhood days, attending the common schools of Washington township. He learned telegraphy when sixteen years old, and at eighteen was station agent at the Manatawny Station on the Colebrookdale branch of the Philadelphia & Reading, filling that office with ability for twelve years. He then resigned to enter the railway mail service, taking the civil service examination at Philadelphia. He is now on the New York and Pittsburg branch. He is quick and accurate and has made a success of his chosen calling.

Fraternally Mr. Frick is a member of Manatawny Lodge, No. 341, I. O. O. F., and of the Royal Arcanum, at Pottstown. He and his family belong to Zion's Reformed Church at Pottstown.

Mr. Frick married Sarah M. Focht, daughter of Mahlon and Catharine (Mauger) Focht, of Douglass township, and they have three children, two sons and one daughter, namely: Mahlon, Frederick and Catharine.

KLEINGINNA. (I) John Adam Kleinginna, grandfather of Adam L. Kleinginna, of Bern township, Berks county, was a native of Cumru township, moving thence to Bern in middle life. He owned the tract of land now the property of Adam L. Kleinginna, and was a shoemaker as well as farmer. On Feb. 9, 1809, he married Maria Seiler, born June 1, 1788, daughter of Jacob and Barbara Seiler, died March 18, 1876, aged eighty-seven years, nine months, seventeen days. Mr. Kleinginni was born May 3, 1783, and died March 15, 1861, aged seventy-seven years, ten months, twelve days. He and his wife are buried at Epler's Church. They had a family of six children, three sons and three daughters: John; Polly m. George Leininger; Anna m. John Strunk; Sally m. Joseph Kettelman; Daniel lived at Pottsville, Pa., and had a son, John, who was accidentally killed on the railroad; Joseph is mentioned in the next paragraph.

(II) Joseph Kleinginna, son of John Adam, was born in December, 1825, on the original Kleinginna homestead in Cumru township, and moved with his father to Bern township, where he owned a tract of land which is now in the possession of his son, Adam L., comprising twenty-nine acres. He was a successful farmer, a man of intelligence and highly respected, and he served as tax collector in Bern township. He died Nov. 1, 1892, and is buried at Epler's Church. Mr. Kleinginna married Leah Leisey, born Oct. 12, 1832, daughter of Peter Leisey, of Lancaster county, Pa., and she lives at Reading. Ten children were born to them: Adam L.; Sarah (Mrs. D. M. Blatt); Lydia, deceased; Mattie, deceased; Agnes, deceased; Joseph, deceased; Kate; George L.; Mary, deceased; and Lizzie (Mrs. John Fulmer), deceased.

(III) Adam L. Kleinginna, son of Joseph, was born Jan. 12, 1852, in Bern township, on the farm of his paternal grandfather, and was reared to farming. He received his early education in the common schools, and when nineteen years old went to Prof. D. B. Brunner's Academy, at Reading, in 1871 receiving a license to teach. He followed the profession for five terms, the first one in Brecknock township, the other four in Oley township, and for one summer he was engaged at Greshville, Lebanon county, Pa. When twenty-two years old he began life on his own account. After giving up teaching he worked for his father-in-law, Peter Snyder, of Oley township, on the farm and in the mill, as general man, for thirteen and a half years. In 1889 he moved to Spring township, where he cultivated a fifty-acre farm for a year, and then moved to Exeter township, where he resided four years. After his father's death he bought the home place, which he carried on until 1905. He has since given his time to the duties of the office of township assessor, and since 1907 has also served as health officer of Bern and Spring townships, to which position he was appointed. He is a Democrat in political connection.

Mr. Kleinginna was married Feb. 27, 1875, to Mary Snyder, who was born in Oley township in 1854, and died in 1893. She is buried in Oley township, in the private burial ground of the Snyder family. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Adam L. Kleinginna: Alvin S., of Bern township; George S., a resident of Shillington, Cumru township; Annie L., m. Fred Smith, of Reading; Peter S., of Bern township; and Elmer S., a student at the Williams' School, in Delaware county, Pennsylvania.

(IV) Peter S. Kleinginna was born April 8, 1882, in Oley township, and received his elementary education in the common schools, later taking a course in Kirst's Commercial School in Reading, where he learned shorthand and typewriting. He was reared to farming, spending his early years in Oley, Spring, Exeter and Bern townships, this county, but since he was ten years old has been a resident of Bern township, whither the family moved in 1892. In the spring of 1905 he began farming and dairying on his own account, feeling that his experience would warrant the venture. For six years previously he had hauled milk for his father, and upon the latter's retirement the son continued the milk route to Reading, at present selling an average of two hundred quarts of milk daily. He owns a tract of thirty-two and a half acres, which he purchased in 1907 from A. U. Hain. He keeps five horses and usually six head of cattle.

On April 8, 1905, Mr. Kleinginna was married to Miss Clara M. Walters, daughter of Joseph W. and Mary A. (Seltzer) Walters, of Tamaqua, Pa., and to them has been born one son, Clarence P. Mr. Kleinginna is a member of the Reformed Church, while Mrs. Kleinginna clings to the faith of the Lutheran denomination.

LUTHER A. RHODE, a member of the firm of Neff H. Rhode & Brother, dealers in bicycles and sundries at Reading, Pa., was born there Feb. 24, 1863, son of William H. and Mary Ann Neff.

Mr. Rhode was educated in the public schools at Reading. He learned the carriage painter's trade with William H. Wetherold, and after working with him nine years engaged in a grocery business at No. 27 South Seventh street. For five years he had charge of the bicycle department of Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart. Later he became associated with his brother, and began to buy second hand bicycles and repair them, leaving them on the side walk where they would attract attention. His trade in these machines gradually grew, and subsequently he and his brother established the business that has expanded into the largest repair business in the city. So much for enterprise. For three years in addition to their bicycle repair business, and their agencies for all the leading makes, they manufactured what was known as the Cracker Jack Combination hammer, and Mr. Rhode made all the models for these, the patentee, Jacob A. Wummer, being his partner under the firm name of the Franklin Specialty Company. After an existence of three years the firm sold out to C. C. Ludwig and Harry Fahrbach.

Mr. Rhode married Rosa B. Nunnemacher, daughter of Benjamin Nunnemacher, of Berks county, and they have two sons: William L., a machinist with the Acme Auto Works of Reading, m. Carrie Rhein, and has a daughter, Rosa; and Albert B., who is becoming a through bicycle builder, working in the Rhode Brothers Bicycle Works. The family home is at No. 749 Franklin street. In politics Mr. Rhode is a Republican. Fraternally he is a member of the Red Men; the Metacomet Haymakers Association; The Philharmonic and Cadet Band; the Electric Wheelmen (of which he is a charter member, and which in 1897 had a club run with 150 wheels in line, going out to Yellow House). Mr. Rhode and his family belong to St. James Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM RATHJE. One of the few dealers, indeed, if not the only one, who became a tenant of the Farmers' market, on Penn street, near Ninth, when it was first opened in 1872, and is still there, is William Rathje, of Cumru, whose farm is located half a mile from the Freeman post-office. Mr. Rathje was born March 8, 1839, in Hanover, Germany, son of Dietrich and Christian (Geskiske) Rathje.

Dietrich Rathje was born June 9, 1813, and in Germany was a trucker. He came to America in April, 1853, landing at New York City, from whence he came at once to Reading, Pa., being for three years employed at Fair's vineyard. He then removed to Cumru township, and purchased a farm of forty-eight acres of land, on which he remained several years, when he purchased the farm adjoining, this being his home until his death, in July, 1889, at the age of seventy-five years. Mr. Rathje married Christina Geskiske, who died Aug. 6, 1887, and to them were born: Mary, the wife of Christian Breidenstone of Cumru township; Dora, who married Peter Freeman, of Cumru township; William; and George C. and George H. D., both deceased.

William Rathje attended the schools of his native country and two months in America, after which he began working on his father's farm. At the age of twenty-four years he assumed charge of the stand of his father at the Reading market house on Penn square. Mr. Rathje had "stood" for his parent for ten years when, on April 26, 1863, he married Susan Bridenstein, daughter of Philip and Annie (Lebo) Bridenstein. Mr. Rathje then became an agriculturist himself and sold his products at the Penn square resort for nine years. Then the Farmers' West Reading and South Reading market houses were erected, and Mr. Rathje, in May, 1872, leased a stall in the first-named. With the Penn square still existing, the new enterprises did not take well at the beginning, and the Cumru tiller of the soil returned to the latter. Before the year was out the Penn square structures were condemned and became past history, and Mr. Rathje went back to the Farmers' and has been "standing" there ever since. For two years this veteran marketer occupied a stall in the west aisle, where the Reiniger Bros., of Stony Creek, now sell truck. In 1874 he rented stand No. 137, the last of the east row of stands in the west aisle, and the first as the aisle is entered from Cherry street, and since that time he has been offering vegetables, fruit and miscellaneous edibles there. For twenty years his wife has been assisting him. She is a little woman, energetic and alert, and her health is just as good as that of a woman of her age can be. The faces of the couple are familiar to thousands of patrons of this market house, and although they do not have as large a stand as many dealers, they possess a generous share of the trade, and what is more, when householders once buy at this stall, they generally become regular customers.

Mr. Rathje, for years during the fore part of his market career, made prime specialties of strawberries and raspberries, and sold large quantities. He made their culture a study and offered among the best cultivated. For a number of years he has brought to market a variety of foods from the gardens, fields and trees, but his apples are especially fine and every purchaser who has once tried them says: "Mr. Rathje certainly has the apples!" He has 300 trees, some twenty years old, and he cares for them as though they were human beings. The trees, with barely an exception, are reliable yielders, and Mr. Rathje places the crop of winter apples, or those he puts in cold storage for the cold weather trade, at approximately 150 barrels. The summer apples aggregate about 500 bushels, these being the picked stock. Among his principal varieties are Baldwin, Smokehouse, Bellflower and Pound, all excellent sellers. He gets from ten to fifteen cents a half peck, and for a score or more of years has enjoyed a satisfactory trade.

Mr. Rathje's farm comprises about seventy acres, and he takes pride in the fact that it was the one originally belonging to his father. When acquired by the elder Rathje, William was fourteen years old. Since then he has resided there and made a livelihood from it. Farms frequently change hands, but this one has not been sold in sixty years. While raising some grain and farm products in general, Mr. Rathje pays most attention to his apples. The supply of his raspberries and strawberries has dwindled of recent years, not because the soil has deteriorated, but on account of the trouble in securing pickers.

Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rathje, namely: Henry, a farmer and school director of Cumru township, m. Catherine Kochel, and has three children, Edith, Venda and Blanche; Catherine, who resides at home (is the widow of Edward Heffer, and has two sons, John and William); Lizzie (m. O. D. Wentzel, of Reading, has two children, Leona and May O.); William (m. Bessie Strohecker, of Oakbrook, Pa., has four children, Carol W., Adele, Floy and Susan); Charles, a farmer of Robeson township, m. Jane Behm; and Clarence, unmarried, a machinist of Reading. In political matters Mr. William Rathje is a Democrat, and he has served his township in the position of school director. He is a member of Yocom's Lutheran Church.

Christian Bridenstein, the great-grandfather of Mrs. Rathje, was a native of Germany, but prior to the Revolutionary war came to America and settled in Berks county. Here he owned a tract of 360 acres of land and erected a house and barn, the former of which is still standing, in an excellent state of preservation. He married a Miss Messner, and to them were born two sons: Christian and Leonard. Christian Bridenstein, son of Christian, married Catherine Bixler, and four children were born to them: Christian, Philip, Susan and Sally.

Philip Bridenstein, son of Christian (2), and father of Mrs. Rathje, was married to Hannah (or Anna) Lebo, and four children were born to this union, namely: John, Eliza, Susan (Mrs. Rathje) and Christian.

ALBERT H. MELLERT, formerly superintendent of the Drummond Iron Works, at Reading, but now stationed at No. 181 Broadway, New York, as consulting engineer for Mr. M. J. Drummond, was born Nov. 14, 1858, in Reading, Pa., son of Arnold and Mary B. (Phillippi) Mellert.

John Mellert, grandfather of Albert H., was born Dec. 21, 1790, in Haslach, Kinzighal, Grossherzogthum Baden, Germany. As a small boy he went to Paris, France, where he learned the lock maker's trade. He emigrated to America Aug. 10, 1833, arriving in New York Oct. 2d, and in Philadelphia, Oct. 4th of that year. After spending nine months in Philadelphia, he came to Reading, Pa., June 9, 1834, and here carried on a locksmithing business for many years. It is traditional that he made the locks for the old Berks County Courthouse. Later in life Mr. Mellert engaged in the stove business, which he conducted with a Mr. Dauth, on Penn street, between Fifth and Sixth streets. Later he located in the Weitzel building, near Third and Penn streets, but finally embarked in the foundry business under the firm name of Mellert & Sons, which he continued until his death, Feb. 8, 1869, when he was aged seventy-eight years. On May 1, 1848, he erected the foundry at Second and Grape streets. The historical freshet of 1850 flooded the foundry to the depth of six feet. On Oct. 2, 1823, John Mellert married Mary Ann Hinterskirch, born Jan. 23, 1791, and died Oct. 11, 1865. On Aug. 23, 1839, with her four children—Charles, Magnus, Constantina and Otto—she sailed from Germany for America. In May, 1837, had emigrated Arnold (son of John and Mary Ann) and his step-sister Adelheid, who landed at Amboy, N. J., Aug. 1, 1837. To John and Mary Ann (Hinterskirch) Mellert came children as follows: Arnold, born June 24, 1824, died May 17, 1886; Charles, born Jan. 12, 1826, died 1859; Magnus, born Sept. 4, 1827, died Oct. 26, 1889; Constantina, born May 17, 1830, now living in Baltimore, is the widow of John Sheeler, member of the firm of Isaac Shepherd & Co., stove founders; and Otto, born March 5, 1832, died Feb. 15, 1897. All the children were born in Haslach.

Arnold Mellert, son of John and father of Albert H., was born as above stated in Haslach, Germany, June 24, 1824, emigrating in 1837. He became a member of the firm of Mellert & Sons on its organization by his father. He had learned the locksmith's business as a lad, and was a natural mechanic, there being no kind of machine which he could not operate. For many years he was the traveling representative of the firm, and he was serving as such at the time of his death, May 17, 1886. Mr.

Mellert was married to Mary B. Phillippi, daughter of John Phillippi, and three of their children survive, namely: Kate, m. to Peter D. Wanner; Albert H.; and Agnes L. Mrs. Mellert died Jan. 30, 1908, aged eighty-two years, nine months, seven days. She was a member of St. James Lutheran Church.

Albert H. Mellert was educated in the common schools of Reading, Pa., and as a boy worked in the Mellert machine shops, where he learned the trade, an occupation in which he was engaged until 1887, when he became superintendent of the Mellert plant and Reading Foundry Company. At the time the North Reading plant was purchased by the Drummond Iron Company, Mr. Mellert was still retained by the company as superintendent, in which capacity he had charge of 350 men. This company manufactured cast iron gas and water pipes, and sold its product all over the country. In 1907 the plant was dismantled, and Mr. Mellert, continuing in the employ of Mr. M. J. Drummond, was sent to Lynchburg, Va., where he became general manager of the Glamorgan Pipe & Foundry Company. He remained there until Jan. 1, 1909, when he was transferred to the main office No. 181 Broadway, New York, where he was made consulting engineer. Since 1877 he and his sister Agnes L. have maintained their residence at No. 634 North Third street, Reading.

Mr. Mellert is a member of Chandler Lodge No. 227, F. & A. M., Excelsior Chapter, Reading Commandery, Harrisburg Consistory, and Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is also connected with the Washington Library and the Temple Club. His religious connection is with St. James Lutheran Church.

WILLIAM H. DECHANT, C. E., a civil engineer and surveyor, located at No. 536 Penn street, Reading, Pa., began the struggle for self support without means in the capacity of messenger boy on the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, and by perseverance and industry has worked his way up to his present enviable standing in the community. He was born in Perry county, Ohio, and is a son of Rev. Frederick W. and Angeline (Boyer) Dechant.

William Dechant, the grandfather of William H., was born in Germany, and came to America at the beginning of the nineteenth century, locating in Oley township. He was prepared for the ministry of the Reformed Church, had a charge in Oley township for many years, and was buried in the churchyard. He had considerable influence and was well known throughout the county. He was the progenitor of a large family of children, one of whom was Rev. Frederick W., the father of our subject.

Rev. Frederick W. Dechant was born in Oley township, Berks county, Pa., Dec. 25, 1812, and received his intellectual training in the public schools of his native town and in Mercersburg College, from which he graduated. He was prepared for the ministry of the Reformed Church, and was ordained to preach, making the cause of Christianity his life work. His labors were mostly in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana where he accomplished a great and good work. He was an excellent German scholar, and worked principally among the German people, preaching to them in their native tongue. His earnest aim was to assist his fellowmen. He had a high ideal of manhood, and lived up to it in every respect. He was united in matrimonial bonds with Angeline Boyer, a daughter of Henry Boyer, after whom the village of Boyertown was named, and a member of one of the oldest and best known families of Berks county. The following children were born to them: Sarah Rebecca; William H.; Calvin M., who is a civil engineer in the employ of his brother; and Adelaide, the wife of Edwin Chamberlain of Reading.

William H. Dechant received his education in the public schools of Western Pennsylvania and in Philadelphia, after which he entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad as a messenger boy. He then learned telegraphy, and was an operator for the same company from 1866 to 1871, when he was promoted to a position in the engineering office of the canal department. He then began the study of engineering, and after a few months of preliminary work became assistant engineer, remaining in that department until 1884, when he was placed in charge as roadmaster of the Tamaqua Division of the Pennsylvania & Reading Railroad. Eighteen months later the company was reorganized and Mr. Dechant was given a division engineership on the Mahanoy Divison, which embraces all of the railroads in the Mahanoy coal fields, with headquarters at Mahanoy Plane. By that time he had gained largely in experience, as his work in connection with the canal gave him good training in the construction of locks, dams, aqueducts, etc., and in the measurement and control of extensive water powers. While with the railroad company he laid the foundation for the bridge across the Susquehanna River at Sunbury, repaired and rebuilt the high trestles on the Catawissa and the Nesquehoning Valley branches. His many years of experience in the various lines of work created a demand for his services, and, in 1886, he was called to Reading to take charge of the miscellaneous engineering business of the Kendall Brothers, and served as manager of that firm for five years. At the expiration of that time or in 1891, he succeeded to the ownership of the business and has since conducted it on his own account, making a specialty of civil and hydraulic engineering. Some of the most important work performed by him since he has been established in business was for the following organizations: Shamokin Water Company, Sunbury Water Company, Bloomsburg Water Company, Gettysburg Water Company, Birdsboro Water Company, the Sinking Spring Water Company, the City of Reading Water Department, and several water power dams. He has also done engineering work for the Mount Penn Gravity Railroad; the Never Sink Mountain Railroad, in connection with the latter also putting in the electric power plant; he located the Mohnsville & Adamstown Railroad, and the extension of the Reading & Southwestern Railroad. He has done satisfactory engineering work for the commissioners on county bridge building since 1894. Along the line of contract work he performed a very difficult task in the laying of a 30 inch iron pipe for the sewage disposal of the city of Reading and he is now engaged, in company with Edwin Chamberlain, in laying a line of 36 inch cast iron pipe in the Susquehanna river at Binghamton, New York.

On Dec. 15, 1885, Mr. Dechant was united in marriage with Rebecca Catherine Hagman, a daughter of Frederick Hagman of Philadelphia, and they are the parents of three children, namely: Frederick H., who was born Aug. 31, 1887; Miles B., who was born Jan. 9, 1889; and Mary A., who was born March 31, 1893. Religiously they are members of the Reformed Church, and Mr. Dechant has been an elder in St. Paul's Memorial Church of Reading for many years. He is a member of the executive committee of the Berks County Sabbath School Association, which is a branch of the state organization. He is much interested in all enterprises having for their object the elevation of the social and moral standing of the community. He is also a member of the board of managers of the Y. M. C. A. of Reading.

HOWARD IRVIN EILER, architect, of Reading, is a descendant of one of the city's old and respected families. His great-great-grandfather was a member of the Hessian army sent here during the Revolution to fight the colonists, and like many of his comrades, remained in this country after learning the true cause of the struggle. Mr. Eiler's great-grandfather was born in Reading, and there spent his life, as has also Peter L. Eiler, his grandfather, who is now living there, retired from his extensive manufacturing interests, at the age of seventy-five years. Peter Eiler was born in Reading, where he has spent his entire life.

William H. Eiler, father of Howard I., died in Reading in 1899, aged forty-eight years. He was twice married, his first wife bearing him two children: Amelia, who died in infancy; and Howard I. To his second marriage four children were born: one who died in infancy; Emery, at home; Luther, in high school; and Horace, at school.

Howard I. Eiler was born in Reading May 11, 1881. He received his education in the public schools of Reading, and left school to study architecture in the office of Mr. Abner A. Ritcher. He now has charge of Mr. Ritcher's office in the Colonial Building, Reading, the main office being in Lebanon. Here Mr. Eiler attends to all of the business, and superintends all of the building.

Mr. Eiler was married Jan. 28, 1904, to Miss Ida Hoyt Stephens, daughter of Albert Stephens, and they belong to Grace Lutheran Church, he being financial secretary of the primary Sunday school. In politics he is a Republican.

Mrs. Eiler's grandmother on the maternal side, Emma Louisa Breneiser, is still living. Her father owned a saddlery and was a pioneer of Berks county. The Breneisers located in Berks county prior to the Revolutionary war, some of them taking up arms in that struggle.

CHARLES THEODORE DELLINGER, secretary and treasurer of the Nolan Real Estate and Insurance Agency, Reading, was born July 22, 1878, near Downsville, Washington county, Md., son of Andrew Rentch and Susan J. (Hoffeditz) Dellinger, the latter a daughter of the Rev. Theodore C. W. Hoffeditz.

After receiving a common school education Mr. Dellinger entered the employ of T. J. Fahrney as clerk, and after several years became manager of the general store, serving in that capacity until 1899, when the business was sold. Later he was identified with the firm of William Updegraff & Son, in Hagerstown, Md., and continued with that firm until he came to Reading in 1902 to accept a position with Mengel & Mengel, real estate brokers at No. 60 South Sixth street. He continued with this firm until 1907, when he entered the firm of Christ & Dellinger, builders, and erected a handsome row of houses on the west side of North Front street, between Windsor and Spring streets. About the time of their completion he entered the well known firm, Nolan Real Estate & Insurance Agency, purchasing an equal interest with Edward C. Nolan (vice president of the First National Bank of Reading), Mr. Dellinger being secretary and treasurer and Mr. Nolan president.

Mr. Dellinger married a daughter of D. A. Heffner, and resides at No. 916 North Front street. Mr. Dellinger is genial and social, and has many friends.

The Hoffeditz family, to which Mr. Dellinger belongs in maternal lines, is descended from the Rev. Theodore Ludwig Hoffeditz, who was born Dec. 16, 1783, at Stauven, amt Trendelburg, near Carlshafen, on the River Weser, Germany. Coming to this country at the age of eighteen he taught school for some time in Berks county, and later studied theology with some of the older ministers of the Reformed Church in Philadelphia. He next went to Northampton county, where he labored among the congregations of his chosen faith, and where in 1813 he married Juliane Roth, who was born Nov. 20, 1795, in Lower Nazareth township, Northampton county, Pa. Both died at Nazareth, he in August, 1858, and she in 1859.

Rev. Theodore C. W. Hoffeditz, eldest son of the Rev. Theodore Ludwig and his wife Juliane, was born in Mt. Bethel township, Northampton county, Nov. 28, 1818, and was graduated from the seminary at Mercersburg in 1840. For about three years he preached in his father's charge, and in 1843 went to Europe as collecting agent for the college. Ill health compelled his retirement from the ministry, and he removed to Mercersburg. He taught for some years, and he died near there Feb. 3, 1859. On Nov. 10, 1842, he married Louisa Hoke, of Mercersburg, born March 18, 1820, died Oct. 16, 1884. Their children were: John Calvin, born Nov. 15, 1843, in Hamilton township, Monroe county; Susan Julia, born Oct. 7, 1845, in Mercersburg; Adam Hoke, born Nov. 17, 1847, near Mercersburg; Charles Theodore, born Sept. 11, 1849, near Mercersburg; Louis William, born Nov. 29, 1851, near Mercersburg; and Albert Augustus Rauch, born Sept. 15, 1854, near Mercersburg,—all now deceased except Adam H. and Albert A. R.

Susan Julia Hoffeditz, daughter of Rev. Theodore C. W., was married Dec. 28, 1875, to Andrew Rentch Dellinger. She died near Downsville, Washington county, Md., Feb. 5, 1894.

CHARLES M. HUBER, justice of the peace of Wyomissing, Pa., and a popular and influential citizen of the borough, was born June 1, 1874, at Niantic, Montgomery county, Pa., son of John B. and Leah (Muthart) Huber.

Henry Huber, grandfather of Charles M., was a lifelong farmer of Niantic, Montgomery county, where he owned a tract of 100 acres, on which he erected the old Huber (Hoover) homestead. He married Mary Bolten, of Montgomery county, and they had these children: David; Jacob; Henry; John; Amanda; Mary, and Elizabeth.

John B. Huber, father of Charles M., was born at Niantic, in October, 1850, and is now a resident of Sheridan, Pa., having been a lifelong farmer. He married Leah Muthart, daughter of Jonas and Mary (Leeser) Muthart, and they have had twelve children: Charles M.; Mary, m. Charles Deppen, of Robesonia; Edgar, who lives at Durlach, Lancaster county; Henry, who lives at Schaefferstown; James, of West Reading; Jonas and Annie, deceased; and Eva, Emma, John, George and Elwood, single at home.

Charles M. Huber attended the township schools until seventeen years of age, having come to Berks county with his parents when ten years old, and later went to the Keystone State Normal school at Kutztown for three spring terms. He left this institution when a member of the senior class and taught school three terms in Lower Heidelberg township, beginning in the fall of 1892. He gave up this profession to engage in telegraphy, which he had learned under the instruction of Operator Samuel G. Leininger of Sheridan, Pa., and became an operator for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, in whose employ he continued for some time. For four years he followed the trade of machinist, and in 1903 was promoted to draughtsman; he has been engaged as such since, having been in the employ of the Textile Machine works since 1900, at Wyomissing.

In politics Mr. Huber is a Democrat. He was elected to the office of justice of the peace in February, 1907, and in addition is secretary of the borough council, and secretary of the Civic League. He is president of Wyomissing Fire Company No. 1, which he was instrumental in organizing, and a member of Bohemond Commandery No. 277, Knights of Malta, of Reading. He and his family are members of the West Reading St. James' Reformed Church, and are also connected with the Sunday school.

On December 28, 1898, Mr. Huber married Miss Nellie Gruber, of Stouchsburg, who died Oct. 9, 1901, aged twenty-six years, leaving one daughter: Nelly May. Mr. Huber's second marriage was to Miss Lizzie Kunkelman, daughter of Elias Kunkelman of West Reading, and to this union there have been born three children: Paul, Minerva and Marion.

WILSON S. SNYDER, a well known and highly esteemed resident of Hyde Park, Muhlenberg township, who has served in the office of real estate assessor for the past eleven years, was born in Oley township, Berks county, April 21, 1870, son of the late Ephraim W. and Catharine (Schmehl) Snyder.

Jacob Snyder, grandfather of Wilson S., was a prominent agriculturist of Rusconibmanor township, Berks county, where he owned two valuable farms above Blandon, and died April 7, 1882, aged seventy-two years. He married Barbara Williams, who died in 1892, aged eighty-five years, and they were the parents of six children: William; Ephraim W.; Henry; Jacob; Augustus, and a daughter, who died young. In religious belief the family were Lutherans. In politics Mr. Snyder was a Democrat. He was extensively engaged in real estate transactions, and bought and sold many farms in Berks county, where he was known as a public spirited citizen, and able business man.

Ephraim W. Snyder was born July 4, 1843, in Ruscombmanor township, and for twenty-seven years cultivated his father's farm. At the end of this time Mr. Snyder purchased a farm near Friedensburg where he lived for about ten years, and then retired from active work, to live with his son, Jacob, in Oley township. He died July 28, 1907, in the Lutheran faith, having been a member of Shalter's Church. His wife survives him. They were the parents of five children, namely: Wilson S.; Katie m. Elmer S. Manwiller; Magdalene m. Wellington Becker; Jacob S. m. Judith Kinsey; and Henry died in infancy. Mr. Snyder was a Democrat in politics, held a number of township offices, such as assessor, school director, auditor, and was delegate to county and State conventions. He was a deacon and elder in the church for many years, and also served as its treasurer.

Wilson S. Snyder was educated in the schools of Ruscombmanor township, and attended Oley Academy for two terms, after which he learned the painting and paper hanging trade, which he followed for about fifteen years, then accepting a position in the painting department of the Pennsylvania & Reading Railroad Company. In 1902 he located in Muhlenberg township, where he has since worked as a carpenter. Mr. Snyder owns two residences in Hyde Park, one of frame and the other of brick, both two stories high, and he also possesses three valuable lots in Rosedale. He is active in the ranks of the Democratic party, and for eleven years has been real estate assessor of Muhlenberg township. Fraternally he is connected with Vigilance Lodge, No. 194, I. O. O. F.; the Loyal Protective Association of Boston; Camp No. 68, P. O. S. of A.; the P. & R. Relief Association; and the K. of P., No. 65, of Mount Penn. He is a Lutheran in his religious belief, while his wife belongs to the Evangelical faith.

In July, 1894, Mr. Snyder married Mary Gretzinger, daughter of John C. Gretzinger, and to this union there have been born two children, Edna and William.

CHARLES R. GULDIN, merchant at Philadelphia, was born at Yellow House, in Berks county, on Nov. 9, 1869, and received his education in the local schools and at Franklin and Marshall College. In 1887 he went to Wilmington, Del., and engaged in the ship chandlery business for three years, when he located at Reading, Pa., as a partner in the firm of A. S. Hartman & Co., for the manufacture of cigars, and he continued with this firm for five years. He then traveled in the Western States for a year. Upon his return to Reading, he embarked in the local express business and in five years succeeded in establishing a popular line, having several teams, which reached all parts of the city. An opportunity having then been afforded to engage in the produce and meat business, he sold the express line and removed to Philadelphia, where he has been operating four stores in a successful manner until the present time.

Mr. Guldin married Odella Bertolet Jack, daughter of Dr. John A. Jack, of Friedensburg, in Oley township, and by her he has two children: Carroll Jack and Hannah Josephine.

His father was John Frederick Guldin, brought up on a farm, who taught public school for several terms, and was associated with his father in the mule business for many years. He died in 1872, aged forty-seven years. He was married to Hannah Rhoads (daughter of Abraham Rhoads, of Oley), by whom he had eight children: Samuel (m Anna Davidheiser); Ella; Emily (m. J. F. D. Geiger); Catharine (m. Nelson Bertolet, and after his decease, Dr. A. Grant Loder); John (m. Susan Rhoads); Charles Rhoads; and two died in infancy. His wife died in 1872, aged forty years.

His grandfather was Samuel Guldin, of Oley, engaged in the cattle and mule business for many years near the Yellow House, more especially during the Civil war, when he supplied the U. S. Government with thousands of mules for army purposes, which gave him great prominence and influence. He died in 1872. He married Elizabeth Yeager, by whom he had five children: Simon Peter; John Frederick (above); Elam Yeager; Mary Ann; and Sophia Henrietta. He was a lineal descendant of Rev. Samuel K. Guldin, who emigrated to Pennsylvania from Switzerland in 1710, and served with great distinction as a minister of the Reformed denomination in the Schuylkill Valley for over thirty years until he died, in 1745, at the age of eighty-one years.

Mrs. Guldin's father was Dr. John Andrew Jack, a practising physician and surgeon for twenty-five years. He was born in Montgomery county, near Pottstown, in 1837; attended Hill School and the University of Pennsylvania, graduating from the medical department of the latter in 1862. He served in the Civil war as a surgeon, and, upon being mustered out of service, located at Boyertown, where he practised his profession for several years and then removed to Friedensburg, where he continued in active and successful practice until he died, in 1887. He married Emma Josephine Bertolet (daughter of Levi J., and lineal descendant of Jean, the emigrant, in 1726), by whom he had five children: Edwina B. (m. William D. Brumbach); Odella B. (above); Henrietta B. (m. Henry G. Stott); Sarah B.; and Carroll B. (m. Elizabeth Hains). Dr. Jack's father was Thomas Jefferson Jack, of Montgomery county, who married Sarah Yost, and the Doctor was their only child.

WILLIAM R. NEIN, a well-known resident of Womelsdorf, Pa., who is proprietor of the "William Penn Hotel," and a veteran of the Civil war, was born June 8, 1844, in Exeter township, Berks county, son of William and Mary (Ritter) Nein.

Daniel Nein, the grandfather of William R., who was a carpenter of Oley township, built the church of Oley, and was there buried. He married a Miss Bertolet, and to them were born the following children: Peter, of Reading; William; Daniel, father of David and John, of Mount Penn; Ephraim, who was the owner of the Yellow House in Amity township; Benneville; Hannah, who married Henry Kemmerer; Polly, who married Reuben Griesemer; and Hettie, who died unmarried.

William Nein, father of William R., was born in Oley township, Berks county, and died aged sixty-six years. He was a cabinet-maker and undertaker by trade, and also owned a small farm in Exeter township, where he died, being buried at the cemetery at Schwartzwald Church, of which he was a Reformed member. Mr. Nein was a lieutenant in the State Militia for a number of years, and was a substantial and highly-esteemed citizen. He married Mary Ritter, born in 1812, who died in 1868, and to them nine children were born: Frank (who had two children, Albert and Katie); Daniel (who also had two children, Samuel and Elizabeth); William R.; Mary Ann, m. William Manwiller and had one son, Irwin); Ammon (who had two daughters, Emma and Ella); Samuel (who had, Samuel, Lillie, Isa, Irwin, William and Helen); Reuben (who had Katie, Harry and Jennie); Ephraim (who had seven children, Mamie, Agnes, Eve, Amanda, Charles, Rosa and Robert); and Hannah, who died unmarried.

William R. Nein received a limited education in the schools of his native township, and from youth has been engaged in agricultural pursuits. He worked for ten years with Benjamin Ritter, whom he left to enlist in Company A, 128th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, in November, 1862, at Harrisburg, Pa., and among others participated in the fierce engagements at Antietam and Chancellorsville, at the latter place being taken prisoner. He managed to escape at night, however, and made his way back to the Union lines. He was honorably discharged May 19, 1863, and re-enlisted in Company B, 205th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and during this enlistment was wounded in the hip bone by a piece of shell at Fort Steadman, before Petersburg. After a few days he rejoined his company, which helped to force the surrender of General Robert E. Lee, near Burkesville Station. On June 2, 1865, Mr. Nein received his discharge, at Alexandria, Va. He was always a brave and gallant soldier, and performed his duties faithfully and cheerfully.

Mr. Nein returned to farming in Berks county after the war, but later learned the hatter's trade, which he followed for fifteen years at Reading, and then became proprietor at Dengler's (now Mount Penn) for three years, the following two years being spent as proprietor of the "Three Mile House" in Cumru township. In 1894 Mr. Nein took the "Center House" at Womelsdorf, but in 1904 disposed of this stand and since that time has conducted the well-known "William Penn Hotel" on High street. Mr. Nein and his family are Reformed members of Schwartzwald Church, of which he was a deacon for four years. In politics he is a Democrat. He is a member of McClellan Post, No. 16, G. A. R., of Reading; the P. O. S. of A., of St. Lawrence: and the Knights of Pythias, of Reading.

In 1868 Mr. Nein was married to Clara Hartman, born Aug. 11, 1840, daughter of George and Christina (Beidman) Hartman, of Earl township, and to this union have been born four children: Alice H. (m. John Breiner, of Reading, has two children, Sallie and Earl); Milford (a hatter of Reading, m. Emma Quinter, and has six children, Iva, Geneva, Milford, George, Ammon and Mary); Carrie D., unmarried, at home; and Millie V., also unmarried, and at home.

HOWARD M. SHILLING, a well-known educator and successful business man at Shillington, Pa., was born in that town Nov. 29, 1856, son of Samuel Shilling and grandson of Jacob Shilling.

Jacob Shilling, grandfather of Howard M., was a native of Franklin county, Pa. He was a drover and came to Cumru township before he was married, locating at the Three Mile House, then known as Shilling's Inn. He m. Hannah Straub, by whom he had issue as follows: Levi, Hester, Louisa, Ephraim, Samuel, Isabella, Hannah and Jacob. The father died about 1845, from apoplexy, when past fifty years of age. He is buried at Reading in the Lutheran cemetery. He operated Shilling's Inn, now known as Three Mile House, for many years, and his death occurred here.

Samuel Shilling was born in Cumru township March 11, 1819, and died March 29, 1891; he was buried at Yocom's Church in his native township, of which he was a Lutheran member. Mr. Shilling was educated at the Trappe school in Montgomery county. He was a farmer and owned considerable land where Shillington now is located. He was the foremost man of his district. For fifteen years he served as tax collector of Cumru township, and this was his last employment. In 1860 he laid out the town of Shillington. He was a Democrat up to 1860, until Abraham Lincoln was a candidate for the Presidency, when he became a follower of "Old Abe." He was a member of Company D, 167th P. V. M., in the nine months' service. He was ever an active citizen. Mr. Shilling married Catharine Weitknecht, and they became the parents of nine children: (1) Champion F. P. died May 8, 1872, aged seventeen years. (2) Mary M. W., deceased wife of James M. Batron, of Shillington, and (3) George W. were twins, and were born on Washington's birthday, 1859; George died May 19, 1906. (4) Howard M. is mentioned below. (5) Frederick E. E., a brass molder, lives in the borough of Shillington. (6) Emma L., born on Washington's birthday, lives at Shillington. (7) Ida C. E., born in 1868, m. Charles C. Fisher, of York, Pa. (8) Oscar, twin to Ida, died in infancy. (9) Ella m. George Stehman, of York, Pennsylvania.

Howard M. Shilling spent his boyhood days in Shillington, where he attended the public schools and then took a full scientific course at Prof. D. B. Brunner's business college at Reading, studying there for three years and six months. He was licensed to teach school under county superintendent Prof. S. A. Baer, in 1877, and has taught thirty terms in Cumru township, teaching 1900 children. He also holds a State teacher's permanent certificate, ranking second in a class of twenty-one. His was the largest school in the county, having eighty-nine pupils enrolled, who made a general average of eighty-three for the term. Mr. Shilling first engaged in the florist business in Shillington, in 1880, in a small way, in a building 19 x 40 feet. Now the buildings he occupies are the longest in the county; they are 20 x 192 feet in dimensions, and there is in use over 13,000 square feet of glass. These buildings are heated by the hot water system. Mr. Shilling attends the Reading market, and does both wholesale and retail business, shipping flowers all over the United States.

Mr. Shilling is keenly interested in the development and progress of his town and county, and he took an active part in organizing the borough of Shillington which was laid out and named by his father in 1860, when there were but three buildings in the place. In politics he is a Republican, and after the death of his father for a short time collected the tax in Cumru township. For seventeen years he has been Republican county committeeman of Cumru township and served the party as county and state delegate, and has always been identified with the best interests of the party, being personally acquainted with all the voters of the township. Mr. Shilling was twice Census Enumerator of Cumru township—years 1880 and 1890. He has been active in politics since 1876, during the Hayes and Tilden campaign, and during the Garfield campaign he stumped the county.

Mr. Shilling on Feb. 7, 1893, became a member of Co A, 4th Regt., N. G. P., for a term of three years, and after the expiration of his first enlistment, on Feb. 8, 1896, re-enlisted and was promoted to Third Sergeant of the above company, and served actively in the Lattimare Riots, in 1897. When the Spanish American war broke out, and President McKinley called for 100,000 men, this regiment was one of the first to be sworn into the Federal service, at Mount Gretna, Pa., on May 9, 1898. This regiment went to Chickamauga, Ga., May 15th, and remained until July 22d, when it embarked for Newport News, Va., and sailed July 28th, for Porto Rico, being in General Miles' command on that island. The regiment left Ponce Sept. 1st, arrived at New York City Sept. 6th, came to Reading on a furlough Sept. 7th, and was mustered out of service Nov. 16, 1898. Mr. Shilling was a Sergeant of his company throughout the Spanish-American war. Mr. Shilling is an able penman and while in the Spanish-American war performed special service for his company, writing out all discharges and reports to Washington.

Mr. Shilling has been twice married. On June 22, 1884, he married Amelia Stamm, daughter of George and Mary (Holl) Stamm, late of Cumru township. She died July 26, 1888, aged twenty-six years, nine months, nineteen days, leaving a daughter, Edith. On March 11, 1893, he m. (second) Annie Elizabeth Maurer, eldest daughter of Franklin and Clara (Schaeffer) Maurer, the former of whom has charge of the mail and baggage department of the P. & R. railroad at the terminal depot, Reading, and they have two children: Earle Leslie and Irene Ruth. Mrs. Shilling was educated in Reading and at present is engaged as an elocutionist, and as an instructor in theatrical work. Mrs. Shilling looked after the business interests of her husband while he was in the Spanish-American war, besides caring for the family. In 1904 Mr. Shilling built a brick residence on Philadelphia Avenue, Shillington, 32 x 52 feet. He has a collection of Porto Rico relics numbering over 1,400 pieces which he obtained in 1898, consisting of coins, sea shells, stamps, merchandise, cutlery, bullets, etc. He has a library of over 1,000 volumes. In 1879 Mr. Shilling made a trip through thirty-four States of the Union and also visited Canada, his trip extending over eight months.

In fraternal circles Mr. Shilling is a member of the K. of P., Lodge No. 485, Mohnton; Sons of Veterans, George G. Meade Camp No. 16; Order of K. of F., Reading, Chamber No. 23; K. G. E., Fraternity Castle, No. 302, Reading; Order of Independent Americans, Council No. 252, Reading; P. O. of A., Camp No. 17, Reading; P. O. S. of A., Camp No. 163, Reading; L. O. T. M., No. 155, Reading; Maccabees Tent No. 426, Reading; and he is also a member of the Foresters of America, Court Progress, No. 116, of Reading.

ADAM K. BOHN, a retired farmer of North Heidelberg township, Berks county, was born Nov. 27, 1852, son of Adam and Hannah (Krick) Bohn.

The first of the Bohn family in America was John Jacob Bohn, who arrived at Philadelphia from Rotterdam, Sept. 21, 1742.

Frederick Bohn, son of John Jacob, married a Miss Woomer. Frederick Bohn lived in Heidelberg township. He made his will April 14, 1814, and he died that same year. His executors were George, David and Frederick Bohn; and the witnesses, Philip Fidler and Joseph Greth. The children mentioned in this will were: George; Frederick; David; Philip; John; Elizabeth; Adam (taxable in Bern township in 1759); and Christina.

George Bohn, son of Frederick, is buried at the Bern Church. His children were: Adam, Susan, Amos, and a daughter who married a Gruber.

Adam Bohn, son of George, was born in Bern township, where he remained until 1840, when he moved to North Heidelberg, there to pass the remainder of his life, engaged in farming. He married Hannah Krick, of Spring township, and they had eight children: One who died in infancy unnamed; Edward K.; Matilda, who died young; Mary Ann; Amelia, deceased; Sarah C.; Rebecca, who married Frank Moyer, engaged in the cold storage business in Philadelphia; and Adam K., who is mentioned below. Adam Bohn, the father, died March 17, 1893, and the mother passed away June 16, 1892. They are buried at Hain's Church.

Adam K. Bohn was reared to manhood upon his father's farm, and gave his services to his parents until he was of age. He then purchased the Frederick Kline estate of twenty-five acres of good land, in the eastern end of the township, one mile from the Corner Church. There he has since made his home. He has also become the owner of a tract of seven acres on which is a set of buildings. He has been industrious and thrifty, has become well to do, and is looked upon as one of the substantial men of his community. He is a Democrat, but beyond taking a good citizen's interest in public affairs has never been active in politics. He is a Reformed member of Hain's Church, and his wife is a Lutheran member of the Corner Church. He has served as deacon and also as elder.

On Oct. 8, 1873, Mr. Bohn married Otillia E. Lengel, daughter of Levi and Catharine (Dundore) Lengel, and granddaughter of Jacob and Susanna (Miller) Lengel and of Adam Dundore. To this union has been born one son, Nathaniel Oscar, born Oct. 9, 1874, who resides at home, and whose children are Earl S. and Annie M.

HERMAN G. WEBER, a hat finisher of the city of Reading, who is also a partner in the Weber Badge Company, was born in New York City in 1857. He attended the Reading schools, and after leaving them received employment in the rolling mills. Later he engaged in box making in the establishment of his father, and afterward entered Hendel's hat factory, learning the trade with Dan Hendel, son of John Hendel. After eight years with that company he accepted a position with C. F. Kessler, where he has been employed to the present time, covering a period of over twenty-five years.

In 1876 Mr. Weber was married to Molly A. Rorke, daughter of John Rorke, and they reside in one of the modern residences in their section of the city. This home has attracted the attention of the public and also of the press, the Reading Eagle having published an interesting article regarding it, for Mr. Weber has spared neither time nor expense in making his residence beautiful with artistic decoration and comfortable with every convenience. Mr. Butler, who did the painting and decorating, is a friend of the family and makes his home with the Webers, and has displayed taste and skill in his work in the Weber home.

LUTHER W. LORD, proprietor of the popular "Lord's Restaurant," in Reading, is a native of the State of Pennsylvania, of Dutch stock. He was born in Robeson township, Berks county, Aug. 6, 1874, son of Peter R. and Elizabeth (Wicklein) Lord.

Absalom Lord, the paternal grandfather, was for many years engaged in the hotel business in Reading, and was a prominent man in his day. He married and reared a family of thirteen children.

Peter R. Lord was next to the youngest in his father's family. In his boyhood he attended the common schools of Berks county, and went to work as a boatman on the canal. Afterward he became a heater in an iron foundry, and followed that occupation for the remainder of his active life, but in recent years has been living in retirement. To him and his wife Elizabeth, were born eight children, Jesse; Hunter; Walter; Luther; Maggie; Valeria; Elizabeth and Mary, the last two deceased. In religious belief Peter Lord was a Lutheran, and fraternally he was a member of the I. O. O. F. and the K. P.

Luther W. Lord received his education like his father before him in the Berks county schools, and when old enough to go to work secured a place in an iron foundry, as assistant engineer, where he spent five years. In 1897, having accumulated sufficient capital to begin, he went into the restaurant business, and opened a café at the location where he is still to be found, at Nos. 44-46 South Sixth street. Here he has built up a splendid patronage, among the best people in the city, and his trade is constantly on the increase. He can accommodate about 300 people and his tables are always full. He makes a special point of supplying game and fruit and regardless of season these delicacies may be found on his table. Mr. Lord also supplies oysters to private families, and beside catering to the restaurant trade carries a fine line of cigars and tobacco.

The marriage of Mr. Lord to Elizabeth McMullin, daughter of James McMullin, occurred in 1897, and they have two children, Ethel E. and Ralph W. Mr. Lord adheres to his father's faith, the Lutheran, and in politics he is a Republican. He is a member of Chandler Lodge, No. 227, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, R. A. M.; DeMolay Commandery, No. 9, Lodge of Perfection, and the Mystic Shrine; he is a 32d degree Mason.

SIMON KLINE, a progressive brick manufacturer, is one of the old active citizens of Reading, to whose enterprise is due a full share of that city's high reputation. For nearly fifty years he has devoted himself to his work, and he has met with the success that comes of perseverance and industry wisely joined to integrity. Mr. Kline was born in Alsace township, Berks county, May 14, 1830, son of Henry and Magdalena (Schmehl) Kline.

Henry Kline was also a native of Alsace township, where he passed his entire life. In his youth he learned the trade of weaver, which was his occupation throughout his active years. He attained the advanced age of eighty-one years, and passed away respected by all who had known him. To him and his wife, whose maiden name was Magdalena Schmehl, the following children were born: John; Catherine; Henry; Abraham; Sarah; Daniel; Elizabeth; Mary; Sophia; and Simon. Of these all are deceased, except Simon and Sophia.

Simon Kline received but few advantages in his youth, attending the district school of his native township for a two-months' term each year for four years. As a boy he learned the cooper's trade, which engaged his attention but a short time, and in 1855 he came to Reading, shortly afterward beginning to make brick on Ninth and Elm streets, with Daniel Kline (deceased). Two years later—about 1860—he moved to Fleetwood, Pa., where he was the first to engage in the manufacture of bricks. During that year the East Pennsylvania Railroad was built, and bricks were sold at five dollars a thousand, while labor averaged seventy-five cents per day. Five years later Mr. Kline returned to Reading, and opened a yard at Ninth and Green streets, subsequently moving to where Front street is now located, on the site of the old Ernst grocery store, and remaining there several years. His next location was on Second and Elm streets, where he used up all the clay in that vicinity, and then moved to Sixth street, near the car shops, and still later to what is known as the East Pennsylvania crossing. He possessed one of the largest plants in the city with an output of about 4,000,000 a year. After three years the plant was moved (1882) to Chester, Pa. Mr. Kline remained in that city but six months, when he returned to Reading, and opened a yard for the manufacture of brick by machinery, at Douglass & McKnight streets. This was the first machine-made brick in Reading, and in spite of all prophesies of failure, success ultimately crowned the venture. Since 1898 the plant has been located in West Reading, where Mr. Kline purchased the Conrad Kaltenbach factory and brick plant. He owns twenty-one acres of clay and stone, which has been found peculiarly adapted to the making of brick. The average output is about 3,000,000, and thirty-two men are employed the year round. Some of the best buildings in Reading are constructed of this brick, which has stood the severest tests known to brick makers. In addition to this industry Mr. Kline is the owner of considerable real estate.

Mr. Kline was united in marriage with Catherine Noll, daughter of Henry Noll, of Ruscombmanor township, this county. Six children have been born to this union, namely: Ezra, employed in his father's brick making plant, married Martha Yeager, now deceased; Mary married Edmund Slegel, of Cumru township; Kate married William N. Fulton, of Reading; Simon S., a brick manufacturer of Perry township, married Ella De Long; George O., employed by his father, married Rosa Lutz; D. Milton is engaged in contracting and building in Reading.

OLIVER KOCH BECHTEL, who has been successfully engaged in the ice business in Reading since 1895, was born July 22, 1857, in Pike township, Berks county, Pa., son of George and Barbara (Koch) Bechtel, and grandson of Abraham Bechtel, of Pike township.

George Bechtel, who was a lifelong farmer of Berks county, died in August, 1899, at the age of seventy-two years, while his widow, who survives him, is now in her eighty-fourth year. They were the parents of five children: Frank, William, Oliver K., Amelia, deceased, who married Mahlon Francis, and Mary, deceased. In religious belief the family were all connected with the Reformed Church. Mr. Bechtel was a Democrat in political matters.

Oliver K. Bechtel received his education in the public schools of his native locality, and was reared upon his father's farm, on which he worked until 1889, on March 29th of which year he came to Reading and found employment in the brick yard of Thomas B. Bausher, where he continued six years. In 1895 Mr. Bechtel engaged in the ice business, starting work with two wagons, and to such an extent has his business grown that he now has six two-horse and one single-horse wagons, and employs seven men. Mr. Bechtel is a thorough business man.

Mr. Bechtel was united in marriage with Sarah Newell, daughter of the late Henry Newell and to them were born four children: Charles, a professional baseball player; Henry, connected with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company; Archie, who is engaged in assisting his father; and Eddie, also connected with the Pennsylvania & Reading Railroad Company. Religiously the family are members of the Reformed Church. Mr. Bechtel is a Democrat in politics, and a member of the Knights of Friendship.

ABNER S. DEYSHER, a prominent manufacturer and influential citizen of Reading, was born in that city June 24, 1857, son of Jacob H. and Anna K. (Shaffer) Deysher.

Jacob H. Deysher was for many years one of Reading's leading men. In his earlier days he had conducted a planing mill and lumber yard at Second and Cherry streets, but in 1868, he built the plant now occupied by Charles Hendel. There he carried on an extensive business for many years, but toward the very end of his life handed over the management to his son, Abner S. His wife was Miss Anna K. Shaffer, and she bore him three children, namely: Abner S.; Oliver M., in his brother's employ; and Kate m. Edward M. Freehafer, and died in 1900. Mrs. Jacob Deysher died the same year as her daughter, at the age of sixty-seven. The family were members of the M. E. Church, and in political views Mr. Deysher was a Republican.

Abner S. Deysher received his education in the public schools of Reading, and as soon as he left them, he entered his father's mill. He became familiar with all the details of the several departments, and developed into an expert mill man. Under his superintendence the manufacture of furniture and boxes had been introduced during the elder Mr. Deysher's lifetime, and for some time after his death the mill was conducted along about the same lines as before. In 1894 Abner S. Deysher purchased the other interests in the concern and a few years later established the present Abner S. Deysher Box Factory. He makes all kinds of packing boxes, and supplies nearly all of the manufacturers of Reading and the vicinity.

Mr. Deysher's factory covers some 60 x 207 feet, with a room for the necessary boiler, engine, etc., and it is equipped with all the latest machinery. His business has reached such proportions that he will be obliged soon to increase his manufacturing capacity some forty per cent. He employs on an average from seventy-five to one hundred men and there is never a day in the year when the plant is idle, unless for necessary repairs. Mr. Deysher is known as a hustling business man, and one instance of his sagacity and enterprise is the use he makes of the shavings accumulated in the box factory. They are all screened and the first grade are baled and sold by the car load. Mr. Deysher is a leading dealer in this line and constantly has contracts on hand for from one to ten car loads. The screenings or "dust" left is used as fuel for running the establishment. This flourishing factory, one of the leading enterprises of Reading, is entirely the fruit of Mr. Deysher's industry and initiative, as he is the sole owner. He is also the owner of a valuable stock farm where he has some of the finest blooded (fancy) stock in the United States.

Throughout the State of Pennsylvania Mr. Deysher is known as a prominent Mason, high up in his degree in the Order and influential in its councils. He belongs to St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M.; Royal Arch Chapter, No. 237; and Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T. He is also a member of Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Vigilance Lodge, I. O. O. F., and Camp No. 61, P. O. S. of A., all of Reading. In politics he supports the Republican party, but he is no politician, although he is a loyal citizen in his advocacy of measures for the public good. He served at one time as one of the water commissioners.

In 1881 Mr. Deysher was united in marriage to Miss Maria Pierce, daughter of a man prominent in Reading business circles for many years. Mr. Deysher is one of the city's best citizens and is justly held in universally high esteem.

THE DRUMHELLER FAMILY of Earl and surrounding townships in Berks county was founded here by J. Leonhart Drumheller, who emigrated to America on the brigantine "Mary and Sarah," which landed at Philadelphia Oct. 26, 1754. Little is known of him, save certain records of several small land transactions. Among his children were two sons, John and Leonard, both of whom were residents of Earl township in 1782. In 1790 the Federal census records John as the father of one son above sixteen, and three under that age, also one daughter. Nicholas is credited with a family consisting of one son above sixteen, and three sons below that age, and three daughters.

John Drumheller lived in Earl township and there died in 1815. His last will and testament was dated June 13, 1814. His wife Regina survived him. His daughter was married to Jacob Trout. His son Leonard obtained the homestead. The will does not mention the names of the other sons.

Nicholas Drumheller had a son Daniel, who lived in Pike township. His wife Elizabeth bore him children as follows: Elizabeth; Hannah; Daniel; John; Lydia; Jacob and Reuben, the two last named being executors of the will, which was made Feb. 6, 1835, and not probated until March 1, 1859.

Leonard Drumheller, grandfather of Ammon B. and Mahlon B., lived in Earl township. He is buried in an unmarked grave at Oley Churches. He was a farmer and owned a small farm, now the property of the Andrew Leffel estate. He married Susanna Breidigam. She is buried at Oley Churches and has a tombstone. He is buried by her side in the old graveyard. Their children were: David, who lived in Earl township; William; John, who lived near Philadelphia; George, who lived in Earl township; Sally m. John Richard; Susanna m. Peter Haas, of Earl township; Peggy m. John Dierolf; Magdalena m. John Youse; Anna m. Lewis Flicker; and Hettie died unmarried.

William Drumheller, son of Leonard, was born in Earl township, Aug. 14, 1813, and died there Aug. 27, 1872. He was a shoemaker, post-fence maker and farmer, and lived in Colebrookdale township two years. Before 1845 he came to Earl township and bought a fifty acre tract near Pine Grove school house now owned by his son Mahlon B., and improved it with the present set of buildings. Here he made his home for the remainder of his life. In politics he was a Democrat. He served as school director and supervisor. He was a Lutheran member of Oley Church, and was its treasurer for four years. He married Mary Bricker, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Matthias) Bricker. She was born July 18, 1817, and died April 21, 1887. They had seven children: John lived in Earl township; William lived in Amity township; Jacob B., in Earl township; Mahlon B. and Ammon B. in Earl; Elizabeth and Horace. Of these Jacob, Mahlon and Ammon are living.

MAHLON B. DRUMHELLER, of Earl township, was born April 20, 1848, on his father's farm in that township, which he now owns. He learned the shoemaking trade from James Hartlein, and has followed it ever since, in connection with farming. His farm is kept in good condition, and he is well-to-do. He is a Democrat in politics, and was school director six years. Both he and his wife are Lutherans, and for two years he was deacon at Oley Church, and elder for four years. In December, 1871, he married Rebecca Sassaman, daughter of Daniel Sassaman, and sister of Jacob, former sheriff of Berks county. They had three children as follows: Alice, who died in the Boyertown fire Jan. 13, 1908, at the age of thirty-five years, was the wife of Harry Moyer, and the mother of three children,—Gladys, Grace and Leonard. Josephine m. William Conrad, and has two children,—Florence and William F. Clara S., who m. John P. Stapletown, has one daughter, Agnes.

AMMON B. DRUMHELLER, son of William, son of Leonard, is a farmer in Earl township on the Swamp road. He was born on the homestead in that township Dec. 18, 1851. He attended Pine Grove school in his township, and has a practical education. He worked for his parents until he was twenty-eight years of age. In the spring of 1879 he began farming in Earl township on his mother-in-law's farm, and this he cultivated for three years. He then farmed for his uncle, David Drumheller, one year, and in 1884 came to his present place as a tenant for George Kieffer, who then owned the farm, but which Mr. Drumheller bought from Mrs. George Kieffer in 1894. The farm consists of sixty-nine acres of fertile land, well located. On this farm is found an excellent lime stone. Mr. Drumheller operates a lime kiln, and burns and sells as many as 30,000 bushels of lime per annum. The Manatawny creek flows through the farm. The present barn was built in 1871; and the old part of the stone house was built before 1800, and the newer part in 1833. This farm was a Boyer homestead. One Jacob Boyer owned it; later it was owned by four of his unmarried sons, after whom it came into the hands of George Kieffer.

Mr. Drumheller is a Democrat, and is influential in the district. He was school director three years, and was re-elected but he refused to serve. He and his family are active members of Christ Lutheran Church of Oley, of which he has been an elder since 1907.

Mr. Drumheller was married Nov. 4, 1876, to Emma Elizabeth Trout, daughter of Samuel and Sophia (Boyer) Trout, farming people of Earl township. Her grandfather was John Boyer, whose wife was a Holder. Mr. and Mrs. Drumheller had three children, namely: Mary (born 1877, died 1899); Samuel T. (born July 13, 1883, m. 1904, Katie M. Kline, and has one daughter, Meriam V.); and Lizzie T. (born 1886, and died 1901). Samuel T. is a farmer, and assists his father. He is the treasurer of the township supervisors. He was president of the Christ Lutheran League at Oley; and was assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school, and is a member of the church choir.

JACOB B. DRUMHELLER, son of William, son of Leonard, was a soldier in the Civil war. He married Elizabeth Hartranft, a relative of the former governor of the Commonwealth. Their son Howard H. married Kate Haas, and has ten children, five sons and five daughters, namely: Charles; Harvey; Lawrence; Jacob; Ammon; Lizzie May; Nora Ellen; Mary Minerva, and Carrie Dora (twins) and Annie Edwina.

GEORGE DRUMHELLER, son of Leonard, and father of Jeremiah, was born in Earl township Nov. 15, 1817, and died in the same township on a farm near the homestead, now owned by Morris Weintrout, Nov. 21, 1878, aged sixty-one years. He was a shoemaker by trade, and also carried on farming. His tract consisted of seventy-three acres of land. He and his family were Lutheran members of the Oley churches, and he was deacon and elder there. In politics he was a Democrat; and was at various times school director, supervisor and auditor of Earl township, where he was highly respected.

George Drumheller was married (first) to Anna Matthias, daughter of Daniel Matthias, and they had two children, namely: Amelia, m. Joseph Eberhart (both deceased); and Enoch (deceased) m. Sarah Batz. His second wife was Caroline Miller, daughter of Conrad Miller. She was born March 18, 1827, and died Oct. 20, 1898. They had five children: Sarah m. William Gehret; Jeremiah; Darius lived at Pottstown, Pa.; Kate m. James Sell; Leonard died an infant.

JEREMIAH DRUMHELLER, son of George, was born Sept. 9, 1856, on his father's farm in Earl, now owned by Jacob Drumheller. He was reared on the farm, and attended the township schools. He was a puddler by trade, and in 1877 went to Pottstown where he worked in the puddling mill for the Pottstown Iron Company for seventeen years. In the spring of 1898 he came to Earl township where he bought his present farm, located in the western end of the Powder Valley. This tract consists of forty-six acres of land. It was formerly the Samuel Trout farm, and before him was owned by a man named Bly. On the farm are substantial buildings erected by the widow of Samuel Trout. The residence was remodeled in 1877, and the barn was built about 1887. The house was formerly a grist-mill. Pure spring water from an adjacent stream runs by pipe into the house. The farm is in good condition.

Mr. Drumheller is a Democrat, and was supervisor, the first in the township under the new road law. He is a highly respected man. He married in February, 1876, Annie E. Trout, daughter of Samuel and Sophia (Boyer) Trout, of Earl township, and granddaughter of Abraham Boyer. To Mr. and Mrs. Drumheller have been born six children: Sallie m. Joseph Carr, and they live at Pottstown; George H. is general manager for McMinnimin & Sims, Railroad Constructors located at Youngwood, Westmoreland county, Pa.; Lawrence is a student at school; William died aged eleven years; Paul died aged four years; and one son died in infancy. Mr. Drumheller has a home at Pottstown where his son-in-law Joseph Carr now lives.

FRED A. SCHMUCKER, proprietor of the Penn-Troy Laundry, of Reading, is a grandson of Joseph Schmucker, a farmer of Oley township and later proprietor of the "Schmucker House," located at the southwest corner of Sixth and Penn streets.

Francis R. Schmucker, the father of Fred A., was a graduate of Yale University. He at first practised law, but, owing to failing health, was forced to abandon the legal profession, and took up the study of medicine, which he practised in Reading until his death, in 1902, aged sixty-three years. He was a soldier of the Civil war, belonging to the 128th Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, with which he left as a lieutenant, coming back as a captain. He married Emma C. Young, daughter of William S. Young, of Allentown, a prominent shoe manufacturer and real estate dealer. Nine children were born to this union, four of whom are deceased, as follows: Elizabeth died when six years old; and Hannah, Martha and one other died in infancy. The survivors are: William Y., with the American Gas & Coke Company, Camden, N. J.; Fred A.; Samuel L., an artist of Philadelphia; Ralph C., with Curtis, Jones & Company, shoe manufacturers of Reading; and Frank R., with the Choctaw Cotton Oil Company, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

Fred A. Schmucker was born Sept. 2, 1869, in Reading, and there attended the public schools, graduating from the high school in 1884. He went to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York (the medical department of Columbia University), but, suffering from eye trouble, was compelled to give up his profession. Prior to going to college, Mr. Schmucker had spent seven months in the employ of the Penn Hardware Company, and two years with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, and, on returning to Reading in 1889, he was associated with the National Bolt & Nut Company, for one year. Mr. Schmucker started the Penn Troy Laundry in 1892, being the manager and principal owner. The laundry is incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania, handles over 50,000 pieces of laundry every week, and has a large express business from outside towns, five wagons being necessary to handle the local business.

Mr. Schmucker was married Sept. 28, 1892, to Viola Hayden, daughter of Joel G. and Fanny J. Hayden, of Long Island, N. Y. Three children have been born to this union: Margaret and Mary Young, at school, and Emily. Mr. Schmucker belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Khorassans, the Royal Arcanum and the Maccabees. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, of which he is a trustee. "The conditions of success in life are the possession of judgment, experience, initiative and character," and Mr. Schmucker has been nothing if not a success.

GEORGE W. FRICKER, deceased, of Reading, was born in that city July 17, 1842, and was the youngest son of Jacob Fricker.

Jacob Fricker was a native of Huntingdon county, Pa., where he remained until after his education was completed. When about twenty-two years old he came to Reading and secured a position as foreman under Jacob Sourbeer, a manufacturer of fur hats. After several years of this association Mr. Fricker went into business for himself with Harry Brown as a partner and in 1835 they located at No. 807 Penn street. There, on a site of 30 x 270 feet, Mr. Fricker built a house, which is still standing, while in the rear was a log house where they carried on the manufacture of fur hats. Later they moved to Fifth and Court streets, where Tragle Brothers' large cordage building now stands. The business demanded considerable traveling from Mr. Fricker as it was the custom then to go around through the country, selling the hats or trading them for new skins, and during one of these trips he contracted a severe cold resulting in his death in August, 1847.

In 1828 Mr. Fricker had married a lady whose first name was Catherine, who survived him for many years, and lived in their old Penn street house for a period covering six decades. Their children were: Peter H., engaged in the hat business and a member of the Ringgold Band, deceased in 1860; Andrew J., deceased, who was a printer and box manufacturer, was connected with the Reading Lumber Company, and served as councilman for the Tenth ward; Sarah E., deceased; Jacob B.; and George W.

George W. Fricker received his education in the public schools of Reading. He became a box manufacturer and for a long time was located on South Twelfth street, where his brother, A. J. Fricker, was associated with him. His operations were highly successful and in 1892 he retired from business. His remaining years were spent in quiet enjoyment of his leisure at his home at No. 807 Penn street, and there he died Sept. 5, 1902. His remains were interred in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mr. Fricker stood high among the business men of Reading and was a well-known citizen.

Mr. Fricker was survived by his widow, Mrs. Louisa Fricker, who was a daughter of the late David G. and Mary G. (Frey) Knabb, the former an employe for many years at the Philadelphia and Reading station. Mrs. Fricker has no children, but a niece, Miss Sarah E. Fricker, lives with her in her home at No. 526 Walnut street. Mrs. Fricker is a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church, as was her husband.

Anthony Fricker, the ancestor of the family in America, located in the town of Reading prior to 1759, in which year he paid a federal tax of £8. His last will and testament he made in 1796, and this was probated June 5, 1797, soon after his death. It is recorded in Will Book A, page 362. In the will he speaks of Conrad Weiser as the "Grandfather" of my children. From this item it is evident that his wife Eve who survived him was a daughter of Conrad Weiser.

Anthony Fricker left a large estate. His children Anthony, Peter, Thomas and Catharine were bequested only one shilling as they had already received their share. His other children were George; John; Margaretha; William; Henry, and Magdalena who was the youngest daughter.

In 1831 William Fricker died and in his will he bequested one hundred dollars annually to his mother Eve, to be paid her as long as she lived. He speaks of "all my children" but does not mention their names.

Anthony Fricker, who died in 1884, and his wife Amelia had children: Ellen and Clara. The latter m. Peter Benson. Anthony Fricker bequested three hundred dollars to Julia Lebo, his wife's sister. He also bequested Leavy Fricker, daughter "of my deceased son William L., whose mother was Amelia Seitzinger, the sum of one hundred dollars."

William Fricker (son of William) died in 1871. He bequested his wife Elizabeth the home at No. 41 North Eighth street, with a lot 16x230 feet, with shop on the rear. They had children: Jane and Franklin, and a granddaughter Kate Schaedle.

RALPH S. KOSER, an enterprising young business man of Exeter township, Berks county, who is proprietor of the Penn poultry farm, situated one-quarter of a mile south of Jacksonwald P. O., was born Aug. 20, 1876, at Pinegrove, Schuylkill Co., Pa., son of Dr. S. S. and Gertrude (Burtif) Koser.

Ralph S. Koser was educated in the public schools of Williamsport, Pa., where he was reared, and at Bucknell College, from which institution he was graduated in 1896. He then learned the jewelry business, which he followed until his enlistment, in April, 1897, in Co. G, 12th Pa. Vol. Inf., under Col. Beebe, with which company he served two years, two months of which were spent in Cuba. He then enlisted in the 12th Pa. N. G. as private, being promoted to second lieutenant, serving as such until 1902, when he resigned, and later joined the 4th Pa. N. G., as lieutenant and later became captain. He resigned in August, 1906, having had the distinction of having commanded the largest company in the State.

In 1905 Mr. Koser established the Penn poultry farm, which he has made a decided success; he gives special attention to ducks, although he has raised many chickens, his plant having a capacity of 20,000 fowls annually. In addition, Mr. Koser has a tract of twenty acres of fine land, which he intends to devote to truck farming. He is enterprising and energetic, and his business interests are increasing rapidly.

On Aug. 21, 1906, Mr. Koser was married to Clara F. Russell, daughter of T. Frank and Nancy (Wirdwell) Russell, of Lewisburg. Mr. and Mrs. Koser attend the Presbyterian Church.

O. M. WEAND, a contractor, in Reading, Pa., was born April 2, 1858.

GEORGE W. HARRISON was born June 8, 1833, on the Harrison homestead in Union township, now a part of the borough of Birdsboro. He was brought up on the homestead farm, and pursued his education in the local schools until he was fifteen years old, when he became a clerk in the store of Mr. John Bland in the village of Mt. Airy. After working in the store but a year, he was placed in charge of a store at Birdsboro which Mr. Bland had purchased, evidencing the confidence which Mr. Bland had in him. After continuing in this store for sixteen years he became a partner. They traded under the name of Bland & Harrison for five years, when Mr. Harrison purchased his partner's interest in the business. He then carried on the store for two years, until 1862, when he became the chief clerk to Major Henry S. Kupp, who was appointed commissioner for the district of Berks county in drafting men for the Civil war. In 1863, Major Kupp was appointed provost marshal of the district, and Mr. Harrison was continued as chief clerk at Reading until 1865, when the Secretary of War (Edwin M. Stanton) appointed him commissioner of drafts, and he filled this honorable and responsible position in a most creditable manner until the close of the war.

At the close of the war Mr. Harrison was appointed freight agent and assistant ticket agent of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company at Birdsboro, which position he served until 1869, when he became the bookkeeper and cashier of E. & G. Brooke, manufacturers of iron at Birdsboro, and he filled this position until the company was incorporated in 1880 under the name of E. & G. Brooke Iron Co., when he became a director and its treasurer, and he held this office until his retirement a few years before his death.

Mr. Harrison was a devoted member of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, of Birdsboro, and served as vestryman for a number of years. He assisted in establishing the St. Michael's cemetery, and served as its superintendent, besides officiating as secretary and treasurer. From the time of reaching his majority, he was prominently identified with the Republican party. He took an active part in the erection of the borough of Birdsboro, of which he became one of the first councilmen. He assisted in establishing the First National Bank at Birdsboro in 1888, and served as vice-president until his decease. He was also identified with the Pennsylvania Diamond Drill & Machine Company, of Birdsboro, and with the Reading Foundry, serving each as a director. He was a member of Chandler Lodge, F. & A. M., at Reading, for many years. He died Feb. 22, 1903, survived by his widow and two sons, Ward and Henry K.

Mr. Harrison traced his ancestry back to Gen. John Harrison, who was publicly concerned with the execution of Charles I, for which offense King Charles II, upon his accession to the throne, caused him to be beheaded. His three sons then fled to America, locating in Virginia. One of them was John Harrison, who emigrated to Pennsylvania and became employed in the office of the surveyor-general, serving as one of the surveyors. In 1732, he took up a large tract of land, which was situated along the southerly bank of the Schuylkill river in Union township, and extended from Hay creek eastwardly for two miles, and southwardly from the river one mile. On this tract he erected a large stone building and carried on farming until his decease, when he was succeeded by his son John, who also carried on farming until his decease. Caleb Harrison, a grandson of the original owner and father of the subject of this sketch, became the next successor. Besides cultivating the farm, he officiated as justice of the peace for thirty years and took an active interest in local affairs, more especially relating to education, serving for many years as one of the school directors of the township. He was identified with establishing the Philomathean Academy on the Henry S. Kupp farm in 1855, and co-operated earnestly with Mr. Kupp and others in its successful management for ten years. In his earlier life he was brought up as a member of the Society of Friends, which was quite prominent in the vicinity at that time, but later in life became a member of St. Michael's Protestant Episcopal Church at Birdsboro.

WILLIAM D. KING, proprietor of the King Machine Works, at Reading, Pa., and an inventor of faucets, was born March 22, 1851, in Coatesville, Chester county, son of Isaac King.

Isaac King, who was a native of Dover, Del., for many years was an iron roller, and also engaged as a teamster, driving a six-mule team for several years. In 1861 he came to Reading, and engaged at the Philadelphia & Reading shops, under Colonel Arthur, being there employed at the time of his death April 15, 1899, in his seventy-eighth year. He married Rebecca S. Hinton, a native of Pennsylvania, who died from smallpox, Aug. 9, 1872, at the age of fifty-five years. To this union were born eight children, three of whom survive: William D.; Anna M. R.; and Margaret A. The family were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mr. King was a Republican in politics, and fraternally belonged to the Knights of the Mystic Chain.

William D. King was educated in the schools of Chester county and of Reading, attending the latter about one and one-half years, after which he spent one year at the rolling mill of the Reading Iron Works. In 1867 he engaged with Douglass & Connard, with whom he remained until 1902, and in this year he engaged in his present business, operating it, however, until 1903 for the firm of Rick & Jones. In the latter year he took up the business on his own account, having at first two partners, but in 1906 he bought out their interest. He employs from six to eight skilled mechanics, and his principal work is the manufacturing of expansion joints for steam pipes. He also repairs steam pumps and engines, and makes a specialty of steam fitting. The shop is located at Nos. 511-513 North Third street. In political matters Mr. King is a Republican, and his fraternal connection is with Camp No. 89, P. O. S. of A., of Reading, which he joined in 1871.

Mr. King was married to Minnie Streng, an adopted daughter of Martin Streng, and they have become the parents of three children: Irene R., m. to Ambrose Guinther, a contractor; Amy C., and William R.

William R. King, son of William D., was born Sept. 17, 1887, and is in the employ of his father. On Oct. 28, 1907, he married Anna Mary Frey, and their children are Thelma Larne and an infant yet unnamed. They reside at No. 1026 Madison avenue.

SAMUEL B. MAUGER, general merchant at Glendale, Douglass township, Berks county, was born in that township July 27, 1853, son of Jacob N. and Rebecca (Baker) Mauger.

Heinrich Mauger emigrated from Germany in or about the year 1762, being then about twelve years of age, and settled on a farm on Rattle Snake Hill, in Montgomery county, near the Berks county line. His wife was Mary Balser, and they had children: John; Henry; Frederick; Jacob; David; William (who died aged eighty-four years, the last of his family) and Elizabeth. All the children married, and all lived to between seventy-eight and eighty-four years.

Henry Mauger, grandfather of Samuel B., was an early resident of Douglass township, where he was engaged as a flint-lock maker, and a maker of guns. He lived on Rattle Snake Hill, and owned land there. He also worked as a stone mason; following his trade in the season. He is buried at Pottstown. He was twice married. By his first wife Hannah Nagel, he had children: Anna m. Samuel Morris, and lived in Ohio; Jacob N.; Jesse, a boatman on the canal, was drowned (unmarried); Jeremiah lived in Fairfield county, Ohio; and John N. lived in Pottstown. Mr. Mauger married (second) a Miss Schultz, and two sons, William and Peter, were born to this union.

Jacob N. Mauger, son of Henry, was born in Douglass township in 1809, and died in 1884; he is buried at Pottstown. He was a carpenter and stone mason. For twenty years he followed undertaking, and during that time lived on Rattle Snake Hill. In politics he was a Democrat, and served his township as school director, auditor and supervisor. He married Rebecca Baker, daughter of John Baker, of Douglass township. She died in 1892. Their children were: Reuben, a school teacher in Douglass township; Isaac, who was engaged in the furniture business in Philadelphia; John, a shoemaker by trade, who was killed in the Civil war; Jacob, a carpenter; Henry, who lived in Montgomery county; William, a furniture dealer at Pottstown; Samuel B.; Catharine, m. Edmond Geiger; George, of Stowe, Pa.; and Philip, of York, Pennsylvania.

Samuel B. Mauger received his education in the township schools when the school term did not exceed four months. At the age of nineteen he learned his present trade (the carpenter's) under his father, Jacob N. He worked at Pottstown, in the coal regions, and in Douglass township and surrounding districts. He had small contracts at times, and worked as gang foreman while in the coal regions. On Nov. 15, 1895, he began his career as a merchant, and now runs a general store in addition to his work at his trade. He also conducts the coal yards at the Manatawny Station.

On Sept. 6, 1879, Mr. Mauger married Mary Rhoads, daughter of Daniel M. and Rebecca U. (Fisher) Rhoads, of Douglass township, and they had one son, Daniel R. Mauger, born Feb. 24, 1886. The family attend the Amityville Lutheran Church.

DANIEL R. MAUGER, son of Samuel B. and Mary (Rhoads) Mauger, was born at Pine Iron Works, and was educated in the township schools and the Pottstown Business College, graduating in the class of 1902. He then became stenographer for the Morris Beef Company at Philadelphia, and served in that position one year, when he became head nurse at the Chester County Hospital for the Insane, located at Embreeville, and served in this position two years. He then cared for his mother for fifteen weeks before her death, Feb. 12, 1907. She is buried at Amityville. Since then he has been assisting his father in the store. He is a musician of much ability and during 1909 was band leader for a large circus company.

Jacob Mauger, son of the emigrant Heinrich, lived on Fox Hill, and operated a grist mill, known as Mauger's mill. He married Elizabeth Keiser, and they had children, as follows: Charles; Henry; George; Joseph; Levi; Sarah; Rachel and Catharine.

Charles Mauger, son of Jacob, was a farmer in Amity township, and is buried at Amityville. He married Catharine Levengood, and their children were: Mahlon; Mary Ann; Irwin; Sarah Ann; Wellington L.; Mathias L.; Franklin and Annie.

Bechtel

David Mauger, Sr., son of Heinrich, was born Feb. 12, 1797, in Douglass township, Berks county, on the Mauger farm, of which in 1826 he became the owner. This farm comprised 168 acres of excellent land, located near the railroad, the Schuylkill river and the canal. Its buildings are of the colonial style of architecture, and are substantial and in good repair. He married Sarah Bechtel, daughter of George Bechtel.

David B. Mauger, son of David and Sarah (Bechtel), was born Aug. 12, 1822. He was a man of rare judgment and high attainments, and was enterprising and influential in the community. He served as justice of the peace, school teacher, and in many ways was a useful member of society. He married Mary A. Lorah, and their children were: Sallie, who graduated with first honors from the Allentown Female College in 1876; Daniel L., who was educated in the Keystone State Normal School, and for many years was railroad agent at Franklin street, Reading; David L. who attended the Keystone State Normal School, graduated from Franklin and Marshall College in 1887, and who is now (1909) a member of the Berks County Bar (he was assistant district attorney); and Henry S., who attended the Keystone State Normal School, and is a graduate of the College of Pharmacy, Philadelphia.

JOHN J. ESHELMAN, cigar manufacturer of Mohnton, Pa., and one of the best known citizens of that place, was born in Cumru township, Berks county, April 30, 1859, son of Samuel Eshelman, and grandson of Jacob.

Martin Eshelman, the great-grandfather of John J., lived in Brecknock township near the Allegheny church where he owned a small farm which he cultivated. His wife was a Miss Eckert, and they had the following children: (1) Daniel born Nov. 21, 1808, died July 4, 1887 in his seventy-ninth year, m. Lydia Heveiling (1808-1865). He lived near Gouglersville, Pa. (2) John settled out West. (3) Martin m. Mary Rollman. He lived at Sinking Spring, Pa. (4) Jacob m. Magdalena Snyder. (5) Catharine m. John Steffey of Brecknock. (6) Isaac m. Eliza Rollman. He resided at Sinking Spring, Pa. (7) Lydia m. John Stafford of Brecknock township.

Jacob Eshelman, grandfather of John J., was a farmer and charcoal burner in Brecknock township, where he was born. His charcoal product supplied many of the large furnaces of the county, in which he was a man of some prominence. He was a Democrat, and a Lutheran member of the Allegheny church, where he is buried. He married Magdalena, daughter of Christophel Snyder, and they had five children, as follows: Samuel; Susan, born Feb. 8, 1827, who lives in Mohnton, Pa., is the widow of Richard Remp; Eliza and Katie, aged nine and seven years respectively, both died of diphtheria and were buried in one grave; and Catharine m. Daniel Musser, and lives in Cumru.

Samuel Eshelman, son of Jacob, was born Feb. 28, 1824, in Brecknock township, and he died there March 11, 1886, aged sixty-two years, and eleven days. He attended the local schools of his native township, and remained with his father on the farm all of his active life. In politics he was a Democrat, and in religion a Lutheran, belonging to the church of that denomination in Allegheny. He is buried at the Mohnton Cemetery. He married Margaret Lutz, daughter of Adam and Catherine Lutz, the former a soldier in the Continental Line from Berks county, for which service he drew a pension from the government. Mrs. Eshelman is still living in Mohnton. To this union was born a family of children as follows: Nathaniel m. Louisa Kerchner, and resides in Reading; John J.; Martha m. Aaron S. Hornberger; Katie m. Charles U. Grimes, a barber of Auburn, Pa.; Tillie m. Rev. Charles H. Hess, a minister of the Evangelical Association now stationed at Buffalo, N. Y.

John J. Eshelman received his education in Lancaster county, and at Charlestown, attending the Academy at the latter place for two terms. He learned the trade of cigar maker with George Leininger, of Mohnton, after which he spent three years at the Van Reed Paper Mill, afterward learning the hat finisher's trade at Mohnton with John H. Spatz, with whom he remained three years. The next two years he spent with the Philadelphia & Reading Company at Reading, in the car shops. By this time he had acquired means to start in business on his own account, on June 13, 1886, with W. G. Leininger as a partner, under the firm name of Eshelman & Leininger. They built a factory at Mohnton. This partnership continued until Jan. 1, 1890, when Mr. Eshelman bought out Mr. Leininger's interest, and has since continued alone. He built the present factory, No. 118, First District of Pennsylvania, in 1901—a substantial three story building, 30 x 42 feet. Seventy-five skilled workmen are employed the whole year round, and the product is shipped to all parts of the United States, especially to the western States. Among his special brands are the well known "M. A.," a fine ten cent cigar, and the "Prince Otto," "La Empress" and "General Banks" in the five-cent class. He also manufactures others and his trade is one of the best in that line in all this part of the State. He pays strict attention to his large and constantly increasing business, and is always to be found at his post, pleasant, genial but essentially business-like.

On Sept. 12, 1885, Mr. Eshelman married Arabella G. Leininger, daughter of James and Lydia (Grill) Leininger, and this union has been blessed with the following children: Maggie L., born Dec. 14, 1887; William L., born Nov. 12, 1891; Albert L., Nov. 14, 1893; Lydia L., March 20, 1899; and Victor L., June 4, 1901. In politics Mr. Eshelman is a true Republican, and while never active in party work he keeps thoroughly posted on public events, and is an entertaining talker. He is a member of Zion United Evangelical Church of Mohnton. In both public and private life he is highly respected. His social connections are with P. O. S. of A. Camp No. 61, of Reading; and with the Modern Woodmen of America.

JOEL B. BALTHASER, who died April 4, 1909, was a well known agriculturist of Berks County, Pa., residing in Perry township. He was born May 31, 1847, in Balthaser's Valley, in Windsor township, son of John and Catherine (Beahr) Balthaser.

Jacob Balthaser, grandfather of Joel B., who was an extensive farmer of Upper Bern (now Tilden) township, possessed over 400 acres of land. He married Maria (Molly) Greth, who was a member of the Catholic faith and contributed fifty dollars towards the erection of the Hamburg Catholic Church, and to them were born these children: Sarah m. Jacob Boyer; Hannah m. Jacob Renno; Jacob, who was a farmer of Lower Heidelberg township, m. a lady whose first name was Sallie and had these children, Cornelius, Caroline, Henry, Charles, George, Emanuel, Moses and Lizzie; John; Mary (m. Benjamin Sunday); George (who was a farmer of Windsor township); William (who settled in Ontelaunee, owned land in Upper Bern and Hamburg, was a merchant and very well-to-do); Isaac (who was drowned when a boy); Elizabeth (m. John Baer); Susannah (m. Edwin Kauffman); Jeremiah (who remained in his native township, had these children,—Helena, Annie, John, Elias and William); Samuel; and Benjamin (who obtained the homestead, had a son, David, who now occupies the old home, and the latter's children are,—Minnie; Jacob; Frank; Mollie; Milan; Benjamin; Maurice; Nathan; James; Polly; George, and Ruth).

John Balthaser, father of Joel B., was born in Upper Bern township, Berks county, Feb. 21, 1814, and was a well known farmer of Windsor township, where he owned three valuable farms in what is now known as Balthaser's Valley, the three tracts aggregating 385 acres. He was an influential man in his community and was greatly interested in educational movements, being one of the first school directors of the township, a position held by him for many years. He assisted in building up the public school system, and one of the schoolhouses is situated on his property, being known as "Balthaser's Schoolhouse No. 1." He was a Democrat in political faith. He and his family were members of Zion's Union Church, he being a Lutheran, while his wife belonged to the Reformed denomination.

On May 21, 1842, Mr. Balthaser was married to Catherine Beahr, daughter of Jacob and Catherine (Fink) Beahr, farming people of Perry township, and their children are: Isabella (m. Solomon Dreibelbis, of Hamburg, Pa.); Emeline (m. Henry G. Seidel, the owner of one of the old Balthaser homesteads, whose record appears elsewhere in this volume); Joel B.; Sarah (unmarried and residing with her sister, Mrs. Seidel); Alfred, who resides at Lenhartsville, m. Hannah Leiby; Catherine (deceased, m. Orlando Kerschner); and Brigitta (who was Mr. Kerschner's second wife).

The boyhood days of Joel B. Balthaser were spent upon the farm, and his early education was obtained in the public schools of his district. At the age of fourteen years he attended Lititz Academy, Lancaster county, which was under the supervision of Prof. John S. Beck. After leaving school he returned to the farm, and when eighteen years of age taught at Balthaser's Schoolhouse No. 1, continuing there two terms. Several years later he engaged in farming, in which he was most successfully engaged up to the time of his death. Mr. Balthaser was a progressive and enterprising citizen, and his 147 acre farm, supplied as it with the latest machinery, including a gasoline engine, with a capacity of 2,500 gallons, is in the best of condition. The farm contains a high grade of iron ore, and in the eighties Wise & Company mined some of these ores which were shipped to the surrounding plants then in operation. Mr. Balthaser was a practical farmer, and the buildings on his properties, which were erected by him, are well situated and of a substantial character. Mr. Balthaser also owned the old homestead in Windsor township, tenanted by his son, Llewellyn J., who is a prosperous young farmer.

Mr. Balthaser was a Democrat. He was the committeeman of his party for two years, was delegate to many county conventions, was for six years school director in Windsor township, and for twenty-three years justice of the peace in the same district, resigning the office when he removed from that district to his late residence. He was a Lutheran member of Zion's Union Church of Perry township, in which he was for many years an elder. His family are also members of that church.

On May 15, 1869, Mr. Balthaser was married to Esther A. Sunday, daughter of Jacob and Leah (Dunkel) Sunday, of Greenwich township, and to this union were born children as follows: Llewellyn J., a farmer of Windsor township, m. Lizzie Adam; Ida C. (m. Milton W. Smith, the well known merchant of Virginville, Pa., whose record appears elsewhere in this volume); Clara S. (m. William S. Yeager of Reading); Hettie Ann (m. John D. Keim, who resides on his father-in-law's farm); Missouri S., Oscar J. and Zenus I. J., single at home; and Mary A., Emma S. and Dinah M., all deceased.

ELMER T. LENHART belonged to the recent representatives of an old and honorable family of Berks county, intimately associated with its development since the middle of the eighteenth century, Lenhartsville on the Ontelaunee perpetuating the name.

In 1749, Peter Lenhart, of York county, received a patent for a tract of land which, according to record, he conveyed to Jacob Lenhart in 1771. On this tract Henry, the father of Jacob Lenhart, patentee, settled with his family, consisting of seven sons: John; Jacob; Samuel; Isaac; Henry; David and Frederick. They founded there the borough of Lenhartsville. Most of the sons married and reared families. Two landmarks remain of the time in which these members of the family lived—a building in the western part of the borough, erected in 1812, and the old church in which the Lenharts worshipped. From data given it is not clear which was the early ancestor of Elmer Lenhart. His grandfather Benjamin Lenhart, son of Henry, was born and reared in Lenhartsville, Greenwich township. He settled in Albany township, and there lived out his life as a farmer. The farm on which he resided remains in the family, and is now owned by the widow of Elmer T. Benjamin Lenhart was born Oct. 13, 1802, and died Jan. 8, 1856. He was a member of the New Bethel (Corner) Reformed Church. He married Esther Hohl, born Nov. 1801, died Feb. 6, 1849. Their children, all of whom are deceased, were: Eliza m. Daniel Grim, of Lenhartsville; Julia (1833-1902) m. John Hemmerly, lived in Albany township; Lucinda m. Willoughby Lutz; James; Charles also lived in Albany township; Levi resided in Wessnersville.

James Lenhart, son of Benjamin, was born in Albany township April 14, 1837, on the old homestead upon which he was reared, and which he cultivated during a period of thirty years. This homestead consisted of one hundred acres of what is commonly denominated "potato land." James Lenhart stood well in his community and was a man of fine public spirit. He served a number of years as Supervisor of Albany township, and was an efficient and earnest supporter of Democratic principles. He and his family followed the faith of his ancestry, the Reformed Church, with membership at New Bethel (Corner). James Lenhart married Caroline Trexler, daughter of Jonas and Abbie (Smith) Trexler, also of Albany township; where she was born September 20, 1836. She now lives with a sister-in-law at Kempton, her husband having died March 21, 1904, aged sixty-six years, eleven months, seven days. Their family consisted of six children, three of whom, Wallace, Elmer T. and Charles, are deceased; the survivors being Francis, Thomas and Lewis.

Elmer T. Lenhart was born on the old homestead Nov. 11, 1864, where he resided until his death, Dec. 8, 1904, aged forty years, twenty-seven days. The greater part of his business life was spent at the Kempton Creamery, working as a faithful employe for sixteen years, and for three years as proprietor. Retiring from the creamery business he took up the vocation of his fathers on the old homestead. Elmer T. Lenhart inherited all the sterling qualities of his sturdy ancestry, and led a worthy and exemplary life. In political and church allegiance he followed the earlier members of the family, was a deacon in the church for years, and was active in Sunday-school. He also held membership in the Junior Order of American Mechanics. He married Missouri Trexler, daughter of Jairus and Polly (Komp) Trexler, and to them were born six children: J. Hay, who is in the service of the government as driver on R. F. D. route No. 1, out of Kempton; Austin J., born 1891, who died May 10, 1904, aged twelve years, eight months, twenty-eight days; Clarence S., Eva C., Oscar P. and Nevin L.

In 1856 Sebastian Lenhart, a grandson of the pioneer, died in the borough of Hamburg, leaving his wife, Catharine Elizabeth. After he had amply provided for her, he bequeathed his niece, Elizabeth Miller, "a daughter of my brother-in-law, William Miller," $500.; Benjamin Lenhart, "son of my brother Henry," $500.; Moses Lenhart, "son of my brother Frederich," the sum of $500. The will was made July, 1848, and proved April 7, 1849. The executors were Benjamin Lenhart, Elizabeth Miller and the wife of the testator.

THE DEYSHER FAMILY has been connected with Berks county's history and affairs for the last century and a half, John Deisher, a German Palatinate, emigrating to America about the middle of the eighteenth century, and settling in Richmond township. The different ways of spelling the name are caused by the English way of spelling German sounds. Thus "Teischer," as it appears in Richmond records of about 1770, became Anglicized to "Deisher," and "Deysher."

John Deisher, great-great-great-grandfather of Isaac D., settled in Richmond township, where he died in 1761, leaving a large estate, and naming Stephen, his second son, as executor. Besides Stephen, there were: Peter m. Betsy Lesher; Jacob; Mary m. Henry Kime; Barbara m. Peter Hister; and Susanna Elizabeth. At least the first two named were born in Germany.

Peter Deisher, first-born of the above family, lived in Maxatawny township, where he owned a large estate. He died a few days subsequent to the date of his will—September 14, 1807, leaving his wife, Betsy, and three sons: John; Peter (2); and Jacob.

Stephen Deisher, executor of the ancestor's will, is on record in 1768, as a "taxable of Richmond," under the name of "Stophel Teischer." He married Maria Hattenstein, daughter of a Doctor Hattenstein, and has two daughters mentioned: Catharine, and Esther. Catharine became the first wife of Henry Stitzel, and upon her death, he married her sister, Esther. Stephen Deisher died about 1839, Esther, and her daughter, Elizabeth (Stitzel) Sharadin, being apparently the sole heirs.

Peter (2), son of Peter (1), of the ancestral family, is recorded as marrying Elizabeth Dunkel. They had thirteen children, as follows: Hettie; Elizabeth; William; John D., mentioned later; Anna H.; Susanna; Caroline; Peter; Jacob; Abbie; Charles; Maria; and Louisa.

John D. was the fourth child in the above family, and the grandfather of Isaac D. It was this generation that changed the spelling of the name to "Deysher," which will be used henceforth. John D. was a native of Maxatawny township, carrying on his business of farming near Kutztown. He married and was the father of the following children: Daniel, referred to later; John, who lived at Lyons, Pa.; Sarah m. Peter Knapp, of Reading; a daughter who married a Mr. Hill, of Allentown, Pa.; a daughter who married Edwin Sholl, of Fleetwood, Pa. The father of this family died about 1875.

Daniel Deysher, father of Isaac D., was born about 1827, in Maxatawny township, and came to Eagle Point about 1868, where he settled on a farm. From that year until 1884, his consistent honesty and good farming won him the substantial respect of the whole countryside. He is described as being "short-set, smooth-faced, black haired, and weighing about 180 pounds." The reason for this description is that he disappeared absolutely about the year 1889, and nothing is known of him, or whether he is dead. He either fell into a "mile-hole," or met with foul play, and his strange vanishing is still mentioned among his friends and neighbors. He owned the farm now in the possession of Reuben Henge.

Daniel Deysher was twice married, his first wife being Lefena Stein, daughter of Jacob Stein, of Greenwich township. They had two children, both deceased. His second wife was Lovina Stein, sister of Lefena. She died in 1873, aged thirty-nine, and is buried at Grimville. Her children were: Catharine (m. first, David Adam, and second, James Nunermacher); Louisa (m. Levi Liebensperger); Mary J. (m. Percival Brumbach); Isaac D.; Elmira (deceased; m. Oscar Reinhart); Nicholas, Kutztown, Pa.; Emma (m. Jonathan George); George, of Breinigsville, Pa.

ISAAC D. DEYSHER, our subject, was born near Kutztown, Maxatawny township, February 26, 1859. He was reared to farm life and served his parents until his twenty-fourth year. Between 1883 and 1888 he went West for two years and was employed at the usual higher wage rate of that section, mostly on the farm. In the spring of 1888 Isaac D. settled on the property where he now resides, which belonged at that time to his father-in-law, Charles Faust. Here he remained as tenant until 1897, when he purchased the farm, and now cultivates it.

On Oct. 1, 1888, Isaac D. was married to Miss Cordelia Faust, daughter of Charles and Mary Ann (Zettelmayer) Faust. Mrs. Deysher's grandfather, Daniel, married Frederica Shumaker. Mrs. Faust died the latter part of February, 1866, aged 46 years. To Mr. and Mrs. Deysher have come four children: Charles F., Hattie I., Mary A., and George H.

Mr. Deysher is a consistent voter of the Democratic ticket, and is a member of the New Bethel Corner Church, Lutheran Congregation, of which he has been Deacon and treasurer. Mrs. Deysher is a member of the Reformed congregation, and is active in its work.

The farm, of which Mr. Deysher is proprietor, consists of 150 acres, eighty of which is farming land—"potato land." In accordance with the custom of the countryside Mr. Deysher puts in from eight to twelve acres of that vegetable, and is very successful in raising a fine grade. The present large brick residence, surrounded by broad lawns, was constructed by Charles Faust, father-in-law of Mr. Deysher, in 1859 and the barn was built in 1854. One George Zettelmayer bought the property from the Stein family, and through him it came into the possession of Mr. Faust. About forty years ago a very good quality of slate was discovered to be underlying almost the whole farm, and at present there are three different quarries operating in the beds. These quarries employ quite a large company of workers, Rehr & Fricker of Reading having operated a lease in the deposit for fully nineteen years, one quarry employing as many as twenty workmen at a time. Good slate being in great demand this article finds a ready market.

Mr. Deysher is justly regarded as having all the virtues of his ancestors, as being an intelligent and progressive citizen, and one who is at all times just and considerate, yet watchful of his own interests, seeking his success in the legitimate and commendable lines of business.

EDWARD STROUD, who for a number of years was engaged in the brick manufacturing and draying business in the city of Reading, passed away in that city, in 1878. Mr. Stroud was born Dec. 2, 1818, and received his education in the common schools. He worked his way up from a humble start, accumulating through honest methods a handsome competency. His brick yard was located on a property owned by Mrs. High, near where Simon Kline's brick yard is now located. Mr. Stroud was noted for his moral habits and his honesty and generosity. He was averse to liquor in any form, and used but sparingly of tobacco.

In 1844 Mr. Stroud was married to Susan Hettrick, who was born Aug. 20, 1820, daughter of Henry Hettrick, and the following children were born to this union: Catherine, wife of Penrose Brownbeek; Albert; Clara; Charles, deceased; Emily, Alice; Edward. Mr. and Mrs. Stroud were members of the Lutheran Church. In his political belief Mr. Stroud was a Democrat, but was not a radical, voting rather for the man than the party. He was a great lover of home and family, and had few or no connections with fraternal or secret societies. Mr. Stroud was buried in the Charles Evans cemetery. Mrs. Stroud died Aug. 12, 1907.

BAER. Most of the Baers of Berks and Lehigh counties, Pa., are descended from John, or Hans, Baer, who after landing at Philadelphia lived for a few years at Germantown. Before 1750 he settled in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county. His farm today is pointed out as the Kerschner farm, and lies about a mile south of Claussville. In 1750 the name of Hans Baer appears on the record of Ziegel's Church, as one of the builders of the first church edifice for that congregation. Hans Baer had four children: (1) John moved to Windsor township, Berks county, and his descendants live in Hamburg, Windsor, Perry and Bern townships. (2) Adam went a few miles northwest of his father's place, and in 1773 settled on a farm which has since been in the family name—over 130 years. He had twelve children, seven sons and five daughters. Of these Jonathan, the youngest, went to Whitehall, and had three sons—Jonas, John and Abraham (father of Osville Baer, of Schwenkville). Peter, eldest son of Adam, was familiarly known as "Red Peter" or "Peter the Red," and lived on the old homestead; he had six children—Benjamin; Joseph; David; Solomon; Polly and Hannah. Solomon had four children, and Joseph eight, and their descendants live in Lehigh county. David became a prosperous tanner and lived and died in Oley township, Berks county; he had ten children, of whom Benjamin the eldest obtained the homestead, and became the father of twelve children—William; Jonas; Levi; Edwin; Phaon; Peter; Charles; Eli; Julia; Sarah; Caroline and Eliza. William, eldest son of Benjamin, obtained the homestead, and in turn gave it to his son Peter, the present owner. This farm is situated three miles south of Seipstown, in what is known as Baer's Valley. William died about 1905, aged seventy-seven years. (3) Jacob. (4) Barbara married Henry Fetter, and lived in Allentown.

Jacob Baer, third son of Hans, obtained his father's farm, and also acquired several large tracts east of the Adam Baer farm. He was the owner of over 500 acres in all. He was the father of six sons and six daughters, and to each of the sons he gave a farm. These sons were: Jacob, who lived and died in Weisenburg township, Lehigh county; Daniel, who died in Weisenburg township, and was the father of John, of Rockland township, Berks county (who in turn had sixteen children); Henry, who moved to Luzerne county; John (or Hans) Adam; and two other sons.

John Adam Baer, son of Jacob, moved in 1812 to Maxatawny township, Berks county, on what is now known as the Hartman farm about a mile northeast of Kutztown. He was the father of ten children, namely: Jonathan; John; Peter; Charles; Solomon; Eva; Lydia; Betsy; Susanna, and Polly.

Jonathan Baer, son of John Adam, was born in Weisenburg township in 1796, and accompanied his father to Berks county, settling first in Maxatawny township. He then went to Albany township, Berks county, and lived at New Jerusalem Church, where he died in 1878, and is buried at Grimville Church. He was a farmer by occupation. He was six feet tall, and was very strong. For thirty-five years he held the office of constable. He married Catharine Mattern, who died advanced in years. They had four children: Eliza m. Levi Reppert; Charles; Henry lived in Greenwich, then Albany, and died in Windsor township; and Hettie (Esther) m. George Haring.

Charles Baer, son of Jonathan, was born Jan. 25, 1825, in Maxatawny township, and died on his farm in Albany township, near New Jerusalem Church, on Sept. 14, 1907, and was buried there, being a member of the Reformed congregation, and an elder for more than twenty years. He was a farmer by occupation, and owned a farm of sixty-two acres on which he made his home after 1869. He had many bees, and was very successful as an apiarist. In his young manhood he was of very fine appearance, standing six feet two inches in height, but in his later years he became stooped. His farm is now the property of his son, Jonathan. In 1886 he built the present good barn, and in 1895 the wagon shed. He learned the carpenter's trade, and followed it some five years, but farming proved more attractive, and he began in Greenwich township, near Krumsville, and from there went to Kistler's Valley in 1860, and nine years later to his farm in Albany, where he died. In politics he was a Democrat. He married Judith Greenawalt, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Hummel) Greenawalt. She was born April 4, 1829, and died April 26, 1903. They had but one child, Jonathan.

JONATHAN BAER, son of Charles and Judith, was born in Greenwich township, Berks county, Oct. 4, 1850, and was educated in the common schools and in the Normal school at Kutztown. He was licensed to teach when fifteen years old, and taught his first two terms in Schuylkill county. Later he was examined in Berks county, by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner and Dr. S. A. Baer, county superintendents. He taught Fetherolf's school in Albany township for nine winters, in succession, and was very successful, relinquishing the school at the end of that time on account of ill health. In politics he is a well known Democrat. In 1871 he was elected assessor of Albany township, and served in that office for six years, after which he was out for six years, and again elected, serving twelve years in succession, and he became familiarly known as Assessor Baer. He was twice tax collector. He assisted his father on the farm, and studied at night, becoming one of the best educated men of the township. After his father's death the farm came into his possession, and it now consists of seventy-three acres. He raises annually about fifteen acres of potatoes.

In 1873 Mr. Baer married Catharine Greenawalt, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Stump) Greenawalt, and they have one son, Charles A.

CHARLES A. BAER, son of Jonathan and Catharine, was born in Albany township, and received his education in the township schools and in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, graduating in 1901. He has taught school in Albany township since 1899. During the summer he works on his father's farm. In 1903 he married Mary Krause, daughter of Jacob Krause, of Albany township, and they have two daughters, Mabel J. and Helen C.

LUCIAN STOUDT, one of Alsace township's representative citizens, who in addition to carrying on farming and trucking is engaged in blacksmithing at Seidel's blacksmith shop, was born April 14, 1857, in Maxatawny township, Berks county, Pa., son of Henry Francis and Tillie (Reppert) Stoudt, and grandson of Reuben Stoudt.

Henry Francis Stoudt was reared in Maxatawny township, where he was married to Tillie Reppert, and to them the following children were born: John, who died in March, 1907, on Judge Stitzel's farm in Richmond township (m. Amanda Bear, and they had six children,—Jacob; Henry; John; George; Frederick and Annie); Hannah (m. Charles Golmoyer, resides in Reading and has four children,—Jacob, John, Asher and Llewellyn); Henry Francis (who died at Kutztown, Berks county, m. Katie Emore, and they had five children,—Harry, Bartolette, Francis, Lizzie and Annie); Oliver (who is engaged as an auctioneer at Bowers, m. Sallie Hilbert, and they have three children,—Franklin, William and Katie); Lucian; Daniel (a liquor agent of Allentown, married Katie Long and has two children,—Lillie and Daniel); and Louisa (m. William Kershner, a blacksmith of Macungie, has four children,—Amelia, William, Lillie and Louisa).

Lucian Stoudt was three years of age when his father died, and he was taken charge of by his sponsor, Lucian Ginger, who kept him until he was six years old, at which time he went to live with John Henning, and worked around the iron ore mines for some time. He subsequently learned blacksmithing, which he has followed to the present time, also engaging in trucking and farming. In 1873 he went with companions who had enlisted in the regular army, and although too young to shoulder a gun, went with them to Salt Lake City, Utah, to the Black Hills, and was for a time with Custer's army. He later joined Barnum's circus troupe, but finally returned to Berks county and settled down on a good farm at Seidel's blacksmith shop in Alsace township.

In 1877 Mr. Stoudt was married to Sarah Schmeck, daughter of John and Catherine (Schmeck) Schmeck, and eight children have been born to this union: Catherine (m. Samuel Schmeck, a trucker of Alsace township, has five children,—Harry; Helen; Frank; Clarence and Carrie); Ellsworth; John Lucian; Charles Edward; Henry Francis; Sallie; Ruth Bertie; Oliver Gruber and Lottie Ellen. In politics Mr. Stoudt is a Democrat, but he has never been an office seeker. The family attend the Reformed Church.

HENRY BERK is a farmer in Albany township, Berks county, where he was born June 8, 1847, son of Johan and Lydia (Wessner) Berk.

The Berk, Berck, or Berg family settled in Berks county in the very beginning of its history. The pioneer members of the family were Henry and Ludwig Berck, probably brothers, who located in Greenwich township. In 1759 the former paid four pounds tax, and the latter three pounds. In 1774 the taxable list of Greenwich township records the names of Henry Berck and Peter Berck. It appears that Ludwig had already died or removed from that township. The Federal census of 1790 records the following Berks for Greenwich township, as heads of families: Peter Berck, who had a son under sixteen years, a wife and three daughters; George Berck, who was married but had no children. In 1811 John Berk was a taxable of Greenwich township, and paid a tax of £1 5s. 4d. The Berks were among the Huguenot families who came to this country for religious freedom, and with the family bearing the name of Beli (now Bailey) settled in the same (Greenwich) township. Both families later moved to Albany township in the same county. One branch of the Berk family went to Ontelaunee, and of that line one member went to Cumru township, where today Charles Berg is well known.

David Berk, who died in Greenwich township in 1871, was survived by his wife Hannah and sons David and Nathan. His will is on record in Book 12, page 354.

Daniel Berck (as his name is spelled on his tombstone), grandfather of Henry, was born July 27, 1796, and died March 6, 1871, and is buried at New Jerusalem Church in Albany township. He owned the farm now the property of Charles Schollenberger. This was a large farm, and when Mr. Berck died it first became the property of his son Reuben. His wife was Sarah Billman, born Oct. 12, 1793, died May 28, 1869. they had seven children, and at their deaths twenty-nine grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Among their children were: Johan; Reuben, born 1821, died past sixty years of age, m. Lovina Knepper (who died in 1875, aged fifty-four years), and they lived in Albany township; Daniel B., born 1825, died 1884, lived in Albany township; Salome m. Jacob Reinhart.

Johan Berk, father of Henry, was born in Albany township June 5, 1818, and died March 30, 1883, and is buried at New Bethel Church. He was a farmer and owned the farm now owned by his son Henry, consisting of 153 acres. He built the present barn. He was a man well known in public affairs, and served as supervisor and school director, and he was an official of the New Bethel Church. He married Lydia Wessner, born May 27, 1817, daughter of Johannes Wessner; she died May 18, 1882. Eight children were born to this union as follows: Elias is married and lives with his brother Henry; Daniel lived in West Penn township, Schuylkill county; Jacob lives in Albany township; Henry; Fianna m. David Komp; John lives in West Penn township, Schuylkill county; Adam, a farmer at Eckville, in Albany township, married Sarah J. Merkel, daughter of Abraham and Leah (Follweiler) Merkel, and she died in 1898, the mother of eight children—Katie V. (deceased), J. Oscar (deceased), M. Vara, Clara I., William H., Ralph A., Frances A. and Robert J. (deceased); and Joel lives in West Penn township, Schuylkill county.

Henry Berk obtained but a limited education as his winters were spent in chopping cord wood for his father, for whom he worked until he was twenty-five years of age. He was then married and began farming in Albany Corner, on land which he still owns though it is tenanted by his son-in-law, George Schroeder. Here he lived many years and at present is making his home on a tract of thirty acres adjoining, where he erected all the buildings except the house, which was built in the early fifties by Michael Hendricks. Mr. Berk also owns a farm of 180 acres in Albany township, known as the George Schwenk homestead. This came into his possession about 1898, and is now cultivated by his son J. Francis. He is one of the substantial men of the township. In politics he is a Democrat, and he has served as delegate to county conventions. He and his family are Reformed members of New Bethel Church, of which he was deacon and elder for many years.

Mr. Berk married Mary S. Lutz, daughter of Abraham and Catharine (Bailey) Lutz, and six children were born to them: J. Francis, a farmer in Albany, m. Jane Nester, and has five children—Maud, Katie, Edna, Charles and Lillian; William died in infancy; James, employed by M. C. Dietrich, at Kempton, m. Annie Schroeder (no children); Sarah was buried on her second birthday; Walter J., of Albany township, m. Rosa Maury, and has three children—Carrie, George and Clarence; and Nevada M. m. George Schroeder, and they live on Mr. Berk's farm in Albany township (no children).

LEVI W. RITZMAN, the leading general merchant of Strausstown, Berks county, is also one of the most prominent men in his locality, having for years been a worker in the Democratic party, the holder of various local offices and an active man in fraternal and church life.

Mr. Ritzman's great-grandfather, Michael Ritzman, lived above Bernville, near Rehrersburg, where he had a small farm, upon which he ran a distillery. His son Jacob, the grandfather of Levi W. Ritzman, was likewise a farmer near Rehrersburg, where he died, and he is buried at the old Rehrersburg Lutheran Church. He married Barbara Sheaffer, and to them were born children as follows: George; Jacob; Lydia, who married William Keener; Elizabeth, who is living at Strausstown; and Selesia, living at Rehrersburg.

Jacob Ritzman, son of Jacob, was born Feb. 4, 1825, and was a farmer in Upper Tulpehocken township, owning the farm about two miles from Strausstown upon which the well-known Indian fort was built; it was used for protection against the Indians. He married Sarah Wagner, born May 18, 1823, died Oct. 1, 1889, and Mr. Ritzman passed away Nov. 14, 1873. They are both buried at the Zion's (Blue Mountain) Church. They were the parents of six children: Nicholas, who is living in Reading, Pa.; W. W., also of Reading; Levi W.; Abraham W., a resident of Shartlesville; Israel W., of Reading; and Hannah W., wife of Aaron F. Henne, of Strausstown.

Levi W. Ritzman was born March 29, 1854, in Jefferson township, Berks county, and there attended the public schools, remaining with his father until he was seventeen years old. While at home he assisted with the farm work, and later began clerking for S. W. Lesher, at Schaefferstown, with whom he remained two years. His next employer was S. B. Kantner, at Strausstown, for whom he clerked until he bought out the establishment, in 1878. Here he has built up a thriving business, now having the largest general store in the town, where he carries a complete stock of goods in common demand in his section. He is an enterprising man, honorable in his dealings, and has the confidence and support of the community.

Mr. Ritzman is a faithful Democrat in political opinion, and he has been active in the party for many years, was committeeman for twelve years, and has been a delegate to numerous county and State conventions. He served three years as auditor of his township, and has served the same length of time as school director; he was assessor for six years, and in 1902 was a candidate for county commissioner, but withdrew in favor of a friend in his part of the county. He is an honored member of various fraternal organizations, belonging to Williamson Lodge, No. 307, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, No. 237, Reading; Reading Commandery, No. 42, K. T., Reading, Pa.; Strausstown Lodge, No. 77, I. O. O. F. (charter member); Lodge No. 289, Daughters of Rebekah (charter member); Camp No. 133, P. O. S. of A., at Shartlesville; and Tulpehocken Castle, No. 133, K. G. E. (charter member). Mr. Ritzman is a Lutheran in religious faith, and he has been an earnest worker in his church, which he has served as deacon and elder and for nine years as treasurer.

Mr. Ritzman married Kate S. Burkhart, daughter of Enoch Burkhart and a member of a well-known Berks county family, of Bernville, Pa., and they have had a family of seven children, four of whom died young. The survivors are: Bertha M., who is the wife of Charles T Barnett, a barber at No. 209 Penn street, Reading, and they have a daughter, Beulah Barbara; Orson Nevin taught four terms school in Upper Tulpehocken township, and is now employed as instructor in the Ovens School, Pottsville, Pa.; Rhoda May is teaching public school in Upper Tulpehocken township.

DAVID S. WOLFE, one of the leading business men of Perry township, Berks county, Pa., who is junior member of the firm of William Wolfe & Son, manufacturers of underwear at Shoemakersville, was born in this village, Sept. 28, 1863.

Samuel Wolfe, the grandfather of David S., was born in 1800 in Lancaster county, but removed to Berks county at an early age and settled in Windsor township, where he carried on farming. He married Catherine Sieger of the same township and died in 1835, while she, who was born in 1801, passed away in 1889. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe, namely: Lydia m. William Madeira; John m. Matilda Hoffman; one son m. a Miss Jacoby, and moved West; William, the father of David S., and David who died when twenty-one years of age.

William Wolfe was born at Shoemakersville in 1835, and has spent his entire life in this village. In 1860 he married Rebecca Sullenberger, and their children are as follows: David; Solomon m. Catherine Kerchner; Mahlon, who lost his life on the railroad when sixteen years of age; William, who was a practicing physician of Fleetwood borough, died in 1902, leaving a widow, Anna Warmkessel; Elizabeth; Cora m. Charles Sunday; Hermie; Annie; and Maude, whose death occurred in young womanhood.

David S. Wolfe was educated in the local schools, and when but ten years of age engaged in boating, first driving a team on the tow-path and gradually advancing, until, after the lapse of twelve years, he operated a boat for himself. Upon reaching his majority he determined to fit himself for a commercial life, and attended the Business College at Poughkeepsie during the winter of 1884-85. He abandoned boating on the Schuylkill Canal in 1886 and entered the employ of the Reading Hardware Company as clerk, continuing with this company until 1892, and then, becoming ambitious to carry on business for himself, he began the manufacture of brushes at Shoemakersville. This he conducted successfully for two years, selling his product to store-keepers in the Schuylkill Valley.

With this experience at clerking and manufacturing, Mr. Wolfe felt qualified to engage in a more extensive enterprise and, with his father as partner, established at Shoemakersville in 1894, a large two-story frame factory for the manufacture of underwear, under the firm name of William Wolfe & Son. They have continued to the present time with unqualified success. Starting with fifteen hands, the business has so increased that they now employ from forty to seventy, according to the condition of trade. The plant is known as the Globe Knitting Mills.

Mr. Wolfe from the beginning of his business career has taken an active interest in the welfare of his native village, and along this line he encouraged the establishment of the Board of Trade, which has been instrumental in developing the manufactures, wealth and population of the village. He associated with D. W. Rubright in founding the Globe Dye and Bleach Works, near Shoemakersville, and has assisted in its management until the present time, being half owner of the plant. He is one of the directors of the Hamburg Savings Bank, and also of the Commercial Trust Company, of Reading. In 1900 Mr. Wolfe was appointed committeeman on the Republican ticket, for the township, and has acceptably filled this position to the present time. In 1905 he was elected a school director of Perry township, a position he is now holding. Mr. Wolfe erected, in 1903, a two-story, light sandstone dwelling on an elevated lot opposite the Pennsylvania Railroad station, this being the handsomest dwelling in Shoemakersville, and an ornament to the town.

Mr. Wolfe was married in 1886 to Anna Unger (daughter of Isaac Unger of Shoemakersville), who died in 1902, leaving four children,—Raymond; George; Charles and Pearl Irene. Mrs. Wolfe was a thoroughly educated woman, recognized for her many accomplishments. She had taken a great interest in educational matters, and for three years prior to her marriage had taught school at Shoemakersville and Birdsboro.

JAMES D. REESER, who is successfully conducting the "Hotel Reeser," at Bernville, Pa., was born in Maiden-creek township, June 1, 1872, son of Benneville and Mary (DeTurk) Reeser.

William Reeser, his grandfather, lived in Maiden-creek township, where he owned about 300 acres of valuable land, and where his death occurred. He married a Miss Kistler, and they had children as follows: John, living in the West; Sarah, m. to a Mr. Willits; Kate, m. to a Mr. Ebling; Benneville; Jacob, who died in San Francisco, California; William, who died in Ohio; and James, who died in Maiden-creek township. Benneville Reeser was born in 1841, and died in 1891. He was buried in Becker's churchyard, Richmond township. He had spent his life in agricultural pursuits in Maiden-creek township. Mr. Reeser married Mary DeTurk, daughter of Charles DeTurk, of Richmond township, and they had these children: Hettie m. David Schroeder, of Reading; James D.; Mary died, unmarried, in 1907; Charles is a baker in Penn township; Nora m. Albert Gibson, of Reading; Katie m. Orlando Moll, and died in 1907; John died aged ten years.

James D. Reeser attended the public schools of Richmond and Maiden-creek townships, and in his youth learned the baking business, which he followed for a period of fifteen years, conducting the Bernville Bakery very successfully for eight years. This, however, he sold to his brother, Charles, and purchased his present hotel property, then an old log building on the Penn township line, borough of Bernville. In 1901 he replaced the old building with a fine brick structure, three stories high, 50x50 feet in dimensions, with twenty-nine rooms. He has fine grounds and all sorts of amusement facilities, and his place is very popular and well patronized. In addition to his hotel property, Mr. Reeser owns a bakery building, 12x25 feet, as well as a farm of forty-five acres, the old Kerchner property. Mr. Reeser is a member of St. John's Reformed Church of North Heidelberg township. He is treasurer of Penn township, served as school director one term, and has held various other offices of public trust. He is treasurer of the Bernville Baseball Club, and is fraternally connected with Bernville Lodge, No. 122, I. O. O. F., Camp No. 99, P. O. S. of A., Wernersville, and Bernville Commandery, of which he is treasurer. His friends are legion, and he is known throughout this section of the county as a man whose word is as good as his bond, and upon whom confidence can be placed.

On July 14, 1894, Mr. Reeser married Eva Gerhart, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Lamm) Gerhart, and to this union have been born two children: W. Raymond and Elizabeth.

WILLIAM S. MONIER, a retired merchant of Reading, whose death occurred May 13, 1909, came from one of the oldest families in the city, and his ancestry can be traced back still farther to a family well known in French history before the settlement of America.

The paternal grandfather, Daniel Monier, lived and died in Reading, a cooper by trade. His wife had the name of Mary Phillippi, and while born in the same city, was descended from the famous Phillippi family. Their son, Henry W. Monier, born in Reading, passed his life there engaged in business as a contracting plasterer. He died in 1900, aged seventy-four. He married Mary A. Holloway, who died in 1884, aged eighty-four. She was a daughter of Samuel Holloway, a farmer of Amityville, Berks county. Their five children were: Henry A., who died at the age of nine years; Emily A., who died aged four years; Margaret H., Mrs. H. V. Bartlett, who died aged thirty-four; Mary A., wife of Rev. W. O. Cornman, who died when she was fifty-two years of age; and William S.

William S. Monier was born in Reading, July 18, 1839. His early education was acquired in the Reading public schools, and he later attended a boarding school at Amityville. When he reached an age to begin his active career in the world, he started as a machinist, but after working at that trade for a year, he went to Carlisle and learned carpentry, following that occupation until the breaking out of the Civil war. He enlisted in 1861 at the Carlisle Barracks as a private in the 4th U. S. Cavalry. He was one of the body guard for General Sherman, General Buell and General Rosencrans, and participated in all the battles of the Cumberland division up to that at Chickamauga, seeing nineteen months service in all. When his term of enlistment expired, Mr. Monier returned to Reading and became a clerk in the office of the collector of internal revenue remaining there till the collectorship was abolished. His next business enterprise was the establishment of a confectionery store, which he conducted for six years. After closing that out he entered the service of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad for four years and then was employed for twelve or thirteen with the Consumer's Gas Company, at Reading. This ended his active business life, as on severing his connections with the company May 1, 1905, he retired to private life.

Mr. Monier was for a number of years prominent in politics, and for a time represented the city in the council. For four years he held a seat in the select council, representing the fourth ward, and he also served two terms in the common council, from the fifth ward. While serving in these capacities, he formulated and proposed all the ordinances which gave the Pennsylvania Railroad Company the right of way through Reading.

The first union contracted by Mr. Monier was to Mary H., the daughter of William T. Young, a prominent shoe manufacturer of Allentown. She died in 1882. They had six children: Mabel H. deceased, m. to Irwin Trego; Emily R., deceased; Harry Y., at Bethlehem; W. R., clerk at the Crystal Palace in Reading; Edward M., a merchant in Trenton, N. J.; and Howard R., of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company. In 1894 Mr. Monier married Miss Mary V. Frick, the daughter of Elhannan Frick, of Chester county. She too died, passing away March 28, 1905, aged forty-eight years.

Mr. Monier was for many years a member of the First Presbyterian Church, and was one of its active supporters and workers. He was a member of McLean Post, No. 16, G. A. R. He was a man of much ability, who had attained a very gratifying amount of success in life and many friends mourn his loss. Mr. Monier was borne to his last resting place in Charles Evans Cemetery by members of the G. A. R. and he was covered by the flag which in his young manhood he had risked his life to defend.

REVEREND J. HALLER VON NIEDA, former pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle at No. 1003 Franklin street, died April 5, 1908. He was a well-known Berks county undenominational church worker, and was born Dec. 14, 1860, near Fritztown, Berks county, Pa., son of Philip and Annie (Haller) Von Nieda, natives of this section.

J. H. Von Nieda received his early education in the schools of Berks county, and for four years attended Lebanon Valley College, at Danville. He was licensed while at school, at the age of nineteen years commencing to preach, which he continued for six years and returned to college, where he remained for one year. His first charge was the United Brethren Church at Rayville, Md., where he remained for one year, afterward preaching in Halifax, Pa., for sixteen months, followed by three years at Lykenstown, and one year at Shamokin. After his year's work at college he took charge of the United Brethren Church in Reading, May 12, 1889, to finish the unexpired term of Rev. Job Light, after which the Conference retained him five successive terms of one year each. He was then returned to the First United Brethren Church in Lebanon, and after doing evangelistic work for one year, returned to Reading and for two years labored at Zion United Brethren Church. Rev. Mr. Von Nieda then retired from that denomination and for two years preached the Gospel independently, when he began the establishment of Gospel Tabernacle, which was completed in 1901. He was an earnest worker, beloved by his congregation and respected by all.

Rev. Mr. Von Nieda married July 10, 1883, Mollie R. Richard, and to them there were born two children: Mary H., who died aged nine months; and Philip D., born Dec. 14, 1885, and has charge of the wireless station at Culebra Islands, in the United States Navy service.

RISHEL. William Rishel, who passed all of his life in Jefferson township, Berks county, was born there in 1823. He died in 1908 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Stoudt. Until his retirement in 1899 he conducted a fifty-acre farm. He was a Democrat in politics, and served the township for a number of years as school director and supervisor. He was a member of St. Thomas Reformed Church, which he had served in an official capacity. Mr. Rishel married Maria Wenrich, daughter of Hon. Paul Wenrich, of Jefferson township, and five children were born to them: Rebecca m. William F. Heckler; William P.; Sarah M., unmarried, lives in Philadelphia; James I.; and Clara E. m. George Stoudt, of Shartlesville, Berks county.

William P. Rishel, J. P. of Centre township, was born in Jefferson township, on the old homestead, Jan. 6, 1851. He attended the township schools, Bernville Academy, the Keystone State Normal School (at Kutztown) and Palatinate College at Myerstown, receiving a thorough education, which well fitted him for the teacher's profession. He was engaged in teaching in all thirty-five terms, in Jefferson township, Centre township (for twenty years) and Centreport, at which place he taught the borough school for six terms. This was his last school, and he retired in 1906 with a record of successful work of which he may well feel proud. Mr. Rishel owns fifteen acres of land near Centreport, and there he resides. He is a well-known man in his district, and still retains the interest in educational affairs which such a veteran teacher would naturally feel. He served many years as auditor of his township, and in 1886 was elected justice of the peace of Centre township, in which capacity he is still serving. He is a Democrat.

Mr. Rishel married Sarah Y. Christ, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Yoder) Christ, and to them have been born two children: Sallie V. m. C. K. Miller, of Centreport; Delilah F. m. Melvin N. Miller, of Centre township.

Mr. Rishel is a member of St. Michael's Reformed Church. He belongs to Leesport Castle, K. G. E., and to the P. O. S. of A., which latter he has served many years as financial secretary.

James I. Rishel, a confectioner of West Reading borough, was born in Jefferson township, where he received his early education in the township schools. Later he attended the Bernville high school and the Keystone State Normal School, after which he was licensed to teach by the late Prof. D. B. Brunner, and he engaged in teaching for four successive years. He first taught in Centre township, at the Kauffman school-house, and for the following three terms was engaged in his native district. When twenty-six years old he moved to Reading, where he engaged in the shoe business, which he continued for fifteen years, doing custom work, of which he made a specialty, having a large trade. His store was at No. 514 South Sixth street. He sold out his business on account of failing health, and then became an insurance solicitor for the Prudential Insurance Company, following it for some four years. Since 1903 he has been associated with the Grand Union Tea Company as salesman.

Since 1888 Mr. Rishel has made his home in Spring township, in that year having erected his comfortable residence at Nos. 518-520 Penn avenue. He has been actively identified with all the progressive movements of his town and when the question of incorporating the borough of West Reading was being agitated he was one of its heartiest advocates. Upon the organization he was chosen school director by a flattering support and his interest in this branch of the public administration has made his services valuable. He served Spring township for three years as school director when it had twenty-seven schools, and during his term the Spring township high school was established and the eight-room building erected; his name appears upon the large marble slab set into the front wall of the fine building, among those of the other directors serving at the time. He was secretary of the board for two years. In politics Mr. Rishel is a stanch Democrat, and he takes an interest in promoting the success of his party. Socially he is connected with Fraternity Castle, No. 302, K. G. E. (of which he is a past master), of Reading, and Lodge No. 660, I. O. O. F., of Sinking Spring.

Mr. Rishel married Miss Amelia Winters, daughter of Joel and Elizabeth (Gring) Winters and granddaughter of Jacob and Sarah (Rahn) Winters. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Rishel, three sons and one daughter, namely: William W., J. George, Elmer J. and Elsie M.

REIFF. The Reiff family has long been known in Berks county, and each generation has presented good, substantial citizens, whose industrious and useful lives have been of benefit to their various communities. The name was worthily borne by the late Charles Reiff and in the present day by his nephew, Lot W. Reiff, deputy clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions of Berks county.

(I) Conrad Reiff, a pioneer of the county, settled in Oley township, prior to the organization of the county in 1752. He became a large land owner in the western end of the township, and he died in 1877, the year he made his last will and testament, which is on record in Will Book 2, p. 300. This will was proved May 22, 1777, and the executors were his son, Daniel and his friend, Daniel Hunter. His wife, Anna Margaretha, survived him. The will mentions but two sons, Philip and Daniel. In 1759 Conrad Reiff and his two sons paid the largest federal tax paid in Oley township, paying 100 pounds. Tradition says Conrad Reiff was buried on the farm (late the property of Charles Reiff), in the yard near the east side of the implement shed. No tombstone marks his grave, but a rough field stone stands there.

(II) Daniel Reiff, son of Conrad, was an officer in the Revolutionary war, and was a man of prominence in public affairs. He died prior to 1813, and is probably buried on the Reiff homestead, or in the "flat" along the trolley road, south of the upper station at Friedensburg. The will of his widow, Catharine, is on record in Will Book D, p. 261, of which her son, Conrad, was sole executor. She had a son-in-law, Samuel Hottenstein, and her grandsons, Daniel and Jacob Reiff shared largely in her bequests. Her will was made in 1813, and probated Nov. 20, 1820.

(III) Conrad Reiff, son of Daniel and Catharine, was born Nov. 24, 1764, and died Feb. 23, 1838, aged seventy-three years, two months and twenty-nine days. In 1789 he married Elizabeth Hoch, born Jan. 12, 1766, and died Oct. 10, 1843, aged seventy-seven years, eight months, twenty-eight days, and both are buried in a private burial ground on the hill of the original homestead. Conrad Reiff was a farmer and blacksmith. He owned 400 acres of land, since divided into three tracts. He was a wealthy man for the time. He adhered to no particular religious faith. His children were: Jacob; Daniel; Maricha, who married Daniel Kemp; and Betty, who married (first) a Mr. Guldin, and (second) a Mr. Bertolet.

(IV) Jacob Reiff, son of Conrad, was born on the old farm March 15, 1792, and he died Dec. 20, 1879, aged eighty-seven years, nine months and five days. He was a blacksmith by trade, and also carried on farming on an extensive scale. He owned the farm which became the property of his son, Charles, and also a farm of more than one hundred acres a little to the west. He married Sarah Hoch, born May 24, 1798, died Jan. 20, 1852, aged fifty-three years, seven months, twenty-six days. Their marriage took place Dec. 28, 1817, and was blessed by the following children: Elizabeth, born Jan. 26, 1819; Isaac, March 18, 1820; Hannah, Nov. 13, 1821; Lewis, Jan. 29, 1824 (died Oct. 19, 1851); William, Aug. 18, 1825 (died Aug. 23, 1869); Maria C. Oct. 6, 1827; Sarah, March 8, 1829; Charles, Jan. 6, 1831; Amelia, Nov. 8, 1832 (died 1894); Rebecca, Aug. 15, 1834; and Daniel, Oct. 26, 1836.

(V) Charles Reiff, son of Jacob, lived on the farm near Friedensburg, where he was born Jan. 6, 1831. He died March 13, 1909. He worked for his father until he was thirty-five years of age, and then began for himself, on a part of the homestead, there continuing until his death. He owned a fine farm of 170 acres, and was one of the heavy tax payers of Oley township. He was prominent in public affairs and took a good citizen's interest in all that pertained to the welfare of his town and county. He served as school director for three years and as auditor for a like period. His family are Lutheran members of Friedensburg Church, of which Mr. Reiff had been deacon and elder. He was a trustee of the building committee, that erected the present church edifice in 1883.

On Jan. 27, 1872, Mr. Reiff was married to Hannah C. Angstadt, daughter of Aaron Angstadt. Their children were: Daniel, born March 29, 1873; Minnie, who married Charles Heilig; William, born Aug. 29, 1875; Sarah, who married Oscar Schaeffer; Aaron, born Aug. 27, 1878; Amanda, born 1879, and died 1882; Jacob, born Nov. 3, 1881; Emma; and Hannah. Mr. Reiff served for nine months in the Civil war as a member of Company C, 167th Pa. Vol. Infantry.

(VI) William Reiff, son of Charles, is a great hunter, and with others of Oley township, takes annual trips to different parts of the State for big game. He is a leader in his success in this line, and is noted as a marksman.

(V) Isaac Reiff, son of Jacob, was born March 18, 1820, on the old Reiff homestead, and there died in 1888, aged sixty-eight years. He married Caroline Widener, and they had eleven children, among whom were: Samuel W., of Reading; Lewis, a farmer of Oley township; Milton W., a contractor at Reading; Ada, wife of Dr. Frank Hartzog, of Oley; Mrs. Calentine Hartman; Albert and John died in youth; Jacob died from sunstroke while home on his summer vacation, at the time of his death being a student at the Kutztown State Normal School; Alvin died in 1904, aged forty-six years; and Lot W.

(VI) Lot W. Reiff, son of Isaac, is a prominent public man of Berks county. He was born in Oley township, Berks county, Feb. 12, 1863, was educated in the public schools, Oley Academy, and Kutztown State Normal School, and has taught school for sixteen terms. He is a Democrat, served as township school director; member of the county standing committee; was delegate to the Democratic State Convention in 1890, 1898, 1899, and 1908, and was a presidential elector in 1900; was elected to the House of Representatives in 1898, and re-elected in November, 1900. While still serving as a legislator in 1901, he was appointed by Clerk of Courts, Jacob B. Esser, as Deputy Clerk of Quarter Sessions, and was re-appointed under the administration of Peter S. Hall, and Samuel T. Bordner. He was Deputy County Treasurer under Henry H. Fry from 1906-1908. Mr. Reiff has been the political leader of Berks county since 1904, and is the most shrewd politician Berks county ever produced. He has a wide acquaintance and his political influence is undisputed.

Mr. Reiff is the efficient secretary of the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Berks county, which institution was organized in 1845; and he in 1893 was prominent in the organization of the Schuylkill Valley Mutual Wind, Storm and Lightning Insurance Company of Berks county, of which he is now secretary. Mr. Reiff is an extensive property owner of the county.

Fraternally he belongs to the following bodies: The Knights of the Golden Eagle of Manatawny; the P. O. S. of A. of Oley Line; the Order of Red Men; Oley Lodge, No. 218, I. O. O. F.; and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie No. 66, the latter two are of Reading.

In July, 1893, Mr. Reiff was married to Deborah Baer, and they have two children, Guy and Esther. The family worship in the Lutheran Church at Friedensburg.

JACKSON J. CLOSE, a representative of one of Exeter township's old families, whose history can be clearly traced to one of Berks county's pioneer settlers, is well and favorably known all through the section where almost his entire life, thus far, has been spent. He is a son of Isaac W. and Catherine O. (Jackson) Close, and was born in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., Oct 5, 1873.

In former days the name was variously spelled Klohs, Klos, Kloos and Kloss, which have been anglicized into Close in the later generations, and is now universally written in that way. The first family record is of Thomas Kloos, who, with his wife Margaret, formerly lived in Brechkehel, Hanau, Germany. Whether he died enroute to America, or whether he died soon after coming to this country, or whether he was killed by the Indians after landing, is unproved. His widow made a will which was probated Feb. 10, 1773, and is on record in Will Book 2, page 123. This document mentions the following children: John, Katherine, Maria Katherine, Elizabeth and Henry. Mrs. Margaret Kloos, widow of Thomas, was of Bern township, Berks county, where she owned property.

John, or Johannes, Kloos, eldest son of Thomas and Margaret, was born in Germany, Dec. 6, 1723, and died Sept. 21, 1795, in Alsace township, Berks county, where he owned a large farm. He was buried at Alsace Church, as was also his wife, Maria Barbara Strauss, whom he married June 2, 1754. She was born Nov. 16, 1735, daughter of Albrecht Strauss, and died Dec. 1, 1812. They had ten children, but the names of only nine are recorded: Maria Elizabeth, born April 13, 1755, m. Abraham Schneider; John, born Feb. 11, 1757, died young; Maria Barbara, born June 27, 1759, m. April 8, 1783, John Adam Spengler, son of Georg Christoph and Maria Catherine Spengler; Maria Christina, born Nov. 3, 1761, died Aug. 3, 1823, m. Conrad Schoep (also spelled Shepp), who was a Hessian soldier in the Revolutionary war; Maria Catherine, born Nov. 6, 1763, m. Wilhelm Diehm, a soldier in the Revolutionary war; Maria Magdalena m. Feb. 9, 1794, Philip Huert (now spelled Huyett); Anna Margaret, born Aug. 26, 1766, died Sept. 27, 1792, m. Dec. 1, 1789, John Spangler; Anna Maria, born Feb. 26, 1769; and Jacob, born Sept. 12, 1771, died Jan. 30, 1849, married (first) Nov. 23, 1790, Magdalena Baum (1768-1831), had ten children (Catherine, Benjamin, Mary, Barbara, John, Catherine, Jacob, Elizabeth, Henry and Rebecca), and m. (second) Nov. 18, 1834, Catherine (Siegfried) Levan.

Heinrich (or Henry) Close, son of Thomas and Margaret and great-grandfather of Jackson J. Close, was a farmer in Exeter township and when he made his last will and testament, in 1814, he left a large estate. To his wife Catherine he gave especially: "12 bushels of rye; 6 bushels of wheat; 100 pounds of pork; 50 pounds of beef; 10 pounds of flax and 7 pounds and 10 shillings in money, annually." His children bore the following names: Barbara, Christiana, Elizabeth, Hannah, Eve, Susanna, Absalom, Jacob, John and Isaac. His large estate contained, besides an old barn and provision for a new one, two dwelling houses. This will was probated Aug. 12, 1815, and is on record in Book D, page 130.

Isaac Close, son of Henry and grandfather of Jackson J., was born June 4, 1788, and died Dec. 31, 1827, aged thirty-nine years, six months and twenty-seven days, and is buried at Schwartzwald Church. His wife was Susanna Wagner, and their children were: Rebecca, Solomon, Henry, Isaac W., Henrietta and Mary.

Isaac W. Close, son of Isaac and father of Jackson J. Close, was born Sept. 20, 1821, on the old Close homestead, Stonetown, Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa. During his active years he carried on farming on his farm of eighty-eight acres, about one and one-half miles south of Jacksonwald. About twelve years ago he retired and now resides at Jacksonwald. For some years prior to the establishment of the railways, he drove a team between Exeter township and Philadelphia, conveying grain and farm produce to that city and bringing back freight for farmers. In politics he is a Democrat. With his family he belongs to the Reformed congregation of the Schwartzwald Church. For many years he was the treasurer of the Schwartzwald Cemetery Association. He was married (first) in 1848 to Harriet O. Jackson, who died in 1853. They had the following children: Jacob J., who was born Dec. 26, 1849, m. Annie Weidner; Susanna J., born Sept. 15, 1851, m. Isaac A. Schaeffer; and Harriet J., born March 20, 1853, is unmarried. Mr. Close was married (second) in 1858 to Catherine O. Jackson, a daughter of Jacob Jackson, and the following children were born to the second union: Clarissa J., born Feb. 26, 1859; Washington J., Sept. 7, 1860 (m. Elizabeth Gabriel); Catherine J., July 28, 1862 (died Feb. 4, 1884); Isaac J., March 20, 1864 (m. Clara Gechter); Daniel J., March 7, 1866 (died March 1, 1867); Andrew J., Sept. 18, 1867; Henry J., Dec. 4, 1869; Amelia J., Feb. 21, 1872 (died Feb. 4, 1900); Jackson J., Oct. 5, 1873; and Annie J., Oct. 12, 1876 (died Feb. 6, 1878).

Jackson J. Close obtained his early intellectual training in the public schools of his native township and later attended Brunner's Scientific Academy and Stoner's Interstate Commercial College in Reading, Pa., and Perkiomen Seminary, at Pennsburg. In the fall of 1897 he began to teach, and followed that profession with increasing success for some years. His first school was the Green Tree, in Exeter township, where he remained one term, and taught the following term at Alleghenyville, in Brecknock township. During the succeeding four years he taught in Exeter township, after which he turned his attention to the insurance business, for one year being a solicitor for the Metropolitan Insurance Company in Reading. Since the spring of 1905, he has held a traveling position with the firm of Gately & Brennan, Reading. Mr. Close looks back upon his period of school teaching as a pleasant part of his life, being licensed by county superintendent E. M. Rapp. Until he was twenty-one years of age, he assisted on the home farm. He is thus well equipped for different careers and enjoys the reputation for honesty and ability which is a valuable asset to any man.

Mr. Close is a member of Schwartzwald Reformed Church, and since 1907, has been secretary of the church council. He is active in the Jacksonwald Union Sunday-school, being its present assistant superintendent, and formerly was librarian and secretary. He has always adhered to the Democratic party, and is in close contact with the party leaders in his community. He has served in the office of judge of election, on numerous occasions, and in the spring of 1906, he was elected a member of the Exeter school board for three years, and was re-elected in the spring of 1909 for a second term, and is now serving as secretary of the board. Fraternally he belongs to Washington Camp, No. 230, P. O. S. of A., in St. Lawrence, Pa.; and Lincoln Chamber, Knights of Friendship, No. 36, in Reading.

HON. THOMAS J. R. HOUCK, former member of the Pennsylvania State Legislature and one of Berks county's most prominent citizens, is a resident of Colebrookdale township, where he was born Nov. 18, 1870. His parents were Urias G. and Mary (Ritter) Houck.

The Houcks are one of the old and substantial families of Lower Berks county. John Hauck (as the great-great-grandfather of Thomas J. R. Houck wrote his name) was a taxable resident of Earl township, Berks county, as early as 1782. His numerous posterity is now widely scattered, many, however, remaining in Berks county, and in 1908 forty-three were registered in the city of Reading. The name is variously spelled Hauck, Hawk and Hoak, but its representatives here are of common origin.

Jacob Houck, son of John and great-grandfather of Hon. Thomas J. R., owned a small farm in Earl township, which he bought in 1845. He died there about 1860 and is buried at the Hill Church. He married Maricha Minninger, and to them were born the following children: Samuel lived in Oley township; Amos is mentioned below; David lived in Amity township; Abraham lived in Oley; Benjamin lived in Rockland; William lived in the northern part of Montgomery county; Betsey, Mary and Sally all married men by the name of Weller, who, however, were not brothers.

Amos Houck, grandfather of Hon. Thomas J. R., was born in Earl township March 10, 1810, and died at Gabelsville, in Colebrookdale township, in June, 1894, aged eighty-four years. Early in life he conducted the old Gabel mill which stood a short distance above the present one, but later became a farmer. He is buried at Boyertown. On May 29, 1839, he married Hannah Gabel, daughter of Jacob Gabel, of Colebrookdale township, and they had the following children: Edwin G.; Urias G.; Emeline, deceased, wife of Jefferson Fraunheiser; Mary, wife of Ephraim Leh; Aaron, residing on the homestead; Ammon, residing in Colebrookdale; and Jacob, residing in Philadelphia. The eldest son, Edwin G., was born June 27, 1844. He taught six terms of school in Colebrookdale township, later engaged for twenty-three years in farming his father-in-law's property, and in 1902 retired to his own farm of twenty-one acres, at New Berlinville. He married Mary Wesner, and they had three children: Edgar, Lizzie and Barbara, the last named dying in infancy.

Urias G. Houck, father of Hon. Thomas J. R., was born Oct. 3, 1846, in Colebrookdale township, where he died Nov. 14, 1901, aged fifty-five years, one month, eleven days; he was laid to rest in the family plot at Fairview cemetery, Boyertown. In early manhood he taught three terms of school, one term in Shanesville and two at Houck's school, after which he engaged in farming and also was proprietor of what is now Leaver's coal-yard, at Boyertown. He then came to New Berlinville, where he secured the first license to operate a hotel and conducted a public house for four years. He then turned his attention to farming and cattle-dealing. He lived on a ninety-acre farm which he had bought from the William Henry heirs, and he owned a second farm, near New Berlinville, containing twenty-five acres, which was known as the Rev. William Engel farm. In politics he was a Democrat, and at one time he was a candidate for the office of director of the county poor. For a number of terms he served as school director, and at the time of his death was serving in the office of assessor of Colebrookdale township, which he had filled for nine years. He was a substantial, reliable citizen, led a useful life, and his memory is honored. In the work of church and Sunday-school he was ever active, being a leading member of the Hill Lutheran Church and superintendent of several Sunday-schools. He married Mary Ritter, born July 9, 1852, daughter of Isaac and Anna (Moser) Ritter, and they became the parents of four children, namely: Rosa (died in infancy), Thomas J. R., Allen, and Laura (m. Randolph A. Henry, business partner of Mr. Houck). The mother makes her home with her daughter.

Thomas J. R. Houck is a representative of the younger element in public life from which is recruited so largely the enterprise and energy that have brought about the supremacy of America as a nation. His educational advantages were those enjoyed in the common schools and at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown, and after his graduation in 1893, he began to teach school in his native township. He was recognized as a capable instructor, and as the calling was a congenial one he continued in this line, teaching one term in Colebrookdale township, one in Amity township, two in the borough of Bechtelsville, one at Perkiomen Seminary (this being in 1897), and was then elected principal of the Pennsburg schools in Montgomery county, where he taught one term. Following this he accepted the office of principal of the Womelsdorf high school, where he taught one term, and was then elected by the Boyertown school board as a grammar school instructor for one year and as principal the second year.

In November, 1902, Mr. Houck was elected a member of the State Legislature and served very creditably for two terms, 1903-04 and 1905-06, having been re-elected in 1904 with an increased majority. In the interim he served as principal of the West Reading grammar school. In 1905 he returned to Bechtelsville and taught there until the special session of the Legislature, in 1905, recalled him to Harrisburg. He is a stanch Democrat. In the spring of 1908 he was his party's candidate for the State Senate and received the third highest vote of five aggressive candidates, proving his popularity in his native county. At present he is one of the auditors of the borough of Boyertown, where he resides. He is a stanch Democrat in political faith. Since taking an active part in politics, he has been frequently called upon to take the stump and defend the principles of his party. This opportunity he has never refused, and has always proved himself useful in the interests of his party. Mr. Houck is popular as a public speaker in Berks and Montgomery counties on such occasions as Memorial Day, public school commencements, etc.

In March, 1901, Mr. Houck formed a business partnership with Randolph A. Henry, under the firm name of Houck & Henry, wholesale and retail dealers in agricultural machinery, buggies and gasoline engines, which is a progressive and prosperous enterprise, conducted at New Berlinville, Berks Co., Pa. Their stock includes farm wagons, buggies, gasoline engines, a full line of agricultural implements, hardware, harness, pumps, fertilizers, Page fence, and field and garden seeds.

On Oct. 11, 1904, Mr. Houck married Miss Amy E. Francis, a daughter of Dr. L. K. and Anna (Schetzline) Francis, of Boyertown. Mrs. Francis perished on Jan. 13, 1908, in the Boyertown conflagration. Mr. and Mrs. Houck have two sons, Thomas F. and Robert L. Mr. and Mrs. Houck are members of St. John's Lutheran Church at Boyertown, and since 1896 Mr. Houck has been superintendent of the Sunday-school which has 650 pupils on its roll. He is an active member of Camp No. 104, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Boyertown, and a member of Lodge No. 159, I. O. O. F., Womelsdorf, Pennsylvania.

HENRY G. MOSER, justice of the peace of Amity township, was born March 21, 1860, in Perry county, Pa. He obtained his education in the public schools of Amity township, and in the late Prof. D. B. Brunner's Academy and Business College at Reading. At the age of fifteen years he learned the painting and papering trade, and this vocation he has followed ever since. He is a Democrat, and is influential in the party politics in the district. He was delegate to a number of county conventions also a delegate to the State Convention. He has been school director of Amity township for two terms. He was first elected in 1905. At the resignation of Calvin F. Emes, he was appointed a justice of the peace of Amity April 1, 1895, by Daniel H. Hastings, governor of the Commonwealth, with the consent of two-thirds of the members of the Senate; he has since served the office and in 1906 was re-elected for the third term. Mr. Moser is one of the active workers of the township. He has lived at his present residence since 1877. His tract consists of seven acres, and this he has in good condition. He follows painting and paper hanging throughout his district; and he also clerks at sales, and writes deeds and mortgages.

On April 4, 1885, Mr. Moser was married to Margaret M. Sassaman, daughter of Judge Augustus S. Sassaman of Berks county. Four children have been born to this union: Guy L.; Hugh G., who died in his fifth year; Philip D. and Grace M.

George G. Moser, father of Henry G., was born on the Moser homestead in Amity township, Nov. 28, 1815, and died April 17, 1863. He was reared in Amity, and was married there to Willi De Turck, daughter of Jacob De Turck. After his marriage he moved to Perry county, Pa. He was a miller by trade and conducted a gristmill at Duncannon, Pa. He died from smallpox, and is buried at Dellville, Perry county, Pa. After his death his widow and family came back to their home township in Berks, where they have since resided. To George G. Moser and wife were born: Thompson, who died small; Emma, married to Martin B. Groff, of Reading; Margaret, who died soon after marriage; Esther, who died while teaching school; Dr. Ira, who died in 1907, at Reading, age fifty-two years; Willi, married to Samuel Francis; and Henry G.

Jacob Moser, grandfather of Henry G., was born April 9, 1785, and was a farmer in Amity. He died there June 20, 1843, aged fifty-eight years, two months and eleven days, and is buried near the south gate of the old graveyard at Amityville. He owned a farm at Monocacy Hill. His wife, Elizabeth Gresh, was born in Douglass township Oct. 8, 1792, died Nov. 15, 1857, aged sixty-five years, one month and seven days, in Perry county, and is buried at Dellville. They had fourteen children, namely: Henry lived in Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county, Pa.; Margaret married Israel Boyer; George G., mentioned above; Eliza became the second wife of Israel Boyer; Peter lived at Pottstown; Sarah m. Joshua Gehr; Jeremiah m. Rebecca Epler; Mary m. John Coover; Angeline m. Henry Walter; Harriet died unmarried; and four died young. Of these, Mary is still living near Shepherdstown, in York county, and is now seventy-eight years of age.

Jacob Moser was a nephew of Burkhard Moser, who died a bachelor in Schuylkill county leaving valuable coal lands, which are now in litigation.

KLOPP. The Klopp family is one of the oldest and most numerous in Berks county, and each generation has produced men and women who have lived honorably and usefully in their communities. The Klopp family had its origin near Bingen on the Rhine, Germany, and there in 1906 still stood a castle known as "Schlossklopp."

(I) Peter Klopp (Klop or Klopf) was a Reformed member of the Tulpehocken Church in 1735. Later he, with Rev. Peter Miller, Godfried Fidler, Conrad Weiser, and others, joined a church at Ephrata, Lancaster Co., Pa., and at the home of Mr. Fidler, who had first taken up land in Tulpehocken township, burned the Psalms, catechisms and other good books. Before the house of the Tulpehocken brethren (German Seventh Day Baptists) was finished, Conrad Weiser, Hans Michael Miller, Peter Klopf, Godfried Fidler, and several single men and women went to the settlement at Ephrata. Of these, Weiser, Miller and Klopf later withdrew from the Ephrata settlement, but not so the daughter of Peter Klopf, who remained steadfast. Her monastic name was "Thecla" and is so listed on the roster of the Sisterhood. She died Oct. 6, 1748, probably at Ephrata. Peter Klop died in 1753. [See Sachse's "German Sectarians of Pennsylvania, 1708-1742."]

(II) Peter Klopp (Klop), son of Peter, born Nov. 22, 1719, died May 22, 1794, and is buried at Hain's Church, where the inscription on his headstone is still legible. His wife, Werrina Becker (in), born Jan. 24, 1718, died Nov. 13, 1792.

(III) Peter Klopp (3), son of Peter (2) and Werrina, born in Heidelberg May 31, 1751, died there Feb. 24, 1835, in the eighty-fourth year of his age. He was buried at the Corner Church. In April, 1800, he purchased for £1800 in gold and silver money, from Peter Knobb, the farm near Klopp's Store, now owned by William D. Klopp. On Aug. 15, 1800, he sold this farm to his son and namesake, Peter (4), for the same price he himself had given; and on July 13, 1838, Peter Klopp (4) sold it to his son, Peter (5), for $6,200. In 1867, after the death of Peter (5), the farm came into the possession of William D. Klopp, the present owner. Peter Klopp (3) was twice married. His first wife, Elizabeth Hain, died about 1783, the mother of four children, namely: Catharine died aged seventeen years; Elizabeth died aged two years; John Peter is mentioned in full farther on; a daughter died young. The second wife of Peter Klopp (3) was Elizabeth Fidler, born April 28, 1763, died Jan. 10, 1835, a descendant of Godfried Fidler. Fifteen children were born to this marriage, namely: John Adam m. Sarah Keiser, and had thirteen children, nine sons and four daughters; John m. Sarah Bucks, and had six sons and two daughters; Benjamin (who died Sept. 19, 1819) m. Elizabeth Ernst, and had children—Eli, John H. (who had a son Benjamin), Anna and Isaac (Benjamin's wife administered his estate); Margaret m. Jacob Wagner, and had eight children; Elizabeth m. Jacob Dundore, and had eleven children; Anna Maria m. John Gerhart and had five sons and two daughters; Catharine m. John Lamm, and had eight children; Susanna m. Jacob Ernst, and had three sons and seven daughters; Daniel m. (first) Susanna Brossman, and had seven sons and four daughters, and m. (second) Mrs. Ocks (no issue); Joseph m. (first) Christine Stine, had ten children, and (second) Catharine Reedy (no issue); Sarah m. John Faust, and had four children; Isaac m. (first) Henrietta Leiss, and had eight children, and m. (second) Mrs. Stamm, and had one child; three sons died young. In about the year 1850 there were 112 grandchildren.

(IV) John Klopp, son of Peter (3), was born Aug. 30, 17-- . He was a pioneer farmer in Tulpehoocken township, and there his death occurred when he had reached the patriarchal age of eighty-nine years, ten months, twenty-one days. He is buried at Tulpehocken Church. In the early days he had all the experiences which fall to the settler on wild land. On one occasion, while his wife was milking the cows in the barn yard, a wild deer leaped over the fence to the cattle. Much timber surrounded their cabin. Mr. Klopp was a soldier in the war of 1812. He m. Sarah Bucks, daughter of John and Elizabeth Bucks, born Aug. 26, 1783, died June 24, 1860, aged seventy-six years, nine months, twenty-eight days. Their children were: John, of Tulpehocken; David, of North Heidelberg; Jonathan, born July 2, 1818, died April 5, 1897, who lived on the homestead some years (m. Elizabeth Anspach, 1824-1886); Elias, mentioned below; Daniel, of Tulpehocken; Elizabeth (m. David Kilmer); Sallie (m. William Zeller); and a son that died in infancy.

(V) Elias Klopp, son of John, born July 2, 1818, died Sept. 9, 1856, aged thirty-eight years, two months, seven days. He was a farmer on the old homestead in Tulpehocken township. He m. Evalina Walborn, born Jan. 26, 1827, daughter of Andrew and Catharine (Kline) Walborn, of Marion township. She died Nov. 11, 1856, in her thirtieth year. Both she and her husband, who had died but nine weeks before, were the victims of typhoid fever, and both are buried at the Tulpehocken Church. They were the parents of two sons, Andrew J. and Isaac P. Elias Klopp was an official in the church at the time of his death.

(VI) Andrew J. Klopp, son of Elias, was born in Tulpehocken township, July 7, 1846. His early life and young manhood were passed upon the farm, and he hired out to neighboring farmers until he was twenty-eight years of age. When but sixteen he went to Wayne county, Ohio, and there remained three and a half years, doing farm work. In 1873 he began to work for himself in Marion township, Berks county, two miles north of Stouchsburg, where he and his brother, Isaac P., had purchased a farm of 126 acres. They farmed this in partnership for some years, and then Andrew J. took the farm and cultivated it alone for sixteen years. He then sold out his stock and retired, but continued to live on the place a few years before moving to his comfortable home in Stouchsburg, where he still resides. He rents this farm to his son David. Mr. Klopp has two other farms in Marion township, each of 115 acres, and these he has tenanted. He also owns the tract of land originally owned by Adam Schuetz, as well as the upper part of the tract first owned by Balthar Anspach. [See Charles I. Lindenmuth's Map of Pioneers of Tulpehocken Valley, in Vol. I. of this work.]

In his political views Mr. Klopp is a Republican, and has always been interested in his party's welfare, taking an active interest in the work in his own community. He is a member of the Order of Good Fellows of Stouchsburg. With his family he belongs to the Tulpehocken Reformed Church, in which he has held all the offices, and he has been a valuable member in aiding with time and means every good work undertaken. He liberally aided in the remodeling of the church in 1894.

In 1873 Andrew J. Klopp m. Catharine S. Fisher, daughter of Adam L. and Amelia (Filbert) Fisher, granddaughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Lauck) Fisher and great-granddaughter of Johannes Fisher. Three sons blessed this union: Isaac W., vice-president of the Philadelphia Typewriter Exchange; David A., a farmer on the homestead (m. Bessie Klopp, daughter of Albert and granddaughter of Jonathan, and has four sons—J. Miles, Andrew A., Homer W. and Walter W.); and Warren E., a student still in school.

(VI) Isaac P. Klopp, son of Elias, born in Heidelberg Aug. 31, 1849, was but seven years of age when his parents died, and he made his home with his grandfather, John Klopp, until he was eighteen years of age. By that time he had become familiar with such duties as fall to the lot of a boy on the farm, and he was hired out to farmers during the summer months, but in the winters he remained in his grandfather's home and attended school. At thirteen years of age he went to Wayne county, Ohio, and remained three years. He continued to engage in farm work for others until 1873, when he and his brother, Andrew J., purchased, as before stated, a fine farm of 126 acres, which they cultivated jointly for seven years. In 1882 Isaac P. purchased an excellent farm of eighty-five acres, and located two and a quarter miles due north of Stouchsburg. This tract was originally owned by Hans George Seigner, as is shown on the map of early settlers prepared by Charles I. Lindenmuth. Here he lived and prospered until 1905, a period of twenty-three years. In the fall of 1905 he purchased his present place and moved thereon. This was a Peiffer homestead, and consists of seven acres of land, with a commodious house and substantial outbuildings.

In politics Mr. Klopp is a Republican. He is a member of the Tulpehocken German Reformed Church in Jackson township, Lebanon county, located but three hundred yards from the Berks county line. He served as deacon and elder for a number of years, and at the present time is a trustee. He is also a member of Washington Camp, No. 237, P. O. S. of A., of Stouchsburg.

Isaac P. Klopp has been twice married. His first wife, Annie E. Peiffer, daughter of Edward and Caroline (Behne) Peiffer, born Aug. 17, 1859, died March 5, 1885, when but twenty-five years, six months, eighteen days old. For his second wife Mr. Klopp married Adalina M. Seibert, daughter of Johnson and Susanna (Winter) Seibert (the former a retired farmer), and granddaughter of George and Sarah (Miller) Seibert. By his first marriage Mr. Klopp became the father of two children: Herbert A., a tenant on his father's farm, m. Gertie Reedy, daughter of Frank and Susanna (Ruth) Reedy, and has three children—Merle E., Marguerite C. and Elsie S.; and Carrie I. m. Wallace Uhrich, and has a son, Russel K.

(IV) John Peter Klopp, born Sept. 11, 1775, son of Peter (3) and his first wife, Elizabeth (Hain), was a lifelong farmer on the old homestead. He died March 13, 1850, aged seventy-four years, six months, two days, and was buried at the Corner Church. He m. Maria Eva Ulrich, born May 20, 1768, died Dec. 13, 1830, in the sixty-third year of her age. Their children were: John Peter, father of William D., is mentioned farther on; Daniel owned a farm adjoining that of his brother John Peter, now owned by John W. Fisher (his children were Rebecca, William L., Jonathan L., Henrietta, Amanda, Elenora, Sarah, Amelia, Jane, and Caroline, the last named dying young); and Catharine (1804-1870) m. Adam Leiss (1803-1875), of Leiss' Bridge, and they later lived in Reading, where they died and are buried in the Charles Evans cemetery.

(V) John Peter Klopp (2), son of John Peter, born April 1, 1801, died July 18, 1866, and was buried at the Corner Church. His life was passed in farming on the place now owned by his son William D. He was active in church life, and held office in the old Northkill Church for many years. His wife was Margaret Kalbach, daughter of John and Susanna (Ruth) Kalbach, born Nov. 6, 1806, died on the home farm Nov. 18, 1853, in the forty-eighth year of her age. They were the parents of seven children, as follows: Amelia S. died unmarried; William D.; Rebecca died aged fourteen years; Adam died aged four years; Emma m. Levi Ludwig; Sarah J. m. John Knor; Clara died in infancy.

(VI) William D. Klopp, son of John Peter (2), and now a prosperous farmer in North Heidelberg township, was born there July 2, 1837. He was trained to farming, and at the age of twenty-one commenced for himself on one of the farms which had descended from the great-grandfather, Peter, through John Peter and John Peter (2), father of William D. This farm is located near Klopp's Store, in a fertile agricultural valley, and consists of 170 acres. After about thirty-five years devoted to the cultivation of this tract Mr. Klopp retired in 1890, since which time he has divided his time between his comfortable home on the farm and the cities of Reading and Philadelphia.

Mr. Klopp is a Republican in political principle. He and his family are members of the North Heidelberg Reformed Church, of which he was deacon and elder for many years.

In 1858 Mr. Klopp m. Sarah Wenrich, daughter of Paul and Salome (Leiss) Wenrich. They have three children: Lewis is a well-known druggist of Philadelphia, in which city he resides at No. 618 Lehigh avenue; Dr. Peter P., residing at No. 618 Lehigh avenue, Philadelphia, m. Tacy R. Hunt, daughter of John Hunt, and has a son, John W.; Kate M. m. James Henne, of Reading, and has a son, William.

(V) Daniel Klopp, son of John Peter and Maria Eva (Ulrich) Klopp, spent his life in North Heidelberg township, where he was a well-known farmer and business man. He owned the 133-acre farm which later became the property of his son William L. (and now belongs to John W. Fisher, ex-director of the poor), as well as a thirty-acre tract on which was situated his store building. His son Jonathan L. was his successor in the mercantile business. He was an official in the Northkill Church, of which his wife was also a member. He m. Margaret Leiss, daughter of Adam Leiss, and they became the parents of ten children: Rebecca m. Nathan Lamm; Henrietta m. Adam Minnich; William L.; Amanda m. Adam Miller; Jonathan L. m. Ellenora Minnich; Elenora m. Nathan Dundore; Sallie m. Adam Heck; Jane m. James Conrad; Amelia died unmarried; Caroline died young.

(VI) William L. Klopp, son of Daniel, was born June 15, 1831, in North Heidelberg township, where he still makes his home. For many years he cultivated the 133-acre tract mentioned above, but since 1888 he has been retired from active work. In politics he has been a Republican, and has been prominent in township matters, serving as supervisor and school director. Until 1897 he was a member of the old Northkill Church, but since that date he has been a member of the St. Thomas Reformed Church of Bernville. He now makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Fox, of Mount Zion, Lebanon Co., Pa. Mr. Klopp was twice married. By his first wife, Isabella Brights, he had eleven children: Morgan B. (m. Annie C. Potteiger), Calvin (deceased), Henry (died young), Emma R. (m. Frank Fox), Ida I. (m. John Wagner), Isabella and William, twins (died in infancy), Margaret (died young), Irwin D. (m. Rosanna Heckler), Edwin J. (m. Lizzie C. Gruber) and Sallie A. (m. Jacob Leinbach). Mr. Klopp's second marriage was to Sarah Mosser, daughter of Benneville Mosser, and to this union came one child, Elenora J., who died at the age of twelve years.

(VII) Morgan B. Klopp, son of William L., was born in North Heidelberg township, Oct. 13, 1854, and worked on his father's farm until he was twenty-three years old. He then went to Lockhaven Seminary where he took up the study of music. After one year there he suffered from a severe attack of rheumatism, which prevented him continuing his studies. On Feb. 7, 1880, he married Annie Catharine Potteiger, daughter of William N. Potteiger, of Jefferson township. In that same year he was elected organist of the North Heidelberg church, and moved with his family into the Church property. In 1882 he also accepted the position of organist of Host Church, for three years, and then resigned to devote more time to the instruction of private lessons on piano or organ, to fifty or more pupils at that time, but later his pupils numbered eighty. In 1881 he organized Klopp's Cornet Band of North Heidelberg. In 1888 he was elected organist and choir master of Zion's Lutheran and Reformed Church of Womelsdorf, and moved his family to that town to live in the house furnished by the church, and there he resided until his death. While at Womelsdorf he also accepted the position of organist of the Tulpehocken Reformed Church, in Lebanon county, and was able to hold three Churches with the assistance of his son Eugene (born Nov. 8, 1880, who at the age of sixteen years, was able to fill his father's position). From this time he was organist of a fourth church, namely, St. Elias Lutheran and Reformed Church of Newmanstown, Lebanon Co., Pa., and a short time afterward, he became organist and choir director of St. Daniel's (Corner) Lutheran and Reformed Church, of Robesonia. These five positions he filled for two years with his son's assistance, and then resigned from St. Elias' Church, to accept in its stead the St. Paul's Reformed Church, which had separated from St. Daniel's (Corner) Church. He continued in active work up to his death, which was caused by apoplexy, while engaged in his official work in the North Heidelberg Church, April 28, 1908. He died July 4, 1908, at Klopp & Kalbach's residence whither he had been conveyed from the church.

Before his marriage he was a public school teacher of Eyrich's school, Klopp's school of North Heidelberg, and two years in the Bernville Schools.

With his music pupils scattered over a large area, and five congregations he was also elected leader of Minnehaha Band of Womelsdorf, a position he held several years, and also instructor of the Mt. Pleasant Band, and of Mt. Zion Band of Lebanon county. For five terms he was a school director in Womelsdorf, and was treasurer of the Board the last four terms. Fraternally he was a member of Golden Rule Lodge, No. 159, I. O. O. F.; and of the O. U. A. M., both of Womelsdorf.

To Mr. Klopp and his wife were born children as follows: Eugene P., born Nov. 8, 1880, lives at Robesonia; Laura P., born Feb. 9, 1883, lives at Womelsdorf; W. Raymond, born Nov. 22, 1886, lives at Philadelphia; and J. Harold, born Oct. 9, 1895, lives at Womelsdorf.

(VII) Irwin D. Klopp, son of William L., was born in North Heidelberg township Jan. 28, 1861, and passed his boyhood days under the parental roof, attending the district schools until he was eighteen years of age. He began farming the Host Church property for his brother Morgan B., who was chorister of the church, in 1885, and three years later began the operation of his father's property, continuing there for fifteen years. In 1907 he retired from farming and moved to West Reading, where he is the efficient highway commissioner. For four years before his retirement he was in Lower Heidelberg township, where he was engaged in the cultivation of the farm of John H. Evans. In politics he is a Republican. He and his family are Reformed members of St. Thomas's Church of Bernville, in which for two years he was deacon. In the burying ground of this church rest the remains of many of the Klopp family. Mr. Klopp is a member of Golden Rule Lodge, No. 59, I. O. O. F., of Womelsdorf.

On Aug. 26, 1882, Mr. Klopp m. Rosanna Hechler, born March 2, 1863, daughter of Amos and Elizabeth (Kissling) Hechler, the former of whom, a carpenter by trade, conducted a sawmill for the last ten years of his life. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Klopp: Minnie E. (m. Charles C. Lamm, a grocer at West Reading, and has one child, Helen May); Sallie I., and Harry I., at home; and William D. and Ellen May, who died young.

(VII) Edwin J. Klopp, son of William L., was born in North Heidelberg township, April 29, 1863, and was reared upon the home farm, working for his father until he was twenty years old. He then moved to Wernersville, where he became assistant station agent, having previously learned telegraphy at Oberlin, Ohio. He remained in the service of the company at Wernersville for five years, and for the same company was brakeman on a passenger train running between Philadelphia and Pottsville for another five years. In 1893 he became a conductor on the Mt. Penn Gravity Road, remaining one year, and then was in the employ of the United Traction Company of Reading for seven years. For three years he was employed by the city, at the disposal plant. In the spring of 1905 Mr. Klopp was appointed by a Democratic city engineer, Elmer H. Beard, as a clerk in the sewer department. Mr. Klopp is himself a strong Republican, his appointment being made solely on his merits. On May 1, 1908, he was appointed by the Hon. William Rick, mayor, a policeman of Reading, which position he holds at the present time. He is an excellent penman, and has some fine pen drawings made when he was twenty-one years old. These he has framed, and has exhibited them at fairs, where he has received a number of premiums. He and his family are members of the Reformed Church, and he has been active in church and Sunday-school work for a number of years.

On Oct. 31, 1885, Mr. Klopp m. Lizzie C. Gruber, daughter of Isaac and Sarah (Strunk) Gruber, and they have one son, William G. They reside in a comfortable residence at No. 952 North Ninth street, Reading. Mrs. Klopp is an expert in designing artistic gowns.

REUBEN H. BROWN, who passed the closing years of his life in Birdsboro, free from toil and in the enjoyment of the comforts won by industry and right living, was born in Robeson township, Berks county, March 12, 1826, son of Philip and Rebecca (Hemmig) Brown. His death occurred Feb. 18, 1908.

Philip Brown was born in Cumru township, on the farm that is today the County Poor Farm. He passed his entire life in agricultural pursuits, and died in Robeson township in 1854, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years. He was a consistent member of the Lutheran church, as was also his wife. He married Rebecca Hemmig, and they became the parents of five children, namely: Elisha; Reuben H.; Mary Ann, who married John Wiley; Bennewell; and Levi.

Reuben H. Brown was reared in Robeson township, passing his boyhood and youth after the manner of the farmers' sons of that time, attending school in the winter months, and assisting in the work on the farm when not in school. He remained at home until he was seventeen years of age and then began to learn the trade of a blacksmith under the capable direction of Elias Fritz, of Cumru township. For this he evinced considerable aptitude, and after thoroughly mastering it he worked at it for some years proving so successful, that he commanded a good patronage and in a few years was able to buy a good farm of fifty acres in Robeson township. He moved there and for forty-four years devoted himself to farming, meeting with success and winning a good competence for his old age. In 1903 he sold his farm and moved to Birdsboro, where he lived retired until his death. He was a man of unfailing industry and of good business judgment, and he ever enjoyed the unbounded respect of all who knew him.

In June, 1853, Mr. Brown was married to Miss Elizabeth Herflicker, born in Exeter township in 1833, daughter of Samuel and Polly (Settlemoyer) Herflicker, and she proved a worthy helpmate to her husband. Eight children blessed their home, as follows: Mary Ann, deceased wife of Robert Huyett; Maggie m. Joseph Heckman; John, deceased; Sallie m. William Coleton; Elizabeth m. Joy Gundy; Samuel, of Colorado; Edward, of New Jersey; and Gertrude, deceased. Mrs. Brown is a member of the Reformed Church, while Mr. Brown was a Lutheran, and had served as deacon in St. John's Church. In politics he was a Republican.

JONATHAN A. WEISNER, a farmer and implement dealer at Kempton, Albany township, Berks county, was born in that township May 1, 1870, son of Nathan and Mary A. (Zimmerman) Weisner.

The Weisner family has long been settled in Pennsylvania. John Weisner was a Ranger of the Frontier, from Northampton county, Pa., between 1778-83, in John McClelland's Company. One Godfrey Weisner in 1829, lived in Lehigh county, and was seventy-four years old; he was a pensioned soldier of the Revolutionary war. In 1744, in Philadelphia county, lived David Weisner who owned 100 acres of land, and is said to be a pioneer of the family now located about Pottstown, Pennsylvania. In 1769, in Philadelphia county, lived George Weisner who owned 160 acres of land; and one Leonard Weisner who paid a Proprietary Tax on 100 acres of land. In 1783 the Thomas Weisner Estate was assessed in Falls township, Berks county, Pa. In 1786, one Matthias Weisner was assessed from Lower Makefield township, Berks county, Pa. Jacob Weisner in 1758 paid a tax on 100 acres of land.

Heinrich Weisner, great-grandfather of Jonathan A., lived in Douglass township, Montgomery county. He was an undertaker and farmer, and died in 1809 aged about thirty-seven years, and is buried at the Swamp Church, in Montgomery county. He married Catharine Yerger, who is buried at Huff's Church. She married for her second husband John Laub. To Heinrich and Catharine Weisner were born children as follows: George, located in Northumberland county, Pa.; Amos, located about Danville, Pa.; Lydia, m. to George Reichard; Rachel, m. to Ezra Yergy; Rebecca, m. to Charles Wagonhorst; Henry, who died small; Jonas, m. to Sallie Dietrich; Samuel (died in Montgomery county, aged fifty-nine years), m. to Sarah Smith of Montgomery county, and had Catharine (who is blind and lives at Pottstown), Matthias (of Pottstown) and Mary (m. John Wanner, of the Trappe).

Jonas Weisner, son of Heinrich, was born in Douglass township, Montgomery county, Pa., Dec. 15, 1806, and before his marriage located in Greenwich township, Berks county. Here he was married to Sallie Dietrich, daughter of Michael Dietrich. She was born Jan. 6, 1810, and died Jan. 25, 1895. Jonas Weisner was a life long prosperous farmer, and for many years operated the Weisner farm at Round Top, which consisted of upward of 120 acres. He was a shoemaker by trade, and made his own shoes and those for his own family. He died on Jan. 24, 1892. To him and his wife were born the following children: Henry (1833-1906); Jonas (1835-1855); Mary Ann, m. to William Zimmerman; Samuel, m. to Mary Schaeffer; Nathan; Willoughby, m. to Amelia Oldt, and living at Steins Corner, Pa.; David, m. to Ellen Moyer; Lydia, m. to Alfred Dietrich.

Nathan Weisner, son of Jonas, is a farmer at the Round Top, in Albany township. He was born Oct. 3, 1841, and was reared to farm life, spending his youth on the old Weisner farm, on the North side of Round Top. This farm has been in the Weisner name since 1835. It formerly was a Miller stand, and later was owned by Michael Dietrich, who sold it to Jonas Weisner, his son-in-law. Nathan Weisner attended the old German pay school which was held in the homes of different families. He worked for his parents until he was twenty-one years of age and was then hired out four years. When twenty-five years old he began farming where he has ever since lived. His farm consists of 130 acres of fertile land. This was the original Anthony Adam homestead, and was one of the first settled districts. It came in the Weisner name in 1867. Mr. Weisner built the brick residence in 1879, and the barn in 1881. In politics he is a Democrat. He and his family are Lutheran members at Wessnersville (Friedens) Church. He was married in 1867 to Mary Ann Zimmerman, daughter of Michael Zimmerman, of Albany township. She was born June 12, 1842, and died Aug. 5, 1899. Their children were: Emma T., who died small; Jonathan A.; Amundus A., of Glassboro, N. J.; and Miss Senora, at home.

Jonathan A. Weisner was reared near Round Top, in Albany township and worked for his parents until he was twenty-eight years old. He was educated in the common schools, and in 1894 began dealing in farm implements which he has kept up ever since, handling the products of the McCormick and the International Harvester Company. In 1901 he purchased the Isaac Faust farm, near Kempton. This farm consists of seventy-five acres of fertile land located near the mouth of the Manor Brook, and is now known as Manor Brook Farm. The soil is good potato land, and Mr. Weisner plants from ten to fifteen acres in that vegetable. Iron pyrites, cement and limestone are found on this farm. The present stone house was built in 1829 by Sebastian Faust, and has one of the most substantial walls in the county. The barn was built by Isaac Faust son of Sebastian during the sixties. Mr. Weisner has his place in fine condition, and the surroundings are very beautiful. He is a Democrat in his political faith and he and his family are Lutheran members of Friedens Church at Wessnersville. Fraternally he belongs to the Order of Independent Americans, No. 544, at Kempton.

In September, 1899, Mr. Weisner was m. to Mary E. Heffner, of Virginsville, Pa. They have one daughter, Annie E.

ADAM W. HIESTER, a well-known jeweler of Strausstown, Pa., was born Dec. 13, 1868, in Upper Tulpehocken township, not far from where he now resides.

Mr. Hiester is a son of Moses Hiester, and grandson of Gabriel, great-grandson of Daniel and Barbara (Kaufman) and great-great-grandson of Joseph and Elizabeth (Strunk), the former of whom came to America with his father Johannes from Germany early in the eighteenth century.

Gabriel Hiester was born in Bern township in 1798, and died in Bethel township in 1872. He followed farming throughout his lifetime, in the winter also working at his trade of tailor. His farm of 200 acres lay in what is now called Bethel township. He married Catharine Emerich, a daughter of John Emerich, and six children were born to this union: (1) Joseph, who is buried at Blue Mountain church, was a cooper and blacksmith by trade; he m. Marie Miller, and their children were, Malinda, Isabella, Sarah, Kate, Maria and Alice. (2) Benjamin, who was also buried at Blue Mountain church, m. Catherine Degler; their children were; William, Levi and Henry. (3) Michael now lying in the same churchyard, m. Leah Christ, and to them were born ten children: William, Emanuel, Lizzie, Sally, Cyrus, Rebecca, Amelia, Mary, James W. and Monroe. (4) Moses is referred to later. (5) Hannah m. John Zerbe, and their children are Kate, Joseph, Daniel, Henry, Lizzie, Amelia. (6) John is living at Xenia, Ohio. (7) David, of Dayton, Ohio, married Sarah Lindermuth, and their children were Belle, Frank and Harry. (8) Henry, living at Orwigsburg, Schuylkill county, was twice married, first to Mary Stupp, by whom there were six children, Willoughby, Cyrenius, Adeline, Benjamin, Miranda and Charles; his second wife was Emma Dieffenbach, by whom he had one child Alma.

Moses Hiester, father of Adam W., was born in Bethel township May 24, 1827. For many years he was in the milling business, having learned the trade of Joseph Seyfert. Some years later in 1855, he and his father-in-law, George Degler, bought a mill from Joseph Seyfert, located at Strausstown. The mill was owned and operated by them until 1870, when it was sold to Jacob E. Hiester, and it later was bought by W. B. Anthony, who is the present owner and operator. After disposing of his milling interests, Mr. Hiester bought some farming land about one half mile west from Strausstown, where he followed the occupation of farming until 1894. Then he retired from active life and moved to Strausstown, where he died March 25, 1900. He was well and favorably known throughout the county, and was noted as a man of good habits. He is buried at Blue Mountain Church. He married Maria Degler, born 1830, and still living, daughter of George and Elizabeth (Zerbe) Degler. They had children as follows: (1) James M. died at the age of thirty-eight. (2) George A., a grocer of Paulding, Ohio, m. Mary Viebach, of Defiance, Ohio, and they have Florinca, Emma and Edwin. (3) Benjamin Franklin, living at Glendo, Wyoming, is a carpenter by trade and also a ranchman, owning one of the largest ranches in the State and having been a "rancher" since 1893; he is unmarried. (4) Selisa, who died in 1884, was the wife of John M. Hassler, and had one daughter, Sallie. (5) Devilla D. died young. (6) Charles H., living at South Bethlehem, an employe in the Physical Laboratory, Lehigh University of that city, m. Hannah Dierwechter, and they have J. Robert and M. Minerva. (7) Adam W. is mentioned below. (8) Hettie D. married Charles H. Miller and died in 1904, leaving a daughter, Lizzie.

Adam W. Hiester remained at home until twenty years of age, assisting his father in the farming business. His education was acquired in the public schools of the township. He afterward learned the trade of cigar-making, which he followed for six years. In 1892 he went to Reading, where he learned the jeweler's trade with J. C. Luden. Four years later he returned to Strausstown, where he engaged in the jewelry business. He follows all lines of the business, and is considered one of the successful men of the place. At times he works in the Electrical Engineering Laboratory at the Lehigh University South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hiester is well known in the county and prominent in his home town. He is an active member of the P. O. S. of A., No. 664, past officer, and since 1902 treasurer of his camp, a member of Camp No. 38 P. O. of A. and the present financial secretary. As a member of the Reformed church he is active in its management, being one of the trustees of that organization, a teacher in the Sunday School, and a member of the choir. He is a member of Zion's Union Aid Society, being its secretary for nine successive years. He is unmarried. He has a large circle of friends, and is held in high esteem by his fellow citizens.

MOSES DEGLER, a resident of Shartlesville, was born in Upper Bern township Dec. 17, 1837, and is a grandson of John Degler, who founded the family in America, coming to this country from Germany, when a young man. John Degler settled in Bern (now Upper Bern) township, Berks Co., Pa., and engaged in farming. He died when only thirty-five years old.

John Degler, son of John and father of Moses Degler, was born in Bern township, and became a farmer by occupation. He died at the age of seventy-five years, and is buried at the Blue Mountain Church, in Upper Tulpehocken township. He married Elizabeth Basehore, and to them were born the following named children: Moses; Aaron, a resident of Reading, this county; Elias, of Strausstown, Berks county; Elizabeth, Mrs. Hollenbach; Kate, Mrs. Naftzinger; John, of Upper Tulpehocken township; Adam, of Upper Bern township; Lydia; Amelia; Caleb, of Strausstown; and Annie.

Moses Degler attended the public schools of Upper Tulpehocken township, and when old enough went to learn the cabinet-maker's trade at Strausstown, where he spent three years. He then located at Lebanon, Pa., for a time before coming to Shartlesville, where he has made his home since 1860. He made a success of his undertaking and furniture business here and built himself a fine store, having a well-equipped establishment for the undertaking and embalming branch, in which he was especially well known. He dealt in all kinds of furniture, having a good stock. This business Mr. Degler has lately sold out.

Mr. Degler married Mary Hollenbach, daughter of John Hollenbach, of Upper Bern township, and seven children have been born to them, viz.: Calvin, who is living in Upper Bern township; Henry, living in Shartlesville; Clara, wife of William Auman; Kate, wife of Arthur Schwoyer, of Reading; William; Mary A., wife of William Christ; and Sallie, unmarried, living at home.

A Democrat in politics, Mr. Degler has been active in local affairs and has served on the election board of Upper Bern township. He is a member of the Reformed Church, and socially unites with the P. O. S. of A., the I. O. O. F. and the K. G. E.

DEWALT PETER BAUSHER (deceased), a well-known traveling salesman, who represented the John M. Malloy Sons Company, of Philadelphia, was born in 1844 in Maxatawny township, near Kutztown, Pa., son of Jesse and Lucy (Wink) Bausher, natives of Berks county.

Peter Bausher, his grandfather, was also a native of Berks county, and a farmer by occupation, following this all his active life near Hamburg. Late in life he removed to Tamaqua, Pa., where both he and his wife died. He married Sophia Strausser, by whom he had the following children: Jesse, Lucy, Carolina, Solomon, Jacob, Eli, Polly, Sarah, Amelia, William, Peter and Sophia. In religious belief the family were members of the Reformed Church. Politically Mr. Bausher was a Democrat.

Jesse Bausher, born Dec. 4, 1819, in Windsor township, followed farming in Maxatawny township. He married, in 1844 Lucy Wink, born March 6, 1813, daughter of Jacob and Maria Wink, and their children were: Dewalt Peter; Maria Anna, born Oct. 19, 1846, died Dec. 4, 1860; and Louisa, born Feb. 9, 1850, died June 4, 1861. In religious belief they were all members of the Reformed Church. Politically Mr. Bausher was a Democrat. He died in Reading in November, 1889.

Dewalt Peter Bausher was educated in the public schools of Maxatawny township and in the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown. He also attended the old seminary conducted by Prof. Mix. After leaving school he worked on his father's farm until the fall of 1867, when he came to Reading and worked as a clerk first for Bard & Reber, and later for the Stichter Hardware Co. From 1884 Mr. Bausher traveled for various hardware stores of Reading, until in 1890, when he became connected with the John M. Malloy Sons Company of Philadelphia, remaining with this firm until his death Feb. 6, 1908. Mr. Bausher was one of the best salesmen in his line, and was very well known to the hardware trade.

On Dec. 24, 1866, Mr. Bausher married Ellen McFadden, daughter of Charles and Lydia McFadden, and she died in 1888, aged forty years. They were the parents of two children: Walter Wink and Carmi Irwin. Mr. Bausher was a member of the Royal Arcanum, and the I. O. O. F., at Reading. In politics he was a stanch Democrat. Both he and his wife were active members of the Reformed Church, and she was a kind and devoted mother.

GEORGE W. HEFFELFINGER, builder and real estate agent at Wyomissing, was born at Reading, Feb. 22, 1856. He received his early education in the local schools, which he attended until he was twelve years old, when he accompanied his parents to Mt. Etna, a village in the western end of the county. He attended school there for several years and then learned the trade of cabinet-maker under his father, assisting him in the business of undertaker until 1880, when he again accompanied his parents on a removal to Reading. He entered the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company as a wood-carver for executing fine, original designs in the ornamentation of their passenger coaches, and he continued with the company about ten years.

Ill health from close confinement made it necessary for Mr. Heffelfinger to secure out-door work, and he became solicitor of John D. Strunk, photographer, a line he followed until 1896. In that year the Reading Suburban Real Estate Company was organized for the purpose of projecting a suburban town, and in this behalf purchased several farms one and one-half miles west of Reading, in Spring township, and laid out the town of Wyomissing. Mr. Heffelfinger became interested in the valuation and sale of the lots and assisted the company materially in establishing the town in a successful manner. In 1901 he began building operations for himself and erected a square of fine homes along Reading avenue, extending from Penn Avenue to Mory Street, and in 1902 he moved there with his family, starting a grocery store in the corner building on Penn Avenue. In 1904 he succeeded in securing a postoffice for the place, and it was located in his store. He acted as postmaster, and after carrying on the store and postoffice for a year sold the premises to Alfred B. Yorgey, who became his successor. He then exerted himself in the erection of a borough by soliciting and securing many subscribers to the petition, and the movement was successful, the decree of incorporation being made in 1906. He is still active in the sale of lots, and in the improvement of the place by the erection of dwelling houses.

Mr. Heffelfinger married Cecelia Auchenbach, daughter of John B. and Priscilla (Kapp) Auchenbach, of Mt. Etna. They have seven children: Lester R., Flossie, Erma, Ada, Earl, Irene and Paul.

George Marshall Heffelfinger, father of George W., was born at Mt. Etna in 1832. He learned the trade of cabinet-maker at Myerstown, and he followed it at Mt. Etna and later at Reading (whither he had removed with his family) until 1879, when he secured employment in the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad shops, continuing with that company six years. On account of his age, he was obliged to engage in lighter work and since then he has made picture frames. He married Lucinda Truckermiller, and they had five children: George W.; John, who married Mary Heckar; Harry, who married Christie Grebe; Adam, who married Hattie Sheiry; and Mary, who married George Wertley. The wife and mother died in 1905.

John Heffelfinger, grandfather of George W., was of Tulpehocken township. He married Louisa Marshall, and they had six sons: John, Cyrus, George, Edward, Washington and Daniel.

LEVI W. BEAR, who until his death, Sept. 30, 1908, lived retired near the "Six Mile House," in Maiden Creek township, was born in Bern township, Berks county, Jan. 20, 1832, son of John and Ann (Williams) Bear.

Abraham Bear (the name was then spelled Baar), the grandfather of Levi W., married and by his wife, Rachel, had the following children: Isaac m. Sallie Gicker, daughter of Daniel Gicker; Abraham m. a sister of Sallie Gicker; Joseph m. Mary (Polly) Wert; Molly m. Jacob Albright; Kate m. a Mr. Pifflin; Sarah m. Jared Snyder; and John is mentioned below.

John Bear was born in Bern township, and was a fence maker by occupation. He married Ann Williams, daughter of Samuel Williams, and they were the parents of: William, deceased; John, deceased, m. Elizabeth Ludwig; Levi W.; Daniel, deceased, m. Ella Gruber; Annie m. Elias Schell; Sarah m. Levi Balthaser; Percival m. Kate Herbein; Henry m. Leanda Spangler; and Mary m. William Hafer.

Levi W. Bear was reared and educated in Bern township, and there learned the trade of stone mason. Later he purchased a farm, situated about two miles north of Bernville, where he resided for two years, when he purchased a property in Penn township, near Bagenstose's Hotel, and another in Ontelaunee township. Mr. Bear was the owner of the farm in Maiden Creek township, upon which he was living at the time of his death, and also owned the old homestead in Bern township, which he purchased some years ago.

In 1860 Mr. Bear married Rebecca Boyer, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Boyer) Boyer, and to this union the following children were born: Lizzie m. Lafayette Kauffman; Katie m. Edward Schaeffer, and has three children, Helen, Mabel and Bertha; Maggie m. Calvin Bucks, and has one child, Consuela; Deborah, deceased, m. Israel Foose; Irvin is unmarried; Emanuel; Oscar left home and it is thought he is deceased; and Clara m. Stephen Sousley, a cigar manufacturer of Hamburg, and has three children, the eldest named Earl. Mr. Bear, as is his family, was a member of Gernant's Reformed Church. In political matters he was a Democrat, but outside of township offices had no political aspirations.

JOHN B. KURTZ, who is very prominently identified with the creamery interests of Berks county, and who is also one of the most substantial citizens of Reading, Pa., was born in 1859, in West Cocalico township, Lancaster county, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Brubaker) Kurtz.

Samuel Kurtz followed agricultural pursuits all of his life in Lancaster county, where he died in 1890, aged sixty-six years, his widow surviving but one year, and her death occurred in her fifty-seventh year. They had three children: Sarah m. John H. Gearhart; Elizabeth m. A. R. Shirk; and John B. The parents of Mr. Kurtz were old and worthy members of the Mennonite Church. In politics the father was a Republican.

John B. Kurtz attended the schools of his native township, and assisted on his father's farm until he went into business for himself. He first engaged in the creamery business, which he has developed until at the present time he owns nine creameries, notwithstanding which he cannot supply the demand, and frequently is obliged to buy butter at Denver and other points. He owns one of the finest creameries in the State, his plant at Reading costing $8,000. He makes a specialty of the Kurtz Gilt Edged Butter, which is sold on its merits all over the country. Mr. Kurtz operates a stand at the West Reading Market. The management of all of the creameries he keeps under his own control, and does all of his own buying, and he is looked upon as one of the most enterprising business men of this section. His creameries are equipped with all modern appliances and he owns an independent ice plant.

Mr. Kurtz was married (first) to Hannah Shirk, and they had two children: Hayden and Stella. His second marriage was to Laura Fox, and they have one child: Ralph. Mr. Kurtz is a member of Masonic Lodge No. 62, F. & A. M., the I. O. O. F., and the P. O. S. of A.

JOHN R. WHITE, a representative citizen of Berks county, who is engaged in truck farming near Mohnton, in Cumru township, was born in Spring township, Oct. 11, 1862, son of John H. and Elizabeth (Reed) White.

Peter White, the great-grandfather of John R., was born in Cumru township, where he owned a farm, being also engaged in rake making. He was twice married, there being no children to the second union, but by the first marriage, with a Miss Remp, Mr. White had six sons and three daughters, as follows: Jacob; Samuel; William; John R.; Catherine, m. John Schaffer; Susan, m. Jonas Hornberger; Peter; Daniel; and Elizabeth, m. Daniel Hartz. The fourth son, John R., born Feb. 11, 1809, married Elizabeth Mengel in 1828. She died Oct. 2, 1886, and he passed away Nov. 13, 1904, having been the father of eight children, one of whom, John, was a constable for more than a quarter of a century in Cumru township, holding that office at the time of his death.

William White, grandfather of John R., was born April 6, 1804, and died Sept. 27, 1885, having spent his life in farming a small tract near Gouglersville. He married (first) Sarah Holtry, who was born in 1805 and died in 1833, and three children were born to them: Mary, born Jan. 27, 1828, m. Charles Eben; John H.; and Lydia, m. William Miller. Mr. White married (second) Ann Maria Fritz, born Jan. 13, 1804, who died Aug. 12, 1877, and to this union there were born four children: Hannah, m. Daniel Schonour; Henry, who died in youth; Annie, m. John Messinger; and Daniel (m. Emma Stamm), deceased April 10, 1907, aged sixty years.

John H. White was born March 12, 1830, and attended the old pay schools of Cumru township. When a young man he learned the trade of gun barrel maker, which he followed for many years, working in Cumru at Worleys, and in Heidelberg for Holls. He now owns a farm of twenty acres in Spring township, where he lived from 1869 until 1907, removing in the latter year to a home near that of his son, John R., in Cumru township. Mr. White and his family attend Wyomissing (Gouglersville) Church, being Lutheran members thereof. He is a man of much ability, a skilled mechanic and has led a successful career.

Mr. White married Elizabeth Reed, born Dec. 28, 1832, daughter of John and Ellen Reed, and to them there were born the following children: Sarah m. Samuel Ulrich; Ellen G. is unmarried; William R., born Nov. 15, 1857, m. Mary E. Fisher (1858-1885) and died June 4, 1890; Emma is unmarried; and John R.

John R. White was reared on the home farm, and was brought up to agricultural pursuits, which he has followed all of his life. He began farming for himself in the spring of 1889 on a forty-seven acre tract in Bern township, but after three years removed to another in the same district, whence he went a year later to the Solomon Gaul farm in Cumru township. After spending two years there and three years on the Joseph Kuhl farm in the same township, Mr. White in 1898 purchased the old Spatz farm near Mohnton, which then consisted of thirty-four acres. Later Mr. White sold eleven acres of this land, and greatly improved the remainder, rebuilding the barn in 1901, and in 1905 building a nice frame house with porches and surrounded by a fine lawn. He is now engaged in truck farming, at which he is very successful, and attends the Reading markets. In politics he is a Democrat, while fraternally he is connected with the K. G. E., of Sinking Spring, and the Red Men, of Mohnton. He and his family are prominent Lutheran members of Gouglersville Union Church, of which he has been a deacon since 1901.

In the year 1887 Mr. White was married to Emma C. Balthaser, born May 12, 1861, daughter of Cornelius and Elizabeth (Wertman) Balthaser, granddaughter of Jacob and Sarah (Kauffman) Balthaser, and great-granddaughter of Jacob and Margaret (Greth) Balthaser. Mr. and Mrs. White have these children: Jennie B., born March 3, 1888; William B., May 31, 1890; Mary E., Jan. 3, 1893, and John Irwin, March 29, 1898.

GEORGE W. DREXEL, a retired citizen of Reading, formerly a leading manufacturer of brick, now resides in his comfortable home at No. 422 North Second street. He was born in the old home on Sixth street, Reading, Aug. 12, 1842, son of John and Susan (Schlabach) Drexel.

John Drexel, the father, was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1790. He served under Napoleon Bonaparte at the battle of Moscow, and with the other soldiers suffered from the rigors of that awful winter campaign, when they were obliged to kill their horses for food. On coming to America, about 1817, Mr. Drexel settled at Reading, where he died. By trade he was a stone cutter, and he helped to build the pillars of the Berks county court house, and also the abutments on the old Schuylkill canal. He married Susan Schlabach, and they had ten children, namely: Reuben; Jacob, who was killed in the army; John; Catherine, m. to Barney Dreyfus; Henry, living at Exeter Station; Susan, deceased, m. to Henry Wagner; George W.; Rose, deceased, m. to Cornelius Rothenberger; and Samuel and Anna, both deceased. The family belonged to the Lutheran Church. The father was a stanch Democrat.

George W. Drexel was educated in the schools of Codorus township, York county, and was reared on a farm there. Later he lived in Gibraltar, and later at West Reading, both in Berks county. In the last named place he purchased his brother's brick plant on Tulpehocken street, and carried on the manufacture of brick there for two years. He then bought a plant at Birdsboro, which he operated in connection with the West Reading plant. His business prospects then became so good that he leased land on the Leitzinger turnpike and carried on operations there until 1904, when he sold out to Simon Kline, since which time he has lived retired. During his active years his brick was in general demand, and he furnished it for many fine residences, for the Pear and Buttonwood school buildings and other substantial and imposing structures.

In 1872 Mr. Drexel married Melissa Hain, and they had ten children, as follows: Frederick, m. to Susan Miller; Lettie, m. to Charles W. Griesemer; Catharine, m. to Nelson R. Crisman; Mary, m. to Heber Yohn; George; Rose; Raymond; Susan; Geneva and Jacob (deceased). In politics Mr. Drexel is a Democrat. During the Civil war he enlisted on the "Duke of Argyle" under Capt. Greenleaf, but was discharged on account of disability. He is a member of the order of Golden Eagles. With his family he belongs to the Lutheran Church.

On his mother's side Mr. Drexel is of American descent through at least three generations. His grandfather and great-grandfather Mountz both fought under General Washington, and while they were engaged in the service of their country, the women of the family carried on the farm, doing the plowing, threshing, seeding, even to the chopping down of trees for fuel. Mr. Drexel's grandmother was a plucky pioneer woman, and able to defend herself with a rifle if necessary. On one occasion she heard the dog tree a bear, and immediately followed them, but just as she took aim her father called her to stop, and he shot the bear. The Indians were frequent visitors at their home, making signs when they wanted food. They were always treated kindly, and on one occasion were given the privilege of the house, whereupon they built a fire and roasted terrapin. The Indian children would suck the meat out, as well as the older persons, and were then given bread and milk to finish their meal. The white settlers were always afraid the Indians would steal their children, and Mr. Drexel's mother recalls one occasion when she was hidden under a kettle until the Indians had taken their departure.

LEVI RUTH, who was for many years engaged in cigar manufacturing in the city of Reading, Pa., was a native of Lebanon county, born Feb. 19, 1841, son of Benevelle and Catherine (Paff) Ruth, and grandson of Jonathan Ruth.

Jonathan Ruth, who was a highly esteemed citizen of Heidelberg township, devoted all of his life to agricultural pursuits, and died stanch in the faith of the Reformed Church. He married Katie Hiester, and to them were born these children: Gabriel m. Nellie Haas; Joseph m. Susan Fisher; Levi m. Mary Kegerias; Beneville; Catherine m. Harrison Sloats; Johanna m. Henry Snyder; Rebecca and Susan died single; and Caroline.

Benevelle Ruth was born between Wernersville and Sinking Spring, in Heidelberg township, and was reared on the home farm, on which he remained until about nineteen years of age. At this time he came to Reading, where he was employed in a blacksmith shop for some time, later worked at the Krick mill and Bushong Brothers' farm and distillery ,and finally engaged with the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, in whose shops he continued until his retirement. He married Catherine Paff, daughter of Jonas Paff, an early settler of Alsace township, and to this union there were born nine children: Solomon; Benevelle, who lost his life in the Civil war; Levi; Rebecca, m. to Thomas Arnold; Amanda, m. to John Reeser; Mary, m. to William O'Boyle; Sarah, m. to John A. Britton, and two who died in infancy. In religious belief the family were connected with the Reformed Church. Mr. Ruth was originally a Democrat in politics, but at the time of his death was an ardent supporter of Republican principles.

When seven years of age Levi Ruth was brought to Reading by his parents, and in this city he secured his education in the common schools, after leaving which he took up cigar making, a business which he followed practically all of his life, being foreman for Mr. George W. Lehr, on Penn street, at the time of his death. He was a skilled mechanic and excellent workman, and had the full confidence and esteem of his employers. He died April 30, 1889.

In June, 1870, Mr. Ruth married Miss Emma Feather, daughter of Rebecca Feather, and granddaughter of Samuel and Mary (Bucher) Feather, and two children were born to this union: Mary R., m. Harry C. Meck, and had two children—Harold R. and Robert C.; and Emma C. m. C. W. Shade, and also had two children —Marion R. and Emily K.

JACOB D. GLASSER, a farmer residing at Lobachsville, was born in Rockland township, Berks county, July 4, 1864, son of Jacob Glasser and Sally Ann Shade, the latter a daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Youse) Shade. He made his home with his maternal grandfather until his marriage, at the age of nineteen. He then began farming in Rockland township, living with his father-in-law, John Moyer, for one year. He then bought his present farm of seventy-six acres at Lobachsville, where he prospered greatly during the fifteen years he engaged in its cultivation. He owns a lot adjoining his farm, and in 1907 he erected thereon a modern brick residence, in which he now lives. In politics he is a Democrat, and at present is serving as roadmaster of his township. He and his family attend the United Evangelical church at Pleasantville.

On Aug. 25, 1883, Mr. Glasser married Hannah Moyer, and their three children are: Charles, born July 10, 1884, who farms his father's farm, m. Amanda Hilbert, and has two children, Russel and Harold; Sallie m. Osville Heydt, of Lobachsville, and has two children, Jacob and Paul; and Cora is at home.

Mrs. Hannah (Moyer) Glasser is a great-granddaughter of John Moyer, who lived in Rockland township, where he owned the farm now the property of Frank Breidigam. He had an only son John (2).

John Moyer (2), son of John, married Elizabeth Folk, and they are both buried at New Jerusalem Church. He was a farmer and owned a large tract of land in Rockland township. His home was the place now occupied by Frank Breidigam, at New Jerusalem. To John and Elizabeth (Folk) Moyer were born ten children, namely: John F.; Samuel, of Rockland township; David and Benjamin, who lived in Rockland township; Leanda, m. to Jacob Schumacher; Mary m. to Solomon Noll; Polly m. to Benneville Hassler; Elizabeth, m. to Daniel Ruppert; Sally Ann, m. to William Dierolf; and Hettie, m. to Reuben Hilbert.

John F. Moyer, son of John (2) and Elizabeth, was born Feb. 27, 1833, in Rockland township, where he passed his life as a farmer, owning a farm of thirty-two acres. He died May 7, 1903, and is buried at Bertoletts Union Church Cemetery. He married Sarah Ann Wentz, born Aug. 10, 1829, died July 12, 1904. Their children were: Jacob, who died aged three years; Hannah; and two that died small.

ALFRED FRANKS, an esteemed citizen and court crier of Reading, is a veteran of the Civil war. His maternal grandfather was William Ferguson, a school teacher and surveyor of Lancaster county, and his parents were Joseph and Elizabeth Ann (Ferguson) Franks, the former, a native of France, dying before our subject's birth, in Harrisburg, in 1840. He was a school trustee and a worthy citizen. There were three children born to Mr. and Mrs. Franks, Alfred being the only one still living, the remaining two having died in infancy. After the death of Mr. Franks, his widow m. Michael Higel, and three children were born to them: Sarah, m. a Mr. Marquet of Des Moines, Ia.; Joseph of California; and Cecelia, m. a Mr. Myers, and was living in Pittsburg when last heard from.

Alfred Franks was born in Reading Oct. 11, 1840, and he received his education in the public schools of the city. After leaving school he engaged in farm labor, and then learned shoemaking, being bound out for four years to Samuel Werley. He worked as journeyman shoemaker for twenty-five years. In 1890, he was appointed court crier, at which he has served efficiently and ably ever since. Although a Democrat in politics, Mr. Franks was elected a city councilman from the Fifth ward, which is strongly Republican, in 1886, and he has always been a powerful factor in Berks county politics. He married Aug. 13, 1863, Catherine Lutz, daughter of Philip Lutz, an excavator in Reading, and six children came to bless this union: Alfred L., who died at the age of twenty-six yers, five months; Cyrus L., of Reading; Philip F., of that city; Catherine, twin to Alfred, wife of James Strauss, a hotel keeper of Reading; Sarah L., wife of Charles W. Yarnell, an alderman of Reading; and Annie E., who married M. Felthoff, a clerk of Reading.

In 1862, Mr. Franks enlisted in Company E, 128th Pa. V. I., under Capt. William Andrews and Col. Crosdale, of Bucks county, and served nine months, participating in many battles, including those of Antietam and Fredericksburg. He was a member of the First Reformed Church. His fraternal connections are with the Masons, he belonging to Lodge No. 52, F. & A. M.; Excelsior Chapter, R. A. M.; and Reading Commandery No. 42; Rajah Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He also belongs to Muhlenberg Lodge, I. O. O. F., and was formerly a member and three times Grand Noble of Salome Lodge, No. 105, before its disbandment; and to Minnehaha Lodge, K. P., of Friedensburg, in Oley township. He has always been greatly interested in the development and progress of the city, and is one of its most highly esteemed citizens.

CYRUS L. FRANKS, son of Alfred, and present popular proprietor of the "Sixth Ward Hotel," Reading, was born in that city June 9, 1864. The public schools of Reading and Friedensburg afforded him ample facilities for a good substantial literary training, and at the age of sixteen he left school and learned the stove molding trade with the Reading Stove Works, following this occupation for twenty-six years with that company. On Feb. 13, 1906, Mr. Franks engaged in the hotel business at the southwest corner of Second and Washington streets, and has since been engaged there. Socially he belongs to the Sons of Veterans, the Red Men, the Moulder's Union, and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Aerie No. 66.

On Aug. 14, 1884, Mr. Franks married Mary Rutz, daughter of Henry and Susan (Osenwald) Rutz, of Reading, and they have three children: Laura E., Alfred and Erma.

GLASSER. The Glasser family was founded in America by Jacob Glasser, who emigrated to America on the ship "Patience," which landed at Philadelphia Sept. 19, 1749. The date of his settling in Maxatawny, Berks county, is uncertain, but in 1790 when the first Federal Census was taken, he was a farmer, and had three sons over sixteen years of age, and two daughters. He owned a large tract of land located along what is now the trolley road between Lyons and Kutztown. The "Glasser farm" is still pointed out as the farm now owned by Peter Keefer. It originally contained 170 or more acres.

Jacob Glasser, one of the three sons of Jacob, the emigrant, was born in Maxatawny township. He was a farmer on the farm of 170 acres, which he owned, known as the "Glasser homestead." He died about 1845, when seventy-five years old, and is buried at Mertz's Church at Stony Point, of which he was a Lutheran member. His children were: Hannah, m. to Henry Frederick;

Susannah, who obtained fifty acres of the Glasser homestead, m. to John Levan; Sarah, who obtained a part of the Glasser homestead, m. to Jacob Neff; and David.

David Glasser, son of Jacob, was born in 1801, in Maxatawny township, on the Glasser homestead. The farm now consists of eighty-three acres of fertile land. David Glasser died in 1880, in his seventy-ninth year. His wife was Sarah Wink of Maxatawny, who died in 1884 in her eighty-fourth year, and both are buried at Kutztown. Their six children were: Mary, who died unmarried; Jacob; Lucy, m. to Enoch Sailer, of Reading; John, of Coffee Town, a suburb of Kutztown; James, of Reading; and Sarah, m. to Daniel Sailer, of Reading.

Jacob Glasser, son of David and Sarah, was born in Maxatawny township, Nov. 11, 1837, and he was reared upon his parents' farm, remaining at home until he was of age. He was then for six years brakeman on the road running between Kutztown and Topton. One year after his marriage in 1860, he came to Kutztown, where he has made his home ever since, except for about fourteen years, three of which were passed in Reading, and three at Catasauqua, and seven at Allentown. Mr. Glasser now lives in his own house, which he built during the eighties. He and his family are Lutherans. In politics he is a Democrat.

On May 29, 1860, Mr. Glasser married Susan R. Sander, daughter of Henry Sander, late of Kutztown. Their children were: Evans, of Allentown; Lillie, of Norristown; Minnie, who died aged nine years; Maggie, m. to William Matten, of Kutztown; Emma, m. to William Thompson, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Harry, of Wichita, Kans.; Jacob, who died in 1905, aged twenty-five years; Richard, of Maxatawny township; and Susan, m. to Elbert Ausmus, of Arkansas City, Kansas.

JOHN H. BRIGHT, a resident of the borough of Bernville, Berks county, who follows the carpenter's trade, was born Aug. 10, 1865, in Penn township, on the old homestead. His father, Amandon Bright, was for many years one of the leading citizens of his section of the county. The family has been located here for many years.

(I) Stephen Brecht, the ancestor of the Brecht or Bright family, was a native of Germany, born Feb. 17, 1692. He was one of the emigrants from the Palatinate who landed at New York between 1709 and 1712. These emigrants first settled at Schoharie, N. Y., but because of the unbearable treatment they received at the hands of Governor Hunter, of the Province of New York, they sought refuge in homes elsewhere. Hearing of the fair treatment accorded by the proprietors of Penn's Province, and of the fertility of the soil, excellent water and other advantages there, many of them came to Pennsylvania, among them Stephen Brecht. The land was granted him by John, Thomas and Richard Penn, lawful heirs of William Penn, on Nov. 27, 1745 (recorded in Patent Book A. Vol. 12, p. 340). On this he made his home, and here he died Sept. 24, 1747. His remains were interred in the North Heidelberg cemetery among the Moravians. His gravestone lies flat upon the ground and the inscription is still in good condition. His will was made Jan. 6, 1746, and his land was divided among his three sons: David, Hans Wendel and George Adam. To George Adam was given the homestead (now owned by Adam Dundore), and the division of land between David and Hans Wendel was recorded at Reading April 17, 1754, in Book A. Vol. I, p. 68.

(II) David Brecht, son of Stephen, was born Sept. 8, 1719. He was a resident of Bern township long before the organization of the county in 1752. He was the owner of valuable lands near Bernville, and exercised no small influence among the people of his neighborhood. In 1771 he was elected county commissioner, and served as such until 1774. By his will on file in the register's office, after providing for his wife Sarah, he devises to his only son John his large plantation of 500 acres, and gives to each of his seven daughters the sum of 900 pounds, almost a fortune in that early day. His wife Sarah was born Jan. 8, 1727, and died Jan. 22, 1786. They were the parents of eleven children, three of whom died in infancy or childhood. The names of those reaching mature years were: John, Margaret, Elizabeth, Magdalena, Catharine, Susanna, Sarah and Barbara. On David Brecht's tombstone appears the following inscription:

(III) John Brecht, only son of David that grew to manhood, passed his entire life in farming on the homestead. He is buried in a private burial ground on his own farm, and his tombstone bears the following inscription:

Hier ruhet die Gebeine

Eleven children were born to John and Anna Maria Brecht—four sons and seven daughters, namely: Peter, whose children were: Adam, William, Levi, Mary and Catharine; Jacob; David and John who both settled near Lancaster, Ohio, and the latter's children were: Henry, Benton, Edward, Jacob, Mary, Clara, George and Emma; Mary, who married David Arnold; Sarah, who married Thomas Fetters; Susanna; and four daughters whose names are not recorded.

(IV) Jacob Brecht, son of John and Anna Maria, was born in 1792, and to him came the possession of the homestead. The name of his wife is unknown. His death occurred in 1875. His children were: John; Amandon; Aaron, whose children were: Darius, Emma, Lehman, Albert and Lizzie; Anna Maria; Sarah; Harietta; Elizabeth; Catharine; Rachel; Isabella, and Rebecca.

(V) Amandon Bright, son of Jacob, was born Jan. 15, 1830. His entire active life was devoted to farming and he became an extensive land owner, having 220 acres of the most fertile section of Penn township. He was very prominent in public affairs, and took an active interest in the success of the Democratic party. He was school director of his township, for many years committeeman of his district, and for three years was a prison inspector in Berks county. In 1894 he was elected treasurer of the county, and he gave most satisfactory service in this office for three years. He married Clara Hain, and their children were: Ellen, who married Jacob Bordner, of Bernville, Pa.; William, a small farmer in Penn township; Sallie, who married Frank Schaffer, of Reading, Pa.; John H.; Harry, who died aged twenty-seven years; Annie, who married Jacob Gruber, of Mount Pleasant; Albert H., a prosperous young plumber and gas fitter at West Reading; Rev. Edwin D., pastor of the Reformed Church at Derry, Pa., who is also engaged as a genealogist and historian; and three that died young. Amandon Bright passed away in May, 1898, respected by all who knew him.

(VI) John H. Bright attended the Bright school in Penn township until 1884, later studying at the Keystone State Normal School, at Kutztown. He spent most of the time on the farm with his father until he reached the age of twenty-five years and then continued farming for six years on his own account, after which he was engaged for four years in the management of his sawmill, cutting timber in Berks county. He has ever since been occupied at the carpenter's trade, at which he has done well, finding plenty of work in that line in his locality. He is an industrious man and a wide awake citizen, having served as school director and as councilman of the borough. He is a Democrat, and has been delegate to various county conventions. He is a member of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Bright married Anna M. Kalbach, daughter of the late Levi Kalbach and his wife Isabella Brossman, and to this union have been born three children: Lehman K., Naomi K., and Howard.

BENNEVILLE BURGERT, now residing on his valuable farm in Maiden-creek township, was born in Richmond township, Berks Co., Pa., March 24, 1841, a son of Solomon and Rachel (Hoffman) Burgert.

The grandfather was Samuel Burgert, who was a shoemaker by trade and followed it at Walnuttown. In early manhood he married and he had the following children born to him: Gideon; Benjamin; Solomon; Samuel, residing on the old homestead; Catherine, m. to John Kline; and Mary, m. to Rudy Price.

Solomon Burgert was born on the old farm in Richmond township, where he carried on farming through life. He married Rachel Hoffman, and they had children as follows: Esther, m. to (first) George Zink, and (second) Fred Miller; Catherine, who died unmarried; Solomon; Benneville; Samuel; Elijah, and James.

Benneville Burgert has spent his life in Berks county and during all his active years he devoted himself to agricultural pursuits. For some years he has lived retired. In 1870 he married Sarah Rothermel, daughter of Paul and Elizabeth (Reeser) Rothermel, and they had seven children. (1) Anna, the eldest, was born June 11, 1870, and died Sept. 2, 1871. (2) William was born March 22, 1872, resides on the old homestead, and manages it. He married Kate Noll and they have six children, namely: David, William, Sarah, Hettie, Benneville and Paul. (3) Sarah was born Sept. 23, 1873, married Henry Schweitzer and they have one child, Bentley. (4) Elizabeth was born Dec. 22, 1874, and died Sept. 28, 1875. (5) Solomon was born March 13, 1876, and died June 3, 1876. (6) Paul was born July 28, 1877, and died Sept. 22, 1877. (7) Mary Eva was born Aug. 5, 1880, married Clarence Ohlinger and they have six children, namely: Anna, Mabel, Virgia, Elizabeth, Lillian, and Esther. Mr. and Mrs. Burgert are well-known and highly esteemed residents of their neighborhood. They are members of the Blandon Church, Mr. Burgert being of the Lutheran faith and Mrs. Burgert of the Reformed.

JONAS H. SNYDER, dairyman at Oley Line, was born in Exeter township, Berks Co., Pa., March 14, 1876, son of Thomas H. and Mary Ellen (Hoffman) Snyder, of Exeter township, and grandson of Thomas and Hannah Snyder.

Thomas Snyder, grandfather of Jonas H., lived on the Oley pike above Oley Line toward Reading, where he was a farmer. His children were: Dr. Peter, deceased; Jacob, who lives at Reading and is advanced in years; Louisa, deceased; Lewis lived in Exeter where he was a carpenter; Sarah m. August Young; and Thomas, father of Jonas H.

Thomas H. Snyder, father of Jonas H., was born in Exeter where he died in 1892, aged fifty-six years. He is buried at Schwartzwald. He was a carpenter and employed a number of men, working in the vicinity of his home, building houses and barns and doing repair work. He was a Democrat and was school director of Exeter, dying in office. He m. Mary Ellen Hoffman, daughter of Samuel and Susan (De Hart) Hoffman. Mrs. Snyder was born Sept. 28, 1838, and they had issue: Ida died young; Thomas, of Exeter; Samuel died about 1880; Clayton, of Exeter, on the original "Hans Schneider" homestead, where he is a farmer and owns the farm; Wilson died when thirty-two years old; Daniel, of Mt. Penn; and Jonas H.

Jonas H. Snyder attended the public schools of Exeter township and also Prof. D. B. Brunner's Reading Academy and Business College. He was licensed to teach school in 1898 by Prof. E. M. Rapp, and taught during the terms of 1898-99 in his home township, in the Green Tree school. He was reared to farm life, and for four years worked in the creamery for F. C. Cleaver and for several years in Reading in the locomotive works. He has been the manager of Oley Line Creamery since April, 1909, and is thoroughly acquainted with the dairy business. He is a member of P. O. S. of A., Camp No. 221, at Oley Line, of which he is a past president, and Reading Camp, Modern Woodmen of America, No. 9289. He is a member of the Reformed Church at Schwartzwald. In politics he is a Democrat, but votes independently.

Mr. Snyder was m. Dec. 31, 1898, to Rebecca Stapleton, daughter of Samuel Stapleton whose full history appears in this volume. Mrs. Snyder died in 1902, aged twenty-four years. She was buried at Schwartzwald exactly four years after her marriage, leaving one son and one daughter, namely: Raymond S. and Esther S. Mr. Snyder lives in Exeter township along the Oley turnpike with his mother on the old homestead.

G. HOWARD HART, traveling freight agent of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company, who resides at No. 341 North Second street, Reading, and maintains an office at No. 290 Broadway, New York, was born in the city of Reading, Aug. 19, 1870, son of George and Maggie (Weidner) Hart.

The Hart family originally lived in Scotland. Early in 1790, three brothers, of Scotch-Irish ancestry, George, Henry and Barney Hart, emigrated to America and located in Cumberland county, Pa. They were iron molders by trade. In those days pig iron was all made at the old charcoal furnaces. From Cumberland county the brothers came to Reading where they remained only a short time and then went to Oley Furnace, in Berks county. Of these George Hart, great-grandfather of G. Howard, married Polly Young, of Lancaster, Pa. To this marriage were born three sons, John, William and Samuel.

Samuel Hart, grandfather of G. Howard, was the youngest. He was born at Oley Furnace in 1815, and in 1837 he married, in Reading, Lovina Moore, of Robeson township, Berks county, daughter of George and Susanna Moore, early settlers of the county. Eight children—four sons and four daughters—were born to them: George, Daniel D., William, Samuel, Mary, Susan, Sophia and Agnes. Samuel Hart, the father, was a forgeman, having learned this trade at Gibraltar, Berks county, working there and elsewhere in the State for many years. Of the children Daniel D. and Samuel have been employed for a quarter of a century as forgemen at Parkesburg, Chester county, and both George and Daniel served in the Civil war, the latter as a member of Battery D, Capt. George Durrell's Independent Artillery.

George Hart, son of Samuel, learned the business of forgeman. As stated above he served in the Civil war. He married Maggie Weidner, and they had three sons, G. Howard, Norman and Grant, all of Reading.

G. Howard Hart received his education in the common schools of Reading, also taking a course at Prof. Steward's Business Academy. After completing his literary training he clerked in J. Mould's department store for a short time, and on March 17, 1884, accepted a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company as messenger boy. He remained with that company until April 1, 1895, having been promoted from messenger boy to chief clerk, and later engaged with the Lehigh Valley Railroad, continuing with that road until Sept. 1, 1899, being contracting freight agent, with headquarters in the city of Reading. On the date last named Mr. Hart resigned to accept a position with the Chicago & Alton Railroad, with which he has been connected to the present time. Mr. Hart is a member of Mt. Penn Council, Royal Arcanum; Reading Lodge, B. P. O. E., No. 115, in which he was elected E. R. in 1908; the New York Freight and Passenger Association; the Inter-state Railroad and Steamship Association and the Traveling Freight Agents' Association. He is independent in politics, and is a member of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Hart married Minerva Trout, of Reading, and to them were born two sons: George and Charles L., the latter of whom. is deceased.

W. A. PURDY, president of the National Shoe and Corset Lace Co., was born in Rockland county, New York, in 1873.

Mr. Purdy's education was secured in the schools of Rockland Co., N. Y., and after graduating from Packer's Business College, he removed to New York City, where he engaged with the brokerage firm of Halle & Steiglitz, of Wall street, and later with Clarence Whitman & Co. He remained with the latter firm for nine years, leaving their employ to engage in his present line of business. In 1902 Mr. Purdy came to Reading and equipped his factory with the latest and most improved machinery, here employing from ten to twelve men. The output, which annually amounts to $50,000, is supplied only to the first-class trade, and Mr. Purdy's goods are known all over the country for their uniform quality and superior grade.

Mr. Purdy was married to Miss Jessie W. Patten, and they attend the Methodist Church. In politics Mr. Purdy is a Republican, but he has devoted all of his time to his business interests and therefore has had no aspirations for public office.

WILLIAM ABBOTT WITMAN, former councilman and extensive contractor of Reading, was born in this city Oct. 19, 1860, son of Hamilton Witman and grandson of Henry Witman, both natives of Reading.

Henry Witman made his home on the south side of Eighth street, between Franklin and Chestnut streets, for many years. He was a shoe merchant, but for some years prior to his death he lived retired. He m. Mary Smith, a native of Reading, who died in 1893, aged eighty-one years. He died about 1876, at the age of seventy. They were the parents of fourteen children, of whom five died young. Those reaching mature years were: Hamilton; Abraham; Samuel; Henry; Jonathan; Frederick; Louisa, who died unmarried; Mary m. to William Miller; and Anna m. (first) to a Mr. Bohler, and (second) to Monroe Heilman. 1835

Hamilton Witman, son of Henry, was born in Reading Feb. 28, 1829, and died Oct. 6, 1898. He was a master mechanic in the employ of the Reading Railway Company many years, and was much esteemed by the men under him. He was retired for several years before his death. He married Leopoldina Abbott, daughter of William and Charlotte (Ede) Abbott, natives of London, England, who came to America about 1845, locating at Reading. Mrs. Witman died advanced in years and is buried at the side of her husband in the Charles Evans cemetery. Of their ten children four died small, the others being: William Abbott; Linda Alwera, deceased; Henry; Jonathan A., of Reading; Mary, m. to H. T. Shick, a mechanical engineer at Reading; and Charlotte E., m. to Thomas F. Crawford, of Philadelphia.

William Abbott Witman has been the promoter of many successful enterprises, and is an extensive contractor, giving employment to many men. At the present time he is engaged in the construction of the Circus Maximus, at the corner of Eleventh and Exeter streets, Reading. This pleasure ground, when completed, will be one of the finest sporting grounds in this part of the country. In 1907 and 1908 he erected the famous Japanese pagoda at the head of Penn street, on Mount Penn, at a cost of $33,000. He has executed many municipal contracts in Reading and other cities. Mr. Witman was a member of the councils from the Thirteenth ward, and there fathered the bill that gave the City of Reading the Spring street subway, thus earning his title "Father of the Subway." He served many years in both the common and the select councils, and was one of the members most active in the interests of the citizens. In 1908 he was a candidate for mayor but was defeated after a bitter contest, and at one time he was the Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Witman is one of the best known sportsmen in eastern Pennsylvania, and promoted one of the base ball leagues. He resides in a pleasant home at the corner of Marion and Locust streets which he himself erected.

Mr. Witman married Catharine Koch, daughter of Henry Koch, a shoe merchant on Penn street for many years. They have one son, William Abbott, Jr., a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and now an attorney at the Reading Bar.

SHOLLENBERGER or SCHOLLENBERGER. The first representatives of the Shollenberger or Schollenberger family of upper Berks county in this country were Frederick and Gerhart Schollenberger, the former of whom emigrated to America on the ship "Loyal Judith" and landed at Philadelphia Sept. 26, 1742. It is likely that they were brothers, and they were residents of Greenwich township, Berks county, in 1759, at which time both were married. One Henry Shollenberger, unmarried, was also a resident of the township at the same time. The family is of German origin, and in the direct line of Franklin A. Schollenberger, of Boyertown, there is a tradition that three brothers came from Europe, one settling in Virginia, and Lorenz and the other brother going to Weisenburg, Lehigh Co., Pennsylvania.

Lawrence Shollenberger was a farmer of Greenwich township, Berks county, and married Mary Correll, of the same township. They had two sons—John M. and Jacob—and four daughters. Jacob, the younger of the sons, was born Aug. 9, 1798, and died aged ninety-three years, five months, four days; he is buried at Moselem Church, in Richmond township. His wife, Eva Baer, was born Jan. 5, 1799, and died in her eighty-eighth year.

John M. Shollenberger, older son of Lawrence, was born in Greenwich township Aug. 26, 1791. On May 18, 1817, he was married by Rev. Mr. Knoske, of Kutztown, Pa., to Catharine Merkel, who was born May 3, 1795, daughter of Daniel Merkel, of Richmond township, and a descendant of an old family long established in that section of the county. In Greenwich township he learned the trade of making gun-barrels and sickles from a man named Christ, but he followed farming principally. After his marriage he moved to Albany township, this county, there living above Kempton, and in 1848 he removed to Richmond township, where he passed the remainder of his days, dying on his farm there June 25, 1867. He is buried at Kutztown. He was the first of the family to own the homestead in Richmond township, above Fleetwood, which has remained in the family since he purchased it, in 1848, and which was formerly the John Jacob Dreibelbis farm. The place contained 200 acres when Mr. Shollenberger bought it, now divided into two farms, one of which became the property of his son Capt Jonas M. and the other of his son Nathan M. Twelve children were born to John M. Shollenberger and his wife, the first four in Greenwich township, the others in Albany township: Sarah M., born June 10, 1818; Daniel M., Nov. 8, 1820; Catharine M., June 18, 1823; John M., Sept. 23, 1824; Lucy Ann, May 13, 1827; Nathan M., March 14, 1829; Jonas M., Feb. 27, 1831; Elizabeth M., Feb. 24, 1833; Edwin M., Jan. 22, 1835; Malinda M., Feb. 17, 1837; Lydia M. (the only survivor of this large family), Dec. 13, 1838; Fianna M., Feb. 15, 1841 (died July 14, 1866).

William S. Schollenberger, son of John M., was born Oct. 24, 1851, in the vicinity of Fleetwood, and was reared on the farm. When eighteen years old he commenced to learn the trade of tombstone cutting at Hillchurch, and after a few years engaged in business for himself near Yoder's Mill in Pike township. He next moved to Pleasantville, where he lived for two and a half years, after which he was located at Friedensburg for a little over eighteen years. In December, 1899, he settled in Boyertown, where he carried on a thriving business in his line until his sudden death, Mr. Schollenberger having been one of the victims of the memorable Opera House fire on Jan. 13, 1908. Mr. Schollenberger was a prosperous business man and a quiet but useful citizen, and he served as councilman of the borough, having been elected on the Democratic ticket. He was a consistent member of the Reformed Church at Friedensburg.

Mr. Schollenberger was twice married, his first union being with Mary Ann Cleaver, who was born July 5, 1858, daughter of Daniel Cleaver, and died June 2, 1905. She was the mother of two children, Franklin A. and Mary Ellen, the latter of whom is unmarried and since her father's death has made her home with her brother. Mr. Schollenberger's second marriage was to Mrs. Mary C. (Keller) Bower, by whom he had no children. She perished with him in the Opera House fire, and they are buried in Fairview cemetery, at Boyertown.

Franklin A. Schollenberger was born near Hillchurch, in Pike township, Berks county, Dec. 6, 1875, and attended the public schools in Oley township in his early boyhood, later becoming a pupil at the Oley Academy. He began to learn the trade of stone-cutter under his father when very young, during the time when the business was located at Friedensburg, and he has continued to follow the same line, in which he has met with uninterrupted success. On June 10, 1908, he engaged in the business on his own account at Boyertown, dealing in marble and granite as well as doing all kinds of stone and marble cutting. He has a paying patronage, keeping five or six men busy all the time, and his equipment of pneumatic tools, drills, surfacing and polishing machines is complete and up-to-date, all facilities for doing this kind of work in the most convenient manner being at hand in his establishment. He does a large business making tombstones for the different districts throughout the lower end of Berks county.

Mr. Schollenberger was married June 21, 1902, to Miss Cora B. Leinbach, who was born Feb. 1, 1882, daughter of Daniel and Ada (Rider) Leinbach, of Oley township, and she, too, perished in the disastrous fire of Jan. 13, 1908, Mr. Schollenberger thus losing three members of his immediate family in that catastrophe. One child was born to this union, Alton W., who died April 15, 1905, in his second year. Mr. Schollenberger in religious connection is a member of the Reformed Church at Friedensburg. Fraternally he unites with Ringgold Council, No. 23, O. U. A. M., and Castle No. 123, K. G. E., at Friedensburg, and with Camp No. 8286, M. W. of A., at Boyertown.

JOHN J. RUTH, proprietor of the historic "Cacoosing Hotel," in Lower Heidelberg township, near the Spring township line, has been located there since 1903. He is a native of Penn township, this county, born May 10, 1863, and was reared on the parental farm in North Heidelberg township. He received his education in the public schools.

When he was eighteen years old, Mr. Ruth started out in life for himself as a farmer, but after he had been away from home one year his father again desired his services, and he accordingly returned to his parents, working for them nine years longer. He then engaged in farming on his own account in Penn township, on Reuben Hedrich's farm, upon which he lived as a tenant for ten years. In the spring of 1903 he sold his farm stock and purchased the "Cacoosing Hotel" property, including a farm of twenty-nine acres, from the Adam Stump estate. He has made his home there ever since, conducting this well-known hostelry, which is patronized by the traveling public and many Reading people. Mr. Ruth is an obliging landlord, doing everything in his power for the comfort and convenience of his guests.

Mr. Ruth has been twice married. His first wife, Lydia (Speicher) Ruth, died five years after her marriage, the mother of a son and a daughter, twins. The son died in infancy, but the daughter Lillie is still surviving. Mr. Ruth's second marriage was to Maggie L., daughter of John and Louisa (Balthaser) Ruth. No children have been born to this union. Mr. Ruth and his family are Lutheran members of the Bern Union Church, and fraternally he is a member of Lodge No. 835, I. O. O. F.; and Washington Camp, No. 99, P. O. S. of A., both of Wernersville. He is a Democrat in political belief.

Israel Ruth, father of John J. Ruth, was born in 1824. He was a shoemaker by trade and followed that occupation in his earlier years, later conducting a farm. He married Catharine Boyer, who died in 1890, and both are buried at the Corner Church in Heidelberg township. Mr. and Mrs. Israel Ruth had eight children, as follows: Joshua is a resident of Reading; Mary m. Levi Strause, of Reading; William lives in San Francisco, Cal.; Emma m. George W. Spatz, of Robesonia, Pa.; Sarah m. Aaron Lease, of Reading; John J.; and two died in infancy and are buried at the Bern Church.

Jonas Ruth, grandfather of John J. Ruth, lived in the vicinity of Reading. Three of his four children were: Josephus, Israel, and John.

FIRST UNITED EVANGELICAL CHURCH. What is now the First United Evangelical Church of Reading, and the parent church of all the United Evangelical Churches of the city, had its beginning in the organization of Reading circuit by the Eastern Conference of the Evangelical Association in 1836. At a Congregational meeting held Oct. 16, 1894, it was unanimously resolved that the congregation of Salem Church of the Evangelical Association collectively and individually sever connection with the Evangelical Association and by resolution at said Congregational meeting united with the East Pennsylvania Conference of the United Evangelical Church. The large and beautiful church building at the corner of Eighth and Court streets was completed and dedicated, June 21, 1896.

The following pastors served this appointment: W. F. Heil, 1895-1899; J. W. Hoover, 1899-1903; E. H. Kistler, 1903-1907; J. W. Hoover, 1908, the present pastor, Rev. A. W. Brownmiller, having served since March, 1908.

The present board of trustees are the following: J. G. Mohn, Pres.; John Rudisill, Sec.; Edwin C. Baker, Treas.; Dr. B. H. Markley, Rep.; John R. Miller; George Hendel; W. H. Hendel; and Elias R. Herb. The present membership is 850 and the Sunday-school enrollment is 1,250. Since the organization in 1895 the congregation has raised for all purposes the magnificent sum of $247,141.93. KELLER. The Keller family of Rockland, Berks county, is of German extraction, being descended from John Christophel (Christoffel) Keller, better known as "Stoffel" Keller, who was born in Nitsche, Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, son of Jacob Keller, a well known weaver who resided at that place. Jacob Keller was the father of six children, two of whom died in childhood. Two sons, both named Johan Adam, were distinguished by being called "der grosse Johan" (Big John) and "der kleine Johan" (Little John). John Christophel came next, and there was one daughter, Elizabeth Catharine. The mother's name is not known, but she had red hair, while all her children had black hair.

In 1764 John Christophel Keller, then seventeen years of age, came to America, in the companionship of a young man named Fritsche, a relative, who was a younger brother of the ancestor of the Fritsche family in America, who had come to this country in 1737. Young Stoffel's father gave him considerable money in gold, which he sewed in a belt and carried on his body. He took passage on the "Brittania," Captain Arnot, from Rotterdam to Philadelphia, where young Keller landed Sept. 26th, alone. The weather was very tempestuous during the voyage and a number of the passengers became sick and died, among the unfortunates being young Fritsche; Stoffel Keller was obliged to carry his body without assistance from the hold to the deck, and the experience made such an impression on him that he recalled it with horror to the end of his days.

From Philadelphia Stoffel Keller walked to Rockland township, Berks county, where he found a congenial home with the Reichert family, who were also from Nitsche, Mrs. Reichert having at one time worked for his father. With them he followed his trade of weaver. In 1765, at the age of eighteen, he m. Catharine, daughter of John Nicholas Delp, a large land holder of Rockland, and the ancestor of the Delp family of Berks county. John Nicholas Delp was single when he came to America, in 1749, from Germany, and located in Rockland township; he m. a daughter of a man named Adams, who settled in Maxatawny about 1739.

Soon after his marriage Stoffel Keller secured a tract of land from his father-in-law, which he began to clear, and it is said his wife assisted him in the work. This home remained in the connection for over one hundred years, and the old log house, built before 1770, is still standing and in good condition. Stoffel Keller died there, in November, 1834, at the age of eighty-seven, at which time he was living with his son-in-law, Squire Joseph Specht. Stoffel Keller's property in Rockland comprised about forty acres. He was a man of great force of character and considerable intelligence, was a school teacher, and preserved his mental vigor to the last. He served in the war of the Revolution. His wife, Catharine, died over ten years before him. Their twelve children were as follows: (1) Maria, born about 1767, died in 1850, and is buried at Mertz Church, in Rockland. She m. Michael Welder, and they had nine children: Polly, wife of Abraham Boyer, of Maxatawny township; Catharine, wife of George Welder, who removed to Ohio; Elisabeth, Mrs. Seuse; Sarah, wife of Isaac Reodinger, Susan, who m. Daniel Gerrett, of Schuylkill county; Dinah, wife of Sol. Heist, of Rockland township; John, who m. Lydia Muthart, and lived in Jefferson and Armstrong counties; Benjamin, who m. (first) Elisabeth Gave and (second) Mary Boyer; and Lena, wife of Daniel Oswald, of Rockland township. (2) Jacob m. Betsy, daughter of John Specht. They lived and died near Pricetown. They had children: John, who m. Elisabeth Wahl; Catharine, wife of Henry Noll; Rebecca, Mrs. Buskirk; Lydia, Mrs. Wahl; and Daniel. (3) Catharine, who lived and died at Bechtelsville, was twice married, first to Daniel Specht and second to Peter Muthart. She had five children: Daniel (married), Sarah (wife of David Muthart), Catharine (wife of John Muthart), Annie (Mrs. Fry) and David (married). (4) Conrad m. Polly Neiman. (5) Elisabeth m. Henry Moyer and they lived and died near Hill Church. Their children were: Joseph (married), Henry (married Sally Moyer), Sarah (Mrs. Moyer), Fredrica (m. George Seuse), Isaac, Jacob and Elisabeth. (6) Susan m. Joseph Specht, Esq., and they lived and died on the Keller homestead in Rockland township. She died in 1832, and Squire Specht later m. a Muthart, by whom he had two sons. He died in 1854. By his marriage to Susan Keller he had children as follows: Maria m. Charles Shaffer; Rebecca m. Daniel DeLong; Catharine m. Abraham Levan; Susan m. Charles DeLong; Elisabeth m. William Stapleton (they were the parents of Rev. A. Stapleton, D. D., of York, Pa., who a number of years ago compiled a genealogical sketch of the American ancestor which was published in Egle's "Notes and Queries," and to whom we are indebted for the information contained in this article); Sarah m. (first) John DeLong and (second) Benjamin Keller; Joseph m. Anna LaVan. (7) George m. Kate Keller and they lived and died near Pricetown. Their children were Abraham, Magdalena and Joseph. (8) Magdalena m. Henry Sterner and had six children: Joel, who m. a Felthofer; Polly, Mrs. Sipe; William, who also married; Peter, who remained unmarried; Lydia, Mrs. Hess; and George, who married. (9) Abraham m. Magdalena, daughter of John Specht and sister of Squire Joseph Specht, and they had two children, both of whom married, and both of whom moved to Wauseon, Ohio, where their descendants reside. Benjamin was married four times, his last wife being Mrs. Sarah DeLong, daughter of Squire Joseph Specht. (10) Samuel died unmarried at the age of twenty-six years. (11) John m. Betsy Egolf. They had no children. (12) Mary (Peggy), born in 1799, m. Jacob Sterner and moved to Bloomsburg, Pa., where she died in 1879. They had eight children: Mary died in infancy; Catharine m. John Heist; Ephraim m. Mary Long; Henrietta m. John Rinker; Hannah m. (first) James Davis and (second) J. Miller; Jacob m. Sarah Diener; Rebecca m. Reuben Hess; John m. (first) Anne M. Eckert and (second) Martha Jacoby.

A curious story told by Stoffel Keller to his grandchildren is a fair sample of the legends and traditions prevalent among the early Pennsylvania Germans: When he was a little boy at home in Nitsche, on the Rhine, a mysterious stranger came to their "dorf" (town). The people were afraid of him and no one would give him lodging, but Jacob Keller (Stoffel's father) finally took him in. The stranger said that for his kindness he would perform an act that would give him immunity from fire, that though the entire town should be consumed his house would be spared. He then called for an auger, with which he bored a hole in the house, at the same time performing some kind of incantation. To prove the efficiency of the charm he asked for two bundles of straw. Having enchanted one, he set it on fire, whereupon the straw was consumed, but the band remained; enchanting the other, he set fire to the band, which was consumed, the straw remaining.

Conrad Keller, son of Stoffel Keller, m. Polly Neiman, whose first husband was killed by the Indians in 1781. To this union was born children as follows: John m. Esther Clouser, and is mentioned below; George m. Lucy Bast; David m., and lived in New York City; Charles m. Harriet Moyer, was a prominent citizen of Berks county and later of Montgomery county, where he died March 7, 1897, aged eighty years.

John Keller, son of Conrad and Polly, m. Esther Clouser, daughter of William and Katherine (Moser) Clouser. John Keller died in 1854. His wife, Esther (Clouser) Keller, was born in 1810, and died Oct. 14, 1908, and was buried at New Jerusalem Church. She was a descendant of Johan Wilhelm Miller, of Oley, who came from Ettlingen, Baden, Germany, in 1751, and located near Griesemersville, in Oley, Berks Co., Pa. His children were as follows: Catharine, born in 1751, m. Joseph Dilaplaine; Hannah, born in 1756, m. George Clouser, and died in 1829 (she was the grandmother of Mrs. Esther Keller); Rosina, born in 1758, m. John Stapleton, of Oley, and died in 1833; Mary m. William Richards, and died in 1838 (she was the grandmother of Lewis Richards, lawyer, of Reading, who survives); Rebecca died in Huntingdon, Pa.; George, born in 1768, died in 1833 (he has descendants living in Oley township and Pottstown); Eve, born in 1764, died young; and another daughter, name not known, died young.

To John and Esther (Clouser) Keller were born thirteen children of whom nine left descendants, namely: William, deceased, the eldest son and for many years the organist at Spies' Church, had seven children; Jacob, the youngest son, and for many years a resident of Springfield, Ohio, has three children; Daniel, of Chatham, Ill., has five children; Samuel C., who lives on the old homestead in Rockland, has five children; Jeremiah C., of Rockland, has ten children, mentioned below; Sarah, deceased, m. William Youse, and had seven children; Caroline, widow of Alfred Brumbach, has eight children; Amanda m. Daniel A. Yoder (both now deceased), and they had five children; and Col. David C., of Reading, now deceased, had one son. At Mrs. Keller's death she was survived by five children, fifty-one grandchildren, eighty-five great-grandchildren and twenty great-great-grandchildren.

Jeremiah C. Keller, son of John and Esther (Clouser), was born on the old Keller homestead. He attended the school in Rockland township, known as Keller's school. He was quite young when his father died, and he and his brothers worked for their mother on the farm. When the Civil war had lasted so long that drafting was necessary to recruit the army, he substituted for William Hilbert, serving in Company K, 167th P. V. I., for nine months. At the expiration of his term of enlistment, he re-enlisted on his own account and became second lieutenant in Company G, 198th P. V. I. This regiment was recruited under the direction and aid of the Union League Association of Philadelphia with Horatio G. Sickel as Colonel. It was assigned to the 1st Brigade, 1st Division, 5th Army Corps. Their first engagement was at Peeble's Farm, Sept. 30, 1864. They destroyed the Weldon railroad, were engaged at Hatcher's Run, and were under continual fire until they came to Boydton Plank Road, where they had an engagement with the enemy known as Lewis' Farm, Va. After the surrender of Lee, the Confederate General Ewell, in speaking of this battle, told General Chamberlain that the 198th Pa., supported by the 185th New York, and one battery of the 5th U. S. Artillery, were fighting no less than three brigades of the best Confederate troops (Bates Hist. of Pennsylvania Volunteers, Vol. V. pp. 464-5). Mr. Keller received a gunshot wound in his right leg on March 29, 1865, at Lewis' Farm. After two months' treatment in the hospitals at City Point and Georgetown, D. C., he was discharged, May 29, 1865. While a patient at City Point, he had the honor of shaking hands with President Lincoln. When he returned from the war he lived with his mother until he recovered his strength. He was very active in the ore mining business in Longswamp township. Mr. Keller married Mary Kline, daughter of Jonathan R. and Mary (Guinther) Kline, and they became the parents of ten children: (1) Irvin K. m. Lizzie Keller, and had two children, Clarence (died young) and Esther May. (2) James Ira m. Annie Bonenkemper, of Springfield, Ohio, and had two children, James Ira, Jr., and a daughter (died in infancy). He m. (second) Cora Pierson. (3) Eli Jeremiah, unmarried, lives at Springfield, Ohio. (4) Katharyne m. Dr. William Fisher, of No. 151 West Buttonwood street, Reading, and has four children. (5) David C. (6) Mamie G. m. Peter Steckel, and has three children. (7) John G. m. Annie Heffner. (8) Clara A. m. William Deysher, of Reading. (9) Emma Sevilla and (10) Ella May are at home.

Mrs. Mary (Kline) Keller's grandparents were David and Catharine (Reber) Kline. David Kline was born in Maxatawny township, and his wife near New Jerusalem, in Rockland township. Their seven children were: David; Reuben; Benjamin; Jonathan R.; Leah m. (first) Anthony Heffner, and (second) Solomon Grim, and had a son, Reuben Grim; Catharine m. Benjamin Luckenbill, of Lenhartsville, and had two sons, James and Edwin; and Julian m. John Bubenmoyer. Jonathan R. Kline, son of David, was born Jan. 20, 1799, and his wife, Mary Guinther, daughter of Jonathan and Mary (Hoffman) Guinther, on Jan. 25, 1804. They had nine children: (1) Jacob died Oct. 10, 1866, and is buried in the cemetery adjoining the New Jerusalem Church. He had a general merchandise store and was postmaster at New Jerusalem at the time of his death. He m. Elizabeth Bartz, and their only child, Ellen, m. John Frazer, and had seven children. (2) David m. Maria Pott, of Bellefonte, Centre Co., Pa., and their children were: Mary, Katie, John, Millie and David. (3) Charles m. Mary Fegley. No children. (4) Jonathan G. m. Elmina Haas, and their only child Emma, m. William Adams, and has four children. (5) Sarah m. Reuben Mertz, and had five children. (6) William m. Mary Barto, had two children, and he died Dec. 19, 1871, and is buried at New Jerusalem cemetery. (7) Augustus m. Katie Hull, of Centre county, and they are now living at Williamsport, Pa. They have no children. (8) Mary m. Jeremiah C. Keller, and had ten children. (9) James, of Kansas City, Kans., m. (first) Rebecca Welder, had three children, and m. (second) Sarah Welder.

David C. Keller, member of the firm of Keller Bros., proprietors of the United States Hotel, Reading, is a native of Berks county, born in Longswamp township, June 16, 1876, and a son of Jeremiah C. and Mary (Kline) Keller. At the age of seventeen his school-days terminated, which was about the customary age fixed for the average country boy to "quit" and take to the furrow and the flax field. Instead the young man went to Reading and engaged with William Kuhns to learn how to make and bake bread. He remained with Mr. Kuhns for two and a half years and received his diploma. Since arriving at maturity Mr. Keller has been most of the time employed in various capacities that would acquaint him with the operating and successful management of present-day hotels. His knowledge of the hotel business has been acquired through his employment at the Bissinger Café, Hotel Penn and the American House, all of Reading, and all good. Thus equipped, he, with his brother John G., on the 12th day of April, 1909, leased of the Hawley Estate, the United States Hotel at Nos. 427-429 Penn Square, and on this date the Keller Bros. began their first business venture as conductors of their own affairs.

David C. Keller has fraternal recognition in these several societies: Reading Order of Moose, Juniata Tribe Red Men No. 74, Antietam Club, Family Circle and the 98 Social Circle. As to political parties he is without attachment.

John G. Keller, son of Jeremiah C., was born in Longswamp township, Feb. 25, 1881. Soon after his birth his parents moved to Maxatawny township, and later to Rockland township. Mr. Keller assisted his father on the old homestead until he was twelve years old, and then worked on the farms of John Youse and Benjamin Shutz. After attending the school in Rockland township, he entered the State Normal School at Kutztown, at the age of seventeen, and he graduated two years later. He taught one term in Marion township, and two in Cumru township. In April, 1902, he entered Schissler's Business College at Norristown, Pa., where he took a course in shorthand and typewriting, completing his course in November. After being employed as stenographer for the wholesale house of Gassler & Starr Company, No. 509 Commerce street, Philadelphia, dealers in carriage robes, horse dressing, etc., he resigned to accept a more lucrative position in the office of the Accountant of the Shipping & Freight Department, P. & R. R. Co., Port Richmond, Philadelphia. He worked as stenographer in this office for eighteen months and then resigned. On April 1, 1905, he accepted a position with his brother

Irvin K., in the hotel business, but April 12, 1909, he, with his brother David C., leased the United States Hotel, and they are now successfully conducting it.

Mr. Keller married in 1905 Annie Heffner, daughter of Ephraim and Catharine Heffner, of New Jerusalem, and they have two children: Ethel Josephine, born March 11, 1906; and Eli Jeremiah, Aug. 23, 1907.

FRANK H. SCHMECK, ex-sheriff of Berks county, Pa., who is now residing at No. 1160 North Ninth street, Reading, was born in Alsace township, Berks county, son of Henry and Mary (Hartman) Schmeck.

Samuel Schmeck, grandfather of Frank H., was a native of Alsace township, where he became a very prosperous agriculturist, owning much property at the time of his death. He and his wife were members of the Lutheran Church. In politics Mr. Schmeck was a Democrat. They had the following children: John; Samuel; Henry; Susan, who m. a Mr. Deturck; and a daughter who m. a Mr. Eshbach.

Henry Schmeck, like his father, lived in Alsace township, where he was a prosperous farmer, operating the farm formerly owned by Samuel Schmeck. He died on a farm in Ruscombmanor township. He was a Lutheran in religious belief, while his wife, Mary Hartman, belonged to the Reformed denomination. They had three children: Valentine, Washington and Frank H.

Frank H. Schmeck was reared in his native locality, and received his education in the public schools. After the expiration of his term in office as sheriff of Berks county, he operated a coal yard and stone quarry, also engaging in farming in Amity township, as well as having a property in Maiden-creek township, but is now living retired. In 1898 Mr. Schmeck joined Reading Lodge, No. 62, F. & A. M. In the spring of 1907 Mr. Schmeck was elected a member of the council of Reading from the Sixteenth ward.

Mr. Schmeck was married to Catherine Hickman, and the following children were born to this union: Henry m. Annie Heffner; Oscar (deceased); Agnes m. William Bush; Katie m. Elmer Leader; Sadie m. Charles Eibach; S. Mabel died in Dec., 1907; Annie m. William Matz; Grover; Laura; Minerva; Alice; Franklin; and two died in infancy. In religious belief the family are Lutherans.

GEORGE BERKHOLD, who is one of the many sons of Germany who have been successful in establishing substantial homes in this country, is a native of Oberamt Heidenheim, Wurtemberg, Germany, where he was born Nov. 8, 1832, son of Georg and Catharine (Weisender) Berkhold.

Georg Berkhold, Sr., was a farmer in Wurtemberg, Germany, where he owned several small tracts of land. He m. Catharine Weisender, and to them were born two sons, viz.: George; and Michael, who was a weaver in the Fatherland.

George Berkhold attended the schools of his native land from the age of six to about the age of fourteen years, after which he learned the blacksmith's trade. He served an apprenticeship of three years at this trade in Stammheim, from which place he came to America in 1853, landing at New York in the latter part of May of that year. He came directly to Reading, Pa., and has since made this city his home, with the exception of a few years spent in Milwaukee, whence he moved in 1883. He was a good mechanic and was employed for many years at Sternbergh's, his work being well appreciated by his employers.

By industry and economy, Mr. Berkhold gradually became possessed of some means, and since 1901, he has lived retired enjoying the comforts earned by a useful and well-spent life. He owns a valuable business house at No. 1055 North Ninth street, Reading.

Mr. Berkhold was married in 1857 to Magdalena Henkel, born in Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany, Aug. 20, 1828, daughter of Jost Henkel, of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Berkhold had four children, viz.: (1) Henry, a cigarmaker, lives in Warsaw, Wis. (2) George is also a cigarmaker and lives at Warsaw. (3) Annie m. Charles Bossler, of Reading. (4) Henrietta m. (first) Daniel Schroeder, of Reading and they had a daughter Gertrude, who m. Frank Dersh, of Canton, Ohio, and they now reside in Columbus, Ohio. Henrietta m. (second) in Milwaukee, Wis., Mr. Haas, of Cleveland, Ohio. She died at Toledo, Ohio, in February, 1907. The Berkhold family are members of St. Luke's Lutheran Church of Reading, of which Rev. Frank Huntzinger is the pastor. Mrs. Berkhold is a sincere and kindly woman, and has been an able aid to her husband in the management of his business affairs.

TYRUS B. DUBBS, city freight agent for the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, with an office at No. 25 North Sixth street, was born April 5, 1855, in Bethel township, son of Isaac and Sabilla (Beshore) Dubbs.

Isaac Dubbs was a farmer in Bethel township, Berks county, until 1865, in which year he removed to Tremont, where he turned his attention to carpentering and joining. Here he remained for several years, when he removed to Pine Grove, and still later to Pottstown, where he now resides, living retired. Although an aged man Mr. Dubbs is very well preserved, and is in possession of all his faculties. His wife passed away April 17, 1906, aged seventy-four years. To Isaac Dubbs and wife were born three children, namely: Rebecca, Tyrus B., and one that died in infancy. The family are members of the Evangelical Church.

Tyrus B. Dubbs was educated in the common schools, and when a young man engaged as a clerk in the general store conducted by W. H. Wheeler, who later became a noted minister in the Mennonite Church. Mr. Dubbs removed to Pottstown with his parents, and followed clerking until 1878, when he accepted a position with the Philadelphia & Reading Company, as clerk in the freight office at that place. There he remained until April, 1889, when he was appointed traveling freight agent of the road, with headquarters in Reading under Robert B. Gordon. He continued in that capacity until he was made district freight agent with office at Harrisburg, being made city freight agent in February, 1898. Since that time he has made his home in Reading, where he has made many warm friends. Mr. Dubbs is a member of Reading Lodge, No. 115, B. P. O. E. Politically he is independent, and he and his family are connected with the Evangelical Church.

Mr. Dubbs married Susie L. Leysher, a native of Boyertown, Pa., and two children were born to this union: Rebecca and Jennie S.

THOMAS STRAUSER was born July 3, 1861, in Perry township, son of Reuben and Polly (Adams) Strauser.

The immigrant ancestor of this family, Conrad Strauser, owned 2500 acres of land originally, and was well-to-do. His son also named Conrad was a prominent man in Perry township, a leading member of Zion's Lutheran Church, and a well-to-do and highly respected citizen. His buildings stood near where the present buildings of the late Cornelius Strauser's homestead are now located. Benneville Strauser, son of Conrad, was born Oct. 27, 1768, and died Aug. 28, 1847. In 1803 he was married to Rosina Hummel, born Dec. 26, 1778, who died Feb. 12, 1869. They were married for more than forty-four years, and had eleven children as follows: Isaac; Jacob; Jeremiah; Benneville; Rachel, m. to Jacob Miller; Polly, m. to John Kramer; Katie, m. to Jesse Mengel; Sally, m. to Frederick Ritters; Leah, m. to Simon Dreibelbis; and two whose names are unknown. Benneville Strauser was a successful farmer and well known citizen in Windsor (now Perry) township, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

Reuben Strauser, of Perry township, who was engaged as a building contractor all of his life, was born in 1826, and died in 1882. He was married (first) to Polly Adams, daughter of Jacob Adams, of Richmond township, and granddaughter of Peter Adam, who was a son of Anthony Adam, who came from Germany. Ten children were born to this union: Wilson m. Mary Dries; Cornelius m. Sallie Clouser; Alfred m. Harriet Himmelreich; Emanuel m. Sallie Kreamer; Thomas; Mary m. James Becker; and two boys and two girls died young. Mr. Strauser's second marriage was to Mary Woomer, and to this union were born five children: Rufus is single; Catherine m. Peter Bloffer; Ella m. Thomas Olinger; and two boys, Jacob and Franklin, died young.

Thomas Strauser received his education in the township schools and was reared on the farm, learning the trade of carpenter under the tuition of his father. He followed his trade in the vicinity of his father's home for three years, at the end of which time he went to Reading and worked as a journeyman for two years. With this experience he started in business as a building contractor, and he carried on this occupation for eleven years, putting up in Reading during this time over 1,000 dwellings for numerous parties. He then removed to Pittsburg for the purpose of carrying on his operations more extensively, and within two years superintended the erection of three hundred dwellings, but not liking the "Iron City of the West," he returned to Reading, and concluding to retire from the business, he purchased the "Metropolitan House" at Shoemakersville, taking possession April 2, 1906. He immediately made extensive improvements, costing over $5,000, and it became one of the largest, best-equipped and best-conducted hotels in the county. Mr. Strauser is now located in Spokane, Washington.

In 1882 Mr. Strauser married Catherine High, daughter of Aaron High, of Reading, and there have been four children born to this union: Beulah; Oran, an enterprising young carpenter of Spokane, Wash., and the owner and operator of a 200-acre farm; Ada, and Carroll. His family are members of the Lutheran Church.

BROWNMILLER. The Brownmiller (or Braunmiller, Braumiller, or Braumuller) family in America had its origin in Johannes Braunmiller, born about 1712, who emigrated to this country with the Palatinate emigrants on the ship "Samuel," Hugh Percy captain, from Rotterdam, landing at Philadelphia Aug. 27, 1739. Tradition says that Johannes settled in New Jersey, where he reared a large family. In New York City there is a noted piano manufacturer who spells his name Braumuller, and in Landau, Germany, is a business man who spells the name Braumuller.

Luttwick Braunmiller (Ludwig Brownmiller), son of the emigrant Johannes, crossed the upper Delaware river into Pennsylvania, and located in Northampton county before the Revolutionary war. From that place members of the family moved to Hokendauqua, Lehigh county, and later to the vicinity of Lenhartsville, Berks county, and still later to Delaware county, Ohio, where many of the family now reside. Luttwick Brownmiller served as a soldier in the Revolutionary war. In 1781 he was a member of the company of Capt. Frederick Kerns. From this time on the family has been represented in every war in which the country was involved.

Nicholas Brownmiller, M. D., son of Luttwick, lived near Lenhartsville, Berks county, and owned what is now called the Yenser farm. On this farm is a private burial ground, where he and many of the family are interred. He owned a very fine medical library, which after his death was sold at public sale. His children were: Moses and Josiah, of Hamburg; and Nicholas, of Pottsville.

Moses had the following children: Aaron, Moses, Charles, and Lizzie; Josiah: John, James F., Charles, Rev. A. W. (a prominent divine of the United Evangelical Church, an able speaker, and pastor of the First Church, Reading, since 1907), George, Emma, Nora, and Susan; and Nicholas, of Pottsville: Nicholas and Aaron.

Frederick Brownmiller, son of Luttwick, lived in earlier life near Bath, Northampton county, where his son George and perhaps several of his older children were born. From here he moved to Hokendauqua, Lehigh county, and in 1814 to Lenhartsville. About 1840 he moved to Delaware, Ohio, where he passed the rest of his life, and where he and his wife, Barbara Nolf, died and are buried. Their children were: George; Joseph; Daniel; Reuben, of Delaware, Ohio, who lost three sons in the Civil war; Samuel, who died while serving his country in the Civil war, and was buried alongside the Mississippi, in Louisiana; Jeremiah, who moved from Delaware, Ohio, to Illinois; Rev. Benneville (or Bennewell), a minister in the Cincinnati Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who served churches at different times at Cleveland, Delaware, Columbus, and Dayton; Peter, of New Carlisle, Ohio, an uncompromising Democrat, who reared six sons; and a daughter. The early members of the family were all Lutherans.

George Brownmiller, eldest son of Frederick, was born near Bath, Northampton county, April 1, 1804, and died in Berks county, Feb. 24, 1896. For ten years he was a school teacher, having charge of schools at Drehersville, Schuylkill county, Pa., Dunkel's and Bern Churches, Berks county, Pa. By trade he was a stone mason, but this he followed only a few years, when he became a shoemaker and finally a tombstone cutter, organist and singing-master. In his day he was regarded as an excellent musician and vocalist, having a full, strong voice. He conducted the old time singing schools in upper Berks county, and was long the popular organist and chorister ("foresinger") at St. Paul's (Smoke) Church, in Windsor township, and at Dunkel's Church, in Greenwich township, and for nineteen years at Bern Church, in Bern township. It was the custom in those days for the organist to be the tombstone cutter. While living in Bern township, he served many years as tax collector, and he also held a similar office after his removal to Oley township. He married Anna Foose, born April 8, 1808, died January 4, 1883, daughter of Elias and Elizabeth (Yeiser) Foose. Their children were: (1) George W., born Aug. 31, 1827, in Greenwich township, went when sixteen years of age to visit his uncle Reuben, in Delaware county, Ohio, and while there he enlisted in the 2d U. S. Cavalry, serving in all twenty-two years in the regular army. He was with McClellan, Grant, Lee and Scott in the Mexican war, and participated in the battles at Tobasco, Vera Cruz, Palo Alto, Buena Vista, Cerro Gordo, Cherubusco, Chepultepec and San Pascual, and was with General Scott when Mexico was captured. He was stationed at Vancouver, Wash., when the war broke out. He was twice wounded in battle, and died at Vancouver when seventy-three years of age. His wife preceded him in death about four years. They had no children. (2) Elizabeth (1831-1835), (3) Lewis (1834-1835), and (4) Leander (1834-1835, twin to Lewis) all died of scarlet fever, and are buried at Dunkel's Church, in Greenwich township. (5) Isabella, born June 26, 1838, at Bern Church, married Anthony Burnhauser, who served in the Civil war, and they both died in New York City. They had four sons (6) Henry H. and (7) Franklin are mentioned below

Mrs. Elizabeth (Yeiser) Foose, the mother of Anna Foose and wife of George Brownmiller, was born in New York, and with three other children came to Berks county. Her father, mother, and two children were murdered by the Tuscarora Indians in New York State, while the father was in the field plowing. The four children who escaped were in the woods when the Indians made their murderous attack, and seeing what was happening they fled through the forest to an old sawmill where the oldest buried the three younger ones in a pile of saw-dust and then ran on until the owner of the sawmill appeared He took all four to a public house, where they were cared for. After coming to Berks county Elizabeth lived as a servant in the family named Zacharias, near Kissinger's Bridge, in Bern township.

Henry H. Brownmiller, son of George, and now a prominent citizen of Schuylkill county, where he is serving as poor director, was born in Berks county, Jan. 23, 1842. He was but eleven years old when he left home to engage in farm work, for seven years being employed on the Hiester farm in Bern township by Johann Christ. For one year he drove a horse on the tow-path of the Schuylkill canal. In July, 1861, he enlisted in the Union army, becoming a member of Company L, 1st Pa. Cavalry, and served until January, 1863, when he re-enlisted for three more years and served until the last week of July, 1865, when he was discharged from Mt. Pleasant Hospital, Washington, D. C., for disability. He had participated in sixteen regular engagements, and was thrice wounded. At the battle of Gettysburg Companies G and L carried the dispatches from Frederick City to Gettysburg, a distance of twenty miles. Mr. Brownmiller at this time held the rank of sergeant, and all the dispatches passed through his hands. He was with General Grant in the Richmond raid.

Mr. Brownmiller had made a success of teaching before the war. In 1858 he taught his first term at Bloomsburg, a small village in Centre township. His own education was all acquired in the public schools and in Oley Academy. After the war, he taught at Bernville, where he is pleasantly remembered to this day. Dr. Samuel A Baer, then county superintendent, always declared that Mr. Brownmiller was one of the ablest teachers of the county. In 1878 he went to Schuylkill county, and taught the Orwigsburg high school for four years. In 1881 he was elected principal of the Frackville schools and there he continued until 1886, when he was elected principal of the Port Carbon schools. He returned to Orwigsburg in 1888, and continued there until 1900. In 1898, while still teaching, he was elected a justice of the peace at Orwigsburg, and this office he still holds. In 1905 he was elected a director of the poor for three years, at the end of which time he was re-elected with a majority of 3,500 votes. While teaching at Bernville, he also filled the office of revenue assessor of the Sixteenth District of Berks county, having been appointed under General Grant's administration. After filling the office for eighteen months he resigned. For three and a half years he was postmaster at Frackville, and under President McKinley's first administration was assistant postmaster at Orwigsburg. He holds a teacher's permanent certificate. Mr. Brownmiller is a man of strong personality and dignified bearing. He is an able public speaker, and is in demand at public gatherings, especially those where the veterans of the Civil war assemble. Fraternally he is a member of the American Mechanics, and the P. O. S. of A., having joined the latter in 1868.

In September, 1864, Mr. Henry H. Brownmiller, having secured a furlough for that purpose, was married to Elizabeth Kline, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Wagner) Kline, of Bernville. To this union was born an only daughter, Alda Jane, who married John Heckman, a letter-carrier in New York, and died at the age of thirty-five years, leaving no children. Mr. and Mrs. Brownmiller have reared two children, one, Thomas Acker, now living in Philadelphia; and Elsie I. Hoffman, who is married and living at Orwigsburg.

Franklin Brownmiller, youngest son of George, was born Sept. 20, 1843, and died Aug. 15, 1896, at Friedensburg. He was in the employ of Dr. Bertolet, of Oley, for fifteen years, but later in life followed auctioneering. His widow, Mary (Conrad) Brownmiller, now resides at Friedensburg.

Joseph Brownmiller, son of Frederick and Barbara (Nolf), was born Oct. 23, 1807, at Hokendauqua, Lehigh county, Pa., and was educated in the common schools and in his youth learned the shoemaker's trade. He was organist and chorister at Klopp's Church, Lebanon county, Pa., for more than forty years. He died April 7, 1895, aged eighty-seven years, five months, and fourteen days. He married Hannah Stein, of Greenwich, Berks county, who died May 1, 1877, aged sixty-four years, six months and twenty-six days. They had ten children: Helena; Maria, m. to Gideon Botz; Esther, m. to Eli Wolever; Amelia, m. to Samuel F. Steiner; Joel; Susanna, m. to Jonathan Miller; Amanda, m. to Isaac K. Wolf; Emma, m. to John H. Kreiser; Ephraim S.; and Thomas Daniel The family were Lutherans in religious belief.

Rev. Ephraim S. Brownmiller, Ph. D., D. D., a prominent Lutheran clergyman, son of Joseph and Hannah (Stein), was born at Hamlin, Lebanon county, Oct. 5, 1853. On May 28, 1868, he was confirmed a member of the Lutheran church, by the Rev. H. Giesz, at Klopp's Church, Lebanon county. He received his early education in both public and private schools. In 1868 he became organist of Christ Church, Stouchsburg, and attended the Stouchsburg Academy until 1870. In the spring of 1870 he entered Palatinate College, Myerstown, and the next fall registered as a student at Swatara Institute, Jonestown. During 1871 and 1872 he taught schools near Mt. Aetna and Wintersville, Berks county. In the spring of the latter year he entered Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa., from which institution he was graduated in 1875. In 1874 he supplied as a student Union Deposit and Sand Hill Lutheran Churches, Dauphin county. In 1875 he was ordained by the Lutheran Synod of East Pennsylvania, at Reading, after which he was called as pastor by the Union Deposit parish, consisting of Union Deposit, Hill, Sandy Hollow, and Wenrich, where he remained for six years. In 1881, he took charge of Ephrata parish, in Lancaster county, consisting of Ephrata, Swamp, Schoeneck, Lincoln, and Reed's, when he united with the Ministerium of Pennsylvania. In 1889 he removed to Reading, as the successor to the late Rev. T. T. Iaeger, where he still labors with unbounded success. This parish consists of Oley, Spies's, Shalter's, Kissinger's, Bern, Reed's, and St. Mark's, Reading, Lutheran Churches. He is the founder of St. Mark's Church, organizing it in 1889, which now numbers more than 600 members. Beginning in 1895, the Rev. Dr. Brownmiller pursued a post-graduate course at Lebanon Valley College, Annville, Pa., and other institutions, which resulted in the conferring of the degree of Ph. D., and later that of D. D.

Dr. Brownmiller is a Democrat, and was first appointed to office from the Twelfth ward to fill an unexpired term on the Reading board of education, and was elected in 1903 and re-elected in 1907, still serving efficiently at the present time on the Finance and Building committees. He is broad and liberal minded, and is greatly interested in educational affairs, and in all measures that tend toward good and clean government. He is chaplain of the Berks County Prison, which position he has held for the past thirteen years. He is one of the most widely known and eminent divines of Berks county, and is a fluent and able speaker. Dr. Brownmiller is especially strong as an exegetist, and is in constant demand as a public speaker. Several European trips especially fitted him for this work. While pastor at Union Deposit, he was married to Minnie Anna Zimmerman, and their children are: Rev. Martin Luther, a graduate of Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa., who was ordained May 22, 1904, and is now his father's assistant; Sadie Florence, m. to Prof. Samuel H. Ziegler, an instructor in the high school for Boys, Reading; Violet Mabel, m. to Richard R. Dry, Buffalo, N. Y.; Mary Alice, a music teacher; Miriam Ruth; Frederick Joseph; Mildred Helen, at home; and Laura May and Charles Howard, deceased.

Daniel Brownmiller, son of Frederick, was born in Northampton county, died at Prospect, Ohio, and was buried there. He was a tailor by trade, and lived northeast of Lenhartsville, at Round Top, for some years, and in Albany township. He owned the first farm east of Lenhartsville, on the Klinesville road. In religious faith he was a Lutheran. His death occurred while on a visit to his son Emanuel, at Prospect, Ohio. His wife, whose maiden name was Stoyer, is buried at Dunkel's Church. Their children were: Emanuel, a tailor at Prospect, Ohio; Christina, m. to Joseph Fahringer; Amelia, m. to a Fisher; Joseph S.; Samuel, who died young; Isabella, m. to Benjamin Oldt; and Henry, of Kutztown.

Joseph S. Brownmiller, son of Daniel, was born Dec. 9, 1831, in the vicinity of Lenhartsville, and died June 13, 1896. He was a carpenter by trade, but followed different occupations, for a number of years being a stationary engineer at a sawmill in Luzerne county, Pa. For some time he was in the employ of the Schuylkill Navigation Co., and for six years he made dynamite at Nesquehoning, Pa. He died at his home in Shoemakersville, where he had built his own residence, and is buried in the Lutheran cemetery there. He was a Democrat in politics, and a Lutheran in religious faith. He was a member of Company B, unassigned regiment, during the Civil war, and was on duty near Washington, D. C.

Joseph S. Brownmiller was married (first) to Susanna S. Madeira, born Oct. 15, 1829, died April 3, 1887, daughter of Samuel Madeira. Their children were: Charles M.; Leonora, who died in infancy; Sarah Ann, m. to Joel K. Weidman, of Shoemakersville; and John W., of Philadelphia.

Charles M. Brownmiller, son of Joseph S., and a lumber merchant and dealer in tobacco and cigars, at Shoemakersville, was born Nov. 19, 1854, in that place, on the Madeira homestead. He was educated in the common schools and at the Keystone State Normal School, Kutztown, and was licensed to teach by Dr. S. A. Baer. He taught six terms in Perry township, and in 1879 one term in the Independent School District, at Leighton, Mahaska Co., Iowa. In 1880 he returned to Pennsylvania, and again taught in Perry township. He next drove a Philadelphia & Reading station team on the Schuylkill canal two summers, after which he served a three-year apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade under Samuel Williams. Going to Pottstown, at the end of that time, he worked there as an iron marker in the Philadelphia Bridge Works for five months. Under John Foreman, master mechanic for the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company, he began framing bridges, and followed this for several months, when Mr. Foreman took him into his office as chief clerk, until 1885, when he established a lumber business at Shoemakersville, which he still conducts. He was elected president of the Board of Trade of Shoemakersville and still holds the office. In the fall of 1908 he was appointed secretary of the Farmers' Mutual Assistance and Fire Insurance Company, of Berks county, and this responsible position he continues to fill. In politics he is a Democrat, but he has never cared for office. He repeatedly refused to be a candidate. He and his family are Lutheran members of the Shoemakersville Union Church.

In 1894 Mr. Brownmiller was married to Anna L. Warmkessel, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Merkel) Warmkessel, of Maxatawny township, and they have three sons and one daughter, namely: Charles Clare, Arlan Joseph, Lorin Thomas and Mary Ann Susanna. Fraternally he is a member of Ontelaunee Tribe No. 312, I. O. R. M., Hamburg; Resolute Council, No. 27, O. of I. A., and Meade Camp, No. 16, Sons of Veterans, of Reading.

DUNKELBERGER. The Dunkelberger family had its early home in Wurtemberg, Germany, whence came Clement (or Clementz), Daniel and John. They sailed from Rheinfels, on the English ship "Molhouse," landing at Philadelphia Aug. 28, 1728, and located a little north of what is now Hamburg, in Berks county. Clement Dunkelberger immediately paid tax to the English crown. When he died in 1782, his home was in Windsor township. His will made Feb. 12, 1776, was probated April 8, 1782, and is on record in Will Book B, page 38. At the time the will was made his wife Anna Maria was still living. Their children were: Clemens, who obtained the plantation, Catharine, m. to Andrew Winiger; Mrs. John Deck; John; Frederick; Christopher; Elizabeth, m. to Michael Deck; Philip; Sevila; Magdalena and Dorotha. It is also said that Clementz Dunkelberger had a son Daniel, but if so, his name does not appear among those mentioned in the will.

In 1762 one Peter Dunkelberger died in Windsor township, Berks county. His will, witnessed by Philip Kalbach and Jeremiae Schappelle, is on record in Will Book I, page 91. Peter and his wife Elizabeth had two sons, and an item in the will reads as follows: "My son Johannes when he is 14 years old, shall learn a trade; and when 21 years old he shall take possession of my plantation." The other son was John Peter, who probably was small when his father died.

Peter Dunkelberger (probably the John Peter mentioned in the will of Peter Dunkelberger who died in 1762) lived in Centre township, where he was engaged in farming. He is buried at Belleman's Church. His will, probated in 1854, is on record in Will Book 10, page 148. He married Magdalena Bohn, and they had these children: John; Jacob; Betzy, m. to Michael Mitchell; Daniel; Polly, m. to a Mitchell; and Katie, m. to Jonas Zweizig (their son is the well known Rev. B. D. Zweizig).

John Dunkelberger, son of Peter and Magdalena, was born in Centre township, and died in Upper Bern township in 1898, aged eighty-six years. He is buried at St. Michael's Church, of which he was a Lutheran member. He was a stone mason by trade. His wife was Eliza Lindenmuth, daughter of Samuel Lindenmuth. They had six sons and six daughters, as follows: Soriah, Levi, Fietta, John L., Mary Ann, William, Samuel, Lovina, Catharine, James, and a son and a daughter who died young.

John L. Dunkelberger, son of John and Eliza, was born in July, 1835, in Tilden. At the age of sixteen he learned the shoemaker's trade, and this he followed two years. He then spent two years in the manufacture of bricks at Leesport, after which he began farming in Upper Bern township, tenanting five years. He bought a small farm near Bern Station, which he sold after four years and moved to near Hamburg. At the end of a year he bought a farm in Bethel township, which he sold after four years and bought another in Tulpehocken. This he farmed for another four years, when he sold it and for two years farmed the Daniel Dietrich farm in Centre, and for one year the John Kline farm. He next bought a farm near Centreport, and while living there purchased another of 136 acres near Garfield. Selling the former he bought a dwelling at Centreport, where he lived for five years. At the end of that time he moved to Reading, first living on Pear street, but later buying his home at No. 206 North Front street. He owns a number of houses in Reading and in Bernville.

On March 24, 1855, Mr. Dunkelberger married Mary K. Zimmerman, who was born Sept. 12, 1838, daughter of Daniel Z. Zimmerman, a farmer of Centre township, and his wife Mary Keller. On March 24, 1905, they celebrated their golden wedding, surrounded by children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Their children were: Franklin Z.; Ellen Lovina, deceased wife of Moses Baer; Ellen Celesa; Mary Ellen, m. to Paul Kauffman; Dr. Nathaniel Z.; Ellen Amanda, m. to James W. Klopp; and Jonathan Z. Mr. and Mrs. Dunkelberger are members of the United Evangelical Church of Reading, in which he has held a number of offices.

Dr. Nathaniel Z. Dunkelberger, son of John L., was born in Bethel Aug. 6, 1864. He is a graduate of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, and has in addition taken special courses in diseases of the eye, nose and throat, and in other lines that have seemed to him most important. He received a prize of fifty dollars for standing first in his class, and a special diploma in surgery. He ranks high among the Berks county physicians, and has a large practice at Kutztown and vicinity. He has long been an active worker in the cause of education as a member of the Kutztown school board, serving two years as secretary of the board.

John Dunkelberger, a grandson of the emigrant Clement, was born near Hamburg, Berks county, in 1740. In 1780 he was a widower, and with his son George moved to the lower part of Mahanoy, Northumberland county, where he built the first grist mill and stone house.

George Dunkelberger, son of John, as stated, accompanied his father to Mahanoy in 1780. In 1800 he married there, and about the time his first child, Jacob, was born in 1802, removed to Mahantango.

Jacob Dunkelberger, son of George, born in 1802, was married in Mahantango to Catharine Maurer.

Moses Dunkelberger, first son of Jacob, was born in Mahantango in 1829, now lives at Hegins, Schuylkill county, with his son James H. Another son, R. B., is a prominent business man in Reading; and the only daughter, Jane, married John H. Schrope, of Hegins.

About 1780 one branch of Dunkelbergers went to Perry county, and some of these later went to Niagara Falls, N. Y. Another branch moved from Hamburg to Oley, near Reading.

Joseph Dunkelberger was a resident of Ricktown, in what was then Bern township, where he was born about 1790, and died about 1842, and is buried at Bern church as is his wife Elizabeth Sonnen, who died in 1826. He was a laborer, and fencemaker. To Joseph and Elizabeth (Sonnen) Dunkelberger were born these children: (1) Daniel, of Bern township, m. Eve Trautman, and died young, leaving three children: (2) Benneville, of Bern township, m. a Schoppel, and they had children, Samuel, Cyrus and Louisa. (3) Christina, born Dec. 3, 1820, m. Samuel B. Ruth (1819-1905), had nine children, and lived at No. 1232 Chestnut street, Reading. (4) Samuel, born 1825. He lived and died near Leesport, in Bern township. He m. Mary Hafer. (5) Catharine, born 1828, died 1844.

Samuel Dunkelberger, son of Joseph, born in 1825, was a well known farmer in Centre township. He died near Leesport, and is buried at Belleman's Church. He married Mary Hafer, who bore him ten children, namely: Frank, Catharine, Israel, Aaron, Howard H., Samuel, Emma, Mary and Joseph (twins), and Ella.

Howard H. Dunkelberger, the popular proprietor of the "Half-Way House" on the Bernville road, in Bern township, was born Jan. 8, 1860, in the township in which he now resides, son of Samuel and Mary. He attended the public schools of his district, and worked for his father till the latter's death. He then worked among the farmers, spending one year in Penn township, and six years in Bern township. In 1900 he began in his present business, and now is one of the popular hotel men in his section, having the leading traveling trade between Reading and Bernville.

Mr. Dunkelberger married Miss Angeline Schrack, daughter of Daniel Schrack, of Bern township. They have one daughter, Annie V., who is at home. Mr. Dunkelberger belongs to the K. G. E. He is a Lutheran member of Bern church and in politics is a Democrat.

HENRY H. ROHRBACH, secretary of the Berks County Sabbath School Association in the district of Longswamp, District and Hereford townships and the borough of Topton, was born in District township, Berks county, April 28, 1881, son of James F. and Fianna (Hess) Rohrbach.

James F. Rohrbach, his father, was born in Pike township, this county, son of Benjamin Rohrbach, and is now engaged in farming two miles northeast of Pikeville. He married Fianna Hess, daughter of David R. and Lydia (Sterner) Hess, of District township.

At the age of four years Henry H. Rohrbach entered the public schools, and he continued as a student therein until he was nineteen, for seven terms not missing a day. In 1901 he entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, and there became a member of the Keystone Literary Society. In 1903 he was licensed to teach by county superintendent E. M. Rapp, and since then he has been engaged, in turn, at Frey's school, District township; Hertzog's school, Rockland township; Mine Hole school, Bern township; and Rohrbach's school, District township. He resides about one and one-half miles southeast of Fredericksville, and has taught the Sterner school near there. Besides his school work he is agent for the Berks and Lehigh Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and is the Fredericksville correspondent for the Eagle, Telegram, and Herald, of Reading; and the Journal and Patriot, of Kutztown. He is also crop reporter for District township for the Bureau of Statistics, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

In 1896 Mr. Rohrbach became a member of Huff's Reformed Church, and a member of Sterner's Union Sunday-school. His first office was that of deacon of this school, after which he was made assistant secretary under David S. Hess. For ten years he held the office of secretary, and did much for the welfare of the school. His appointment as secretary for the Berks County Sabbath School Association in his district met with the approval of all in the Association. His duty will be to gather statistics from each school, and report to the corresponding secretary, and hold conventions at different places in the district.

Fraternally Mr. Rohrbach is a member of Council No. 1007, O. of I. A., of Landis Store.

KEMP. The Kemp family has long been resident in District township, and at the present time is ably represented by Harvey W. Kemp, merchant and postmaster at Landis Store, and his brother, William W. Kemp, a popular and successful school teacher.

Joseph Kemp, great-grandfather of Harvey W. and William W., was born in District township, and lived on the farm of seventy acres, now the property of the Joseph Kemp estate. He was a stone mason by trade. For nearly half a century he filled the office of justice of the peace. He is buried in the Roman Catholic cemetery at Bally, belonging to the church of that denomination there, as did also his wife. His children were: Katie m. William Schoch, of Hereford township; Thomas; and Mary m. (first) Gideon Hepler, and (second) Adam Heller. George Kemp, brother of Joseph, lived in Hereford township, where he was a farmer. He was the father of Daniel, an aged resident of District township, and grandfather of Alfred L., the landlord at Fredericksville.

Thomas Kemp, son of Joseph, was a native of District township, where he died Jan. 22, 1900, aged seventy-three years. He was a stone-mason, and lived near Landis Store, where Edwin Kemp (son of Manasses) now lives. On Oct. 27, 1862, he enlisted for nine months, becoming a member of Company H, 167th Pa. V. I., under Captain Schaeffer. In politics he was a Democrat, and for a number of years filled the offices of school director and supervisor. He was a Roman Catholic and belonged to Bally Church. His wife, Susanna Frain, died Feb. 1, 1898, aged seventy-two years, and is buried at Hill church. She was a Lutheran in religious belief. To Thomas and Susanna Kemp were born: George; Malinda, m. to Phoenus Schott; Abraham F.; John and Manasses, twins, of District township; and Henry, who is a justice of the peace and farmer in District township.

Abraham F. Kemp, son of Thomas, was born in District township, Nov. 9, 1853, and was reared as a farmer. With the exception of seven years passed at Eshbach, his entire life was spent in his native township. He is a shoemaker by trade, and made many new shoes, but of late years has done repair work principally. Politically he is a Democrat, and was school director ten years during six years being president of the board. He owns a small farm.

He and his family are Lutherans, and belong to Hill Church. In 1875 he married Amanda Weller, daughter of Gideon Weller and wife (nee Hartline). They have three children, as follows: Harvey W.; William W.; and Annie, m. to Frederick Heffner, by whom she has a son, Earl.

Harvey W. Kemp, the merchant and postmaster, at Landis Store, District township, was born in that township, Nov. 22, 1877, son of Abraham F. and Amanda (Weller) Kemp. He was educated in the schools of District and Washington townships, and was reared to farm life, working upon the farm from eleven to nineteen years of age as a hired man. In 1896 he became a clerk in J. H Landis' general store, remaining there two years. In 1898 Mr. Landis was succeeded by his son Henry B., who conducted the business for four and one-half years, and at the end of that period Mr. Kemp succeeded him to the business. He purchased the store and hotel stand, and also the 147-acre farm from John H. Landis Oct. 6, 1909. He has made a number of improvements to the place, and has doubled the business. He carries a very full line of general merchandise, conducts a weekly huckster route throughout the district, and deals largely in feed, and farm implements. The hotel, so popular with the traveling public, was first opened about 1800 by John Weller, who sold out to Samuel Landis, who in turn was succeeded by John H. Landis. The Kemp store is the voting place and business center of the township.

Mr. Kemp is an active Democrat, and is an influential citizen of the district. He has served as delegate to county conventions. On June 19, 1909, he was appointed postmaster. He was instrumental in the establishment of the Mountain Telephone Company, and became its first president, Nov. 27, 1905, an office he still holds. He has been a director in the Commercial Trust Company, of Reading, since, 1906, and of the Bally First National Bank since its organization in 1909. He is a young man of business ability, and has made a success of life. Fraternally he belongs to Huguenot Lodge No. 477, F. & A. M., Kutztown; Council No. 1007, O. of I. A., Landis Store; and Castle No. 461, K. G. E., Manatawny. He and his family are Lutheran members of Hill Church.

On Oct. 15, 1898, Mr. Kemp married Mandilla R. Moyer, daughter of Henry M. and Sophia (Reichert) Moyer, of Pike township. They have had four children: Paul, who died aged one year; Mamie; Ivy and Lottie.

William W. Kemp, a popular school teacher, and citizen of District township, was born there Oct. 16, 1879, son of Abraham F. and Amanda (Weller) Kemp. He was reared to country life and educated in the township schools, and the Normal School at Kutztown, attending the latter for five terms. He was licensed to teach in 1898, and taught his first term at Frey's School, in District township, teaching that school seven terms. Since then he has taught two terms at Oberholtzer's School in Hereford township, and two terms at the Landisville School in District township. Mr. Kemp is up-to-date in his methods, and is thorough in his work. In politics he is a Democrat.

On April 30, 1904, Mr. Kemp married Annie R. Bechtel, daughter of James D. and Emma (Reichert) Bechtel prominent citizens of Pike township. To this union has been born one son Floyd Earnest. Mr. Kemp and his family live at the line of District and Hereford townships near Huff's Church.

ALFRED L. KEMP, proprietor of the "Fredericksville Hotel," was born in District township, Nov. 8, 1861, son of Daniel and Sallie (Landis) Kemp, farming people of that township.

Jacob Kemp, great-grandfather of Alfred L., owned and lived upon the farm of about 115 acres now owned by George Kemp. He was a Roman Catholic, and probably came from New Jersey to this section. He was a blacksmith by trade, following it in connection with farming. Many of his descendants have learned the same trade. He was a large man of great strength. He spoke German. He is buried at the Bally Catholic Church. He died of paralysis about 1843, while at Forgedale, on his way home from church at Bally. He was past seventy years old. He married Molly Moyer, and she is buried at Huff's church. She was a Protestant. They had these children: George; John died unmarried; Joseph; Jacob was a laborer in District township and m. Sarah Frey (daughter of Daniel), and they had three children, Jacob, Sarah and a daughter who lived in Reading; Daniel died unmarried; Katie m. Jacob Yetzer, a native of Germany; Annie m. Jacob Essig; Peggie m. George Klemmer; and Mrs. John Fronheiser.

George Kemp, son of Jacob, lived in Hereford, near Huff's church. He was a farmer, and is buried at Bally Catholic Church, of which he was a member, as were all of his children. To him and his wife Judith Conrath, were born these children: Daniel; George, of District township; John, of Hereford township; Sallie, m. to George Kemp; Katie, m. to Daniel Haak; and Elizabeth, m. to John Miller.

Daniel Kemp, son of George, and father of Alfred L., is a farmer in District township. He was born Jan. 6, 1833. He is a blacksmith, and followed that trade many years. He owns a tract of forty-two acres, located between Fredericksville and Landis Store. He is a member of Bally Catholic Church. He married Sallie Landis, daughter of Martin and Elizabeth (Conrath) Landis, of District township, and they became the parents of nine children; Alfred L.; John, of Pottstown; Martin, a farmer of District; Daniel, of Pottstown; Lizzie, m. to Harry Benfield; Irwin and George, both of Pottstown; and James and Henry, of District township.

Alfred L. Kemp, son of Daniel and Sallie, was reared in District township and attended the township schools. He worked as a hired man for several years, and the rest of the time worked for his father. When nineteen years old he learned the butcher's trade, which he followed seven years, and for a number of winters carried it on among the farmers. He farmed in District township seven years, and in the spring of 1909 became the landlord at Fredericksville, his place being one of the old established stands. Mr. Kemp belongs to Council No. 1007, O. of I. A., of Landis Store. He and his family are Lutheran members of Huff's Church.

On Nov. 5, 1887, Mr. Kemp married Elizabeth Frain, daughter of James and Sarah (Becker) Frain, of District township. They have had two children: Minnie L.; and William F., who died Sept. 30, 1909, aged ten years, six months, four days.

HENRY F. KEMP, justice of the peace in District township, was born there May 27, 1868. He taught school fourteen terms in District township. Under Recorder of Deeds H. H. Holtzman he was made clerk, and held that position for three years, and was appointed First Assistant Deputy under J. A. Bausher. In 1895 he was elected justice of the peace, and since has been twice re-elected. On Dec. 12, 1891, he married Mary Fronheiser, daughter of George Fronheiser, of Hereford township. Their children are: Cora, Robert, Leroy, Fred, Eva, Stella, Katie and George.

ALVIN F. KEMP, supervising principal of the public schools of Longswamp township, Berks county, was born in District township, this county, June 18, 1876, son of John F. and Fietta (Fronheiser) Kemp. He attended the public schools of his native township until sixteen years of age, and then entered the Keystone State Normal School at Kutztown, where he graduated in the elementary course in 1898, and in the scientific in 1900. His work as teacher began when he was but sixteen, and he taught Frey's school in District township two years, Sterner's one year, Heydt's in Washington township seven years. In 1905 he was elected principal of the township high school in Longswamp and that responsible position he has since continued to fill, doing much to raise the standard of the school, and to advance the cause of education in the county. He is a natural student, and has devoted himself to his work. Broad minded and of good executive ability, he is well fitted for the position he holds; and his genial personality has won him friends among pupils and patrons alike.

In 1899 Mr. Kemp was married to Ida Fronheiser, who was born in District township, Oct. 9, 1876, daughter of George and Sophia (Weller) Fronheiser. To this union have been born children as follows: Harvey, born May 16, 1900, in Hereford township; Viola, Feb. 6, 1902, in Hereford township; Edna, May 22, 1903, in Hereford township; Elsie, Dec. 3, 1904, in Hereford township; and John Webster, June 27, 1906, in Longswamp township. Mr. Kemp is a Lutheran in religious belief, and is an active worker in the Sunday-school.

JOSEPH GANSTER, who is conducting a flourishing grocery business at Thirteenth and Cotton streets, Reading, was born May 28, 1856, son of Joseph and Sophia (Schmeck) Ganster.

Joseph Ganster received his education in the schools of Exeter township, also attending night school at Reading while engaged in the shops of the Philadelphia & Reading Company, learning the trade of blacksmith. This he followed for nineteen years with this company, and then resigned to accept a position as policeman under the administration of Mayor James R. Kenney, serving three years, one month, twenty-eight days. During this time he attended the Chester N. Farris night school, and he then returned to the employ of the Philadelphia and Reading Company, for ten months, having previously purchased his present stand. On April 9, 1891, he left the employ of the railroad company, to engage in business for himself, and his grocery store is one of the leading business enterprises of his locality. He carries a full and complete line of fancy and staple groceries, and his fine quality of goods, coupled with Mr. Ganster's obliging and courteous manner, have won him much trade. He is a member of Grace Lutheran Church, where he has been deacon. In political matters he is independent. His fraternal connections are with the Royal Arcanum and the Maccabees.

Mr. Ganster was married to Miss Lillie O'Reilly, and to them have been born three children, all attending school: U. Joseph, Hazel S. and William. Mr. Ganster is a good, reliable citizen in every respect, and is considered one of the substantial men of his community.

ST. JAMES LUTHERAN CHURCH. St. James Church originated in a movement to establish a purely English congregation in harmony with conservative Lutheran doctrine and usage. Rev. F. A. M. Keller, its first pastor, had for eight years been English assistant to Rev. Dr. Miller in old Trinity, which up to 1842 had been entirely German. Upon Dr. Miller's retirement in 1850 the congregation determined to call a pastor who could minister in both the German and English tongues. This action resulted in the withdrawal of a number of members who desired to continue enjoying the ministrations of Rev. Mr. Keller. Their organization into a distinct congregation soon followed.

The first effective steps were taken at a meeting held November 14, 1850, when the name was chosen and a call extended to Rev. Keller to become the pastor. A Sunday-school had already been organized, and the old Odd Fellows Hall at Fifth and Franklin streets, Reading, had been secured for the temporary purposes of the congregation. The property at Fifth and Chestnut streets was immediately purchased. The work of building was begun early in the spring of 1851, and so vigorously pushed that the Sunday-school was able to occupy its new quarters for the first time on July 13th of that year. The corner-stone of the main building was laid May 11, 1851, and its formal consecration took place March 21, 1852. It was, and is today, a building that attracts attention by the beauty of its architectural lines, which follow the Gothic throughout, whilst its interior arrangement is in full harmony with its sacred character. It has a comfortable seating capacity of about eight hundred. In 1892 the original Sunday-school room gave way to a more imposing chapel, and one better adapted to modern methods of work. The full graded system of instruction is now in use.

The ministry of Pastor Keller continued until 1864, and was remarkably successful and fruitful. A large and active congregation had been gathered by his faithful and diligent ministry, and many were the manifestations of sorrow at his funeral, which took place in the church on March 18, 1864. His name is enshrined in the affections of the parish, and a memorial tablet has been erected at the chancel to commemorate his ministry.

The Rev. F. C. H. Lampe was the next pastor, entering upon his duties October 1, 1864. His pastorate was short, extending to October 1, 1867. In that time, however, the congregation succeeded in clearing off a debt of over $20,000, the pipe organ was purchased, and a remarkably well executed copy of Raphael's Transfiguration was placed upon the wall as an altar-piece. Pastor Lampe resigned to accept a call to Wheeling, West Virginia.

The Rev. Beale M. Schmucker immediately became his successor, and was ready to enter upon his labors as soon as Pastor Lampe withdrew. He came to the church in the prime of his life, possessed of rare mental endowments and high literary culture. In the nearly fourteen years of his pastorate he devoted much time to literary work, particularly in the line of Liturgies and Church History. The Church Book was largely the fruit of his labors, and is his noblest monument today. At the same time there was developed in the congregation a type of religious life that was as devout as it was churchly, and which is still felt in all its activities. Dr. Schmucker left the congregation directly after Easter, 1881, to accept a call to the Church of the Transfiguration, Pottstown, Pa., where he died in the fall of 1888.

The Rev. M. C. Horine followed, entering upon his duties in September, 1881. His was a long and fruitful pastorate of over twenty-seven years, terminating October 31, 1908. During this time the parsonage on South Fifth street was purchased and remodeled, additional property was acquired on Chestnut street, and the new chapel built, several memorials were given, various agencies of the church were organized for specific work, a mission was established at Oakbrook, and the Jubilee Service of the congregation was fittingly celebrated. At the close of October, 1908, Dr. Horine, owing to ill health, retired to a well earned rest, having covered a period of nearly half the congregation's entire existence.

The congregation up to this time had furnished four young men for the office of the ministry, and one of these was called as Dr. Horine's successor. Rev. Mr. Luther Zweizig, baptized at the hands of Rev. Keller, confirmed by Dr. Schmucker and later ordained in the church at Pottstown during his pastorate, took charge of the parish at the beginning of February, 1909, its membership at that time numbering something over six hundred communicants. WILLIAM S. RHODE, of Kutztown, Pa., was born Sept. 8, 1877, in Greenwich township, Berks county, son of Lewis F. and Hannah (Tyson) Rhode.

Many years ago there lived in Richmond township, Berks county, a Frederick Rhode, who according to family tradition came to America from England, but was by nativity a German. Among other children this Frederick had a son, William, born in Richmond township. He was reared on the farm, but learned the trade of stone mason, following that occupation in Greenwich township, whither he had removed, for fifteen years, during this time helping to erect many of the substantial stone and brick farm buildings which are such a characteristic feature throughout Greenwich and the adjoining townships. Later Mr. Rhode engaged in farming near the town of Grimville, and he continued at agricultural pursuits until advanced years, when he gave up active work and from that time on lived retired. In politics early in life he was an old-line Whig, but when the Whig party was dissolved he became a Democrat and adhered to the faith of that party for the remainder of his life. He never aspired to public position, but in local affairs bore his full share of the duties and responsibilities required of the citizen. He was interested in educational matters and served as school director in his district. He was a member of the Reformed Church.

William Rhode married Mary Zimmer, daughter of Daniel and Caroline (Wright) Zimmer, of Greenwich township. She was born in 1832, and was a member of one of the old representative families of that part of Berks county. Daniel Zimmer was born and always lived in Greenwich township, and by occupation was a shoemaker. He died in 1896 at the age of eighty-five years. Although it is not definitely known, it is strongly probable that Daniel Zimmer was a descendant of Rudolph Zimmer, who in 1741, when only eighteen years of age, came from Germany to America in the ship "Friendship." He landed at Philadelphia Oct. 12th of that year, and shortly afterward settled in Greenwich, where he appeared upon the tax list of 1756. Caroline Wright, as her name indicates, was of English descent, but little is known of her ancestry. She had a brother, who during the Civil war was a colonel in the Union army. William Rhode died in 1884, and his wife in 1892, and they were buried in the graveyard of the Union Church at Grimville. To them were born these children: Eliza A. m. Willoughby Gehringer; Cyrus J. m. Amanda F. Knerr; Anna E. m. Albert Flough; Chester W. m. Emma Stern; Lewis F.; Charles H. m. Emma Reinhart; Agnes m. James Love; Westa m. Charles Fritz; Jonathan and Frederick m. and live at Omaha, Nebr.; Mary m. Henry Rohlf; Ilena m. James Ross; and Oswell m. Helen Kleffner. Besides, there were also Clara and Ida, who died young.

Lewis F. Rhode, son of William, was born April 4, 1855, and was a blacksmith in Greenwich township, where he died on Feb. 15, 1880; he is buried at Grimville, Pa. In 1876 he married Hannah Tyson, daughter of Joseph Tyson and his wife Fannie Gehringer. The union was blessed with three sons, namely: William S., George and Lewis F., Jr. The subject of this sketch chose the newspaper and publishing business as his profession, while George is a prosperous butcher at Kutztown, Pa., and Lewis F., Jr., conducts a barber shop at Easton, Pa. Lewis F. Rhode, Sr., was called to rest in the prime of his life, leaving his wife to care for three infant sons. Hard years and many sacrifices fell upon a faithful mother. Immediately, however, after her sons were able to work they earned their own living and it was through years of hard toiling that they learned the value of a dollar, thus fitting them for the struggles of life.

William S. Rhode has been on the staff of the Kutztown Patriot since 1893, and succeeded to the local editorship of the paper at the resignation of Mr. Conrad Gehring. During Mr. Rhode's administration the paper was enlarged from four to twelve pages, and the circulation was doubled. The education that Mr. Rhode received in his early life he made excellent use of, in fact better than many normal school and college graduates do. He can truly be called a self-made man. He is the correspondent of his town for a number of metropolitan newspapers and was the promoter of the Kutztown Auditorium, a fine theatrical building which is now controlled by himself and four other Kutztonians.

In 1907 Mr. Rhode, beside his newspaper work, entered the publishing business, getting out rural delivery directories, with his employer, J. B. Esser. Mr. Rhode was the originator of the rural delivery directories and issued creditable publications in different parts of Pennsylvania. A number of other publishers since then have followed his novel idea in publishing directories.

In 1905 Mr. Rhode married Miss Edna C. Gehman, of Allentown, daughter of Henry M. Gehman, a cabinetmaker of that city, and granddaughter of the veteran minister Rev. William M. Gehman, of Vera Cruz (who is nearly ninety years of age, and is prominent in the Mennonite Church). Mr. and Mrs. Rhode are the parents of one daughter, Constance Edna Rhode.

WILLOUGHBY H. HERB, carpenter and builder of Boyertown and New Berlinville, Pa., was born in District township, Berks county, Feb. 18, 1862, son of Daniel and Lavina (Heydt) Herb, and a descendant of Jacob Herp, an early settler in this county.

In 1790 Jacob Herp is recorded in the Federal census as the head of a family of seven persons, consisting of himself and wife, two sons—one above and one under sixteen years of age—and three daughters. The names of the daughters are not known, but the sons were Jacob and Abraham. Tradition says that Jacob Herp was of foreign birth, and that he and his brother Abraham came to the New World, locating in Berks county, Pa. Abraham settled in Hereford township, and died there in 1813, leaving 200 pounds in money for his wife Ann, who survived him, and a large estate in addition for his children: Peter; Elizabeth, m. to Peter Hawk; Ann, m. to Henry Derr; Mary; and Sarah.

Jacob Herb, son of Jacob Herp, lived in Washington township, Berks county, and there died some years after the close of the Civil war, when nearly seventy years of age. His wife died long before him, and both are buried at Hill church. He was a laborer. His children were: Jacob, who lived in District township; Daniel, mentioned below; Abraham, who lived in District township; Samuel, who also lived in District township and who was killed in a stone-quarry; and Mrs. Lewis Weiser.

Daniel Herb, son of Jacob and grandfather of Willoughby H., was a resident of Pike township. He was a laborer and charcoal-burner. He was born Feb. 28, 1816, and died Sept. 8, 1879, and is buried at Hill Church, of which he was a member. His wife, Elizabeth Fraunheiser, was born April 2, 1817, and died Feb. 9, 1863. They had children as follows: Daniel, who lived and died in District township; Catharine, m. to Ismal Weller; John, who died in Earl township; Adam, who lived and died in Pike township; Samuel, who died in Colebrookdale township; Henry F.; Nathan; and Sarah and Lizzie, who both died small. Of these children Henry F., born Jan. 6, 1856, is a farmer and has a nice tract of twenty-eight acres in Oley near the Yellow House. In 1875 he m. Priscilla Frey, who died May 19, 1905, aged forty-eight years. He m. (second) Dec. 23, 1907, Mrs. Rebecca Drumheller, widow of William Drumheller, and daughter of Jeremiah Debengood. His children, all born to his first marriage, are: Oscar, Civilla, Annie, Jennie, Lottie and Daniel.

Daniel Herb, son of Daniel and Elizabeth, was born in District township, Dec. 26, 1837, and died near Landis Store in May, 1882, and is buried at Hill Church, of which he was a member. He was a carpenter and followed that trade all his life, making his home in District township. In politics he was a Republican, and was school director of the township. He married Lavina Heydt, daughter of Benjamin Heydt. She is still living, and is now sixty-five years old. They had eight children: Sarah m. (first) Alexander Rohrbach, and (second) Peter Rohrbach; Willoughby H.; Helena m. Jeremiah Rohrbach; Nathan was accidentally burned at Copley Cement Mill; Benneville lives near Sassamansville and is a carpenter, working for his brother Willoughby H.; Ambrose is a carpenter and lives at New Berlinville; Oswin was also burned at Copley Cement Mill in 1905; and Daniel died young.

Willoughby H. Herb attended the public schools of his native township until fifteen years old, when he began carpentering, learning the trade from his father Daniel. He worked for his father until twenty years old, and then worked for Philip Houck of New Berlinville. Later he entered the employ of John G. Schealer of Boyertown, with whom he remained twelve years, working as his foreman. In 1900 he engaged in contracting and building for himself at Boyertown, and now employs an average of six or seven men. He built the Unger, Strunk, Ackerman and Gilbert homes, all of Boyertown. These are all modern up-to-date buildings. Mr. Herb is a successful builder and is highly respected in his district, and has had all the leading work the last four or five years. He resides in a modern residence near New Berlinville on the road leading from Boyertown to Bechtelsville. In 1907 he built eighteen dwellings in Boyertown. He is a very busy man and has added an automobile to his equipment, and is thoroughly up-to-date in his work. He has been a member of Boyertown Lodge No. 708, I. O. O. F., since its organization. He and his family are Lutheran members of St. John's Church, Boyertown. In politics he is a Republican.

On May 13, 1882, Mr. Herb married Sarah Weller, daughter of Emanuel and Sarah (Moyer) Weller, of Pike township, and they have two children: Alice W. and Clara W.

Jacob Herb, who died in October, 1806, in District township, was a pioneer of that district. On the list of taxables of 1759 he paid a federal tax of four pounds. He was a farmer. His last will and testament was made March 9, 1805, and was probated Nov. 3, 1806. (See Will Book A, p. 520). His sons Frederick and Peter were the executors. By his wife Catharine, who survived him, he had the following children: Maria Catharine m. Andrew Nester; Frederick; John; Solomon; Daniel; Peter; Barbara was the second wife of Andrew Nester; Salome m. Daniel Reitenaur; Jonathan; and Elizabeth, deceased.

Daniel Herb, grandfather of Henry G., lived two miles north of Bechtelsville, where he was engaged as a cooper. He was past seventy years of age, when he died, and he is buried at Hill Church. Of his children: John was the father of Henry G.; Hannah m. Jonathan Engel; Angeline m. Fred Shaver; Rebecca died unmarried; Polly died unmarried; Sallie m. Marks Rothenberger.

John Herb, son of Daniel, was born in Washington township, in 1827, and he died in 1908, and is buried at Hill Church. He was a tailor and carpenter, following the latter trade the major part of his life. He owned a ten-acre tract and home in Washington township, where he lived all his life. He was active in the Democratic party, and served his township, and was a tax collector. He was a Reformed member at Hill Church, in which he was a deacon. He married Matilda Gehris, daughter of David Gehris, and she survives him. They had nine children: Henry G.; David, of Iowa; Jonathan, of Mount Penn, Pa.; Dianah, m. to James Reitenauer; Susan, m. to Nathan Heydt, of Reading; Mary Ann; Matilda, m. to a Mr. Peters; Malinda; and Emeline, who died in childhood of diphtheria.

HENRY G. HERB, proprietor of the hotel at Greshville, was born in Washington township, Berks county, Aug. 10, 1861. He attended the local schools of Washington township, and was reared upon the farm. He began working in the iron mines when sixteen years old at Siesholtzville and Red Lion, continuing at that work seven years. He tended bar at the "Union House," in Boyertown, one year. On Aug. 16, 1884, he m. Susan Saylor, daughter of Samuel Saylor, and they have one daughter, Birdie, now the wife of Jacob Herb, and living near Stonersville.

JOHN JACOB SHILLING, whose home is situated at No. 239 South Twelfth street, Reading, Pa., was born Oct. 17, 1859, at Shillington, Cumru township, Berks county, son of Ephraim and Catherine (Marks) Shilling.

John Jacob Shilling, grandfather of John J. of Reading, who was the founder of Shillington, Pa., was born in Chester county, Pa., and came to Berks county when a young man, settling at what is now Shillington. He owned considerable land there, built numerous dwellings, and for many years owned and conducted the "Three Mile House," where he lived with his family. He was a man of prominence in his day, and was of striking appearance, being erect, tall, and weighing over two hundred pounds. He was a member of the Reformed Church. He married Hannah Straub, daughter of Christian Straub, and they had the following children: Levi died unmarried when about seventy years of age; Hettie died unmarried; Samuel who laid out Shillington, and gave it its name, m. Catharine Weitknecht and their children were Champion Franklin P. and Oscar J., deceased, Howard M., George Washington and Mary M. W. twins, Frederick E. E., Ida C. E., Emma L. and Ella; Ephraim; Jacob, who was killed in the Civil war, m. Mary Bechtel and had one child that died young; Eliza m. Isaac Miller of Illinois, in which State both died; Isabella died unmarried; Louisa m. a Forbs, of Minnesota, and Hannah.

Ephraim Shilling, father of John Jacob, was born Nov. 16, 1822, in Shillington, where his entire life was spent. He was a patternmaker by trade and made many violins, of sweet tone, but in later years engaged in wheelwrighting in conjunction with carrying on operations on his forty-two acre tract. In political matters he was a Republican, and was a well-known man of his day. His death occurred Jan. 18, 1899. In 1848 Mr. Shilling was married to Catherine Marks, daughter of George Marks, and they had children as follows: Clara m. Frank Welde; Catharine m. Julius Wagner; Elizabeth m. John Gauss; John Jacob; Alexander E., unmarried, of Shillington, Pa.; Hannah m. Jerome Tompkins; Jane m. Horace R. Carl; and Andrew m. Lizzie Kane. The family were Lutherans.

John Jacob Shilling was educated in the district schools of his native locality, and for a number of years was engaged in farm work there. In 1882 he began working in a hat factory, where he continued for seventeen years, and in January, 1900, secured employment with the Reading Iron Company, where he has continued to the present. From 1882 until 1902 Mr. Shilling resided at Mohnton, in the latter year removing to Reading, since which time he has occupied his South Twelfth street home. He is a Republican in politics, and he and Mrs. Shilling are members of St. John's Lutheran Church of Mohnton, where he was a deacon and a charter member of the church. He is a member of the Reading Relief Association.

Mr. Shilling has been twice married, his first wife being Sarah Steffey, by whom he had three children: Rosa, who m. Willis Stirk of Reading; Kate R. and Stella E., unmarried, who reside at home. Mrs. Shilling was born July 16, 1867, and died Sept. 25, 1892. Mr. Shilling married (second) Sallie E. Berstler, who was born July 31, 1862, and is a daughter of John and Catherine (Lamp) Berstler of Blandon, Pa., and to this union two children were born: Helen, born May 9, 1894; and Elmore, born June 17, 1897.

ALBERT W. KAUFFMAN, proprietor of the "Carsonia Inn," was born Nov. 3, 1860, in Upper Bern township, Berks county, son of Moses Kauffman, and grandson of Christian Kauffman, of that township. The progenitor of the Kauffman family in that section of Berks county was George Kauffman, one of the three brothers who emigrated to America and settled along the Blue Mountains in the early history of the county, about one mile northeast of Shartlesville. His son, Christian Kauffman (above named), secured a large tract of land in that vicinity, which he cleared and cultivated very successfully, hauling the grain realized to the market at Philadelphia. He married Elizabeth Rentschler, and they had the following children: William, Moses, Michael, George and Mary (m. Cyrus Hiester). He died in 1881, aged eighty-eight years, and his wife died in 1880, aged eighty-six years, and they were buried at St. Michael's Church.

Moses Kauffman, son of Christian, was born in 1818 on the homestead, where he was reared. He afterward carried on the plantation, containing 116 acres, until his decease in 1892. He was married to Esther Degler, daughter of Joseph Degler, a farmer of Tulpehocken township, and they had five children: Emma (m. (first) H. S. Clouser, and after his decease Frank Shock), Albert W., Daniel F. (who resides on the homestead), Milton C. (a merchant at Gouglersville, and director of the Mohnton National Bank) and Alma D. (m. Frank Moyer, and both are deceased).

Albert W. Kauffman attended the public schools in Upper Bern township, and then learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed for eleven years. Afterward he carried on the produce business, having been thus engaged at Reading for eighteen years. In April, 1907, he purchased the "Fair View Hotel," in Bern township, and carried on business there until September, 1908, when he sold the place and located on the "Carsonia Inn" property (which is connected with the Carsonia Park), in Exeter township, and there he has carried on the hotel business in connection with farming until the present time.

In 1887 Mr. Kauffman was married to Emma J. Schellhammer, daughter of Prof. Henry W. Schellhammer, a prominent school teacher in Berks county for many years [See sketch below]. He is a Democrat, and during his residence in Upper Bern township officiated as a tax collector. He is a member of Washington Camp No. 133, P. O. S. of A., at Shartlesville, and a charter member of the Lodge of United Americans at Leesport. He is also connected with the Reading Turnverein.

HENRY W. SCHELLHAMMER, a prominent teacher of public schools in Berks county for many years, was born Jan. 7, 1844, in Upper Bern township, Berks county. His grandfather, Simon Schellhammer, was born at Shartlesville, but subsequently removed to Orwigsburg where he died. His father, Benneville Schellhammer, born May 1, 1823, also at Shartlesville, accompanied his parents to Orwigsburg where he engaged in agricultural pursuits for a number of years, when he removed to Pine Grove where he died. He married Elvina Leymaster, and their only child was Henry W.

Mr. Schellhammer attended the public schools of Upper Bern township until he was fourteen years old, and then attended an advanced school at White Hall. He became a public teacher when he was only fifteen years old, and the school which he first taught was situated in Lower Heidelberg township, near Wernersville. In 1860 he attended an advanced school at the Trappe, and in 1861 entered the Eastman Business College at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he continued his studies for two years, graduating in 1863. While thus preparing himself with a thorough education, he learned the trade of a carpenter and millwright, and was in the employ of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company for thirteen years. Subsequently he served as a clerk for three years in a foundry at Bernville, and for two years under J. Klahr & Son, who were prominent manufacturers at that place; while for a time he carried on the manufacture of cigars for himself.

Mr. Schellhammer, with this experience in the business world, directed his attention to teaching public school in Berks, Lebanon and Schuylkill counties, and in this profession he was very successful and very highly appreciated. He taught a school in Longswamp township, Berks county, for seven terms, and the Mertztown grammar school for fifteen terms; and while teaching the Central high school of that place was stricken with paralysis from which he died June 4, 1895. At the time of his death, he was the second oldest teacher in Berks county, having taught public school for thirty-two terms. He held a permanent certificate from May 13, 1881. He taught his pupils not only in the English language, but also in the German language, in which he was proficient. He was very highly esteemed for his excellent character.

In 1865 Mr. Schellhammer married Isabella J. Sellers, daughter of Leonard Sellers and Elizabeth Holtzman, his wife, of Upper Bern township, and they had the following children: Minnie (who died in infancy), Emma J. (m. Albert W. Kauffman, whose sketch appears just above), William F. (who died at the age of twenty-seven years), Charles E., Bessie D., and Cora J. (who all three reside at Reading), Lutie (m. B. S. Strauss, of Philadelphia), and Estella E. (m. Elmer Woodward). Mr. Schellhammer was an esteemed member of the Reformed Church, and of the I. O. O. F., at Strausstown.

HORACE Y. HARBOLD, now living retired in Amity township, was born at Douglassville, July 22, 1847, son of Samuel and Mary Ann (Yocom) Harbold, and a direct descendant of Frederick Harbold, an early settler of Berks county, Pennsylvania.

Frederick Harbold, or Herbold, as the name appears in the census of 1790, located in Robeson township, Berks county, in 1784-85. To him and his wife, Phoebe Ann, was born one son, Jacob. In 1796 the name of Frederick Harbold disappears from the list of taxables in Robeson township, and it is safe to presume that he died about this time. His widow Phoebe Ann married for her second husband a man named Heller, by whom she had children, among whom was a son, Frederick Heller, father of Henry Heller, who conducted the "Allen House" at Reading. There is now in the possession of Mr. Horace Y. Harbold the Bible of Jacob, giving the family record for three generations from Frederick.

Jacob Harbold, son of Frederick, was born Oct. 24, 1786, and died Feb. 4, 1867. He was the first of the family to settle in Amity township, where he became the owner of the old Jones homestead between Douglassville and Amityville. This was one of the earliest settled farms in the county, the first Jones locating there in 1701. Jacob Harbold is buried in the Amityville cemetery. He was a Lutheran in religious faith, and a Republican in politics. He married Ann Holloway, born Feb. 5, 1789, and died Oct. 28, 1861. Their children were: Mary (Polly), born Sept. 9, 1810, died unmarried; Frederick, born Oct. 10, 1811, died Feb. 6, 1812; John, born Dec. 12, 1812, died Jan. 13, 1813; Elizabeth, born May 27, 1814, m. William Lord, and lived at Douglassville; Samuel, born April 16, 1817; Harriet, born Sept. 6, 1819, m. Abraham Boyer; Mahlon, born Feb. 7, 1822, m. Anna Custer, and died at Pottstown; William, born Dec. 19, 1824, m. (first) Rachel Lorah, and (second) Maria Lloyd; Jacob died small; a daughter still born, 1829; and Franklin, born April 9, 1832.

Samuel Harbold, son of Jacob, was born April 16, 1817, and he died on his farm in Amity township Aug. 29, 1848, in the thirty-second year of his age, and was buried at Amityville. He was a farmer. He married Mary Ann Yocom, daughter of Daniel Yocom, and they had two sons: (1) Daniel, born May 25, 1844, for four years farmed the homestead with his brother, and then bought the adjoining farm, where he lived and farmed until his death Feb. 16, 1897. He is buried at Amityville. To him and his wife, Ellen Bortz, were born six children—Annie, Minnie, Samuel, Horace and two that died small. (2) Horace Y.

Horace Y. Harbold was educated in the common schools which he attended four months of the year. He learned the duties connected with a farmer's life under his grandfather, Jacob Harbold, in Amity, for whom he worked until after he was eighteen, when the grandfather died. Then the two brothers, Horace Y. and Daniel (who was also reared by the grandfather) bought the homestead farm in 1867, and farmed it jointly for four years. Then Horace Y. purchased his brother's interest, and continued farming there until 1905, a period of thirty-four years. In the spring of 1905 he retired, and moved to Amityville (P. O. Athol) but he could not find rest in idleness and now as a pastime works at carpentering, mason work, cement paving, etc. He owns in Amityville what was the Michael Custer home, but later the Dr. Reuben Rhoads place and still later the home of William R. Rhoads.

Mr. and Mrs. Harbold are members of St. Paul's Lutheran Church at Amityville, of which for many years he was an elder. In politics he is a Republican, and although living in a township with a good Democratic majority, was elected three times a member of the school board—serving in all nine years.

On Dec. 22, 1870, Mr. Harbold married Catharine G. Gabel, daughter of David and Mary (Gabel) Gabel, and granddaughter of Jacob and Catharine (High) Gabel. Mr. and Mrs. Harbold have no children.

EDWIN P. DeTURK, a farmer of Amity township, was born in Exeter township, Berks county, Nov. 5, 1871, son of Benjamin and Rachel (Pyle) DeTurk, and a descendant of Isaac DeTurk (born 1686, who emigrated to America in 1707) and his wife, Maria Gerber, through their son John (m. Deborah High), his son Samuel (m. Catharine Kerst), his son Jacob (m. Esther Goodhart) and his son Benjamin (m. Susan Hoch and Rachel Pyle). A complete history of the DeTurk family appears elsewhere in this publication.

Benjamin DeTurk, son of Jacob and Esther (Goodhart) DeTurk, was twice married. By his first wife, Susan Hoch, he had two children: Morris H. and Alice H. By his second marriage to Rachel Pyle, he also had two children: Edwin P. and Susan R. M.

Edwin P. DeTurk was reared upon his father's farm in Exeter township, and obtained his primary education in the township schools. He later studied for some time at Stoner's Business College, in Reading. He has been familiar with farm work from his early boyhood, and was less than nineteen years of age when he began buying cattle for his brother Morris H., then of Exeter, now of Union, township. He was engaged in buying cattle for about twelve years, making his purchases throughout Ohio, Indiana, New York, West Virginia and Kentucky. He began farming in the spring of 1899 on his own farm in Amity township, near the Exeter township line. This farm for about one hundred years was in the Rhoads name, but Mr. DeTurk purchased it from Samuel Griesemer. It then consisted of ninety-seven acres, but to this has since been added various tracts until there are now 150 acres, all of good fertile and well watered land. In 1904 Mr. DeTurk built a good residence at Baumstown, where he and his family reside. In politics he is a Democrat. With his family he belongs to the Reformed congregation at Schwartzwald Union Church.

During the time he was engaged in the cattle business Mr. DeTurk traveled extensively. At one time he paid a visit to the Pacific coast, visiting points of interest en route, and he visited twenty-three States of the Union, and he has had many interesting experiences.

On April 5, 1900, Mr. DeTurk married Esther Wentzel, daughter of Albert and Susan (Dick) Wentzel, and they have one daughter, Dorothy Esther.

CALVIN S. RHOADS, a farmer on the north side of Monocacy hill, in Amity township, Berks county, was born on his present farm Oct. 8, 1858, son of Abraham L. Rhoads, and a descendant of John Jacob Rhoads, the emigrant ancestor of many of the name in Berks county.

(I) Early in the eighteenth century several brothers named Rhoads (Roth or Roads) came to America, and settled in Pennsylvania. One of these, John Jacob by name, was a taxable resident of Amity township, Berks county, in 1752, and owned considerable land, and also operated a paper mill. Tradition says he is buried at Amityville church. His children were: Lena m. Henry Baum; Jacob, a captain in the Revolution, m. Susanna Yocum; Matthias, a lieutenant colonel in the Revolution, m. Elizabeth Gotterin; Daniel m. Magdalena Kerst; Mary m. Major George Lorah; Elizabeth became the second wife of Major George Lorah; Samuel m. Elizabeth Auvenshine; Christina m. Jacob Griesemer; and John m. Catharine Greiner.

(II) Samuel Rhoads, son of John Jacob, married Elizabeth Auvenshine, and they became the parents of children as follows: William, John, Daniel, Samuel, Abraham, Elizabeth and two sons that died young.

(III) Samuel Rhoads, son of Samuel and Elizabeth, married Sarah Ludwig, and they had children as follows: William L. m. Lydia Hine; Jonas m. Rachel Hunter; Abraham L.; Frederick lived in Dayton, Ohio; Sarah m. John Nein, and lived in Chester county, Pa., where she is buried; Eliza m. Samuel Sands, and both are buried at Boyertown; Benneville m. Rebecca Lewis.

(IV) Abraham L. Rhoads, son of Samuel and Sarah, was born Nov. 8, 1821, and died on his farm April 15, 1903. In earlier life he was a drover, taking many herds of cattle to Philadelphia. After his marriage in 1854 he worked two years for his brother Jonas. In 1856 he bought the farm on which he lived until his death. He was very successful, his success being due entirely to his own efforts, and at his death he had his farm and stock and $6,000. In politics he was a Democrat, and for several terms he was a school director. He and his family were Lutherans, and members of Amityville church, where he was deacon and elder for many years. He gave liberally toward the erection of the new church building in 1872. He married Harriet Straub, of Amity township, born Dec. 22, 1827, and died March 7, 1907. They had six children: Irwin, a farmer in Pottsgrove township, Montgomery county; Calvin S.; Anna, who died in infancy; Charles, of Birdsboro; Alice, who married William Henderson, a farmer of Union township; and Ida, married to Samuel Fix, of Amity township.

The farm bought by Abraham L. Rhoads in 1856, and now the property of Calvin S., now consists of ninety-one acres, but originally contained more. Abraham L. Rhoads bought it from his brother Jonas, who in turn had purchased it from Isaac Reiff. Mr. Reiff had owned it eight years, purchasing it from a Kline. It was taken from the State in 1734 by patent deed. There is a stone house built over a strong spring that was erected in 1762. The wall of the house is twenty inches thick. The stone barn was built in 1793, by George Lotz, who also built the spring house, and who was prominent in the Revolution. When the barn was erected it was one of the largest in the township. The present large house was built in 1810. It is of stone.

(V) Calvin S. Rhoads obtained his education in the township schools, and was early trained to farming. He began for himself in the spring of 1904 on the farm whereon he now lives, prior to that time having been in his father's employ. He is very prosperous and is strictly up-to-date, having all modern farm machinery and well cared for live stock. In politics he is a Democrat, but has never aspired to hold public office. He is a member of the Lutheran congregation at the Amityville church.

CLAYTON B. GRIESEMER, a native son of Amity township, Berks county, who is engaged in farming there, was born near the Exeter township line Jan. 27, 1867.

Casper Griesemer, the emigrant ancestor of this old family, came to America from Alsace, France, with a brother, in 1730. This brother, John Valentine by name, first located in the Goshenhoppen, in Montgomery county, Pa., but at an early date moved to Hereford township, Berks county, where many of his descendants still live. There is also a tradition that there was a third brother, Peter, but if so his place of settlement is unknown. Casper Griesemer made his last will and testament June 23, 1791, and it is on record in Will Book A, page 293. He lived in Oley at the time of his death in 1794. He had settled there at an early date, being one of a number of Huguenots who chose the fertile Oley Valley as their home. He disposed of his large estate in a just manner, and one item in his will relates to his wife Rebecca: His "beloved wife shall have as follows: the household and kitchen furniture, bedding, linens, all ready money, bonds and notes, book debts and other debts," etc. He bequeathed each of his five daughters the sum of 500 pounds in gold and silver; and to Abraham, son of his deceased son Valentine, he gave 250 pounds, and to his granddaughter Catharine, daughter of his deceased son Abraham, he gave also 250 pounds. The children of Casper Griesemer were: Valentine and Abraham, who both died prior to 1791; John; Peter; Jacob; Elizabeth (Guldin); Anna Maria (Graeff); Anna Margaret (Reiter); Susanna; and Eva (Ludwig).

Peter Griesemer, son of Casper and great-great-grandfather of Clayton B., was a farmer in Oley township, where he built a stone house that is still standing. He was an executor of his father's will in 1794. He married a Hoch, and both are buried at Oley Churches. They had six children: Abraham; Catharine m. Daniel Van Reed; Daniel; Jacob; John, who lived in Oley, died in 1817, leaving a large estate and survived by his wife Catharine (they had no children); and Mary m. Daniel Bertolet. Daniel Griesemer, son of Peter, lived along the Oley turnpike, where he owned four large farms. He married Catharine Deisher, daughter of John Deisher, and both are buried at Oley Churches, as are also all of their six children—Benneville, Peter, Henry, Daniel, John and Hettie. The town of Griesemersville, in Oley, was named after Peter Griesemer, second son of Daniel and Catharine (Deisher).

Abraham Griesemer, son of Peter, was born Oct. 26, 1782, and died Dec. 1, 1847. He was a farmer in Amity township, and he and his wife are buried at Amityville. He married Catharine Ritter, born June 26, 1788, died Jan. 18, 1859. They had seven children, as follows: David, 1810-1847; Samuel; Sarah m. David Kline; Esther m. David Kline; Joseph died in California; Mrs. Daniel Bertolette; and Reuben, born Jan. 2, 1826, on Nov. 18, 1847, m. Polly Nein, and they have been farmers in Amity all their lives, both now past eighty years of age (they had one child, still born in 1849).

Samuel Griesemer, son of Abraham, was born in Amity township June 28, 1812. He was a miller and conducted the well known Griesemer mill on the Monocacy until about 1871, when he gave up that work to devote himself to farming on the land he bought in Amity. He sold the mill to George Brown. After farming some years he retired, and moved to Exeter, where he died March 15, 1902, and he is buried at Amityville. He was a prominent man in his time, and was public spirited and progressive, standing high in the estimation of the community. He was one of the founders and organizers of the Amityville cemetery, and was liberal in his donations to the church. He was of dark complexion, and was five feet and nine inches in height. He married Matilda Babb, who died Aug. 16, 1896, aged eighty-one years, six months, fourteen days. Their children were: Catharine, 1837-1905, died unmarried; Franklin born 1839, is unmarried; Abraham is the father of Alexander F. of Reading; Ezra B.; Louisa died young; John died in Amity township, leaving a widow and two sons, Samuel and Harvey.

Ezra B. Griesemer, son of Samuel, is a farmer near Stonersville, in Exeter township. By trade he is a carpenter, and for some years followed that occupation regularly. He has a farm of about eighty-five acres, which he now cultivates. He married Mary Boyer, daughter of Jacob Boyer, of Amity township, and they have seven children: Clayton B.; Kate m. Jacob Hoffman, a farmer of Exeter; Ezra is a carpenter in Exeter; Stella m. Walter Kline, a farmer of Exeter; John is a Reformed minister; and Mame and George are at home.

Clayton B. Griesemer has been familiar with farming from his early boyhood, and in the spring of 1894 he began for himself in Amity township, near Baumstown, where he remained one year. He then went to a farm belonging to his grandfather, Samuel Griesemer, in the same township, and for two years devoted himself to its care and cultivation. The next six years were passed on Isaac March's farm, also in Amity, and in the fall of 1902 he purchased the John Geiger farm near Amityville, moving on it in the following spring. It consists of 106 acres of good land, and the stone house is in excellent condition. He has two silos and is progressive and up-to-date in his methods. In politics he is a Democrat, and for six years served as school director, a part of the time being president of the board. He and his family belong to the Reformed Church at Amityville.

On Aug. 24, 1891, Mr. Griesemer married Kate Deeter, daughter of Amos and Mary (Herflicker) Deeter, of Exeter township, and they have one son, Owen D.

DEHART. There are only scattering records to guide the searcher for the early history of the Dehart family, but the line of the late David G. Dehart, of Amity township, Berks county, is comparatively clear. In 1752 and 1759 among the list of taxables in Amity township is the name of Cornelius Dehart, a large land owner, who paid a federal tax of fifteen pounds. In 1759 the name of Cornelius Dehart also appears as a taxable in District township, this county, where he paid a tax of three pounds. In 1775 Cornelius Dehart, and also Samuel and William Dehart, are mentioned as taxables in Amity.

Cornelius Dehart, Jr., son of Cornelius, became the father of two sons, one of whom was David; and the other left home when he was twelve years of age and was never again heard from.

David Dehart, son of Cornelius, Jr., was born about 1800, and died about 1865. Both he and his wife, Susan Gerber, are buried at Amityville. They had their home on the Swamp Road in Earl township. He was a weaver by trade, and also for thirty-nine years followed butchering, traveling from place to place. To David and Susan (Gerber) Dehart were born seven children: Samuel died young; Charles G. lived in Amityville; David G.; Harriet m. Amos Auman; Ann m. Jere McGee; Rachel m. William Keppler, of Pottstown; and Susan died young.

David G. Dehart was born June 18, 1831, and lived at Weaverstown, in Amity township, where he died March 4, 1904. He was a plasterer and operated in the lower end of the county, employing a number of men. He and his wife were Lutherans, belonging to the church at Amityville. He served as an official in the church, and was ever interested in religious work.

On Feb. 16, 1859, Mr. Dehart married Harriet Breidenbach, born Aug. 17, 1837, daughter of John and Hannah (Good) Breidenbach. The only child of this union, William, died aged three years. Mrs. Dehart is well preserved and makes her home at Weaverstown.

John Breidenbach, father of Mrs. Dehart, was a cooper, and had a shop at Weaverstown, where he was assisted by his sons. He died in the sixties when past seventy years of age. His wife died in 1889, when over seventy years old. Their children were: William, Frank, Samuel, Harriet, Thamson, Mary Ann, Charles, Harrison and John.

CHARLES H. HINE, Justice of the Peace and Rural Mail Carrier at Douglassville, was born in the district in which he has always lived, Dec. 19, 1854, son of Jeremiah and Sarah (Hunter) Hine.

Henry Hine, the first of the family of whom there is definite record, lived in Exeter township at the time of his death in 1821. He left a large estate which he disposed of by will to his wife Barbara and five children: John, Samuel, Jacob, Catharine and Henry. The three sons first mentioned had their portions from their father prior to the making of his will, Feb. 22, 1814. The daughter, Catharine Dieter, was deceased, and her share of the estate was bequeathed to her three children, Samuel, Reuben and Hannah Dieter. The homestead in Exeter was bequeathed to his son Henry.

Samuel Hine, son of Henry, was a farmer in Amity township, to which place he had removed from Exeter township, where he was born. He was a blacksmith by trade, and this he followed in connection with farming His will was made July 22, 1829, and he died shortly afterward, his will being on record in Will Book 6, p. 373. He provided amply for his wife Catharine, and he mentions five children: Isaac, Lydia, William (who located in Kutztown), Amos and Jeremiah. His widow Catharine made a will in April, 1832, which was probated June 9, 1841, and entered in Will Book 8, p. 345. It would appear from her will that Samuel Hine was married twice, as she refers to William and Lydia as "my stepchildren." One of the sons went to Union county, Pa., where he died and was buried.

Jeremiah Hine, son of Samuel, was born in Amity township, and both he and his wife are buried at Amityville. By trade he was a blacksmith, following that calling at the "Bupp" in connection with the cultivation of a small farm. Later he owned a farm of 214 acres, which he cultivated from 1843 to 1873. He became well-to-do, and was highly esteemed in his community. On Dec. 21, 1834, he married Sarah Hunter, daughter of John Hunter, of Oley township. She was born Sept. 13, 1815, and died May 8, 1891. They had six children, of whom three died in infancy or in childhood. The others were: Jefferson died in 1868 from injuries sustained from a kick by a horse; Mary Ann married Mahlon Geiger, now deceased; and Charles H. In her will Mrs. Sarah (Hunter) Hine bequeathed to her grandson Irwin Hine her second best bedstead and bedding, and the corner clock to her daughter Mary Ann. She also mentioned her grandson, George Hunter Hine.

Charles H. Hine received his education in the public schools and at the Meigs Private Academy at Pottstown. He was licensed to teach in public schools by Prof. S. A. Baer and later by Prof. D. B. Brunner, and he taught one term in his home district. He then learned the paper-hanger's and painter's trades, and followed same until 1902, in November of which year he was appointed, after competitive examination, to the position of rural mail carrier, and assigned to Route No. 4, at Douglassville. This position he has filled to the present time. He daily covers twenty-two and one-half miles. His home is near the Pennsylvania Railroad Depot, on the road formerly known as the Reading and Perkiomen turnpike. In politics Mr. Hine is a Republican, and in the spring of 1891 he was elected justice of the peace, and has since been twice re-elected. The first time he had opposition, but the second and third times there was none. In 1900 he served as census enumerator for Amity township. He is local treasurer for the Pennsylvania Saving Fund and Loan Association; secretary of the Douglass Mutual Live Stock Association, agent for the Chester Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the Lebanon Mutual Fire Insurance Company; and since 1906 has been president of the Berks County Rural Letter Carriers' Association. He has been active in fraternal organizations, belonging to Monocacy Lodge, No. 441, I. O. O. F., of which he has been secretary since 1889, and is a past Grand; Excelsior Encampment No. 85, I. O. O. F., of Pottstown. Since 1898 he has been District Deputy of the Third District of Berks county, and has been a representative to the Grand Lodge. He is also a member of Washington Camp, No. 240, P. O. S. of A., at Douglassville, of which he is secretary, and has been representative to the Grand Lodge; of Bright Star Castle, No. 474, K. G. E., of Amityville, in which he is a past officer.

In 1872 Mr. Hine married Elmira Rhoads, daughter of John and Matilda (Grove) Rhoads, of Douglassville, and they have three children: William, m. Sarah Bower, and has children—Raymond, Mary and Clinton, and lives at Douglassville; Jeremiah m. Louisa Wagner, of Douglassville, and has children—Oscar, Alva, Hunter, John and Charles; and Sallie m. (first) William Deibert, deceased, had a son George, and (second) Charles Trace, of Monocacy, by whom she has three children—Thelma, Miriam and Margie.

GEORGE ALEXANDER GAILEY, who has been successful in the cultivation of the soil in Amity township, Berks county, was born Nov. 25, 1864, at Altoona, Pa., son of William and Nancy (Kelso) Gailey.

The Gaileys and Kelsos in both this country and in Ireland have intermarried. William Gailey was born in 1825 in County Donegal, Ireland, and was twenty-five years of age when he came to the United States, locating at Altoona, Pa., where he found work in the car shops as a machinist. He was twice married, his first wife being Mary Arrabal, who died young leaving a daughter, Margaret, now the wife of William H. Jones, who lives on a farm adjoining the Gailey tract in Amity township. In 1861, he married (second) Nancy Kelso, daughter of John Kelso, of Douglassville, but formerly of County Donegal, Ireland. With his young bride William Gailey went to Altoona, whence after eighteen months they went to Union township, Berks county, where Mrs. Gailey's father had a large farm. Mr. Gailey assisted in its cultivation for six years, and in 1867 he bought a valuable tract in Amity township, above Douglassville, consisting of seventy-five acres, and this has since been the family home. Mr. Gailey died Aug. 23, 1898, aged seventy-three years, and is buried at Douglassville. To him and his wife was born one son, George Alexander, who resides with his mother on the farm. William Gailey was of sturdy Scotch-Irish stock, and a consistent member of the Presbyterian Church, joining the church of that denomination at Pottstown (This church was organized with only nine members).

John Kelso, father of Mrs. Gailey, was born in County Donegal, Ireland, in 1779. In 1851 he came to America, and settled in Union township, Berks county, where he engaged in farming and prospered. He had a brother George who came to this country unmarried in 1850, and the greater part of his life had his home with his brother John. George Kelso died May 19, 1870, aged seventy years. John and George Kelso had a sister Catharine Allison, who in her widowhood came to America with her brother George. She was born in 1789, and died in 1883, in her ninety-fourth year. John Kelso died Nov. 6, 1877, in the ninety-eighth year of his age. He married Isabella Kelso, in Ireland, a distant relative. She was born Feb. 2, 1804, and died May 13, 1886. They were the parents of five children: Joseph is a well known resident and school director in Union township; Nancy became Mrs. Gailey; John is a contractor in California; George died at his home in Philadelphia Feb. 19, 1909, aged sixty-nine years; and Jane is the widow of Aaron M. Yocum (1835-1878). The Kelsos were Scotch-Irish Presbyterians and their burial plot is at Douglassville.

George Alexander Gailey accompanied his parents to Berks county when he was very young, and he was educated in the public schools of Union and Amity townships. He was reared to farming, and in 1893, five years before his father died, he became the farmer on the home farm. Like his father he has been very successful in agricultural pursuits, and he has a dairy of fine cows. He has also been making a specialty of fattening steers for market.

Mr. Gailey is a Republican in political principle, and a Presbyterian in religious faith. He married Jane Morgan, of Douglassville, and their only child, Helen, is attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Gailey are very highly esteemed by all who have the pleasure of their acquaintance.

FRANK M. BROWN, proprietor of the Monocacy Valley Mills in Amity township, Berks county, and a representative citizen of that locality, was born in East Brunswick township, Schuylkill Co., Pa., July 3, 1858.

Michael Brown, great-grandfather of Frank M., came from the Old World, and settled in Oley township, Berks county, in that section now embraced in Pike township. Among his children were: Jacob, who had no issue; John, mentioned below; Daniel who, it is believed, settled in Maxatawny township, Berks county; and two daughters whose names are not known.

John Brown, son of Michael, was born in Pike township, and later lived in Rockland township, where he owned a farm. This he sold, and bought one near Lobachsville, from which place he moved to Schuylkill county, where he died at the home of his son George during the fifties, aged about fifty-eight years. His wife survived him about six years, and both are buried at McKeansburg, Schuylkill county. John Brown was a tailor by trade, and worked at that calling in connection with farming. His wife, in her maidenhood, was Catharine Maul, daughter of George Maul, a native of Germany. They had four sons: (1) Ephraim was a laborer and butcher and lived at McKeansburg. He was twice married. By his first wife his children were: John, Jacob, Daniel, Katie and Amanda. By his second: James and Joseph. (2) George. (3) Charles lived in Pottsville, where his two sons, C. Theodore and William, and their four sisters now live. (4) John died young.

George Brown, son of John and Catharine (Maul), was born in Rockland township, near Pikesville, Aug. 30, 1825, and died Sept. 14, 1893. He grew to manhood in Pike township, and in 1847 went to Schuylkill county, where he lived twenty-four years. He carried on a farm of about 100 acres and dealt extensively in wood, and lumber, and in the buying and selling of land. On Feb. 28, 1848, he married Catherine (Mast), daughter of Johann Adam Mast and his wife Anna Maria, of Rockland township, Berks county, but both natives of Germany where they were married. All their children, however, were born in America. Mrs. Brown was born March 27, 1826, and now makes her home with her son Frank M. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were members of the Lutheran Church, and are buried at Amityville. They were the parents of thirteen children: William, born Oct. 9, 1848; Charles, Jan. 28, 1850; Edwin, Oct. 29, 1851; Henry, Sept. 10, 1853; George, July 18, 1855; Sarah Elizabeth, Jan. 8, 1857; Frank M., July 3, 1858; Hannah L., Aug. 1, 1860; Augustus M., May 17, 1863; Catharine, May 13, 1865; Howard, Feb. 3, 1868; and twins, deceased in infancy.

Frank M. Brown received his education in his native township, and in 1871 accompanied his parents to Amity township, Berks county, where his father bought the Samuel Griesemer Mill on Monocacy creek. The present mill building was erected in 1849 by Abraham Griesemer, father of Samuel. Mr. George Brown conducted the mill successfully until 1889 when he retired and was succeeded by his son, Frank M., who has met with a constantly increasing trade. In 1899 he added the roller process, and the mill has a capacity of one barrel per hour. The product is disposed of in the neighboring district. There are eighty-five acres in connection with the mill, and Mr. Brown has brought this to a high state of cultivation. In addition to his mill and farm, Mr. Brown is a director and treasurer of the Conestoga Telephone & Telegraph Company, capitalized at $40,000. He is found keenly interested in any enterprise that has for its end and aim the development and progress of the town or county.

In politics Mr. Brown is a Republican, but he has no ambition for office holding. For three years he served as supervisor under protest, and positively refused to accept a renomination. He and his family are Lutherans. Fraternally he is a Mason, and he is very highly respected throughout his community.

In 1882, Mr. Brown married Alice DeTurk, daughter of Benjamin and Susan (Hoch) DeTurk, of Exeter township. Six children have been born of this union, namely: Elsie, m. to Wayne Geiger, of Amity township; Susie; Emmett; B. Clay; George; and Morris.

NATHAN DRY. The Dry family which was represented in Berks county, Pennsylvania, long before the American Revolution, is one of high repute, and the name is now worthily borne in Amity township, by the venerable Nathan Dry, who is passing the evening of his life in comfort at Amityville, tenderly cared for by his daughter, Ellen M., widow of Henry Wagner.

The first of the name in this locality was Jacob Dry, whose name on the tax list of East District in 1773, is spelled "Drey", and on the Federal census report of 1790, of the same district, is "Day", doubtless a clerical error. The common spelling of the name at the present time is "Dry." In 1790 Jacob Drye was the head of a family of five persons, including himself and wife, a son above sixteen years, and two daughters under sixteen years. In 1773 George Drey was a taxable in Rockland township, as was his son Paul, then a single man. In 1781 George, Paul and Matthias Drey were assessed in Rockland township. Tradition, partly affirmed by records, says that George Drey was a son of the aforesaid Jacob, and that Paul, Matthew and John (grandfather of Nathan) were sons of George. The family were all Lutherans, and the older members of the family are buried at Mertz's Church in Rockland township. In politics they were Democrats. On the Rockland township tax list of 1829 appear the following: John Dry, farmer; John Dry, potter; Paul Dry; Gideon Dry; Daniel Dry; David Dry; and the Jacob Dry estate.

John Dry was born in the Rockland township district, and died there in 1855, aged about seventy-seven years. He was bedfast for three years with rheumatism. By trade he was a tinsmith, and followed that occupation with success in his younger years. He lived one mile southwest of Stony Point at Dryville, named for members of his family. He was a Lutheran, and is buried at Mertz's Church. He was twice married, first to a Luckenbill, by whom he had a son, David. He m. (second) Susan Mertz, but no children were born of this union.

David Dry, son of John, was born in Rockland township, in July, 1805, and died at Stony Point in November, 1872. He was a life long farmer, owning a fertile tract of 176 acres. About twelve years before his death, he retired and settled in Stony Point. He was a Democrat, and served as school director. With his family he attended Mertz's Church. He married Susan Yoder, daughter of Abraham Yoder and his wife, whose maiden name was Price. Mrs. Yoder died when Susan was but one day old. Mrs. Susan (Yoder) Dry died in August, 1888, aged nearly eighty-two years. She was the mother of ten children: Nathan; Elizabeth m. Peter Wanner; Rachel m. Samuel Herbein; Mary m. Capt. Jonas Schollenberger; Catharine m. David Levengood; John; Abraham lives in Reading; Caroline is unmarried; Esther m. John Herbein; and Amanda m. James M. High.

Nathan Dry, son of David, was born March 17, 1826, in Rockland township, and he attended the pay schools of that day, when the teachers received three cents per day for each child. He received the training at home that was common to the farmer lad of that period, and at the age of eighteen began to learn the milling business from John Y. Rhoads, of Amity township. He then for one year conducted a mill for John Knabb, above Oley Line, after which he operated the Six Penny Mill at Mount Airy, in Union township, four years. In 1862 he went to California, where he first farmed, and later was engaged in milling. He remained there forty-one years, making his home at Lake City, Modoc County, and prospering exceedingly in all his undertakings. In December, 1902, he returned to his native county, and located at his present home in Amityville. Mr. Dry is remarkably well preserved and enjoys his life of leisure to the utmost. In appearance he is short and rather heavy set. He is a Lutheran in religious belief, as was also his wife. In 1848 he married Emina Pott, daughter of John and Henora (Eagle) Pott. She was born in Amity township on the old Eagle homestead, March 2, 1826, and died in Amity township, below Yellowhouse, May 9, 1855, and is buried at Amityville. They had three children: Ellen M., who married the late Henry Wagner, and had two children, Mary and John, the latter deceased; Andora, who married the late John Rhoads, had a son Lawrence, and lives at Pottstown; and John D., who died young. When Mr. Dry made his journey to the Pacific coast he traveled by foot, and team across the Plains, and he can graphically describe the scenes and experiences of those early days. He speaks both German and English, and has a very retentive memory.

JOHN GEORGE LIVINGOOD BROWNELL, who since 1901 has been engaged successfully at Philadelphia as an accountant, was for many years one of the most prominent public men of Reading, Pa. Mr. Brownell is an Ohio man, born at Canton, Oct. 27, 1847, son of John Casper and Elizabeth (Livingood) Brownell.

George Brownell, the grandfather of John G. L., was born at Womelsdorf, Pa., in 1780, and was reared to farming pursuits, which he carried on in connection with stock-raising in the vicinity of his native place, until 1845, at which time he moved to Canton, O., and there his death occurred in 1854. He was married to Eve Longsdorf, daughter of Conrad Longsdorf, of Womelsdorf, Pa., and they had a family of five children, namely: Mary m.

Samuel Petree; Sarah m. John Simmon; Rebecca m. Joseph Hershey; Lovina m. Jeremiah Hershey; and John Casper.

John Casper Brownell, father of John G. L., was born at Womelsdorf, Pa., in 1814, and there received his education, after which he entered a large dry-goods establishment at Baltimore, Md. After continuing thus for about ten years, he embarked in the mercantile business at Canton, O., which he successfully carried on for a number of years. For one term he filled the office of County Auditor of Stark county. His death occurred in St. Louis, Mo., in 1892. Mr. Brownell was married to Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. Jonn Livingood, of Womelsdorf, and they had seven children, as follows: Ellen m. George Keiser; Maria m. O. McIntire; Emma m. E. P. Diehl; John G. L.; Eva K. m. Z. T. Mahon, and after his decease, David Hammond; and Alice and Anna, who died young.

John George Livingood Brownell received his education in the public schools, after which he acted as an accountant for four years, from 1865 to 1869, in the latter named year removing to Reading, Pa., at the request of his uncle, Jacob S. Livingood, Esq., in whose law office he remained twelve years as a clerk. The electors of the Seventh ward then elected him as the alderman of that district, and he served in this local office for twenty successive years, being recognized during this time as the most competent official of this class in the city. In 1901 he removed to Philadelphia to serve as an accountant, and he has since then been successfully engaged in the settlement of complicated estates and the adjustment of partnership affairs of different firms at their dissolution.

In 1873 Mr. Brownell married Emily Dehart, a daughter of Charles Dehart, of Reading. She died in 1874, and he was married (second) to Mary Ellen Seal, daughter of Lewis and Mary (Johnston) Seal, of Camden, N. J., by whom he had five children: Helen Seal, the eldest, graduated from the Girls' High School, at Reading, and taught in the public schools there four years. She then accompanied her parents to Philadelphia, where she secured a public school and has been teaching since that time. The other four are George Seal, Frederick Seal, Mary Ella, and Robert, who died in 1905.

BACHOFER, a good name of German origin, is now worthily borne in Reading, Pa., by two brothers, John L. and J. George Bachofer, both prominent and both highly esteemed. They are sons of John and Josephine (Mann) Bachofer.

John Bachofer was a native of Stuttgart, Germany, as was also his wife, and they came to America in the spring of 1874, landing at Castle Garden. They came on immediately to Reading, where Mr. Bachofer secured work with the Philadelphia & Reading Railway Company. He remained there until he entered the employ of the large brewer, Frederick Lauer, with whom he remained for twenty-two years. In 1890 he built the stand now occupied by his son. He died in 1896, at the age of fifty-six years, his widow surviving until 1903. They had a family of nine children, of whom six lived to maturity, namely: John L.; Fredericka, wife of Frank Seiders; Christian, of Reading; Miss Mary; Jacobina, wife of Ira Hinnershitz of Shillington, Pa.; and J. George, of the Reading Loan Guaranty Company. In politics John Bachofer was a Democrat. The religious faith of the family is that of the Lutheran Church.

J. George Bachofer, son of John, is the present efficient manager of the Reading Loan Guaranty Company. He is a native of Reading, and he received in the public schools here his education, continuing until he was in the grammar grade. He then commenced work in the Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart department store as cash boy. Later for a period of three years he was employed in a broker's office. He then entered the service of the Reading Loan Guaranty Company, whose offices are on the fourth floor of the Colonial Trust Company building, and he worked as a clerk for three years. His capable and efficient services were appreciated, and at the end of the three years he was made manager (1903) and he still fills that position to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

Mr. Bachofer is a member of Lodge No. 549, F. & A. M., Reading; Reading Chapter, No. 152, R. A. M.; Reading Lodge of Perfection, 14th degree; and Friendship Lodge, No. 247, Knights of Malta.

On Oct. 6, 1904, Mr. Bachofer was married to Miss Mary E. Miller, a successful public school teacher in Berks county for the preceding five years. She had also taught near Leesport. Her father, Wesley A. Miller, is a retired farmer, formerly of Leesport, now of Reading. Mr. and Mrs. Bachofer have one daughter, Elizabeth J. They are members of St. John's Lutheran Church. Though young in years success has attended Mr. Bachofer's efforts and he is the owner of his fine home at No. 126 Oley street. He is an able business man, and his integrity and industry are above reproach.

WILLIAM S. McKNIGHT, whose death occurred at his home, No. 528 Spruce street, Reading, Aug. 17, 1907, had been a resident of that city all of his life, and was one of its well-known and highly esteemed citizens. Mr. McKnight was born Oct. 29, 1848, in Reading.

After securing a good public school education Mr. McKnight entered the Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., from which he was graduated, and he then engaged in the grocery business with his brother, John McKnight, at the northwest corner of Fourth and Penn streets, Reading, for several years. For many years thereafter he was employed by the Harbsters as bookkeeper, and filled a like position for other well-known firms in Reading, until 1903, when failing health caused his retirement. Mr. McKnight was buried at Charles Evans cemetery, with the service of the Episcopal Church, in which he had been baptized. He was an active member of St. John's Lodge, No. 435, F. & A. M., and also belonged to Neversink Fire Company and to Camp No. 89, P. O. S. of A.

On Sept. 9, 1887, Mr. McKnight was married to Lydia A. Seaman, daughter of Lewis and Mary (Heisen) Seaman, and granddaughter of Lewis Seaman, the latter of whom had these children: Catherine, Moses, Elias, Lewis, Ann and John. Lewis Seaman, Mrs. McKnight's father, was a blacksmith of Leesport and later of Bernville. He had the following children: William, who is single; Lydia A., who became Mrs. McKnight; Alice, who married Charles Schaeffer; Kate, who married Charles Moyer; and Charles, who is single. All of this family reside at Reading, where they are prominent in the business and social life of the city.

WILLIAM S. YOCOM, a well-known business man of Reading, Berks county, for many years, and retired from active life since 1900, was born May 13, 1843, near Sinking Spring. His father, Samuel Yocom, was an agriculturist of Spring township, where he carried on farming operations until he died, Jan. 25, 1890, aged seventy-three years. He was twice married. His first wife was Elizabeth Spohn, daughter of William and Catharine Spohn, of the township named, born July 22, 1819, died Feb. 26, 1864. After her decease he married Mrs. Susan (Zacharias) Merkel, widow of William Merkel, born Aug. 17, 1822, died Oct. 3, 1903. His children were: Nicholas S., William S., Samuel S., Henry, John, Charles and Albert S. In religious belief the family were Lutherans.

William Spohn Yocom was educated in the local schools, and early in life went to Reading, entering Birch's dry-goods and grocery store at the corner of Fourth and Penn streets as a clerk. After serving in that store for several years, he engaged in the dry-goods business for himself and carried it on with much success for ten years. He then engaged in the scrap-iron business, which he carried on until his retirement in 1900. He was married to Catharine Klopp, daughter of Samuel Klopp, of Reading, and they have two children: Bessie K. and Mary S. The daughters are graduates of the Reading Girls' High School, entering it with the highest average and graduating with highest distinction; and afterward they attended Vassar College, and then made an extended tour through Europe for eighteen months, visiting many points of interest in fifteen countries, studying music and painting and becoming proficient in the French, German and Italian languages. While in Germany, at Berlin, they were domiciled in an apartment house, and there became very much interested in the subject of apartments, so that upon their return to Reading they improved properties on Third street, south of Penn, which they owned, converting them into fifteen apartments, which were some of the very first apartments in Reading; and in 1908-09 they also erected a large six-story apartment building on Fourth street, north of Penn, known as the Yocoma Apartments, which is recognized as one of the finest buildings of the kind in Reading. After the completion of this building, they and their parents made a second extended tour through Europe, covering eleven countries during the summer months. The family are members of St. Paul's Reformed Church. In politics Mr. Yocom is a Republican. He is a lineal descendant of J. Jonas Yocom, a Swede, one of the first settlers in Amity township in 1701.

The father of Mrs. Yocom, Samuel Klopp, was engaged in the coal, flour and feed business at the corner of Third and Cherry streets, in Reading, for thirty-six years. During this time he and his family were devoted members of the First Reformed Church, and in the re-building of the church he served as one of the building committee. He also served as a deacon for many years, and was recognized for his numerous charities to the poor people. He died Dec. 16, 1883, aged seventy-two years. He was married to Elizabeth Saylor, a daughter of John and Catharine Saylor, of Heidelberg township, and they had four children, Charles, John, George, and Catharine, the first three dying in youth. His wife died Dec. 20, 1889, aged sixty-eight years.

Mrs. Yocom's grandfather was John Klopp, a farmer of Heidelberg township, who was married to Catharine Hain, of the same township, and had nine children: Daniel, Peter, Richard, Samuel, Reuben, Jemima (m. Daniel Reed), Ellen (m. David Bechtel), Eliza (m. Adam Wenrich) and Hannah (m. Frederick Sohl).

JOHN R. GONSER, one of the leading and most influential citizens and business men of Berks county, was born and reared on a farm near Gechter's Inn, in Exeter township, this county.

As a boy Mr. Gonser attended the schools of his home district, but being ambitious to secure a good educational start in life, he also attended advanced schools at Amityville, and in Reading, and later also at McAllisterville, Juniata county. Like many of the successful men of the nation, Mr. Gonser started life as a country school teacher, and in this profession, as well as in later enterprises, made a distinct success. He taught school for four terms in Alsace, Upper Tulpehocken and Longswamp townships, and spent his vacations on his father's farm, where he received a thorough training in agriculture.

In 1866 he entered the employ of Yocum, Kline & Co., a firm of enterprising Berks county lumbermen, becoming manager of their extensive operations at Moscow, Luzerne county. The firm cut a large quantity of timber which was manufactured and marketed under his direction in a very profitable manner. Mr. Gonser proved his mettle as a business man in this first enterprise, soon becoming a partner in the concern, and spent four years in this business. The practical business experience received at this time proved of the greatest value to Mr. Gonser in his later enterprises. Upon returning to Berks county he became associated with William Ziegler in the grain, coal and lumber business at Farmington, in Longswamp township, along the Catasauqua & Fogelsville Railroad, but retired from this firm six months later to locate at Kutztown, where he engaged more extensively in the same lines of business, forming a partnership with James S. Heffner. The firm was known as Gonser & Heffner. In 1876 Mr. Gonser sold his interest in this business to Mr. Heffner to engage in the wholesale lumber and roofing slate business, which he still continues with great success. His operations have been very extensive and profitable.

Mr. Gonser is very widely known as a producer of natural ice, in which his interests are very large. He first became interested in the ice trade while located as Moscow as a lumberman, when he began to cut and store large quantities of natural ice at Salford station, along the Perkiomen railroad, individually operating this business until 1894, when his brother-in-law, Phaon S. Heffner, became associated with him as a partner. The new firm continued this station until 1904, when it was disposed of to the Pelham Ice Company, of Philadelphia. In 1881 he formed a partnership with Henry Ahrens, now residing in Reading, for the storage of ice along the Irish creek (at Dauberville) near its outlet into the Schuylkill river, a mile north of Leesport, and also along the Angelica creek, this stream entering the river a few miles below Reading. Large storehouses with an aggregate capacity for the annual storage of 50,000 tons of ice were erected. In 1906 a similar plant was built at Rausch's station, along the Little Schuylkill river, nine miles above Port Clinton. The three operations have been handled successfully and are extremely valuable to the firm, who have refused many handsome offers for their properties.

Mr. Gonser has always retained his early interest in farm life and is a consistent advocate of the improvement of agricultural conditions generally. Besides owning the old Gonser homestead farm in Exeter, he owns six large model farms located in three counties, Berks, Lehigh and Montgomery, in which he takes the greatest pride. Nothing is spared to make them among the finest farms in eastern Pennsylvania. They are equipped with the best buildings, are well stocked, and have reached a high state of cultivation.

As a financier Mr. Gonser has few equals in the county and his advice is eagerly sought by men of affairs. He has served continuously as a director of the Farmers National Bank, of Reading, one of the influential financial institutions of the Berks capital, since 1894, and has contributed his share toward making it one of the financial bulwarks of the commonwealth. When the now successful Kutztown National Bank was organized, in 1897, Mr. Gonser proved to be an ideal man to head the institution as president, owing to his high integrity, conservative judgment and wide knowledge of men and affairs. Believing it to be his duty to help build up a strong home institution, then greatly needed owing to the growth of this prosperous borough, Mr. Gonser accepted, and is still serving in this post of honor and trust with a record of unbroken successes. Mr. Gonser's work for this institution was one of the chief factors in its unusual degree of success.

Mr. Gonser is also interested in the cause of education and is a staunch and true friend of the Keystone State Normal School, located at Kutztown, of which he became a trustee 'way back in 1892. He is still serving in this capacity and is also filling the position of secretary of the stockholders of the corporation. He has given much time and thought to the advancement of the interests of this splendid school—now one of the first of its class in the State, and is proud of its splendid achievements. He has been a strong advocate of the many improvements made during the last decade, the erection of new buildings, etc., which make it the model school it now is.

Mr. Gonser is member of one of the best Pennsylvania German families in the Commonwealth and is proud of his honest, sturdy ancestry, who have contributed much toward making Berks one of the first counties in the nation. Starting life as an honest, hard-working youth, without a dollar of aid in the world, he won his way to the front rank by his honesty, courage and sticktoitiveness, and proved his ability as a business man of unusual executive ability, and is one of the wealthiest self-made men of Berks county. His career is often quoted as a model for young men starting out in life and should be an inspiration for those ambitious to win life's prizes.

He is a modest and unassuming gentleman of genial personality, courteous and obliging to all, and is a man of the highest ideals of public and private life. He is a public-spirited citizen, always ready and willing to support generously every movement for the public good, is charitable, a true friend, and a faithful coworker; indeed, the highest type of an honorable business man and a true Christian gentleman in the best meaning of the term. His family life has been very happy and he enjoys the esteem of an unusually wide circle of friends and acquaintances. No worthy cause has ever been presented to Mr. Gonser's attention without receiving the generous aid of his purse. He is a staunch supporter of the institutions of the Christian religion as well as of education, but owing to his innate modesty prefers to do so in the most unostentatious manner possible.

In 1869 Mr. Gonser married Miss Louisa Walbert, daughter of the late Nathan Walbert, of Maxatawny. He is the son of the late William Gonser, who was an influential farmer of Exeter for many years. His mother was Miss Mary Regar, a daughter of Jacob Regar, a farmer of Adamstown, Lancaster county. Mr. Gonser is one of a family of seven children, viz.: Hannah, who died in infancy; Louisa, married to Amos Ritter; Eliza, married to Harrison Eddinger; Mary, married to William M. Keim; Jackson, who died unmarried at the age of twenty-four years; John R.; and Jane, who married Benjamin Krick Huntzinger, whose sketch appears in this publication. His grandfather, John Gonser, a farmer in Exeter, married Miss Koppelberger, and had five children: John, who died single; Isaac, who married Elizabeth Questro; Daniel, who married Miss Narragang; William; and Susanna, who died single.

REV. SYLVANUS CHARLES BREYFOGEL, D. D., LL. D., one of the four bishops of the Evangelical Association is a member of an early settled Berks county family, and was born July 20, 1851, near Pleasantville, Oley township, son of Rev. Seneca and Sarah (Ely) Breyfogel.

The Breyfogel (sometimes Breyfogle and Breyvogel) family history has not been definitely traced beyond the shores of the New World. There are two traditions concerning the origin of the family—one giving the early home in France, and the other in Holland. The general appearance of the family, with the dark complexion black hair and eyes of the Latin races, gives great weight to the former, for the blue eyes and flaxen hair of the Dutch are noticeably lacking. The two traditions can be reconciled, however, and both, to a certain extent, be considered correct, as at the time of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes many from France fled for refuge into Holland. Breyfogles living in Germany state that from Holland one branch went to America and one to Germany. Of the latter branch representatives are found in Goppingen and in Worms, and also one family in Westhofen. These families, however, on investigation, are unaware of any relationship with, or direct knowledge of, each other. Of the Westhofen Breyvogels was Wilhelm Immanuel Breyvogel, who in 1843 was sent to Wisconsin as a Roman Catholic (the religion of this branch) missionary, and there died in January, 1907.

(I) Among the passengers on the ship "Phoenix," from Rotterdam, William Wilson, master, qualified at Philadelphia Oct. 20, 1744, was one John Peter Breyvogel, who must have been at that time over sixteen years of age, passengers under that age not being obliged to qualify. He had no family with him. On the Breyvogel farm near Kutztown was once the grave of Peter Breyvogel, marked by a headstone, but the land has been put under the plow, and the waving fields of grain cover the once hallowed spot. At the court-house in Reading is the record of Jacob Breyvogel, administrator of Peter Breyvogel, June 17, 1789, by bond of George Breyvogel, £50, filed Oct. 17, 1796. As near as can be gleaned from early records the children of John Peter Breyvogel were: George, mentioned below; Peter, born Dec. 5, 1746, who died Dec. 7, 1819; Jacob, who had two children, Charles and Joshua; Solomon; and a daughter who married a Row. Some records indicate a son John in place of Solomon, but as there is nothing recorded other than the name he probably died young.

(II) George Breyvogel, son of John Peter, was born Feb. 4, 1747, and died Oct. 6, 1827. He married Catharine (Dreibelbeis) Ely, born Dec. 5, 1745, died Dec. 7, 1819. By her first husband Catharine had two children, a son and a daughter, who both went West. To George and Catharine were born children as follows: Jacob D.; Solomon, born Jan. 11, 1780, died Nov. 11, 1817; George, born Sept. 2, 1782, died May 5, 1875; Catharine, born Oct. 20, 1784, m. Jacob Gross, and died Oct. 21, 1881; Esther m. Jacob Hinterleiter. George Breyvogel's will, made June 25, 1822, was probated Oct. 26, 1827. He mentions his sons Jacob D. and George, gives £350 to be divided equally among the children of his deceased son Solomon, gives £500 to daughter Catharine, and £373 to daughter Esther.

(III) Jacob D. Breyvogel, son of George and Catharine, married Susanne Baldy, who for her second husband married a Lautenslager, a relative of her daughter's husband. They lived at Lockport, N. Y. To Jacob and Susanne Breyvogel were born: Catharine, who m. a Lautenslager (on May 18, 1901, he was still living, then over ninety years of age), and their daughter, Mrs. Cutler, lives at Waterloo, Iowa; Joshua D., born Sept. 17, 1806; Charles, who went to California in 1849, and found and lost the "Breyfogel Mine," still searched for (his wife's name was Hannah); Mariah, m. to John Lemmon; Harriet, who died unmarried; Jacob (no heirs); Josiah, formerly of Lockport, N. Y., who died in Chicago; and Lucas C., formerly of Lockport.

(IV) Joshua D. Breyvogel, son of Jacob D. and Susanne, was born at Lockport, N. Y., Sept. 17, 1806, and moved to Delaware, Ohio. He died Jan. 28, 1868. On July 28, 1838, he married Mary Reynolds, who made her home at No. 582 South Limestone street, Springfield, Ohio. Their children were: Imogene, born May 6, 1839, died April 16, 1866; Roland C., born Sept. 16, 1842, was a captain in the Union army in the Civil war, and died from the effects of wounds July 28, 1870; William D., born Feb. 26, 1845, died April 30, 1865, from wounds received in the Civil war (he was thanked by General Hancock for conspicuous bravery at the battle of Gettysburg); Joshua, born May 12, 1848, is mentioned below; Arthur R., born June 11, 1849, died Dec. 1, 1861; Mary R., born Oct. 24, 1853, died Jan. 16, 1907.

(V) Joshua Breyvogel, son of Joshua D., was born May 12, 1848. He served three years in the Civil war. On Jan. 17, 1870, he married Mary E. Dixon, and they became the parents of six children, namely: William R., born June 2, 1872, m. Aug. 5, 1901, Mary E. Johnson, and has a son Robert, born Oct. 21, 1903; Nellie, born April 3, 1875, m. June 19, 1901, Harry Cochran, and has a son, John A. born Aug. 26, 1903; Alice, born in 1878, died in Kansas in 1879; Jessie R. was born Jan. 31, 1880; Arthur, born Feb. 5, 1884, lives at No. 77 York street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada; William also lives at No. 77 York street, Toronto.

(III) Solomon Breyfogel, son of George and Catharine, was born Jan. 11, 1780, and died Nov. 11, 1817. He married Esther Peter, born Sept. 9, 1782, died March 26, 1860, and they lived near Kutztown. Their eight children were: Magdalena, born Dec. 25, 1805, died July 31, 1876; George Peter, born Nov. 24, 1806, died Aug. 5, 1876; Daniel, born in February, 1808, died May 8, 1852; Israel was born July 10, 1809; Reuben, born March 2, 1811, died May 5, 1883; Solomon, born Nov. 18, 1812, died June 15, 1852; Catharine (also spelled Catherine), born Jan. 8, 1815, died aged three months; and Charles, born Feb. 28, 1816, died Dec. 22, 1884.

(IV) Magdalena Breyfogel, daughter of Solomon and Esther, was born Dec. 25, 1805, and died July 31, 1876. She married a Yoder, and lived near Kutztown, Pa. She was the mother of twelve children, as follows: Solomon, born June 16, 1828, died Sept. 5, 1871; Elizabeth, born Nov. 10, 1829, m. a Sidler, and died April 17, 1884; Hester, born Aug. 9, 1831, m. Amos Weidenheimer, and their son near Kutztown had three or four children; John P., was born Feb. 8, 1833; George, March 30, 1834; Obediah, born Oct. 4, 1835, died Jan. 27, 1856; Mary Ann, born Feb. 10, 1838, m. David Berk, and died Feb. 4, 1860; Charity Ann was born Oct. 24, 1839; Cyrus, born July 14, 1842, died July 17, 1843; Seneca, born Nov. 30, 1843, died March 17, 1872; Catherine Alice, born Aug. 16, 1845, died Dec. 21, 1846; Hannah Matilda, born Feb. 16, 1848, m. John Schrop, and died July 7, 1886.

(IV) George Peter Breyfogel, son of Solomon and Esther, born Nov. 24, 1806, died Aug. 5, 1876. In his youth he settled in Delaware, Ohio, and later went to Columbus, that State, where his death occurred, and his remains were interred in Green Lawn cemetery. In September, 1837, he married Sarah Zimmerman, born June 5, 1805, died Nov. 6, 1884. They had these children: Mary, born Sept. 1, 1838, died Feb. 17, 1842; Clinton, born Dec. 17, 1839, went West and died July 20, 1858, on the California trail, seventy-five miles from Santa Fe, and is buried there; Esther, born Oct. 2, 1842, m. Feb. 6, 1866, William Eaton, and died March 10, 1869, the mother of two children, Nellie B. After leaving school he engaged in farming and then embarked in the coal business at Reading, in which he was very successful, but believing he was called to the ministry he gave up his business and prepared himself for that calling. He became identified with the Evangelical Association, and his first charge was a circuit in eastern Pennsylvania. His ability as a speaker was marked, and in a comparatively short time he was called to larger charges, among those he filled being Norristown, Port Carbon, Tamaqua and Easton. The results of his work were widespread, and he became a great power for good throughout his section of the State. He left a large estate. His will was made July 25, 1883, and probated June 27, 1884. On July 20, 1849, he married Sarah Ely, and their children were: Rev. Sylvanus Charles, born July 20, 1851; and Ellen, who m. James W. Miller, of Reading, and has had nine children, Ralph, Howard (deceased), George, Helen, Beulah, Raymond Seneca, Harold, Edna and a daughter that died in infancy.

(V) Rev. Sylvanus Charles Breyfogel, son of Seneca and Sarah, born July 20, 1851, attended the common schools of Reading, and then entered the Central Pennsylvania College, afterward taking up the study of theology. In February, 1873, he was licensed to preach, and two years later was ordained a deacon. His elevation to the rank of elder took place in February, 1877. The first charge to which he was assigned was Barnesville and Coaldale, in Schuylkill county, after which he was sent to Bath, Northampton county, and later to Easton. His next assignment was in Philadelphia, from which city he came to Reading to take charge of Emmanuel (Evangelical) Church on Sixth street. In 1886 he was elected presiding elder, serving both the Allentown and the Reading districts in that capacity, and at the same time holding the pastorate of Ebenezer Church on Ninth street. These years of strenuous and effective endeavor brought him prominence in the church, and he was elected bishop, being one of the four in the United States, Europe and Asia. He is a man of executive ability, an orator and a writer, possessed of rare power of judging human nature, of great self-control and of unfailing courtesy, and as a presiding officer he has few equals and no superiors. He was one of the presiding officers of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. During his incumbency he has traveled extensively, visiting Japan, Germany, Switzerland, and many other countries. He is a good linguist and lectures fluently in both German and English.

In spite of the executive labors of his position the Rev. Mr. Breyfogel has found time to continue his reading and study, and he is president of the Evangelical School of Theology, taking direct charge of the departments of Doctrine, Church Government and Parliamentary Law, on all of which subjects he is an authority. He has general charge of the Evangelical Bible School, whose object is to stimulate the study of the Bible by the laity. A number of meritorious works have resulted from his literary labors, and among these may be mentioned the "Evangelical Landmarks," "The Polity of the Evangelical Association," and "Great Sermons by Great Preachers." At one time he was the editor of the "Preacher's Assistant," a monthly church publication; and he is one of the committee of three appointed by the Evangelical Association to control and superintend all publishing in connection with the Church. In 1901 he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Otterbein University; and in 1909 the degree of Doctor of Laws from the Ohio Northern University.

On May 8, 1877, Rev. Mr. Breyfogel was united in marriage with Miss Kate E. Boas, daughter of F. G. Boas, of Reading. Their children are: Esther C., born Feb. 21, 1878 (m. Rev. G. B. Kimmel, of Dayton, Ohio); Emily B., Sept. 10, 1879; Miriam S., Sept. 21, 1881 (m. Raymond Bowman); Frank Ely, Oct. 2, 1885; Marguerite R., Nov. 23, 1888; and Charles Frederick, March 24, 1901.

(IV) Helen Breyfogel, fourth child of George and Esther, born Dec. 30, 1824, died Aug. 24, 1904, at New Cambria, Salina Co., Kans. She married Jesse Stahl, and their children are: Thomas, Horace, George and Edgar.

(IV) Clarissa Breyfogel, daughter of George and Esther, born May 5, 1828, died Sept. 5, 1888. On Dec. 25, 1849, she married David Ely, and they lived near Reading. They had two children: Clinton, born May 22, 1851, m. Sarah Kleine, and had Arthur, George, David, Solomon, Etta, Annie and Sallie; and Titus, born March 11, 1855, m. Isabelle Boyer, and had Victor, Clarence and Leo.

PETER. The Peter family to which Mrs. Esther (Peter) Breyfogel belonged is descended from Engle Peter, who about the year 1700, when religious persecution was rife in the Old World, left his home in Baden, Germany, and with his wife and son Abraham, the latter still in his teens, set sail for America, landing at Philadelphia. Though there are many families of the name in Germany, he is said to have been the first to come to America. Learning of a region about fifty miles northwest of Philadelphia where there was an abundance of fine oak timber growing along the banks of two small streams called Manathawian, Engle Peter and his family, with others, started for what is now Oley township, Berks county, and after a journey of nearly a week they found the place; the two streams now are called Manatawny and Furnace creeks. Several large Indian villages were found here, one of the largest being situated a little north of the place where the Moravian school now stands near the foot of Grand Hill. A large number of Indian relics have been found here. Engle Peter was soon on friendly terms with the Indians and they in turn were always kind to him and his. In appearance Engle Peter was large and powerful, but he was supple as well as strong. There were some good wrestlers among the Indians, but Mr. Peter could overthrow the best of them without difficulty, though he frequently allowed the Indians to throw him for policy's sake. Shortly after his arrival he built a one-story log house, 15x25 feet in dimensions. The foundation, which was removed about a half century ago by David T. Peter, of near Freidensburg, is said to have been the work of a first-class mason. Engle Peter had learned blacksmithing in the old country, and among those who accompanied him to Oley were two other blacksmiths, but their trades were of no use to them as they had no tools and no smithy, the nearest smithy being where Germantown now is. It was shortly after 1720 when they secured a few tools, and Engle Peter from that time on divided his time between farming and blacksmithing. He was an expert maker of cutlery.

Abraham Peter, son of Engle, worked the farm while his father cared for the smithy. In 1719 the Peter farm had but 150 acres, but subsequently Abraham took up several hundred acres more. In 1742, with the aid of other carpenters, Abraham commenced building a log house near his father's. The boards for floors and partitions were sawed by hand, and the roof was of tile. The house was two storied, 27x36 feet in dimensions, and it was finished before the end of the year. It was torn down in 1862 when the spacious stone house was erected, but some of the old flooring and partitions were used in the straw shed now on the farm. As soon as his house was done Abraham married a daughter of Samuel Hoch, of Oley, and they lived on the old farm, cultivating it jointly with Engle Peter until the latter's death, when Abraham became the sole owner.

Daniel Peter, son of Abraham, was born Dec. 2, 1747, and died Nov. 25, 1816. On Dec. 24, 1776, he married Magdalena Romig, born Sept. 10, 1750, died July 30, 1820. (Two dates are given for Daniel's death—Nov. 25, 1816, and Nov. 28, 1818.) To Daniel and Magdalena were born children as follows: Marion, born Oct. 8, 1777, died in April, 1809; Abraham, born Feb. 23, 1779, died Sept. 5, 1824; Catherine, born April 18, 1781, m. Deider Bachtel, and died in May, 1832; Esther, born Sept. 9, 1782, m. (first) Solomon Breyfogel, and (second) his brother, George Breyfogel, and died March 26, 1860; Susanne, born Nov. 29, 1783, died March 18, 1844, m. Martin Yoder; Solomon, born Dec. 12, 1790, succeeded to the farm, and died Sept. 28, 1843, the father of four sons—Daniel, David Y. (who now owns the farm), Solomon and Obediah.

JOEL D. DIETRICH, a native citizen of Greenwich township, is one of the well-known men of his district. He is a descendant of Adam Dietrich, a pioneer of upper Berks county, tracing his line through Johann Christian, son of Adam. [See Dietrich Family, page 552.] Mr. Dietrich was educated in the local schools and reared to farm life, following it for some years in Greenwich township, near Dunkel's Church. He successfully conducted a hotel in Hamburg some years, then sold out and puchased a fertile farm in Greenwich township, which he cultivated until he retired, moving to Kutztown, where he now lives. Mr. Deitrich is married and has an only son, Harvey, who is a graduate of Hamburg high school. Joel D. Dietrich is an officer of the Dietrich Family Association. He is a Democrat in politics. He and family worship at Dunkel's Church, where they are members of the Lutheran Congregation. Mr. Dietrich has served as an official member.

WILLIAM SPOHN ERMOLD, foreman blacksmith in the employ of the Southwark Foundry & Machine Company at Philadelphia since 1887, was born Dec. 7, 1834, at Reading, Berks county, where he attended the public schools until he was sixteen years old. He was then apprenticed to the trade of blacksmith with the P. & R. R. Co., and after learning his trade remained with the company until 1857. He then worked at different places in Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Washington, D. C., Iowa, and Idaho until 1881, when he returned to Reading and there followed his trade until 1887, when he accepted the position of foreman blacksmith with the Southwark Foundry & Machine Company of Philadelphia, and this position he has filled in a most satisfactory manner until the present time.

In 1860 Mr. Ermold was married to Rosa Regina Reiff, daughter of Ludwig F. E. Reiff and Anna Mary Muntz, his wife, by whom he had seven children: Emma Louise (married to Robert Cavis De Vault), Millie Reiff (married to George Lentner Lewis), Elmer Atwood (married to Lillian Krewson), Mark Atlee (married to Edna Smith Garrett), and three who died, Anna Mary in 1862, William Reiff in 1866, and Herbert K. in 1891. His wife died in 1881.

His father was Daniel Ermold, a blacksmith at Reading for forty years. He was born at Reading in 1789, and after learning his trade carried on business for upward of thirty years, at the corner of Third and Franklin streets, when he entered the employ of the P. & R. R. Co., and continued with the company until his decease in 1848. He was married to Sarah Spohn, a daughter of John Spohn of Reading (who was a captain in the Revolution), and by her he had twelve children: Daniel (married to Catharine Taylor), Peter (who married Sarah Henry and after her decease Clara Edelman), Obediah (married to Ann E. Hoff), William S., Harriet (married to William Nagel), Maria (married to Peter A. Breen, and living at Philadelphia at the advanced age of eighty-six years), and six who died in infancy.

Mr. Ermold's father-in-law, Ludwig F. E. Reiff, was born at Heilbron in Wurtemberg, Germany, in 1793, and when a young man emigrated to Pennsylvania, landing at Philadelphia, and after following his trade of butcher there for several years removed to Reading, where he carried on farming and also butchering until his decease in 1861. His home and farm were situated on North Fifth street, beyond Buttonwood. While at Philadelphia he met his wife, who was also born in Wurtemberg.
